Theology Library
SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
AT CLAREMONT
California

Theology Library
SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
AT CLAREMONT
California

Theology Library
SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
AT CLAREMONT
California

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

In the United States of America:

BEING

THE ORGAN OF THE BOARDS OF MISSIONS, EDUCATION, FOREIGN MISSIONS, AND PUBLICATION.

VOL. II.—1851.

Philadelphia:
PUBLICATION HOUSE, 265 CHESTNUT STREET.

TERMS.

The HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD is issued monthly at fifty cents a year in newspaper form, or one dollar a year in pamphlet form.

All moneys remitted at our risk.

☞ Payment in all cases, in advance.

Address, post-paid, "Home and Foreign Record, 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa."

RECOMMENDATION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The following action was taken at the General Assembly held in Cincinnati, May, 1850, in regard to the Home and Foreign Record.

Resolved, As the action of the last General Assembly has resulted in the establishment of the "Home and Foreign Record," that paper is hereby recommended, and the ministers and churches are urged to exert themselves to place it in every family, as the organ, indirectly, of the Church, on many important subjects.

INDEX

TO THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD, 1851.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Agent for Church Extension, 146.
A Good Resolution, 19.
An Infidel reclaimed, 180.
Annual Report, 98, 114.
Appeal to the Churches, 130.

Boundaries of Synods and Presbyteries, 51.

California, 162.
Changes effected in Churches by Emigration, 82.
Church Extension, 2, 19, 51, 66, 131, 146, 179.
Clothing, 115.
Coloured People, Religious Instruction of, 51, 67, 163, 164.
Communications from Missionaries.—Connecticut, 34. Georgia, 19, 67, 68, 163, 164, 179. Illinois, 19, 67. Indiana, 66, 163, 164. Iowa, 163. Mississippi, 82. New Jersey, 3, 35. New York, 82, 100. North Carolina, 67. Ohio, 19, 35. Oregon, 3. Pennsylvania, 35, 100. Tennessee, 67. Virginia, 67. Wisconsin, 83, 99, 163.

Doctrinal Preaching, 66.
Domestic Missions, 18.
Donation Visits, 82.

Fruits, 34, 82, 100, 163.

Geary, Rev. Edward and Family safe, 98.
General Assembly, 114.

Hard Field, 35.
Home and Foreign Record, 34.
House of Worship built, and Revival, 116.
How the Work goes on, 3.
Humphrey, Dr., Sermon on Domestic Missions, 178.

Infidelity and Religious Error, Cause of, 3.
Intelligence for October, November, and December, 1850, and January, 1851, Summary of, 2, 50.
Interesting Items, 116.

McDowell, Rev. William A., D.D., Obituary of, 162.
———— Tribute of Respect to the Memory of, 178.
Meetings of Ten Synods, 178.
Missionaries taking leave of the Board, 131, 164.
Missionary's Work on the Sabbath, 4.

Necessities of the Board, 130.
Notice to Churches and Presbyteries, 50.
Notice to Missionaries of the Board, 130.

Orange Presbytery, North Carolina, 131.
Oregon, Missionaries to, 51.

Painful Rumour, 82, 98.
Pastor's Library, 35, 66.
Pastoral Visiting, 131.
Plan for Benevolent Contributions, 19.
Presbyterial Treasuries, Suggestion on the Disposition of their Surplus Funds, 114.
Presbyterial Plan of Church Extension, 131.
Progress of the Board, 50.
Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, 115.

Receipts, 4, 20, 36, 52, 68, 83, 100, 116, 132, 148, 164, 180.
Rejoicing, 4.
Report of the Rev. C. Sturdevant, 82.
Resolutions of the Board in relation to Applications for Aid to sustain Missionaries, 178.
Revivals, 132.
Roman Catholics in the United States, 114.

Some Mercy Drops, 179.
Speedy Sympathy, and a little more needed, 51.
Spirit and Influence of the late Meeting of the General Assembly, 114.
State of Religion in the Missionary Field, 147.
Sunshine and Shade, 130.

Table for Synods and Presbyteries, 146.
Texas, 18.
Treasurer, Notice in Relation to, 2.
Treasury, State of, 50.

Wisconsin, Missionary on the Extreme Frontier of, 99.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Agency for the West, 69, 102.
Agency of Ministers in the Perpetuation of the Ministry, 5.
Alexander, Dr. Archibald, Obituary Notice, 181.
Anniversary meeting at St. Louis, 150.
Austin College, Texas, 71.

Board of Education and the Voluntary Societies, 53.

Caldwell Institute, 135.
Candidates for the Ministry, 101. No increase of, 165.
————, Pledge of, 69, 133.
Chamberlain, Dr., Death of, 166.
Christian Boldness, 117.
Church must furnish the Men, 117.
"Come out of her, my People," 39.

Davidson College, N. C., 182.
Dedication of Infants to the Ministry, 165.
Dunlap's Creek Academy, Pennsylvania, 6.

Educational Bond, 182.
Elder's Ridge Presbyterial Academy, 54.
England, Education in, 7.
English Presbyterian Church, 183.

Female Schools in Georgia, 23.
Foreign Missionaries, Right kind of, 5.
Free Church of Scotland, 117. Schools of, 119.
Funds, Want of, the chief Difficulty, 119.

General Assembly, Action of, on Education, 102.
German Valley School, New Jersey, 133.
Good Influence of our Schools, 119.
Great Men Converted at School, 6.
Green, Dr., Opinion of Ministerial Education, 69.

Hanover College, Indiana, 22, 54.
Hard Work and Courage, 39.
Hebrew in College, 167.
Hebrews, Education among, 103.

Important Documents, 53.
Increase of Candidates, 165.

Kay, Rev. Richard, Speech of, 166.
Kingston Parochial School, 70.

La Fayette College, Easton, 54.
Lexington, Virginia, Presbyterial Academy, 86.

McDonough College, Illinois, 71.
Miller Academy, Ohio, 23.
Mind and Culture, 37.
Ministers, Education and Supply of, 85, 101.
Ministers, Want of, 5.
Missionary Church, What can be done in a, 7.
Mistake, A very great, 22.
Montpelier Presbyterial Academy, Ohio, 39.
Mortality among Clergymen, 182.
Mothers, 135.

New Candidates, 101, 133, 165, 182.
New Jersey, Synod of, 53.
Normal Schools, 86.

Parochial Schools, 86.
Pastoral Hints to Candidates, 6, 53, 69, 85, 117, 133, 165.
—— Letter to Candidates for the Gospel Ministry, 37.
Pledge from Candidates, On requiring, 69.
———————— Abolished, but not the Obligation, 133.
Prayers, Funds, and Principles, 21.
Presbyterial Academies, 6, 39, 54, 86, 134.
Primary Schools, List of, 118.

Our Denominational Influence, 86.
Our System a Good One, 118, 119.
Our Work in the West, 53.
Out and Out, 151.

Receipts, 7, 23, 39, 55, 71, 86, 103, 119, 135, 151, 167, 183.
Religious Education of Children, 54.
Revival in Hanover College, Indiana, 54.
Right Kind of Foreign Missionaries, 5.
Rules and Regulations of the Board, 149.

Schools, Academies, and Colleges of the Presbyterian Church, 38.
School and Church, 7.
Scotch Liberality, 71.
Scotland, Education in, 69.
————, Free Church of, 117, 119.
Shiloh Presbyterial Academy, 6.
Singing, Duty of, 71.
Sower to his Seed, 5.
St. Joseph's College, Kentucky, 39.
Success, an Encouragement, 118.
Synod of New Jersey, 53.

Teaching and Training, 183.
That Old Primer, 119.
The Teacher, 183.
The Throne and the Lamb, 53.
Thoughts on Ministerial Education, 101.
Treasury, State of, 102.
True Views of Education, 70.

Want of Funds, the Chief Difficulty, 119.
Washington College, Tennessee, 151.
Why they failed, 86.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

A Dime to Foreign Missions, the good it may do, 125.
Africa. Corisco Mission, 11, 24, 40, 56, 105, 186.
Annual Meeting of the Board, 72.
Annual Reports of the London Episcopal Jews' Society, 155.

China. Canton Mission, 10, 124, 171.
——— Ningpo Mission, 90, 107, 122, 154.
——— Shanghai Mission, 140.
Choctaw Mission, 27.
Christian Liberality in Humble Life, 76.
Condition and required Enlargement of the Missions, 184.
Confucianism, 154.
Creek Mission, 42.

Encouraging Signs of the Times, 73.
Enlargement of the Missions, 24.
Episcopal Church at Shanghai, 76.
Excursion to White Cloud Mountain, 124.

Financial Year, End of, 88.
France, Progress of Protestantism in, 140.

General View of the Missions, 8.
Geneva; Notices of the Church and of the World, 28.

Heathen have no Rest, 27.
Hindu Literature, 120.
——— Doctrine of Transmigration, 137.
House, Dr. S. R., Letter from, 186.

India. Allahabad Mission, 26, 88, 106, 138, 169, 185.
——— Furrukhabad Mission, 27, 73, 106, 137.
——— Lodiana Mission, 57, 72, 74, 120, 137, 153, 168.
——— Call for more Men in the Missions, 185.
India. Miscellaneous Education in, 108.
Iowa and Sac Mission, 43, 74, 104, 152.

Jews, Mission for the, 155.
Journal of Rev. W. Hamilton, 152.
——— Rev. Joseph Owen, 138, 170.
——— Rev. G. Simpson, 11, 24, 40, 56.
——— Rev. John Newton, 137.
——— Rev. J. H. Morrison, 58.
——— Rev. Golok Nath, 121.
——— Rev. Henry V. Rankin, 90, 122, 154.
——— Rev. Augustus H. Seeley, 106.

Kaffir War, Causes of, 156.

Letters from a Missionary to his Children, 120.
Loomis, Letter of Rev. A. W. 154.

Mackey, J. L., Letter from, 186.
Mattoon, Letter from Rev. S. 59.
Medical Missions in Canton, 171.
Missions in Papal Europe, 9.
Mohammedanism, Letters on, 26, 138, 169.
Morrison, Rev. J. H., Communications from, 58, 168.
Munnis, Rev. Robert M., Letters from, 88, 106.

Narrative of Exploring Tours in Africa, 24, 40.
Newton, Rev. John, Journal of, 137.
No Hope, 108.

Obituary Notice of Charles Barnet, a member of the Church at Kowetah, Creek Nation, 75.
——— Mrs. Bush, of the Siam Mission, 187.
——— Miriam, a member of the Church at Lodiana, 74.
Obituary Notice of Mrs. Susan Morrison, 75, 188.
——— David W. C. Olyphant, 136.
——— Rev. G. W. Simpson, 152, 156.
——— Mrs. Simpson, 172.
Our India Missions, 120.
Owen, Rev. Joseph, Journal of, 138. Letter from, 185.

Papal Europe, Missions in, 9.
Popery, Influence of, on Civilization, 108.

Rankin, Rev. H. V., Journal of, 90, 122.
Receipts, 13, 28, 44, 60, 77, 92, 109, 125, 141, 157, 173, 188.
——— of the Board, 24.
Recent Intelligence, 8, 24, 40, 56, 72, 88, 104, 120, 136, 152, 168, 184.
Romanists, Missions among, 136.
Rudolph, Rev. A., Letter from, 57.

Sandwich Islands, 12.
Seeley, Rev. Augustus H., Journal of, 106.
Siam, Mission in, 59, 122, 155, 186.
——— Death of King of, 155.
——— Ceremonies at the Accession of the new King of, 186.
Slow returns of Missionary Fruit, 76.
Spencer Academy, Report of, 27.
——— Fire at, 72.

"The Foreign Missionary," 88.
Turkey, Progress in the Interior Cities, 42.
Two Blind Men, 74.

Wight, Rev. J. K., Letter from, 140.
Woodside, Rev. J. S., Letters from, 57, 169.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

Abstract of Annual Report of Board of Publication, 110.
A devoted Young Man, 142.
An admirable Suggestion, 30.
A Letter instead of a Speech, 190.
Alexander, Dr. Archibald, Death of, 190.
——— Preaching in Michigan, 94.

Bad Books, 79.
Bible Dictionary, price reduced, 126.
Board of Publication in New Orleans, 14.
Book-making in London, 63.
Books Published in the United States, 191.
Bread Cast upon the Waters, 30.

Carlyle, Thomas, 63.
Catalogue, Descriptive, 111.
Close of the Financial Year, 46.
Colportage Cause, 62.
——— in the Synod of Virginia, 158.
——— in Memphis Presbytery, 63.
——— in Maury Presbytery, 94.
Colporteur's Comforts, 142.
——— Encouragement, 126.
——— Gray Hairs Pleading, 78.
Colporteur, Need of, 31.
——— Who cannot pass by the Destitute, 78.
——— Cheered on his Way, 62.
Conflict between Truth and Error, 142.

Doctrinal Objections met by Colportage, 111.

Employment for the long Winter Evenings, 14.
Encouraging from Virginia, 143.
Erroneous Books in Presbyterian Sunday Schools, 15.

Family Worship, Thoughts on, 95.
Field for Books, 62.
Fire Arms, 46.
First Printed Book, 78.
Fraternal Act, 126.

General Assembly and the Board of Publication, 110.
Georgia, To the Pastors of the Synod of, 30.
"German Reformed Messenger" on the Board of Publication, 190.
Germans, A Friend to the, 191.
Good Results from a Colporteur's Labours, 142.
Gratifying News, 110.

Increased Operations, 14.
Infidelity in connexion with the German Population, 174.

Juvenile Literature, 62.

Kindly Aid, 78.
Knowledge, Diffusion of, 63.

Licentious Books, The Bookseller who burned his, 174.
Licentious Periodicals, 31.
Looking Four Years into the Grave, 94.

New England and the Books of the Board, 126, 190.
New Orleans, Board of Publication in, 14.
New Jersey, to the Members of the Synod of, 111.
"Not a Reading People," 158.
Notes from a Colporteur's Labours, 175.
Notices of New Books and Tracts, 15, 31, 63, 79, 95, 111, 127, 143, 159, 175, 191.
Novels in Poetry and Prose, 31.

Our Books in Madeira, 158.
Our Prospects, 174.

Past and Present, as to the Press, 142.
Pastor Helping on the Good Work, 30.
Permanent effect of Good Books, 111.
Pictorial Almanac, 174.
——— First Book, 174.
Pledges of Presbyteries Unredeemed, 62.
Praying Soldier, The, 15.
Presbyterian Sabbath-School Visitor, 14, 30, 46, 62, 78.
Presbyterian Record's Testimony, 30.
Presbyterianism, Horrid Pictures of, 14.
Profitable Reading, 127.
Prosperity of the Board, 94.

Receipts, 15, 31, 47, 63, 79, 95, 111, 127, 143, 159, 175, 191.

Sacred Music, Book of, 110.
"Salvation: or, the Sinner Directed in the Way of Life," 46.
Standard Religious Works, Importance of Republishing, 94.
Synod of South Carolina and the Boards, 46.
Synodical Colporteur Enterprise, 78.

Thank-Offering, 126.
The Happiest Summer, 174.
Three Hundred Years Ago, 79.
Tribute of Thanks for a Colporteur's Labours, 46.

Value of a Single Tract, 79.
Very Decided, 126.

We also Mourn, 190.
"We are all Wrong!" 47.
Western Depot and Agency, 14.
What our Board of Publication does for the Church, 127.
What our Books and Tracts are Doing, 126.
Word to Pastors, 46.
Works on sound Theology appreciated, 62.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A few Words for those who have been Baptized but have never been Converted, and have not come to the Lord's Supper, 113.
All things for Christ's Kingdom, 49.
A Hundred Years Ago, 81.
A Warning, 129.

Birth and Death, 113.
Burning the Martyrs, 177.

Calvinists, A roll of, 145.
Church in the House, 49.
"Climbeth up some other Way," 161.
Constraining Power of the Love of Christ, 33.

Dreadful Mistake, 81.

Ecclesiastical Record, 16, 32, 48, 64, 80, 96, 112, 128, 144, 160, 176, 192.
Example of Church Extension, 65.
——— Worthy of Imitation, 17.

Filling One's Place, 1.

Hastening it in his Time, 17.
Home and Foreign Record, Enlarged and in a new dress, 1.
——— a highly prized visitor, 33.
How to make Life useful, 129.

Lamb of God, the Christian's Hope, 161.
Last Year of Life, 1.

Meekness, 145.
Minister, One of God's aged, in Poverty and Want, 65.
Mother's Reward, 33.
My Birth Day, 33.

Nearer to Thee, 49.
New Orleans, Church Colonizing in, 17.

Peasant on the Welsh Mountains, 49.
Pleasant Words, 33.
Private Readings, 1.
Put on the Shelf, 161.

Readers, 81.
Repentance, the longer delayed, the more difficult, 129.
Scraps from an unpublished Commentary, 145.
"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" 97.
Spiritual Mirror, 145.
Statistical Reports from Church Sessions, 33.
Suggestions about the Record, 177.

"Teach us to Pray," 113.
"Tell them to Preach Christ," 129.
That one Word, 97.
The Best is left, 81.
"The entrance of Thy words giveth light," 161.
The Grace of Giving, 81.
The Motherless, 97.
The Spiritual Wings burdened, 177.
Their Inward Thought, 177.

Universe, Extent of the, 17.

Varieties, 16, 32, 48, 64, 80, 96, 112, 128, 144, 160, 176, 192.

What hath God wrought? 1.
"Where are the Nine?" 65.
"We shall reap, if we faint not," 81.
Word fitly spoken, 97.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 1. | PHILADELPHIA, JANUARY, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

THE RECORD ENLARGED AND IN A NEW DRESS.

THOSE who have been heretofore accustomed to receive the Record, will perceive that the present number comes to them in an enlarged form. The Board of Foreign Missions were under the impression that the interests of their cause required a larger space than they had occupied, and the size of the paper has been increased more especially with a view to the accommodation of that Board. To some extent, however, all the Boards will share the enlargement.

As to typography we have also made an advance on last year. A new font of type has been purchased, and we now present ourselves with a more cheerful face, and in a dress still more suited to the times than in our first year.

Our readers will thus perceive that the conductors of the Record are doing all in their power to make the paper acceptable and useful, and it is earnestly hoped that there will be a responsive interest manifested by pastors and people throughout the Presbyterian Church. Already a considerable number of new subscribers have been added to our list, but there should be a far larger number.

Should any complain that they are not interested in the Record, we can only reply that we give in these pages the details of what is doing, and what is needed to be done by our branch of the Church for the building up of Christ's kingdom in the world; and that if such matter excites no interest in their minds, we do not know that the Record should be held responsible. We are happy to say, however, that we rarely hear complaints of this nature, but that, on the contrary, we have much reason to believe that what we publish finds readers, and does its appropriate work.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

THE LAST YEAR OF LIFE.

When we read the account of some bloody battle, where hundreds are left dead on the field, the heart sickens at such wholesale slaughter. But if by some unwonted and fearful combination of causes, a battle-field were described to us, where the dead were numbered not by hundreds but by thousands, and even by millions, how unspeakably appalling would be the recital! Yet appalling as we deem it, we have just passed by such a field of slaughter, without heeding its piles of slain. The year just ended has ushered into eternity more souls than the entire population of our vast and teeming republic. And yet, because the report came not to us in the red bulletin of the camp, and because the field was the world, we have passed along unheeding. But the end of this mighty desolation is not yet; for the year on which we now enter shall show as broad a field of death as the one that has just gone to take its place among those beyond the flood; and its strokes will be as indiscriminate, as universal, and as unexpected, as any of its predecessors.

It is almost certain, that to some whose eyes shall fall on this paragraph, this is the last year of life. Before another New-Year dawns on the frozen earth, their life-journey will have ended; they will know that fearful and inscrutable mystery, DEATH: and while the greetings of the season are passing from lip to lip, their bodies will lie shrouded in the lonely grave, and their spirits mingling in the dread or joyous scenes of eternity.

Reader, it may be you! Are you ready? Is your work for eternity done? Have you done for God what you might have done, or intend to do? Have you done for a perishing world and a struggling church, as you were sacredly bound to do? Have you any seed sown, the harvest of which your children may reap? Any investment made in that great "bank" of discount and deposit, whose books shall be opened and audited at the dread day? any works that will follow you? any thing "lent to the Lord?"

If your heart condemns you in this scrutiny, will you not awake to duty? Oh remember that the night cometh, the moonless and starless night of the grave. Remember that in its deep shadow, no man can work. Then be busy while the light lasts, for the shadows are growing long. Be earnest, O my brother, in your brief day's task, for the sunset reckoning is near at hand. This year shall be to many and may be to you, the last year of life. T. V. M.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

PRIVATE READINGS.

1. Prosperity without special care will become a snare to us. Deut. vi. 10—13.

2. The worship of false gods, physical or mental, by God's professing people, will bring upon them his exterminating curse. Ib. 14—15.

3. The very materials of idol gods, and the accompaniments of false religion, are to be rejected by us, and counted as abominable and cursed things. Ib. vii. 25—26.

4. Difficulties, hardships and trials, are intended (1) to humble us, (2) to prove us both as to our sincerity and strength of purpose to walk with God in keeping his commandments; also (3) to prepare us for good in the end. Ib. viii. 2—16.

5. Wealth is not gotten by our might or our hand, but is the gift of God. Ib. 17, 18.

6. Success in battle, or the triumph of an invader, is not always an evidence of righteousness on the part of those who enjoy it, but may be only the punishment of those overcome; which God permits and orders on account of their sins. Ib. ix. 4—6.

7. The conduct of Moses was uninfluenced by ambition or desire for personal or family aggrandizement. He preferred the honour and glory of God to his own private honour, thus evincing the strength and reality of his piety. Ib. 14, 25—28.

8. A due sense of the guilt and danger of others will lead us to fast and pray for them as well as ourselves. Ib. 18, 20, 25, 26.

9. Any sign, dream, omen, wonder, or prediction, contrary to revelation, or inconsistent with God's character and claims, or which would lead to a departure from God, is not to be credited or listened to. Ib. xiii. 1—3.

10. To entice men from the worship and service of God is an enormous crime; and the society and fellowship of those who would do this are to be both abandoned and avoided. Ib. 6—11.

By the law of Moses such a one was to be put to death.

11. Kindness to the poor, and especially when there is no prospect of remuneration, will secure God's blessing. Ib. xv. 7—10. R. L. N.

FILLING ONE'S PLACE.

"Every man in his place," expresses our duty here. "Every man to his own place," will be the substance of the sentence that will be pronounced at the judgment, and by which the eternal destiny will be decided. Every act which is performed here will have its effect there. He who refuses to perform duties laid upon him in this world, and to occupy the place for which he was originally and benevolently designed, will in eternity be doomed to the only place for which, by his deeds, he has qualified himself. There is a place of honour, usefulness, and peace here, which we are commanded to fill, and from which we may be transferred to a wider range of action, and to a more blessed experience. Rejecting this, it only remains that we take up our residence among kindred spirits, and employ our eternity in employments suited to our base nature, reaping, in wretchedness, which will be our portion, the due reward of our ungrateful disobedience. Christ appointed Judas a place on earth among his apostles, to preach the gospel, to suffer for the truth. Had he accepted and retained it, he would have worn a crown of glory forever, with Peter, Paul, and John. But he despised his birthright; he sold it with his Master for thirty pieces of silver; he turned his back upon the post which was offered. In so doing, he developed those passions and formed that character which marked him as fitted to fill a certain position of shame and woe in the world of retribution, and hence, when he died, he is said to have gone "to his own place." And thus each one is preparing for himself in eternity, a place, peculiar and appropriate, into which none other shall be thrust but where we shall abide forever.—Religious Herald.

WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT?

The following table exhibits the results of what has been accomplished in the last fifty years among the heathen:

2,000 missionaries; 7,500 assistants; 4,000 churches; 250,000 converts: 3,000 missionary schools; 250,000 children and adults belonging to them; 200 dialects into which the Bible has been translated; 32,000,000 of Bibles scattered over the earth, in languages spoken by six millions of people.

But such a table will give no adequate idea of what has been accomplished. If no one can estimate the influence which a single regenerated soul can exert on the corrupt mass of humanity, what shall be said of the influence which two hundred and fifty thousand can exert, scattered among the heathenized millions?

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. Reese Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powell.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powell, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

NOTICE IN RELATION TO THE TREASURER OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

We would make known to the churches, that Mr. SAMUEL D. POWELL, of Philadelphia, has been elected Treasurer, by the Board, in the place of Wm. D. Snyder, the late Treasurer. By a recent and judicious arrangement of the Board, the expense of conducting the business of the Mission Rooms has been considerably reduced.

All remittances of money, and boxes of clothing for the Board, will hereafter be directed to Mr. Samuel D. Powell, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

The time has fully come when the Officers and Members of our churches should be apprised of the progress and present condition of this branch of the operations of the Board of Missions.

It will be remembered that this wise and important scheme, which seemed necessary to complete the chain of efforts of the Presbyterian Church to enlarge her borders, and build up, through her instrumentality, the Redeemer's kingdom in our land, was moved in the General Assembly of 1843, and finally carried in the Assembly of 1844. In the wisdom of the Assembly, and its action has been approved by all the Assemblies that have met since, Church Extension—(the receiving, collecting, and disbursing moneys contributed for the purpose of assisting destitute and feeble churches and congregations, in erecting suitable houses for public worship) was connected with the Board of Missions. It is most naturally connected with that Board, and the Board conducts the business by one of its committees, which meets upon its own adjournments, or at the call of its Chairman, as often as may be necessary. The minutes of that Committee are read and considered once a month, at the regular meetings of the Board, and whatever subjects, or plans, or actions, that may require counsel and arrangement, are then and there discussed and determined. As the far larger number of our church edifices in need of aid in their construction are projected and carried to completion by ministers and missionaries in connection with the Board, it becomes very easy for them to communicate with the Board, and easy for the Board, being well acquainted with their fields of labour, to enter into their circumstances and to appreciate their wants. And so far as the business operations are concerned, the Board is amply competent, and of sufficient size, to attend to them; and in so doing, saves the expense of men, time, and means of an independent organization for the purpose.

The progress of this work may be briefly stated. During the first ecclesiastical year of its existence, that is, from May 1, 1844, to May 1, 1845, the Committee on Church Extension granted aid, with the approval of the Board, to 40 churches; and the income for this object was $3670.50. Of this sum $3603 was from individual donors, and but $67.50 from the churches. In the second year, 1845—6, aid was granted to 38 churches: Income, $6366.61; from individuals, $5924; from churches, $442.61. In the third year, 1846—7, aid was granted to 54 churches: Income, $4596.95; from individuals, $3551.40; from churches, $1045.45. The fourth year, 1847—8, aid was granted to 58 churches: Income, $6112.59; from individuals, $5432.50; from churches, $680.09. In the fifth year, 1848—9, aid was granted to 66 churches: Income, $7532.45; from individuals, $5316.50; from churches, $2215.95. In the sixth year, 1849—50, aid was granted to 70 churches: Income, $8633.58; from individuals, $6606.75; from churches, $2026.83. Making the whole number of churches aided from May 1st, 1844, to May 1st, 1850, 326; and the total amount of contributions, $36,907.58. Of which sum $30,434.15 was from individuals, and $6473.43 from the churches.

Since May 1, 1850, to December 1, 1850, appropriations have been made to 37 churches; and the receipts amount to $2194.19; and the total number of churches aided for the whole time, say for six years and a half, has been 363, and the total amount of receipts, $39,101.77. The number of churches actually completed through the aid of the Church Extension Fund is 258, up to May 1, 1850.

We desire attention to the fact, that five-sixths of all the money contributed has come from individual donors, and the number of these donors does not exceed eighty-four! Supposing each of these donors to be a communicant, then out of 207,254 church members, only 84 have supported the Church Extension scheme! And out of 2595 churches, contributions to it have been received from 117 only! One Sabbath-school, and two Ladies Benevolent Associations have sent in contributions. There has been one Presbyterial collection out of 127 Presbyteries; and one small legacy. This is doing little indeed for so important, and we may add, indispensable a work in our Church. Surely we can scarcely be said to have done any thing in comparison to what our necessities as a denomination have demanded. And yet, with such inadequate support, with such feeble means, no less than 258 church edifices have been aided by the Board, and brought to completion.

The very existence of the scheme of Church Extension has awakened hundreds, both in the newer and older settlements of our country, to the duty of building houses of public worship; who had for years been satisfied to meet in private houses; or in log houses; or uncomfortable shells; or warerooms; or hired halls, to the manifest detriment of their high profession. They were inspired with hope; they were stimulated to effort. And behold the happy result! We repeat it: Two hundred and fifty-eight church edifices now afford shelter and home to flourishing congregations, and adorn our towns, and villages, and country, and impart a stability and permanency to our operations, which, without aid from the Church Extension Fund, might have languished for years in the erection, or, indeed, been never attempted.

The moral effect ceases not with the completion of the House of Worship. The community, which previously felt itself unsettled and disposed to remove to other locations, becomes quiet and contented. Improvement begins. Better private dwellings go up; school-houses are built; roads are cut and constructed for all seasons; a parsonage is built, and a minister is settled and comfortably supported; and the temporal and spiritual interests of the people assume a new appearance of improvement and prosperity.

And what is the effect upon our Missionaries? As soon as they explore a field, and establish a temporary place of meeting, the next step in their progress is to erect a church edifice. We hear of their zealous and unremitting labours: of the outpouring of God's Spirit upon their charge. A letter makes its appearance asking an appropriation, for their people have said, We will arise and build a house for our God, where we and our children, and our children's children, may worship and find rest to our souls. Our missionaries see the considerate liberality and provident care of the Church, and they learn to love it and confide in it the more.

And what is the effect upon those persons in society who have no special connection with us as a denomination? It is every way good. They behold a denomination inspired with zeal for the salvation of souls and sending its missionaries into destitute regions, and seeking the lost sheep in the wilderness, and erecting houses of worship for their accommodation. They behold a denomination characterized by a prudent foresight, liberality, and efficiency. They repose confidence in it. They gratefully cast in their lot with us, because we have been the first to bring the gospel to them, and to provide for them and their children religious instruction and seats in the House of God.

But we must come to the special object which we had in view in this communication, which was to apprise our Officers and Members of the present condition of this part of our operations.

Appropriations have been made to 68 churches, up to May 1, 1850, amounting to $8,995; and since May 1850, to 37 churches, amounting to $4,775. From the number of applications, pressing in their nature, and the limited amount of contributions, the funds for Church Extension have been several thousand dollars overdrawn: and applications for new appropriations are coming in from week to week. Brethren, shall we go forward? This is a question which you must decide. It is your work. It is the cause of your own Church and the cause of the Redeemer. We earnestly beg you to give the claims of the Church Extension scheme your serious, and candid, and prayerful consideration. And we would venture respectfully to request, that as you desire the progress and prosperity of your own Church, and the progress and prosperity of her missionary operations in our destitute fields and frontier settlements, you would contribute to the funds for Church Extension at your earliest convenience, and forward your contributions to the Secretary or Treasurer of the Board; so that as your agents appointed in this thing, we may have the satisfaction of saying to the churches—all our applications are acted upon—all our appropriations are met—and the good work prospers. We believe that many of our pastors, who have never presented this object to their congregations, will do so now; and we believe also, that there are many of our Elders and Members who will see and feel the importance of it, and without waiting to be called upon, will, out of their abundance and liberality, remit something for the supply of our present necessities.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE FOR OCTOBER AND NOVEMBER.

Independent of a large number of letters on business, there were received at the Mission Rooms above two hundred Reports from Ministers and Missionaries in connection with the Board, labouring in twenty-six States and Territories: of which reports, sixty-six were from the Middle States; sixty-eight from the Western; and sixty-six from the Southern States and Territories.

From these Reports, many of them written with care and much feeling, we learn that the general state of our missionary work is encouraging. The health of our ministers and missionaries, and that of the people of their charge, has been remarkably preserved, with a very few severe exceptions. The ordinary amount of labour in preaching upon the Sabbath and during the week, and in visiting from house to house, and in attending meetings for prayer and for religious conference, has been performed. In some churches, revivals of religion are mentioned, and in others special seriousness, and cases of conversion occurring from time to time: and in almost all, respectful attendance upon, and attention to, the means of grace. Sabbath-schools and Bible-classes are reported, and some in a most flourishing condition. Catechetical instruction as the true foundation for the children and youth, and sound doctrinal preaching for all, are insisted on. Many are endeavouring to supply the children with the Catechism, and the adults with the Confession of Faith, while they give attention to the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, and of the books of our Board of Publication. And with pleasure we notice some instances of young men having their minds directed to the work of the ministry, and who have entered upon studies preparatory thereto. The Temperance reformation is accomplishing great good in some places. Houses of worship are reported as having been finished, and others projected: in like manner Parsonages have been built, and churches are turning their attention to this most necessary, and, in the end, economical arrangement, for the support of their ministers. Efforts are entered upon to take churches from off the Board, and make them self-sustaining churches, and in some instances, with gratifying success; and our ministers and missionaries are taking up collections for the different Boards. We observe also, that Parochial schools have in certain places been put into successful operation, and the religious instruction of the Coloured Population attended to.

While we desire to unite with the churches in giving God thanks for these, his mercies, upon our efforts to glorify his great and holy Name, yet we would deeply feel what is expressed in many of the reports, that there is wanting a general outpouring of God's Spirit upon our missionary fields, and upon all those who labour in them. When shall that happy day arrive? Let all who love our Lord and his Kingdom, beseech him for this grace upon us; especially at the present time, when scarcely any thing seems lacking in means, but this grace: without which all our arrangements and efforts, however wise and perfect, must come to vanity, and disappointment, and ruin! Pray Ye.

HOW THE WORK GOES ON.

The following letter shows the fruit of the work of Domestic Missions, as now carried on in the Presbyterian Church. The letter is but one of many: and who that reads it can doubt for one moment the necessity and importance both to our church and country, of our operations?

From Zanesville Presbytery, O.—"I may say for the encouragement of the Board, that its labours have been eminently beneficial within our bounds. There are four fields which have been decidedly prospered.

"First, I may name the field of Brother Arthur. A few years since, he commenced labouring there with one church organized, containing forty communicants, and having a meeting-house partly built. Since that time another meeting-house has been built six miles distant, and the number of communicants in the whole field has increased to one hundred and twelve.

"When Brother Robinson commenced labouring in his field, six years ago, there was neither meeting-house nor organized church. There is now a very neat meeting-house finished and paid for: two churches have been organized, containing at present sixty-five communicants, and the people have done more and more every year to sustain the means of grace.

"At Uniontown, where Brother Ferguson is labouring, nothing had been done three years ago: there is now a beautiful meeting-house finished and paid for, and a church of forty communicants.

"At Bristol, now vacant, where Brother Fulton has been labouring, a revival of religion has been enjoyed, resulting in the addition of thirty-six communicants to the church.

"For these encouraging results, many thanks are due the Lord of the harvest, who has blessed the instrumentality of our church through her Board in consoling many a burdened heart, and preparing it to rejoice in heaven. M. M. B."

COMMUNICATIONS FROM MISSIONARIES.

Destitutions of New Jersey.

"I can by no means concur in the opinion of one who has said that the New Jersey coast presents one of the most discouraging fields under the care of your Board, but it may be called one of the most difficult.

"It was certainly encouraging at our recent communion to see a larger number of persons, and coming from a greater distance, than on any previous sacramental occasion. Besides the accession of one by certificate, it was peculiarly interesting to receive another who had travelled twenty-one miles to this, the nearest church of our denomination, to profess his faith in Christ by receiving the sacrament of baptism. The conversion of this one is, under God, intimately connected with the labours of one of your itinerant missionaries in Cape May county; but now that field is vacant.

"The article from the pen of A. A., in the Home and Foreign Record for November, seems to have been written with just such a country in view. How many of your Christian readers know that one of their brethren in the State of New Jersey must travel twenty-one miles at this day to find a Presbyterian church, and that there are some still further removed from the ordinances which they love? How much longer shall these things be so?

N. Y. N."

A Faithful and Valued Missionary taking leave.

December 2, 1850.

"In retiring from the missionary service, permit me to record my deep and abiding conviction of the great and increasing importance of the operations of the Board; and my sincere and ardent prayer for its long continuance and prosperity; to express my gratitude for the uniform kindness and courtesy manifested towards myself by the Board, the Committee, and the Secretaries; and my earnest request that our Presbytery may still continue to receive encouragement in its work of faith and labour of love, from the Board of Missions, without whose aid, it would speedily cease to exist as a Presbytery."

Oregon.

With pleasure we insert in the Record the following letter from the Rev. Lewis Thompson, a missionary of the Board, who has now been above four years in Oregon. The Board have recently appointed two more missionaries to this wide and destitute region, Rev. Edward R. Geary and Rev. Robert Robe. Mr. Geary goes out by the Isthmus route, in February, and Mr. Robe by the overland route, in the spring. Already they are anticipating, in connection with the Rev. Mr. Thompson, the formation of a Presbytery. That will be a happy event. A Presbytery already in California—a Presbytery in Oregon—and in a short time we shall witness the formation of a third Presbytery; and then will speedily follow the constitution of a Synod! What name shall we give it? Let it bear the name of the great ocean along whose shores it shall first extend: the Synod of the Pacific. We shall hail that day with thanksgiving. And without a figure we can now say that the spires of our churches are illuminated by the sun as he rises from the ocean in the East, and his last glorious rays linger upon them as he sets in the ocean in the West.

The three brethren who are shortly to be associated in the work of the ministry in Oregon, God making their way prosperous—possess the spirit of the Master, which is the spirit of missions. They are going in faith and with anticipations that God's blessing will rest upon them. May these anticipations be fully realized, and the brethren be remembered by God's people at a Throne of Grace.

"Clatsop Plains, Mouth of the Columbia River,
"October 7th, 1850.

"To the Secretary, &c.

"Rev. and Dear Sir—Since the organization of the Clatsop Church, in 1846, we have received but four members by certificate and one on examination. And yet our prospects are encouraging. Our house of worship, put up at an estimated cost of two thousand five hundred dollars, was dedicated last Sabbath. The Rev. Albert Williams, of San Francisco, being present, and aiding us in the services. The house is not entirely completed, but will be, we hope, in two weeks. One member of the congregation furnished the lumber; two others contributed five hundred dollars each; and there are some smaller contributions. There will probably be a balance against us after our subscriptions are paid.

"We have had preaching regularly every Sabbath, and we confidently anticipate larger congregations, so soon as our public services are held in our new church. Our Sabbath-school has an attendance of from fifteen to forty children. Lessons are recited in the Shorter Catechism, and some of the scholars have already committed the greater portion of it. A member of our church has been employed to teach a Parochial school in the church, for the next twelve months. Our Temperance society numbers fifty members, and not long since, $50 were remitted to New York for Temperance books and periodicals, which we have not yet received. The Ladies, members of our church, have sent on $50 to our Board of Publication, for a church Bible and hymn books. The box of school-books, shipped by Dr. Van Rensselaer, on board the steamer Constitution in June last, has not been received. We are anxiously expecting them, as our parochial school is not to be commenced until the books arrive. Living is quite expensive. Our dwelling is six miles from the church; five miles of that distance is on the sea-beach, a splendid road for carriages, except at high tide. As we have but one horse, we often go down in an ox-wagon. This mode of conveyance is too slow; we must have a good Jersey wagon, with a covered top, to run with single or double harness, that the whole family may go comfortably and speedily together.*

"We have been anxiously expecting a reinforcement. I think the time has arrived, when our church should make greater efforts to occupy this highly important and widening field. What the future developements of God's providence in regard to this western coast may be, it is difficult now even to conjecture. But the pious and reflecting Christian, while contemplating the wonderful providence of the Almighty, in suddenly throwing open vast mines of wealth, long hidden from the eyes of the world, delights to anticipate the time, when that same bountiful hand will enrich us with spiritual blessings in like abundance. We humbly hope that the Great Head of the church has mercies in store for us; and that the little Church planted here on the shores of the Pacific, will prove a rich blessing to many future generations. And that from this, as a radiating point, the light of the glorious gospel will shine forth even across the great ocean, dispelling the darkness of heathenism, which has for so many centuries brooded over the nations of Asia.

Lewis Thompson."

Cause of Infidelity and Religious Error.

"Indiana.

"We have a tolerably good attendance on the preaching of the word at all points of labour, but we have a great deal of opposition in all this region of country: and a large amount of practical infidelity and Sabbath desecration; and within this county (which we have just explored and supplied) we found about seven hundred families destitute of the

* This excellent brother is in much need of many articles of furniture, essentially necessary to his comfort. Who among our benevolent friends will contribute specially to this end?

word of God! In the midst of such destitution as this, we are not to be surprised at the existence of infidelity and error in all its forms, and of every evil work. We have a good Sunday-school, a good Bible class, a prayer meeting and catechetical classes. Truth is mighty, and the Lord can make it mighty to the pulling down of strong-holds."

A Missionary's Work on the Sabbath-day.

"For me the Lord's day is one of toil. Besides the care of my own family, in a measure—in which we have three orphan children to bring up—I am obliged to see to the getting of the fuel and light: to sweep the house of God; make the fire; light the lamps and candles; superintend and teach in the Sabbath-school, besides acting as librarian, and then in connection with the preaching of the Word, perform the duties of chorister. Added to all this, in the afternoon, I have a Bible-class exercise in my school-room for my pupils. Into this, I am now about to introduce Alexander's Evidences, with the hope of forestalling infidelity among the youth."

Rejoicing.

"Illinois.

"We have just closed another very pleasant and interesting and solemn communion season. There have been thirty-six additions to the church in two communions. Nine at the first, and twenty-seven at the last Sabbath. Eight young persons were received last Sabbath, upon profession of their faith in Christ, who have been brought to hope in Him since our last communion. There are others indulging a hope, who, if spared, will unite on the first opportunity."

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts in the Treasury at Philadelphia, Pa., during the month of November, 1850.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Troy.— Lansingburgh ch to const Mrs ELEANOR PARMELEE, Mrs ANN CHIPMAN, and Mrs MARY FISHER h m's	154 71
Pby of Albany.—Charlton ch 8; Albany 1st ch 111 27	119 27
Pby of Wyoming.—Caledonia ch 38; Scotsville ch 12	50 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Windsor ch	6 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 3d ch 51 30; Central ch Buffalo city 123 08; Clarkson Cong ch 5; 1st ch Rochester 21; 2d ch (Hollanders') Rochester 6 72; Bethany Centre ch 5; South Presbyterian ch Buffalo city 11 04	223 14

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—The young people's miss soc of Goshen ch N Y	30 00
Pby of North River.—Rondout ch to const Mrs ELIZA F CRANE, Mrs MARY C PHILLIPS, WM H DEGRATH, GEORGE DUBOIS, and JOHN P HILL h m's 262; Smithfield ch 5	267 00
Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 13; ditto Thos R Lee 100; Rye ch 5 50; Port Chester ch 17 50	136 00
Pby of Long Island.—South Haven ch 22 22; Huntingdon ch 14 32	36 54
Pby of New York.—Rutgers st ch N Y Mrs Freeland 5; Nyack ch 20; Jamaica ch 13 70; Wallabout ch 3 71; Duane st ch N Y Thomas H Faile 100	142 41

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Westfield ch N J to con their pastor Rev E B EDGAR an hon mem 52 52; Baskenridge ch N J 30	82 52
Pby of New Brunswick.—Shrewsbury ch 22; Trenton 1st ch 108 62; Trenton 2d ch 13 34; Fem Mis Soc of Princeton for Missions in New Jersey 19; Pennington ch 26; Freehold ch 47 34; Bound Brook ch 83	319 30
Pby of West Jersey.—Bridgeton ch 120; Ladies Mis Soc of ditto 44; Woodbury ch 110	274 00
Pby of Newton.—German Valley ch 36; Allen Township and Catasaque chs 68 87	104 87
Pby of Raritan.—Amwell 1st ch	21 00
Pby of Susquehanna.—Towanda ch 18; Canton ch 7	25 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Tamaqua ch 16 27; Wilksbarre ch 50; Lackawanna ch 40	106 27

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—A friend in 10th ch Phila 1; Scots Presby'n ch 191; Central ch Phila Geo W McClelland 50; 10th ch Phila Thos H Hoge 50; 9th ch Phila 48 06	340 06
2d Pby of Philadelphia.—Abington ch Pa	55 00
Pby of Donegal.—Chestnut Level ch	28 50
Pby of Baltimore.—Havre de Grace ch 7; Alexandria ch 50	57 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Millerstown ch addl 1; Carlisle 2d ch 104 37	105 37

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Morgantown ch Va 13 50; Rev Jas Davis pastor of ditto 5	18 50

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St Clairsville.—Freeport ch Ohio 2; Sharon ch 2; Morristown ch 7	11 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Peoria.—North Presbyn ch Chicago Ills 33; Princeville ch Ills 20	53 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Concord.—Wilksboro ch "A Lady"	10 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of South Carolina.—Bethel ch for Missions in the South-west	35 00
Pby of Bethel.—Fishing Creek ch	42 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Cherokee.—Marietta ch Geo Miss Louisa Jane Roberts, Sunday-school class	10 00

LEGACIES.

Legacy of Mrs Francis P Devereux, of N Carolina per Mr T Devereux through Geo W Norwood Esq of Hillsboro N C and interest from Sep 13th $2015 67; Less expenses of Collection and transmission 70 95; Balance $1944 72; Legacy of Dr Israel Burnham, late of Antrim N Ham forwarded by Deacon Robt Steele Ex to Mr Geo H Van Gilder Jr of Trustees of Gen Assembly of Pres Ch for missions west of the Mississippi $200; Verbal Legacy of Mr Thaddeus C Culbertson of Chambersburg Pa forwarded by his father Joseph Culbertson Esq 20	2164 72

MISCELLANEOUS.

Thos G Happersett 5; S S Myrick Carmel N Y 3; Miss C Adams donation 3; avails of goods sold at a watering place 3 22; H S TERBELL N Y to con himself an hon mem 50; Mr D Ponce of Mt Zion Geo in part to con Mrs ISABELLA PONCE an hon mem 30; Levi A Ward Rochester N Y 1 50; A friend in Pa 5; Mrs A T Trueheart of Galveston Texas 2; A friend in Va to support missions among the negroes 92 cts; Rev C Cummins Florida N Y 5; John Strother Martinsburg Va 10; D C Murphy Franklin La 3; "A friend" 1 50; "A widow" 10; Chandler Ward Franklindale Pa 1 50	134 64
Total	$5152 82

C. C. JONES, Cor. Sec.

CLOTHING RECEIVED SINCE LAST ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

1 Box from the Ladies of Elizabethtown 1st ch Rev Dr Murray, Pastor, valued at	85 00
1 Box from Ladies Sewing Society of Hamilton Square N J, valued at	89 00
2 Trunks from Ladies Charitable Society of University Place ch N Y, valued at	100 00
1 Box from the Presbyterian ch of Warrior Run Pa. value	45 00
1 Box from Ladies of F Street ch Washington D C value	54 00
1 Box from Ladies of Easton 1st ch Pa, valued at	63 00
Total	336 00

C. C. JONES, Cor. Sec.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts in the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of November, 1850.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.— Lebanon ch, additional, 1 25; Hopewell ch, in part to const Rev. G. W. SHEAFFER an h m 15; Pittsburgh 1st ch, addl, Juvenile Fem Miss Soc 24; Montours ch 19;	$59 25
Pby of Blairsville.—New Alexandria ch 20 37; Plum and Parnassus chs addl 7 45; Armagh ch in part, 11 17; Johnstown ch 63 87	102 86
Pby of Redstone.—Greensburg ch	35 00
Pby of Erie.—Fairview ch Mrs. Mary Reed	10 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Burgettstown ch	15 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Coshocton.—Hopewell ch 2 75; Nashville ch 1 25	4 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Patterson Estate, per Rev G Marshall	$24 00
Horse Shoe Sabbath-school	2 00
		26 00
Total		$252 11

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

MISSIONARY CLOTHING.

Ladies of Canfield ch a box valued	$43 37
do Indiana ch do 50 to const Mrs CATH QUAY an h m	83 00
Ladies of Clarksville ch a box valued	58 00
do New Castle ch do do	46 50
	$230 87

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts in the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of November, 1850.

Presbyterial Col Schuyler Presb, per W. W. Hill		$10 00
Louisville 1st ch		1 00
Mt Carmel ch Memphis Pby per Rev D H Cummins		69 00
A Lady in Jefferson county per W W Hill		30 00
Rev Dr McMasters do do		15 00
Rocklick Indiana do do		2 75
Covington Ky mo con do do		30 60
do do ch col do do		42 45
Synod of Nor Ind to const their Moderator Rev ROBT IRWIN an h m		51 20
Rushville ch White Water Pby in part		31 20
Paris ch Palestine Pby		61 40
Rockville ch Crawfordsville Pby		7 00
Donation of Mrs McNutt		20 00
Waveland ch in part		6 00
Donation of Rev D McIntyre		5 00
Frankfort ch		28 50
Jefferson ch		9 50
Rossville ch		5 00
Donation of Mrs Eliza Platt		5 00
Delphi ch Logansport Pby		10 75
Lafayette ch do do in part		28 00
Donation of Robert Elliott in part		2 00
Pisgah ch West Lexington Pby		5 00
Louisville 1st ch		2 00
New Washington ch Pby of Madison		8 00
Springfield ch Ebenezer Pby per R Caldwell		5 00
J M C Irwin, Fayette Ky, per Alex M Cowan		25 00
Mrs Mary Cowan, Urbana O per do		5 00
Louisville 1st ch, Mr Kennely		3 00
do do Mr Escott		4 00
Maysville Ky Ladies Miss Soc for support of Rev ROBERT SCOTT, Platte county Mo		50 00
Louisville 1st ch Mrs M P Pope		10 00
do do		1 00
do do		10 00
Shiloh and Olivet per W Harbison		15 00
Cincinnati 5th ch Sab School per Rev C. Sturdevant		16 15
Pisgah ch West Lexington Pby in part		32 45
Paris ch do do do		100 00
Horeb ch do ch col do	28 00
do do Samuel Laird	100 00	128 00
McChord ch West Lexington Pby in part		194 25
Hopewell ch do do do		70 00
Hon J M Preston Covington Ky		20 00
Donation of Timothy Root		16 67
do A A Matthews		1 75
Collection in Newton ch O per Rev W C Hollyday		5 00
Col in Bethel and Ramah chs O per Rev H M Kerr		12 00
do Lebanon Ky per Rev H P Thomson	19 10
do Bethel ch do do	15 15
do Munsfordville ch do	11 00
do Ebenezer ch do	17 00
do Harmony ch do	14 25
do Shiloh ch do	8 25
do Edmonton ch in part do	16 00
do Greensburgh ch do	5 00
do Miscellaneous do	6 00	111 75
do Little Rock Ark per Rev Jos Green		27 90
do Dardenna Mo per Rev Thomas Watson		22 72
Donation of Rev G K Lynn		5 00
Collection Bethel ch Mo per Rev T A Bracken		11 00
do Parrie ch do do		12 00
do Hopewell ch		3 50
Flemingsburgh ch per T J Lepsic		1 00
Henderson ch Ky per Rev D L Gray in part		28 90
Evansville ch Indiana per Rev W W Hill		15 00
Louisville 1st ch		5 00
Clarksville ch		50 00
Total		$1504 42

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,
No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

THE AGENCY OF MINISTERS IN THE PERPETUATION OF THE MINISTRY

The agency of ministers in perpetuating the profession to which they have been consecrated, is an interesting question among the many relating to the means of supplying the Church with an increasing number of men qualified to preach the gospel. To dispense with the use of means entirely is subversive of all scriptural ideas of the sovereignty of God. Christian activity is called into requisition in the execution of the Divine decrees. We have never yet seen any scriptural reason in favour of making the increase of the ministry an exception to the rule that enforces human obligation in the use of appropriate means. If the objector changes his ground by saying that he admits the use of means so far as prayer is concerned, but no further—as we have sometimes heard—then we ask him to show, either from reason or the Scripture, the validity of such a limitation. If there is any thing in designation to the office of the ministry that requires in an especial manner the duty of prayer—which we readily admit—there is the same demand for the active employment of all other instrumentalities that have a natural relation to the end in view.

That ministers can do a great deal in keeping the subject of the ministry wisely before the minds of pious youth, is a matter of observation as well as of common sense. Providence has recorded in the training of many a youth the agency of parent, minister, or companion, in their eventual preparation for the sacred office. Nor is the agency of a minister in this great work of inferior moment. On the contrary, it is indispensable to the enlargement and prosperity of the Church in this particular, whether it be considered in reference to the instruction given to parents in public and in private, or to direct personal intercourse with pious young men themselves.

On this latter point, we present to our readers a few extracts of a letter from one of our most worthy and influential pastors. The extracts show that a pastor can assist in training the minds of pious youth to the examination of the question of personal duty in the work of the ministry. Although these young men are yet to be tested, we have great confidence that their pastor will only encourage such as are really of hopeful character and decided promise.

"The cause of education I have long regarded as one of the most important of all the benevolent operations of the Church.

"I have lately been preaching some three or four sermons upon the claims of the ministry on my people. Having recently enjoyed a precious season of revival, in which a number of young men were brought into the church; I have been looking among them too for suitable candidates for the ministry. Nor have I been entirely unsuccessful. Several have commenced a course of study with a view to the ministry. And a number of others I know to have the subject under serious consideration.

"It has been long my opinion that it is the privilege as well as the duty of the Church to educate her sons who are in indigent circumstances. And so am I teaching our people and encouraging our young men. These too, I doubt not, are your views and the views of your Board.

"Although I have no candidates to offer the Board as yet—feeling it to be desirable that they make some progress and give some proofs of capacity, application to study, &c., upon their own resources, before they go in such a position as to require the funds of the church; yet I expect to have several to offer you in the course of one or two years. I have, therefore, thought it not amiss to inquire what is your increase of new candidates of late? What is the state of your funds? To what extent may I expect aid from your Board, should I find myself in need of it?"

THE SOWER TO HIS SEED.

FROM THE GERMAN.

Sink, little seed, in the earth's black mould,
Sink in your grave so wet and so cold—
There must you lie;
Earth I throw over you,
Darkness must cover you,
Light comes not nigh.

What grief you'd tell, if words you could say!
What grief make known for loss of the day:
Sadly you'd speak;
"Lie here must I ever?
Will the sunlight never
My dark grave seek?"

Have faith, little seed; soon yet again
Thou'lt rise from the grave where thou art lain,
Thou'lt be so fair,
With thy green shades so light,
And thy flowers so bright,
Waving in air.

So must we sink in the earth's black mould;
Sink in the grave so wet and so cold;
There must we stay,
Till at last we shall see
Time turn to eternity,
Darkness to day.

THE RIGHT KIND OF FOREIGN MISSIONARIES.

One of the great advantages of theological seminaries consists in the opportunities for the cultivation of the missionary spirit. Our object, however, is not to dwell upon this point at present, but simply to call the attention of candidates to the fact that, whilst they are under obligations to go wherever duty calls them, few questions require more prayerful consideration and less impulsive haste in their decision than that of going on a foreign mission. The following seasonable remarks, extracted from the "Journal of Missions," show what kind of men are needed for the missionary field:

"It seems once to have been supposed by some, that almost anybody would do for a missionary. In our theological seminaries, if any one exhibited marks of a strong and commanding mind, and especially if he excelled in the power of speaking, it was put down as a settled point that he must stay at home; his talents must not be buried up and wasted on heathen ground. After twenty years' experience in the missionary work, I do most unhesitatingly pronounce this to be an entirely erroneous view. We have need of every grade and variety of talent on missionary ground, except for that which is decidedly below mediocrity. Men of this character should never be sent abroad. It is worse than a waste of the resources of the Church. And while we can give useful employment to all men of respectable talents, who have a heart to work, we can find scope for the highest intellectual ability. A missionary is frequently called upon to do things that none but a man of decided talents can accomplish. He needs possess within himself a mine of resources from which he can continually draw to suit all emergencies. There is no moral or intellectual attainment that can come amiss on missionary ground; and no man need stay at home because he or his friends imagine his talents to be of too high an order to be used in the foreign field. If there is any one whose reputation is such for piety, intellectual strength and acumen, sound judgment, common sense, and the power of writing and speaking effectively, that almost everybody feels that he cannot be spared from home, he is the very one that is just fitted to engage in the foreign missionary work.

"Great familiarity with spiritual and heavenly things is a capital requisite for a missionary, and if a man is not aiming at the possession of such a mind at home, it is in vain to send him abroad with the hope that he will acquire it there.

"One thing more: An enlarged, liberal, unaspiring and generous mind is of the first consequence in a missionary. Let none go abroad who are of a domineering, suspicious, or jealous disposition."

THE WANT OF MINISTERS.

"There is no fact connected with the present state of the American Churches which more forcibly impresses itself on those concerned for these churches, and acting among them, than the want of ministers; the want of energetic, devoted, intelligent men, to administer the affairs of the Christian household; men prayerful and faithful, exalted into enthusiasm, with the noble idea of their work, and heroic in their purpose under God to accomplish it. The openings for such men among the churches, and in the localities where churches are not, but would be, if the men were there to gather and guide them, are constantly surpassing the supply that can be given. And still the cry is for more, more, MORE. 'Send us men, ready, willing, and able to work. Such a man will make himself felt at once and widely.' There is probably no clergyman situated at a point which renders him liable to be called on for aid and advice to distant churches, to whom this call does not come, many times in the year; many times, often within the month. And still it increases. The openings for extensive usefulness are multiplying all the time. The intense and pervading excitements of the public mind are quickening thought and feeling throughout the country, to a constantly new and accelerating activity, and making necessary in the ministry more power and zeal. Men who have filled important churches are taken away, by accident, disease, or death. Other men competent to occupy their places are caught up one after another into Professorships, Presidencies, &c., in Colleges and Theological schools. The young men that year by year come from the seminaries are immediately established, often accepting calls before their studies are completed, among the churches about them; or else they are going on foreign missions, with their locations assigned them before their preparatory work is finished. And a very large proportion of the students in our Colleges, of the young men most eminent, too, for scholarship, industry, energy and power of popular impression, are not going into the ministry at all; but into the law, or the profession of literature; into the editor's chair, or the pursuits of science, or not unfrequently into commercial pursuits. It is so not in one denomination, merely, or another, we suppose; but among all denominations. And the result seems likely to be, soon, that it will be impossible to fill important posts without violently taking men from other localities where they are well established and greatly needed; if not, even, that it will be impossible to fill them at all, with men whose knowledge of the Truth and whose skill in its application, whose force of will and of thought, whose courage and patience and heroic self-sacrifice, shall make them respected and influential in their respective localities.

"There is a vague and general feeling that this is so throughout the Christian community. There is a very clear and definite knowledge that it is so, among those who are concerned to supply important churches with the pastors which they need. And it is high time that ministers and churches were awake to the fact. If we would not have an army without leaders, we must secure a more ample supply of efficient ministers. The young men in our churches who are mentally qualified for the work must be persuaded of their duty, and encouraged and aided to give themselves to it. Parents must dedicate their children to it, and hold them to it when they swing off by the strong pressure of parental desire. The societies that would aid young men who are preparing for the work must be everywhere supported more liberally. The officers in the colleges and preparatory schools must be awake to the improvement of their opportunities for influencing young men aright. And above all, there must be a more earnest, constant, devoted spirit of intercession and prayer with God, that he will raise up labourers and send them into the harvest. For it will perish, if there be not such, before our eyes."—Independent.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

When I get settled—Then I'll begin to work, labour in God's vineyard, study, write for the press, go about doing good, save sinners. Settled, get settled? What do you mean, friend; who expects to get settled in this life? We are strangers and pilgrims; our home is everywhere, and no where: we have no abiding place, no continuing city. Up, up, thou dreamer, up, bestir thyself; sinners are at the door, starving to death! perishing for lack of bread, the bread of eternal life! Out, out, turn out, the field is the world, the world is the field. O, I'm from home, in a strange place, when I get home then I'll do good. Get settled; hush, nonsense, fields are white for harvest. Go to work now, grasp every moment; do what thy hand findeth to do with all thy might. At home or abroad, by sea or by land, study to be useful, make everybody happy; write, preach, pray, exhort, entreat, take a bundle of tracts and books, out, out, turn out; go from house to house, pull sinners out of the fire! Who knows but that while you linger—waiting to get "settled," God may say, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

"Work while it is day, the night cometh when no man can work."

Feelings of a Young Missionary.—No class of men are more happy than missionaries. They make many sacrifices; but the Saviour supplies the lack of all which they leave behind them, when they turn their faces towards a heathen land. As a beloved brother once said, when speaking of the field which his mission was occupying, "We have no privations, Christ is with us; and that is enough!" Others would doubtless bear the same testimony to the faithfulness of their Master.

A missionary who has recently gone forth to labour in a distant land, writes as follows: "As to my own feelings in regard to missionary life, I am convinced, from my short experience, that there is nothing better for a poor sinful, sin-tried soul. We make some sacrifices; but it is for unspeakable gain. I have not seen the day or hour, since the sight of Boston faded from my view, when I was not ready to bless God for making me a missionary." Who will become partaker in this joy?—Dayspring.

Training for Service.—It is no uncommon thing for those who are to be employed in great and important services in the cause of God and truth to be themselves the subjects of fiery trial, that they may be more fitted for their work. Luther, at a certain time, was violently harassed and afflicted with temptation; insomuch that his heart was rent with anguish, and tears streamed from his eyes, and his breath was spent in sighing. Amid these pangs of distress, a person accosted him with the following words: "My son, why dost thou mourn? Dost thou not know that God hath commanded thee to believe?" "When I heard that word command," says the zealous reformer, "it prevailed more on my heart than all that I heard, or read, or thought on before." He acknowledged that he did not understand some scriptures till he was in affliction; and that he was never employed in any new thing, but that he was beset with some temptation, or visited with a fit of sickness.

Encouraging Incident.—At a meeting of the Alumni of Bangor Theological Seminary, on the occasion of its recent anniversary, the following incident was related:

"Passing on horseback with an acquaintance one day in my early ministry," said the narrator, "we called at a house where a woman was sick. I conversed and prayed with her, and we went on our way. A short time after, I was sent for to minister in this neighbourhood, which was fifteen miles from where I was settled; for the Lord was there regenerating and saving sinners. It seems that a single remark, dropped in the above-named prayer, touched the sick woman's heart, and she soon submitted to Christ. Her interesting state so wrought on the husband, that he soon came out on the Lord's side. Immediately he went out among his neighbours, and told them what great things the Lord had done for him and his wife. This took effect on their hearts; and when I visited them, about twenty were hoping that they had passed from death unto life. Nor did the work stop here, but spread into the surrounding community; so that in the end from forty to fifty joined themselves to the company of believers." "Behold what a great matter a little fire kindleth."

The Clerical Backslider once said, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." At the fount of baptism he promised God and the church to "renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the carnal desires of the flesh, so that he would not follow or be led by them;" and at the altar of ordination he promised to be diligent to frame and fashion himself and family according to the doctrine of Christ; to make both himself and them as much as possible wholesome examples and patterns to the flock of Christ. He did so for a season, and God was with him, and a blissful heaven was in prospect. But he relaxed his purpose of devotion, neglected his Bible, and the communion of his God—became weary of his work, and covetous of the riches and luxuries of the world. He compromised the cross with error, and compromised self-denial with sin; left his calling, and to-day, perhaps, reels a drunkard in some far-off land; digs gold and earns hell in California, shaves notes, or speculates in stocks, or wrings money out of this world by all the processes of modern speculation and brokerage. He has "fallen from grace;" though he may occasionally sigh and sing of his former hopes, but it is of no use. Like Judas, he has sold his Christ for money, and the pleasures money will buy; and if there is any truth in the Christian revelation, the mark of reprobation is upon him. He will die ere long, and go to his own place a back-slidden minister, a reverend apostate—"God's most abandoned, and hell's most damned."

Ministers of God, beware! Keep to your work, and let the world alone. To you the world is poison, and you cannot touch it and be safe. Live near to God; build your house in heaven, and lay up all your treasures there. Sinners will see it, and some will go and do likewise. Better by far be a Lazarus in "Abraham's bosom," than a "certain rich man" tormented in the unquenchable flame.—Payson.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

A GREAT MAN CONVERTED AT SCHOOL.

The Rev. Francis Makemie was a great man. He was the father of Presbyterianism in the United States. He was brought to a knowledge of God at school. Dr. Foote, in his admirable history of Virginia, has the following statement:

"In replying to a charge brought against him in Virginia, of denying the influence of the Holy Spirit, because he rejected baptismal regeneration, he declared that, so far from denying the influences of the Spirit, he fully believed them to be indispensable to all religion; and that he had reason to thank God that at the age of fourteen, under the instruction of a pious schoolmaster, he felt their power on his own soul."

"He being dead yet speaketh." The providence of God has preserved the fact, above recorded, for our instruction. The father of the Presbyterian Church, converted under the instruction of a pious schoolmaster, pleads with the present generation in behalf of Christian education. A church will be blessed with good and great men in proportion to her care in faithful, godly training. As Presbyterians, we profess to love old doctrines; let us also love old practices which are in accordance with God's word. And who doubts that religious education is enjoined in the Bible? Who doubts that He who converted Francis Makemie "under the instruction of a pious schoolmaster," will bless many sons and daughters under the same hopeful educational influence?

SHILOH PRESBYTERIAL ACADEMY, Tenn.

The first semi-annual session of this Institution, under the care of Mr. Nathan H. Dow, as principal, recently closed. The last two days of the session were occupied in an examination of the pupils, before a large and respectable audience; which gave full satisfaction to all the patrons of the school. The examination was not, as is sometimes practiced, superficial, and merely to make a show, but it was full and thorough in all the parts of study, and such as was calculated to show the real progress of each pupil, and the superior qualifications of Mr. Dow as an instructor. In all the departments, from the lowest to the highest, the students acquitted themselves with such honour as reflected great credit to themselves as well as their teachers.

The course of instruction, English, Classical, Mathematical, and Scientific, is believed to be as full and thorough in this Academy as any in the West. The Bible is made a text-book in the school—each student is required to recite at least one lesson daily in it.

The Academy is under the care of the Presbytery of the Western District, and controlled by a Board of Trustees, comprising the pastor, elders, and deacons of New Shiloh Church. Located in Gibson county, about eight miles south of Trenton, in one of the most healthy and desirable neighbourhoods of West Tennessee, its freedom from temptations to vice and immorality, the high moral and literary character of the principal, the full and thorough course of study required, the cheapness of boarding, together with its religious advantages, it offers to parents and guardians facilities for moral and literary education not surpassed by any other academy.

A competent number of able and efficient assistants will be employed, and no pains will be spared to advance the pupils and sustain the reputation of the school.

E. S. Campbell, President.

DUNLAP'S CREEK ACADEMY, Pa.

The committee appointed at the last stated meeting of Presbytery to attend to the examination of the Dunlap's Creek Presbyterial Academy, beg leave to report: That in obedience to the instructions of Presbytery, they attended at Dunlap's Creek, and were highly gratified with all they witnessed. The students appear to have made excellent progress in the several departments of study upon which they were examined, and there is the most abundant evidence that their instruction has been particularly accurate and thorough. We, therefore, agree in the opinion, that the students did great honour, not only to themselves, but to their laborious and faithful instructors, the Rev. Dr. Wilson, principal, and Mr. James Black, his assistant, upon whom the principal part of the labour in their instruction has devolved, and whom we would most cordially commend to the patronage of the churches under your care.

Your committee would not fail to notice the religious impress which marks the course of instruction in your Academy. It did our hearts good to hear the examination of the different classes upon the Shorter Catechism, and to mark their progress in the knowledge of the doctrines of the Bible; and we cannot but express the hope that the fruits of this instruction in the principles of Divine truth, will yet benefit and bless our Church and country.

The exercises of the occasion were closed by a public exhibition in the evening, in which select and original orations, essays, and debates were heard with deep attention by a large and deeply interested audience, and which were highly creditable to the young men engaged. Your committee could not fail to notice, what was the subject of favourable remark by many present, the religious cast, the vein of high-toned morality which pervaded all these exercises, and which evidenced plainly the favourable effect of the religious influences by which they were surrounded.

Thus far, in the judgment of your committee, the design of the Presbytery in the establishment of this Institution bids fair to be realized, and with the blessing of the Great Head of the Church, may we not hope that this growing Institution will become a school of the prophets—training up many who, in future years, shall benefit and bless our country and the world.

JAMES DAVIS, M. ALLEN WILLIAMS, } Committee.

WHAT CAN BE DONE IN A MISSIONARY CHURCH.

The Church at Fort Winnebago, Wisconsin, has been recently established, and is, of course, not a strong one in numbers or resources. But it has a strong purpose to take care of its youth, and it rightfully considers them the richest resources, under God, of its prosperity. The following is the advertisement of its plan:

FORT WINNEBAGO SCHOOL.

The session of the First Presbyterian Church of the town of Fort Winnebago, having secured the services of a competent female teacher, will commence their parochial school on Tuesday, the 22d of October, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

The school will be under the care of the session of the church, and every effort will be made to secure the mental and moral improvement of the children of the school. All the teachers of the school are to be pious persons; and in addition to the usual branches of elementary education, the Bible will be used as a text-book for daily instruction in religion, and the Shorter Catechism will be taught at least twice a week.

The school will be opened with prayer and reading of the Bible; and singing, as far as practicable, will be taught in the school.

The price of tuition per quarter will be as follows, payable in advance:

Orthography, Reading, Writing, Elementary Arithmetic, and Geography, $2 00.

Grammar, Philosophy, Composition, &c., in addition to the above branches, $3 00.

Those who wish to study higher branches will have an opportunity of doing so.

The school for the present will be held at the house of the Rev. W. W. McNair. All who wish to send to the school will please make early application to one or more of the members of the session of the Church.

REV. W. W. McNAIR, GEORGE WALL, J. C. PETTIBONE, } Church Session.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The importance of Presbyterial schools as connected with the prosperity of the Church, can scarcely be overrated. If we wish the distinctive principles of the denomination to be preserved, we must begin with the children, and continue our fostering care through every period to the maturity of manhood. Aware of the influence of early education upon the subsequent character, other denominations are making strenuous exertions, in different parts of the country, to establish schools where distinctive principles of the denomination shall, at an early period, be impressed upon the mind, and thus a bias be given to opinions and feelings in subsequent life. And for the want of equal privileges among themselves, many Presbyterians, particularly in the Southern States, place their children in these schools where their minds receive a bias through the assiduous exertions that are used, and thus the Presbyterian Church is robbed of materials that should go help build up, and give her greater strength and efficiency as a branch of the Church of Christ. And it is a matter worthy of particular notice, that to render these schools attractive to youth of the female sex, has been deemed an object of special importance, well knowing that a bias given to the female mind will have a controlling influence in families, and thus become a powerful means of securing greater numbers to the denomination. Nor have these efforts been without success. Instances, in great variety, could be mentioned, where the daughters of staunch Presbyterians, sent to the schools of other denominations, have been diverted from the faith of their fathers, and have not only adopted, but have become strenuous advocates of the sentiments and practices of the denomination where they received their education; and when they have become mothers, have taken peculiar care to instil the same notions into the minds of their children.

In this way, while the Presbyterian Church has been losing, other denominations have increased at their expense. To counteract such influences, it is not enough to talk of the evil. Means must be provided that will have as great, or greater attractive influence, than those which thus become the means of enticing away. Schools should everywhere be established that will contain all the elements of a thorough and finished education to any extent that is desired under the moral and religious training of Presbyterian principles. And when I speak of Presbyterian principles, I do not mean the mere shiboleths of party, but those broad and sound principles of deep-toned and religious truth that have been received as true by the devout and pious in every age of the Church; principles drawn from the Bible, as the only rule of faith and practice, by which the conduct of man is to be regulated. With the forms, and ceremonies, and prerogatives, and the external paraphernalia of church matters, Presbyterianism has little to do. These things, as attractive to youthful, inexperienced minds, are regarded as of secondary importance; while the great object is, as it should be, to reach the heart, and amend the external part, by purifying the principle within.

The youthful mind, under the training of external forms, very soon falls under the impression that these are religion itself; and, as a natural consequence, adopts the conclusion, that the greater the devotion to these forms, the greater the amount of religion. The religion of the heart, therefore, is lost sight of in the accumulation of external rubbish. To prevent such effects, we need schools placed under the care of teachers of acknowledged piety, and who will endeavour to lead their pupils into correct notions of the nature of religion, and of religious duties, as connected with all the circumstances of life. Not for the sake of preying upon other denominations, but to sustain our own.

The great want in a Presbyterial school is a pious and devout teacher, who will endeavour to season all his instructions with that salt, which will secure an uncontaminated mind, and transmit an uncontaminated influence through the widest extent in the community.

EDUCATION IN ENGLAND.

England is unquestionably among the lowest in the scale of general education, of any of the countries of the Reformation. No public system for the education of the people has ever been established. A number of national and local organizations exist, whose object is the promotion of this great cause; and parliament disburses an inconsiderable sum of money through these inferior instrumentalities. Nothing, however, has been done on a scale corresponding to the wants of the country and the demands of the age. The existing organizations, though comparatively limited in their operations, have the merit of using their influence in favour of religious education. At the present time a movement is making in favour of a national system. And, in order to get rid of the ecclesiastical difficulty arising from the introduction of the religious element, some persons are willing to abandon it altogether. This way of solving the difficulty, however, meets with little favour either from the established church or the dissenting bodies. Dr. Bacon, of New Haven, now on a tour in England, lately addressed a meeting whose object was to promote a secular system of education.

The Christian Times, in noticing the meeting, states that "the good New England pastor (Dr. Bacon,) while discoursing so complaisantly of the operation of the secular education system in his own land, could have had but little idea of the party by whom that system is chiefly patronized in England. It was probably unknown to him, that one of the persons who took part in the conference is a zealous propagator of atheism through the periodical press, and has suffered imprisonment for blasphemy!" Our cotemporary further observes,—"It is worthy of special notice that the editor of the Westminster Review presided, and announced that Mr. Edward Lombe—whose sentiments respecting Divine Revelation are well known—had presented the funds of the Association with £500!"

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, NOVEMBER, 1850.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Buffalo City.

Bethany Centre ch $5 00

Presbytery of Hudson.

Hopewell ch 9; Scotchtown ch 12 67; 21 67

Presbytery of North River.

Marlboro ch Mrs Jagger 1; B Bailie 50 cts 1 50

Presbytery of Bedford,

South Salem ch 50 00

Presbytery of Long Island.

Bridgehampton ch 37; Smithtown ch 8 71; 45 71

Presbytery of New York.

42d st ch 30; Rutgers' st ch collection 139 04; W L Skidmore 10; G Fenn 5; M Bird 5; H S David 2; Mrs Townsend 2; I Hawley 27; J W C Leveridge 3; in all 191 04; of which $20 for General Education, 171 04; Brooklyn ch 102 08 303 12

Presbytery of New York 2d.

Scotch ch R L & A Stuart 500 00

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

Rahway 1st ch 60 00

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Freehold ch 7 00

Presbytery of West Jersey.

Williamstown ch 2 00

Presbytery of Newton.

East Allen Township ch 5 00

Presbytery of Luzerne.

Wilkesbarre ch 20 00

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

10th ch a friend per Rev Dr Boardman 100; Central ch Collection 46 12; Jno V Cowell 10; in part 56 12; 6th ch Annual Collection 182 50 338 62

Presbytery of St. Clairsville.

Sharon ch 4 00

Presbytery of Richland.

Ashland ch 6 00

Presbytery of Miami.

Xenia ch 14 00

Presbytery of Peoria.

North ch Chicago 66; of which $33 for General Education 33 00

Presbytery of Winchester.

Martinsburg ch Mrs Jno Strother 10 00

Presbytery of West Hanover.

Sundry churches, reported by Rev Dr Rice 110 00

Presbytery of Knoxville.

Knoxville 1st ch 13 65

LEGACIES.

Legacy of Mrs Francis Devereux, late of Raleigh N C, with interest $2015 67 less $70 95 expenses 1,944 72

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend, paid to a candidate 25 00

Total $3,519 99

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c.

Scotch ch N Y Messrs R L & A Stuart 1000; Rutger's st ch N Y 20; Brick ch N Y Joseph Sampson 50; University Place ch, Miss Hicks to const Rev Samuel Miller an Honorary member 50; G G Howland 100; T P Stanton 15; W M Fellows 20; J M C Gray 20; John Scrymser 5; Dr J K Rogers 10; Miss Cogswell 5; Cash 5; in all $280. 6th ch Philada for Austin College Texas 70 50; North ch Chicago Ill 33; Bethel ch Mt Sterling Mo 8; Miss Judith M Oehmrig, Serantonia Pa 3;

Total $1,414 50

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH, IN OCTOBER, 1850.

Presbytery of Redstone.

Rehoboth ch to constitute the REV J R HUGHES, an Honorary member 50 00

Presbytery of Ohio.

Pittsburgh 2d ch 37 08

Presbytery of Beaver.

Westfield ch 10 00

Presbytery of Erie.

Salem ch 11 00

Presbytery of Steubenville.

Two Ridges ch 16 00

Total $124 08

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & Co., Treasurers.

RECEIPTS AT LOUISVILLE FROM AUGUST 1, TO NOVEMBER 1, 1850.

Presbytery of New Albany.

Bridgeton ch 2 50

Presbytery of Rock River.

Princeton ch Ill 4 50

Presbytery of Louisville.

Louisville 1st ch Male Edn Soc 67; Cash 2,60—69 60; Owensboro ch 44 45; Mulberry ch 22 30 136 35

Presbytery of Muhlenberg.

Salem ch 1 50

MISCELLANEOUS.

J M C Irwin, Fayette Co. Ky 25 00

Total $169 85

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Compiled from letters received at the Mission House, to the 14th of December.

India.—Letters have been received from Lahor, September 18; Lodiana, October 8; Futtehgurh, October 7; Allahabad, September 30. There had been a good deal of sickness amongst the mission families at Saharunpur and Lodiana, but all were on the recovery. At Futtehgurh, the Rev. W. H. McAuley says, "Our prospects here are brighter than I have ever seen them before. Many of the boys in the city-school have lost all confidence in their false religion, and hear the truth gladly. Some few are inquiring the way of salvation through Christ. Our schools are promising; we have in all about three hundred and fifty boys. Pray for us and them."

China.—We have received a letter from the Rev. J. B. French, dated Canton, September 27. Missionary matters were going on much in the usual way. The province in which Canton is situated and the neighbouring one of Kwong-Sai were not a little disturbed by acts of violence. Multitudes in the western parts of these provinces were in a state of open rebellion. Many of the troops sent against them had been overcome, or else had joined the rebels. This may prove the commencement of widespread and serious resistance to the present government in China.

Siam.—Letters have been received of dates to the 25th of September. In this country political matters are also in an unsettled state. For some weeks the king had refused to attend to the duties of the crown, but afterwards he returned to his throne; his conduct was thought by some to have been designed to forward the acknowledgment of a favourite son as his successor. It had tended to fill his subjects with alarm. A more serious matter, however, at least to the missionaries, grew out of the attempts by an American, and afterwards by a British embassy, to form more favourable commercial relations with the Siamese government. Both of these embassies failed completely in their object, obtaining no audience from the king, and no consent to their proposals. These transactions appeared to awaken a jealousy of the foreigners previously in the country. Officious persons brought the names of the natives connected with the missions to the notice of the government officers; and people became afraid to have any intercourse with the missionaries. The result was, that our brethren could make no progress in procuring a site for their buildings; and indeed they considered it inexpedient at present to expend any money for that purpose. It was understood, moreover, that serious disaffection existed against the government, which might soon break out into a revolution. The British Envoy, Sir James Brookes, had kindly offered to convey the missionaries to some other place; but they considered it not unsafe to abide some time longer at Bangkok. They repeat their request to be remembered in the prayers of the churches.

Africa.—Letters have been received from the stations in Liberia to the 1st of October. Several persons had recently been admitted to the communion of the church at Kentucky, and others were inquiring the way of life.

From the mission near the equator, we have advices to the 29th of August. We learn with thankfulness the favourable prospects of these brethren. They had concluded to commence their mission at Corisco, an island near the coast, at no great distance north of the equator. Mr. Mackey speaks in glowing terms of the healthfulness and beauty of their station, and of the cordial reception extended to them by the natives. He says, "There is much interest manifested here in every thing that concerns us. Our visiters are too numerous to be counted. On the Sabbath we have a good many people to talk to. They keep good order, and seem to give attention. The old king expresses himself very favourable to our missionary work, and to a reform among his people; and he appears to be sincere. . . . . These first appearances may be deceitful, but we trust that God will bless our labours, and make them successful. We know that many of God's people daily pray for us." For more particular accounts, see Mr. Mackey's letter, in another column.

Many of our readers feel a special interest in Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, of the Gaboon Mission of the American Board, and will learn with pleasure their good health on the 16th of August. Messrs. Mackey and Simpson, in all their letters, express themselves as greatly indebted to them and to the other brethren of the Gaboon Mission.

Mission to the Jews.—On the recommendation of the Presbytery of Baltimore, the Rev. F. E. Neuhaus, a licentiate preacher of the Presbytery, has been appointed a missionary to the Jews in that city. We trust that the Lord will greatly bless his labours amongst his "kinsmen according to the flesh."

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE MISSIONS.

JANUARY 1, 1851.

MISSIONS IN NORTH INDIA.

LODIANA MISSION.

Lodiana.—A city near the river Sutlej, on the leading route from Delhi to Lahor, 1120 miles north-west from Calcutta: population about 70,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1834.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. J. Porter, L. Janvier, and A. Rudolph; Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Janvier; William Basten, native catechist; two native Scripture readers. The Rev. J. H. Orbison embarked for this mission on the 8th of August.

Church: — communicants.

Schools: High school, English, 81 boys; Persian and Urdu school, 100 boys; Gurmukhi school, 45 boys; Orphan boarding-school, 19 girls.

Printing Press: 4,014,186 pages of works printed in the Hindustání, Hindí, and Panjábí or Gurmukhí.

Saharunpur.—A city near the river Jumna, 105 miles north-east from Delhi, 130 miles south-east from Lodiáná; inhabitants, 85,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1836.

Missionaries: The Rev. Messrs. J. R. Campbell, J. Caldwell, and J. S. Woodside, and their wives; T. Wylie and J. Gabriel, native assistants. The brethren at this station are ecclesiastically connected with the Reformed Presbyterian Church.

Schools: In the orphan boys' school, 9 pupils; English and Vernacular schools, 33 scholars.

Church: 18 communicants.

Sabathu.—A town in the lower ranges of the Himalaya mountains, in the Protected Hill States, 120 miles north-east from Lodiáná; population of Sabathu and its immediate neighbourhood, about 12,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1836.

Missionaries: James Briscoe and Saudager, native assistants.

Church: — communicants.

Jalandar.—A city in the Panjab, 30 miles north-west from Lodiana: population about 60,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1847.

Missionaries: The Rev. Golok Nath; John Lewis, native catechist.

Church: — communicants.

Schools: In the English, 20 scholars; Vernacular, 60.

Ambala.—A city nearly central between Lodiáná, Saharunpur, and Sabathu; population, about 35,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1848.

Missionaries: The Rev. Messrs. J. M. Jamieson, and J. H. Morrison and their wives; one native assistant.

Church: 11 communicants.

School: 60 boys.

Lahor.—The political capital of the Panjab, about 120 miles westward from Lodiáná; population, over 100,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1849.

Missionaries: The Rev. Messrs. J. Newton and C. W. Forman; Mrs. Newton.

School: 80 boys.

FURRUKHABAD MISSION.

Futtehgurh—Furrukhabad.—The former place is a military post of the East India Company, on the river Ganges, about 750 miles north-west from Calcutta, and near the large city of Furrukhabad, of which it may be considered the port. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1839.

The population of Furrukhabad is variously estimated at from 80,000 to 120,000. Two of the houses of the mission families are near this city, which were erected in 1842.

Missionaries: The Rev. Messrs. J. L. Scott, W. H. McAuley, A. H. Seely, Gopee Nath Nundy; Mrs. McAuley, and Mrs. Seeley; two native catechists. The Rev. J. F. Ullman, of this mission, is now in Prussia, his native country, and expects to return to his station in a few months. The Rev. Messrs. R. S. Fullerton and D. E. Campbell, and their wives, embarked for this mission on the 8th of August.

Church: 72 communicants.

Schools: in the Orphan School, 20 boys, and 28 girls; City school, 131 scholars; Bazár schools, 110 scholars.

Mynpoory.—A town about 40 miles south-west from Furrukhabad, containing 12,000 inhabitants, in the midst of a densely settled country. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1843.

Missionaries: The Rev. J. J. Walsh; Mrs. Walsh; two native assistants.

School: in the English and Vernacular school. 100 pupils.

Agra.—An important city on the river Jumna, the capital of the new Presidency; population, estimated at from 60,000 to 100,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1846, and connected for the present with the Furrukhabad Mission, being distant from Futtehgurh about 120 miles towards the west.

Missionaries: The Rev. J. Wilson: Mrs. Wilson. The Rev. J. C. Rankin and Mrs. Rankin are at present in this country, on account of Mr. Rankin's health.

Church: 35 communicants.

ALLAHABAD MISSION.

Allahabad.—A city at the junction of the river Ganges and Jumna, 475 miles north-west from Calcutta, with a population of about 70,000 inhabitants. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1836.

Missionaries: The Rev. Messrs. J. Warren, J. Owen, and R. M. Munnis; Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Owen; John Harry, native licentiate preacher, and five native assistants. The Rev. J. E. Freeman is in this country for his health. The Rev. Messrs. L. G.

Hay and H. W. Shaw and their wives sailed for this mission on the 8th of August.

Church: 42 communicants.

Schools: in the Orphan school, 20 boys and 19 girls; Bazár schools, 150 boys; Bazár female school, 60; Mission College, 150 pupils.

Printing Press: Printed during the year 2,310,319 pages, in Hindí, Hindustání, Sanscrit, and English.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.

NINGPO MISSION.

Ningpo is situated in lat. 29 deg. 55 min. N., and long. 121 deg. 22 min. E.; population estimated at 300,000. Occupied as a mission-station in 1844.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. R. Q. Way, M. D., H. V. Rankin, S. D. Martin, W. P. Martin; Mr. M. S. Coulter, superintendent of the press, and their wives; Rev. J. W. Quarterman; D. B. McCartee, M. D. The Rev. A. W. Loomis and his wife are in this country for health.

Church: 8 native members.

School: in the boarding-schools, 55 pupils; in two day-schools, 20.

Printing Press: 2,123,258 pages were printed. The printing is executed not upon the wooden blocks of the natives, but with divisible metallic types.

SHANGHAI MISSION.

Shanghai.—This city is on the coast, about 150 miles north of Ningpo. The population is variously estimated, from 200,000 upwards. Occupied as a mission-station in 1850.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. M. S. Culbertson and J. K. Wight, and their wives.

CANTON MISSION.

Canton.—This city is in lat. 23 deg. N., and long. 113 deg. E. The population is estimated at 700,000. Macao was occupied as a mission-station in 1842; but the missionaries removed to Canton during the year 1847.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. A. P. Happer, M. D., and J. B. French; Mrs. Happer. The Rev. W. Speer has returned to this country, on account of health.

School: in the boarding-school, 30 boys.

MISSION IN SIAM.

Bangkok, the capital of Siam, is a large city, near the mouth of the river Meinam; its population is variously estimated at from 300,000 to 500,000. Occupied first as a mission-station in 1840; mission suspended in 1844; resumed in 1846.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. S. Mattoon and S. Bush, and their wives; S. R. House, M. D.

MISSIONS IN WEST AFRICA.

LIBERIA MISSIONS.

Settra Kroo.—This station is among the Kroo people, nearly midway between Monrovia and Cape Palmas. Occupied as a missionary post in 1841.

Missionaries: W. McDonough, teacher. The Rev. J. M. Connelly and wife have returned to this country, on account of health.

School: 15 scholars.

Monrovia.—Monrovia is the capital of Liberia, and was occupied as a mission-station in 1842.

Missionaries: the Rev. H. W. Ellis; Mr. B. V. R. James, teacher.

Church: 39 communicants.

Schools: 78 scholars.

Kentucky, a settlement on the St. Paul's river, 16 miles from Monrovia. Occupied as a mission-station in 1850.

Missionary: Mr. H. W. Erskine, teacher.

Church: 14 communicants.

School: 28 scholars.

Greenville.—A settlement on the coast, 120 miles south from Monrovia. Occupied as a mission-station in 1847.

Missionary: the Rev. J. M. Priest.

MISSION NEAR THE EQUATOR.

Corisco.—An island 40 miles north of the Gaboon, about 20 miles from the main land, affording access to a large population. Occupied as a mission-station in 1850.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. J. L. Mackey and G. W. Simpson; Mrs. Simpson.

MISSIONS TO THE INDIANS.

OTTAWAS.

Station,—On Grand Traverse Bay, Michigan. Mission commenced in 1833.

Missionaries: the Rev. P. Dougherty; Mr. J. K. Whitehead, teacher; and their wives; Mr. D. Rodd, teacher and interpreter.

Church: 29 communicants.

School: 79 scholars.

IOWAS AND SACS.

Station,—In the Iowa reservation, near the Great Nemaha river. Mission commenced in 1835.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. W. Hamilton, and S. M. Irvin, and their wives.

Church: — communicants.

Boarding School: 34 scholars.

OMAHAWS AND OTOES.

Station,—For the present near Bellevue, north of the river Platte. Mission commenced in 1846.

Missionaries: the Rev. E. McKinney; Mrs. McKinney; Mr. D. E. Read, teacher; Mr. H. Martin, teacher, and wife.

School: 35 boys; girls, 10.

CREEKS.

Kowetah and Tallahasse.—In the Creek reservation, near Fort Gibson. Mission commenced in 1842.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. R. M. Loughridge, J. R. Ramsey; J. G. Junkin, M. D.; W. S. Robertson, teacher; J. B. Junkin, steward; and their wives; Rev. W. H. Templeton; Miss N. Thompson, Miss M. Bowen, and Miss H. M. Green, teachers.

Church: 21 communicants.

School: 60 scholars.

SEMINOLES.

Station on Little River, one hundred miles southwest from the stations of the Creek mission. Mission commenced in 1848.

Missionaries: Messrs. J. Lilley, and J. D. Bemo (native,) teachers, and their wives.

School: 16 scholars.

CHOCTAWS.

Spencer Academy.—This Academy is established in the Choctaw territory, and supported chiefly by the Choctaw nation. Mission commenced in 1846.

Missionaries: the Rev. Messrs. A. Reid, H. Ballentine, and their wives; Mr. J. Dwight, native licentiate preacher; Mr. J. S. Betz, carpenter; Miss S. Dutcher, teacher; Miss E. J. Morrison, assistant.

Church: — communicants.

School: the ordinary number of pupils in the Academy is about 100.

CHICKASAWS.

Station,—Near Boggy Depot. The Chickasaw territory adjoins that of the Choctaws, and their number is over 5000 souls.

Missionaries: Mr. J. S. Allen and wife.

MISSION TO THE JEWS.

New York.—Mission commenced in 1846.

Missionaries: Rev. M. R. Miller, Rev. J. Neander.

Philadelphia.—Mission commenced in 1850.

Missionary: Rev. B. Stienthal.

Baltimore.—Mission commenced in 1850.

Missionary: Rev. F. E. Neuhaus.

MISSIONS IN PAPAL EUROPE.

France, &c.—Moneys are remitted by the Board to the Evangelical Societies of Geneva, France, and Belgium, and to other correspondents, to be employed in the support of Evangelists, Colporteurs, and Teachers, in various places in Papal Europe. This plan of missionary labour was adopted in 1844.

Missionaries: the funds remitted during the year ending May 1, 1850, would support ten evangelists, or twenty colporteurs.

This brief view of the Missions shows—

1. That a vast field is under evangelical cultivation by our Church. These missions are found in the four great divisions of the globe; amongst nations embracing three-fourths of the human family; subverting Pagan, Mohammedan, Jewish, and corrupt Christian creeds; affording to every member of our body the opportunity of spreading the pure gospel, such as he has received it for himself, to our fellow-men, whose numbers can hardly be counted, and whose wants are described in an affecting sentence of sacred Scripture: "Where there is no vision the people perish."

2. A good beginning has been made in the work of evangelization. Posts of commanding importance have been occupied. Faithful men are employed in preaching the gospel; printing the holy Scriptures; training up the native youth under Christian influence; watching over the infant churches. Feeble are their efforts compared with the great work before them. But God has been with them heretofore. This assures us of their success hereafter. They are planting many grains of mustard seed,—placing the leaven of the gospel in many a community; this labour cannot be in vain.

3. It is but a few years since these missions were formed. Their growth and expansion call for the profound gratitude of the whole Church.

4. They nearly all need enlargement. Open doors are set before our brethren in most of their missions. Loud calls are made by them for more labourers.

5. What might not be done, if all the churches felt a real, deep, hearty interest in the success of these missions? The few thousands of Moravians, a mere handful of God's people in comparison with our communicants, have more missionaries among the heathen than are supported by our Church.

6. These missions might call for numerous collections from the churches, if the plan adopted in this country, of an almost minute division of labour, were applied to our foreign missionary work. They might ask for an annual collection for the support of the missionaries; another, in aid of the youth under their training for the ministry; another for the support of their schools and colleges; another, for the erection of their churches; another, for the printing of the Scriptures; another, for the publication of Tracts; one, for the Jews; another, for the Romanists, &c. Instead of all these, for twenty or twenty-five millions of people, most of whom are enlightened Protestants, one annual Collection is requested for all these great objects, among not less than six hundred millions of ignorant debased people. One annual collection;—ought it not to be a very large and liberal one? And should it not be accompanied with the free-will offerings of the monthly concert, and of individual liberality in its variously devised exercise?

7. Above all, these missions need the prayers of he people of God.

ENLARGED SPACE.

By the enlargement of the Record, its subscribers will be furnished with a greater amount and variety of missionary reading. The missions of our Church have been constantly growing, until they now constitute an extensive system. Many men of talents and learning, as well as piety, are connected with these missions, whose evangelical labours in so many interesting and important fields, if recorded with any degree of minuteness, would far more than fill the pages of this magazine. We shall continue to be indebted to our own missionary brethren chiefly, for the papers inserted in the foreign department of the Record. But we can now, though still to a very limited extent, insert articles from the missionary magazines of other branches of the Church of Christ. These will serve to encourage our readers, by showing the blessing of God on the work of Missions; and to provoke them unto love and good works, by the example of their brethren of other Christian denominations. As an inferior and yet not unworthy end, these selected articles will make the Record more attractive to its patrons, and thereby lead them to exert a cordial influence in promoting its wider circulation.

MISSION TO THE JEWS.

AN ACCOUNT OF A FALSE MESSIAH.

To the Sabbath School of N———, Ohio.

Dear Children—What pleasure it gives me to picture you before me as you go out from the school on Sabbath mornings! There goes one company up the street; another company going in a different direction, separate into the different paths which lead them home through the green woods. Every one can carry home with him some new and precious truth which he has heard in the Sabbath-school. How precious will be, some years hence, the remembrance of these days of youthful enjoyment!

Your great business in the Sabbath-school is to learn about Jesus Christ, whom we hold to be the true Messiah and king of Israel. The Jews did not receive him as their messiah, and many Jews have believed in other messiahs. You do not often hear in your school about these false messiahs, therefore I have thought it might be interesting to you to receive an account of one false messiah. This will enable you to compare the Messiah in whom we believe with the messiah who was not sent from God, and in whom many Jews have believed. You will see a great difference between them.

The early life of Schabbathai Sevi—His claims to be the Messiah—How received.

I will now give you some account of Schabbathai Sevi, a false messiah, who appeared not so far back as two hundred years from this time. From his youth his life was wonderful. There are two great books extremely difficult to be understood, in Hebrew literature, the Talmud and the Kabbala; but the first he understood perfectly when he was fifteen, and he began to be a teacher of the second when he was eighteen. He would teach in Smyrna, in a very large room, and it would be filled with hearers, all having on their sacred shawls and phylacteries. Sometimes he taught in the open air, where the Turks would mock and insult him. Often he would fast from one Sabbath to the next, six days at one time. He often bathed in the sea until midnight. He asserted that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had anointed him, and that a most delightful fragrance from this anointing always accompanied him. When he was twenty-four years of age, he told his disciples that he was the long expected Messiah, and that he would deliver the Jews both from Mohammed and from Christ. He made some performances which astonished all his hearers. The Rabbies of Smyrna condemned him, and bound themselves, that if any man would kill him, they would give the amount of money which would save the murderer from punishment. He went to Saloniki (the city to which Paul sent two letters,) where he was received with open arms, but when the Rabbies here heard his history at Smyrna, they condemned him too. He fled to Athens, then to the Morea, then to Alexandria, and came at length to Jerusalem, where he remained many years, and gave himself up to the study of the Kabbala.

His Forerunner—Singular story of an unhappy Jewess.

Rabbi Nathan Benjamin, of Gaza, a city mentioned in the Bible, undertook the part of the forerunner of this messiah, the same part which we ascribe to John the Baptist. He sent circulars to all the Rabbies in Palestine, to assure them that the Messiah had already been born in Smyrna, that he was then among the multitude, and that he would soon come forth publicly as the Messiah, in great pomp. The professed messiah kept himself quiet in Jerusalem for fourteen years, until he professed to discover that the virgin, who should become the wife of the messiah, was waiting for him in Egypt. And who was this virgin? The story runs so: that an unhappy Jewess in Poland, who had been placed in a cloister by Christians, was taken thence by a ghost, and set in a church-yard; from this place she was taken to Amsterdam, where her brother lived, and from Amsterdam to Egypt; since the ghost had ordered her to go to Egypt that she might become the consort of the messiah. He divorced his former two wives and received her joyfully.

Schabbathai proclaims himself Messiah in Jerusalem—His reception at Smyrna—His fame and power.

Finally he proclaimed himself in Jerusalem as the Messiah. This produced great excitement. The Rabbies assembled, and pronounced him an impostor and worthy of death. He fled to Constantinople, and there the Rabbies condemned him. He went next to Smyrna, where he was received with open arms. The Rabbies here could not effect any thing against him; the multitude streamed to him; kneeled before him; kissed his feet; and heard with enthusiasm his discourses. Thousands accompanied him in the street, carried a flag in the grand procession, sung hymns, and showed him every mark of favour. This often occurred in the night, and the watchmen kneeled before him. The synagogue that was closed against him he forced open, and preached fearlessly against the four Rabbies of the city. His enemies had to flee for their lives. Prayers for him were inserted in the liturgy of the synagogue. Messengers came from all quarters to speak with him and congratulate him; and often, on account of the throng, they had to wait for weeks before they got the opportunity. Once a Jew of high rank at the exchange pronounced him an impostor; he went home, fell from his chair, and died instantly. All thought this was the punishment for what he had said. He called himself king of the kings of the earth, and divided the kingdoms to his friends. The inquiring Jews of Amsterdam received the answer from their commercial agents near the scene of excitement, that this was the Messiah, and no other. It was pretended that young women and men began to sing; to prophesy; to utter heavenly inspirations, not only in Hebrew, but in the very difficult dialect of the Sohar; and these oracles were committed to paper. Jews even in Persia began to give up their work, assured that their deliverer had come, and that they would now be free. The pretended messiah changed the most solemn fast day of the year, the fast of the month of Ab, which is mentioned in the Bible, into the feast that should celebrate his birth.

His end.—He turns Mohammedan.

And what was the end? He had made so much noise in the world that he had to be brought before the sublime Sultan of Constantinople. He was first put in prison, where he received many visits from friends. Nehemiah, a native of Poland, spent several days with him, and finally told him to his face he was an impostor; he then fled to the grand Vizier, and got introduced to the Sultan, to whom he represented how dangerous it was to permit the impostor to proceed further. Schabbathai Sevi was consequently brought before the Sultan at Adrianople. The interpreter who accompanied him charged him to tell no lie before the sharp Sultan. His courage forsook him: he presented himself as a Rabbi and nothing more. The Sultan was determined to put to the test his higher claims. He would shoot three poisoned arrows right at the messiah, and if neither should have any bloody effect, he would immediately place himself under the new Hebrew banner. If the messiah should refuse this test, he had his choice between death and Mohammedanism. Schabbathai soon seized a turban, placed it on his head, and proclaimed himself a Mohammedan. He still tried to play the Messiah among the Jews, and laboured successfully in converting many Jews to Mohammedanism.

Difference between the True and the False Messiah.

It may be profitable, my dear young friends, to think on these historical facts. Look at the difference between our Jesus of Nazareth and the messiah who would please the Jews, and whom they expect. Christ, unlike this man, never carried before him any pompous flag in the street. He never broke into a synagogue violently and preached. He never attributed such importance to bathing, fasting, and other outward ceremonies. He never was afraid to acknowledge himself the Messiah. He was ready to seal his mission with his blood. He never changed his word. He never attempted to draw the Jews from the pure original Judaism. Infidels themselves must acknowledge that our Saviour was perfectly and most wonderfully consistent. His Messiahship stands this day on a more firm foundation of evidence than it ever had before, while Schabbathai's messiahship very soon proved a delusion. How clear that Christ was the Messiah of God, while Schabbathai was merely the messiah of men!

If you, dear children, view Jesus Christ as a good and true man, a prophet of God, you must take him to be all that he professed to be. There was no lie in him. My prayer for you is, that you may receive him by a living faith, as "God manifest in the flesh," the bread of life, the only and all-sufficient Saviour.

Your friend and brother,

M. R. Miller.

New York, August 23d, 1850.

CHINA: CANTON MISSION.

CHINESE SORCERESSES: BY THE REV. W. SPEER.

Their name and compensation—When consulted—Loquacious spirits.

There is a class of women in Canton who are called by the people Shing-po, or "sorceresses;" and also wan-mi, or "rice-inquirers," since it is their business to inquire into the secrets of the unseen world, for which the compensation is always three pints of rice and thirty copper tsin, or a little above two cents. They are most frequently applied to in order to ascertain the condition, happiness, or wishes of the spirits of deceased parents, husband or wife, or other relatives; though sometimes also to obtain information concerning affairs on earth, either future or doubtful. During the incantation the woman sinks into a state akin to the mesmeric. The people believe that her spirit then leaves the body, and that the spirit of the deceased, or a god, or a sien or genius, or perhaps even a demon, as the case may be, enters and makes use of her organs of speech. These spirits usually prove quite loquacious. They tell all about their affairs, but more especially dwell upon their troubles. They express themselves not in the common conversational, but in an improvisatori style; chanting in a low tone, and in poetical measure of generally seven syllables to a line. When the story is finished, the mere occasional tenant departs, the lawful inhabitant of the body returns, and the woman suddenly awakes. In case a house is haunted by ill-fortune, or the sickness of inmates, one of these sorceresses is called in. Having been informed of the circumstances, her spirit quits her body and ransacks the building, searching out the corners and secret places where the demons that exercise the pernicious influence lie concealed. It then informs the family what remedies are to be resorted to, and, for their comfort, in what quarters the well-disposed gods have located themselves; after which the woman returns to herself.

Narrative of a case.

The character of this species of witchcraft will be illustrated by the narative of a case witnessed by a Chinese friend of mine in Canton, at the house of his sister.

The sorceress entitled herself the "Adopted Daughter of the Seven Sien (or genii) Sisters." The first act of the incantation was her placing seven sticks of burning incense on the outer sill of the window. Having lain down upon a couch, she began to mutter something that sounded like prayers to some of the gods, in a low and fervent tone, for the space of ten minutes. Then she sank into a trance. Her body was like a corpse; the skin pale and cold, lips white, the half-closed eyes glassy and dreaming. The limbs, though rigid, trembled violently. The awe-struck beholders heard a low and measured chant breathe from her lips. The tone was subdued, but was singularly sweet and plaintive, one that was pleasant to hear. It formed a narrative which may be unwoven as follows:

Her spirit was represented as quitting its frame and ascending up to the heavens, to the mansion of the Seven Sisters. But the First Sister was not at home, nor the Second, nor the Third, nor the Fourth; indeed she only found one, the Fifth, who was keeping the house. The rest were all abroad in the earth, fulfilling their various commissions to the human race. This sister was delighted to see their adopted daughter. She conducted her in with the greatest courtesy. She called a female servant to boil some tea. They sat down and partook of some refreshment and sweatmeats together. The sister called the steward to kill some fowls and prepare some vegetables for her adopted daughter, whom she would keep to dine with her.

And now the by-standers of the family knew that it was the Fifth Sister, who had communication with the body of the sorceress. So they invited her to come into the garden. The sister replied, (by the mouth of the witch,) "I do not like to go into gardens; it is my place to superintend family residences, and tombs on the hills, and nothing else. I know nothing of other matters." The lady of the house then requested her to examine her dwelling. "Towards what quarter does your house front?" she inquired. "It looks toward the north," the lady replied. The Sister at once descended to the house.

But ere the Spirit entered, she stopped, and said: "The lintel of this door is not level." Having come in, she said, "The well is properly located, and so is the seat of the god of it." She examined the seats of the "guardians of the door," and said "they were all right." She expressed "regret that the 'lord of the earth' was placed so much in the dark; that it was very desirable to let him have more light." Then she looked at the places of the principal gods, and at the ancestral tablets, and said they were "unusually well situated." She then turned and went into the kitchen. Here she remarked, "the seat of the 'god of the fireplace' is an uneasy one; you had better change it, and make it front toward the west."

Finally, the Sister went to the chamber; and behold, there sat the ghost of an aged aunt, almost an hundred years old. The Sister exclaimed, "The aunt is here, but her niece does not rise to pay her reverence. This is really very impolite." The ghost of the old lady (also by the organs of the witch) then addressed the lady of the house, and said, "I am the maternal aunt of your husband, and thus yours also. I deceased when a girl, when only seventeen years of age. From the day of my death till the present time is nearly ninety years. My heart had long desired that I should be married, but my mother, whose maiden name was Le, was unwilling to grant me a husband, and so I am destitute, famishing, miserable, even to this day. For forty or fifty years past I have been so distressed, that never for a day has a smile sat on my brows." The lady said, "But, aunt, if your mother has been unwilling to obtain you a husband, could you not yourself select a companion, and not thus ever treasure bitterness in silence, and sigh and grieve?" She replied, "Now, for more than ninety years I have been a slighted woman. Where, in all the world, should I find one to suit my years, and make me a suitable partner? Suppose I should but speak the word 'marry,' would it not be counted disgraceful. And then my clothes are old and ragged; indeed, I may be said to be almost destitute. I am ashamed even to see this gentleman, my connection by marriage." This she said, referring to the Chinese friend who told the story, and who was, it will be remembered, one of the spectators. He was the brother of the lady at whose house the scene occurred. The old aunt continued, "But this is all I have to say. It is almost dark now, and I must go." The lady inquired, "Where does my aunt reside?" The ghost replied, "The place where I stay is under your bed; and when I say I will go home, I mean, to go back under there." "But," said the lady, in alarm, "why do you go under my bed? may I not request you to go to the altar of the gods, and take a place there?" "Niece," answered the old lady, "you have never treated me with proper regard, and therefore I stay under your bed to do you injury unawares. But after three years, I will undergo another metamorphosis, and have another body, and then your family will be in no more danger. And now, I'm gone: I'm gone." And then the ghost of the old lady departed.

After these things, the Sien Sister having returned to her palace on high, led the spirit of the witch, which was presumed to have remained there during her absence, out into the open air of heaven again. They walked together to the "Silver River," (that is, the "milky way" of western nations), but the tide was low. They waited a little till it rose, then crossed the stream, and afterward the "Island of Sand." Here the sister addressed her adopted daughter, saying, "Now, my daughter, be careful how you go. I have conducted you thus far, but must stop here. I shall be happy if you can come again to-morrow, and visit me."

At this moment, said the narrator of the story, the sorceress suddenly awoke as if in a fright. He says that he inquired of her, if she knew what she had been saying. She replied she did not know. He declares that he himself can witness, that while asleep her hands and feet were all very cold, and that she trembled violently. The conclusion to which he came was, that she had not falsified when she said she did not know what she had been uttering; and that it was a very wonderful affair.

What this narrative illustrates.

This story tends to illustrate the superstitiousness of the Chinese. The ghost conjured up by this pretended sorceress could not be banished away, but henceforth becomes a real and most terrible source of anxiety. The family submit to the expense of the changes required in the position and construction of different parts of the house, in order to propitiate the numerous gods and demons. There are houses in the cities of China which have had their fronts and other portions changed several times. The heathen suffer from perpetual apprehension, like children in the dark.

The remarkable affection of the nervous system of the sorceress bears a resemblance to mesmerism, which may help to explain the impostures practised on the credulous in this Christian country. The woman belonged to a large class who subsist upon the superstition and fears of their fellow-countrymen.

What but the Bible can so bring to light the hidden things of the spiritual world, as to relieve the heathen from the dreadful alarms and distress which are, sad to believe, but a premonition of that day when they shall be "consumed by the terrors" of the Lord.

AFRICA: MISSION NEAR THE EQUATOR.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF THE REV. J. L. MACKEY.

The First Mission Station Selected.

We have concluded, I trust by Divine guidance, to locate the head station of our mission on Corisco Island. We explored the coast both north and south as far as it was prudent for us to do. We were always much exposed, especially when travelling in an open boat. After considerable deliberation and consultation with our friends at Gaboon, we came to the conclusion that for the present it would be inexpedient to attempt a mission on the coast south of Gaboon. Every place of any importance has its slave factory either on the coast or back some distance; and though at present their operations are greatly cramped by the watchfulness of the cruisers, this would not render the factors less hostile to us; and, moreover, wherever there is a slave factory, there is rum, and not only the common vices of heathen countries are met, but they are multiplied by the superior knowledge of the white man. . . . On this part of the coast the slave factories have all been broken up. There is no factory that I know of above Sangatan, which is just south of the equator. There was formerly one on this island, but it was burned by an English man-of-war about seven years ago. At present the people are pledged by treaty with England not to engage in the trade.

Extent and Population of Corisco.

Corisco is a small island situated in the bay of Corisco. It is about twenty miles from the main land, and is directly opposite the mouth of the river Muni, or Danger, the latitude being about one and a half degrees north. The people of the island have long been engaged in trade and are comparatively civilized. They live in small towns containing from twenty to one hundred and twenty individuals each. The whole number of towns on the island is thirty-seven, and we suppose the whole population is 1200 or 1500.

Healthfulness of the Island.

Several reasons induced us to locate our head station here. We believe this island is more healthy than the main land. We are told by the inhabitants that when white men had factories here, none of them ever had fever. Brother Simpson and I have been here engaged in overseeing our building operations, &c., nearly two months, and we have both enjoyed much better health than at Gaboon. Mrs. Simpson was in feeble health while there; indeed, we almost despaired of her being able to remain on the coast, and it was recommended by the French physician at Gaboon that she return a year or two to America. She has been here now three weeks, and has recruited so much that she appears to have the same vigorous health that she enjoyed in America. The excitement connected with our work here may have something to do with our recruited health, and we would not raise our hopes too high; but we have now every reason to believe that we will find it more healthy here than on the main land. There is a constant sea breeze, and we have never found the climate uncomfortably warm since we came here.

Cordial Reception of the Missionaries by the People.

When we came here first, the people received us with great joy, I may say with open arms. At the first town in which we stopped, the head man told us that he would rather see us American missionaries coming here to settle, than to see a French vessel coming loaded with dollars. The king and the principal head men are all very decided in their expressions of friendship towards us, and we believe them to be sincere. There are many beautiful spots on the island. The king and chief men in palaver (council) gave us a grant of land, the place which we had selected. We have their word, (all we can get,) for the ground on which we are building, and as much around it as we choose to clear.

Corisco chosen with reference to Missionary Efforts on the Main Land.

We have not located our head station here merely in prospect of operating on this island. We first explored the coast of the main land and ascended the river Muni, or Danger, and some of its branches. A large population can be reached from this point. The main land lies around the bay from Cape St. John's to Cape Esteras, both of which are visible from the island, at about twenty miles distant in all points. The river Muni opens up an entrance to the interior. We ascended that river twice, and visited many towns on its banks. We were far beyond where white men had before ascended. Our object in ascending it to its source was to seek a place for a health station among the mountains, which are visible from the mouth of the river, and even from far out on the ocean. Mr. Simpson is about completing a journal of our two trips up the river. [This has not yet reached us.—ED.]

Many Places Open.—More Men Wanted.

After speaking of interviews with the natives at some towns on the main land, and their desire to have missionaries settled amongst them, Mr. Mackey continues:

"I am persuaded that many young men would follow us here, if they could only see the destitution of these people, and their desire for instruction. We wish that the Board would send us men now. We have been earnestly requested to settle in at least ten or twelve places, on the coast and up the river, (Muni), but we shall not be able to even visit and preach occasionally at so many places. There is another small island, Ilavi, between us and the coast, on which there are nine towns. The people are almost clamorous to have one of us go there, but we do not think it prudent for our small company to separate. We have promised to them and to others, to do what we can to obtain missionaries for them. These places that I speak of are all open now, but they will not long remain so.

Romanist Missionaries.—American Missionaries preferred.

Mr. Mackey then proceeds to speak of the efforts of the Romanist missionaries. Some of these are at the Gaboon, and as soon as they heard that our brethren were likely to settle on Corisco, they despatched one of their company to the island, and he was there a day or two before our missionary friends arrived! The king, however, would not allow him to stay, having heard that Messrs. Mackey and Simpson were coming. He then went to some native towns on the north side of the island. It was understood that a considerable force of priests would be employed shortly on that part of the coast. We continue to quote from Mr. Mackey's interesting letter:

"The people tell us wherever we have been that they would rather have American missionaries. If we had men here now to occupy the ground, we might do a great deal of good and shut out much evil; but we trust in a sovereign God, who will order all things for his own honour and glory. I hope there are some young men now in the seminaries who will follow us to this land. I am persuaded from what I have seen and experienced here, that no devoted missionary who will come among this people will find cause to repent of it. And I am persuaded that those of our Christian friends, who wished to turn our attention to another field than Africa, could they see what we have seen ever since we came here, would be constrained to say, 'Certainly God has sent you there.'"

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

NOTICES OF THE MISSION.

One of the most remarkable missions of modern or of ancient times, is that of the American Board in the Sandwich Islands. Its success will stand a good comparison with the success of missions in the apostolic age. Out of a population of 84,000, more than 31,000 are communicants. Deducting one third of the population for children, of an age too early to make any contribution to the lists of communicants, and we find 31,000 church members in 56,000 souls; a ratio unequalled elsewhere! Who will say that missionary labours have not been successful?

As to the Christian character of these converts, it is certainly imperfect; and yet we doubt whether the missionary brethren find it needful to address stronger exhortations to them, than were given by the Apostle to the Colossians and the Thessalonians.

We regret that we have not room for larger extracts from the communications of these missionaries. Our quotations will relate chiefly to the temporal circumstances of the people. These of course are peculiar, such as we may suppose no Apostle was called to deal with, but yet such as show the power of Christianity to do good unto men for the life that now is, as well as for that which is to come.

The Rev. Mr. Coan, of the island of Hilo, writes as follows:—

Improved Roads, &c.

It is encouraging to witness the progress which is being made in the construction of roads throughout the islands. A high way is now being wrought from Kailua to Hilo, across the centre of the island, the greatest elevation of which will be some ten thousand feet. A horse road, encircling the island, is also being constructed near the shore. Besides these, local and shorter roads are being made or improved at many points, in and around villages, &c. Comparatively easy roads have been cut, zig-zaging, or on the principle of inclined planes, united by angles, up and down nearly all the precipitous banks of our gorges in Hilo. This work has greatly lessened the toil and the danger of travellers in passing through our district. The improvement on the old, tortuous, rough, precipitous, slippery, exhausting, and dangerous foot-paths is truly great and cheering. But the rivers! These still remain; and they often rush, and roar, and rage, and leap their awful precipices, as fearfully as ever. Four bridges, all which had been constructed in Hilo, were totally swept away by a recent freshet, with their abutments and all that pertained to them. This is an unpropitious beginning. Whether any but suspension bridges can be made to stand over our mad streams is a question. But as the Lord is preparing a high way for his people over the hills and through the deserts, perhaps he will "open a way through the rivers" also, so that as age and infirmities come over us we shall find access to our people on horseback, just at the time when our limbs need this help.

To report to you on the state of Hilo, is to repeat, in substance, what has been stated from time to time. General improvements in the external circumstances of the people go steadily, though not rapidly forward. The visitor who had not seen Hilo since 1830, would not now know the place. Still our improvements move on the backs of turtles, while yours in America bestride the lightning. We are like a ship just moving from her anchorage; we have not acquired much velocity or momentum; but as we are constantly approaching that mighty moving orb, the United States, our progress will, ere long, be rapidly accelerated.

Condition of the People.

The Rev. Mr. Emerson, of the Island of Oahu, writes as follows:

During the past year the government have put it within the power of a part at least of our people to obtain a title in fee-simple to their lands; some by purchase and others by inheritance or possession. I strongly hope, that before the close of the present year, some two or three hundred of our married men will be owners of the lands they cultivate, and ever after be exempt from that very inconvenient and oftentimes vexatious labour-tax of the landlord, which has always worked badly, and has sometimes been quite oppressive. Our people have raised, during the past six months, one thousand dollars or more, to pay for their lands, besides what they have done for purposes of religion. I hope that when their lands are paid for, and they become in a higher sense free than formerly, they will do more for the cause of Christ than they are wont to do; but this is to be proved.

The church at Hanula are raising funds to build their house of worship, now partly up. The house is of stone, laid in lime mortar; but this winter all building is suspended; rains are abundant.

During the year we have put a verandah partly round our meeting-house at Waialua. If this is completed the present year and our house re-thatched, I trust it will be in condition to serve us some years without further expenditures upon it.

We have just had an examination of schools in Waialua. Scholars are making progress, but the decrease in their numbers is very apparent, and arises from two causes: 1st, the actual decrease of the population; 2d, the children forsake the schools earlier than formerly. Boys at the age of sixteen years are now taxed for the support of schools; and few continue their attendance after they are liable to this tax.

It would at first seem a pity that boys should leave the schools so young. But low as education is, book knowledge is in advance of almost every thing else at the Islands, that tends to civilization. There are many natives whose knowledge of reading, writing, geography, book-keeping, history, and theology, is quite good. But a good mechanic is yet to be found among this people. Many natives can do some blacksmith, carpenter, mason, cabinet, and shoemaker's work; but there is not one who can do a first or second rate job. Some can tan leather, make saddles, bridles, &c.—but no one has ever served his time at a trade at the Islands, and no one can do very well. Book knowledge is ahead of every thing else that is desirable. Aping civilization, in a fondness for gaudy and costly apparel, is carried quite as far as any could desire. Many common natives expend much more per year for their dresses than the missionaries do; but to take care of their wardrobes is what they have not yet learned to do.

Solid labour, daily care, regular habits, are what a native dislikes. Hawkers, pedlers, speculators in food and apparel, and in cloths of almost every description are common. Sail boats, small schooners of five or six tons burden are numerous. Not less than six are now running between Waialua and Honolulu, and two others are in building. To live with the least possible amount of hard labour is desired. Foreigners are now seen in the kalo-patch, a thing unknown a few years since. If a horse or bullock is to be caught, many natives, with lasso in hand, are ready to take the job; and from twenty-five cents to fifty cents per hour is often the pay demanded for such jobs.

Christianity and Civilization.

The Rev. Mr. Bond, of the island of Kohala, makes some remarks which indicate the difficulties yet to be overcome. These are introduced by editorial comments, which are marked in brackets.

[Of the condition and the prospects of the Hawaiian race, Mr. Bond takes a less hopeful view than some others. Though the people "have been elevated vastly above their former purely savage state, towards a better and civilized condition," still he says, "it is not to be concealed, even from ourselves, that a great work is yet to be done." The arts and the comforts of even a tolerably well regulated life have been acquired, he says, to any considerable extent, only by here and there an individual. "And a nation twice decimated, or nearly so, in two successive years [by disease and death,] and with all the agencies of decay still in vigorous action, hardly promises much for the future." Still he feels, as all others must feel, that a great work has been done at the Sandwich Islands. The results of that work upon the future population of the Islands, whatever may be the future destiny of the native population, is, beyond a question, to be most happy. And how rich and abundant the reward which has been given to labourers in this work, in the conversion, and so the everlasting salvation of thousands of the people.]

The Christianization of the Hawaiians, it is matter of common notoriety, has outstripped their civilization; and, strangely enough, missionaries have been held accountable for this supposed anomalous and faulty state of things, and stigmatized by some as narrow and bigoted in their views and teachings, because, forsooth, it exists. But it may safely be assumed as an incontrovertible fact, that this result of missionary labour which is here witnessed, instead of being faulty and unnatural, is the only order in which Providence ever developes a sound and healthful civilization. The Bible comes first, with its authoritative and solemn claims upon each individual man. And it is one of the most blessed characteristics of this holy book, that its chief behests, weighty though they are, as eternity, and involving interests vast as infinity, can yet be comprehended by the mind and obeyed by the heart of a savage, albeit he might be months, or years, even in mastering the first idea of civilized life. The simplest teachings of the gospel, once believingly received, become the corner-stone of civilization, upon which may be reared a superstructure, symmetrical and enduring.

Work and Hopes for the Future.

[A foundation for such a superstructure, Mr. Bond well remarks, has been laid at the Sandwich Islands; yet in view of the fact that disease has been so rapidly wasting the Hawaiian people, and in view also of the constant and rapid influx of a foreign population, he thinks that superstructure is likely to be among a foreign, and not the native population.]

In view of these conclusions, it strikes me as essential to our highest usefulness in all time to come, that we fully and definitely apprehend the position we now occupy, with its relations both to the past and the future. The history of the past we know. It has been written by the finger of Providence, and spread out before us, in all its detail. We have only to study it to perceive its application to the present and the future, and be made wiser and better thereby. In our present position there is surely nothing which ought to discourage us in our work. So teaches the past; and to the eye of faith, the future reveals nothing to enfeeble the Christian soldier in his toils, or send decay to the vigour of his hopes. The remembrance of the past should strengthen for the events and the trials of the future. Under God, this mission has accomplished a work on these Islands, the magnitude and consequences of which no finite mind can fully comprehend, yet the purposes of the Divine mind concerning the Islands are by no means executed. An enterprise is yet to be prosecuted and achieved here, which, whether regarded in itself merely, or in its relations, is to surpass the work already effected; and, we may be sure, it will demand at our hands no less of resolution and zeal, no less of self-denial and faith than we have hitherto had in exercise. As has been said, for years yet to come it is to cost us no slight effort, coupled with no feeble measure of faith, to sustain our hopes and hold up our work, and ourselves in our work.

We shall be called to fight over again, with an ungodly foreign race, the battles for truth and righteousness which have already been fought with the native heathen population, and in an important sense won; and we shall need to keep a fast hold of the great Captain of our salvation, lest we faint ere victory shall crown our warfare. The struggle we are to sustain only in the name of our Master, Christ. His is to be the glory of the final issue, his has been and will be the strength to ensure it.—Missionary Herald, December, 1850.

NOTICES.

LETTERS relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to WALTER LOWRIE, Esq., or the Rev. JOHN C. LOWRIE, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

LETTERS relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to WILLIAM RANKIN, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

PAYMENTS OF MONEYS for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., C. C. Jones, D. D. 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

BOXES OF CLOTHING, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts.
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents each.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "FOREIGN MISSIONARY, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN NOVEMBER, 1850.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Schenectady ch in part	$180 89
Pby of Columbia.—Stockport ch	3 22

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Buffalo City.—Bethany Centre ch 13 22; Buffalo South ch 11 05	24 27

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Monticello ch Sab sch	3 00
Pby of Bedford.—South Salem ch excess of receipts on account of "Foreign Missionary"	1 25
Pby of Long Island.—Raynor South ch mo con's	3 00
Pby of New York.—Forty-second Street ch mo con 20 26; Madison Avenue ch mo con 24 83; Duane street ch mo con 7 16, ann coll 255 97; University Place ch mo con 75 13; Chelsea ch mo con 20 50; Rutgers street ch mo con coll's 57 45; New York First ch mo con 99 62, ann coll addl 62; two ladies 50; Wallabout ch mo con 3 71; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 18 61	695 24
2d Pby of New York.—Canal st ch contents of missionary box	24 50

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Woodbridge 1st ch addl 2 17; Rahway 2d ch ann coll 20; Westfield ch mo con coll's 17; Springfield ch 7 18; Perth Amboy ch Sab sch to ed Benjamin Cory at Ningpo 25	71 35
Pby of New Brunswick.—Trenton 2d ch 13; Sab sch 3 12; Freehold ch 35 20; Princeton fem miss soc for female education at Allahabad 17; Ewing ch 42; Sab sch 2 06	112 38
Pby of Newton.—Belvidere ch Sab sch 3; East Allen and Catasaqua chs 68 88	71 88
Pby of Luzerne.—Tamaqua ch Sab sch 1 73; Wilkesbarre ch 25	26 73

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Treydiffin ch 27 37; Philadelphia Sixth ch mo con 25; Phil Tenth ch, Mr Chapin 3	55 37
Pby of Donegal.—Chestnut Level ch ladies benev society	20 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Georgetown D C, W E Myers for China 2 50; Havre de Grace ch 10	12 50
Pby of Carlisle.—Millerstown ch	30 85
Pby of Huntingdon.—Pine Grove ch, Ladies sewing soc in part to con Rev DANIEL L HUGHES 1 m	16 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Danville ch	25 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Ebenezer ch 16 35; Washington ch 5	21 35
Pby of Ohio.—East Liberty ch Adonijah in part to con WILLIAM E NIGLEY 1 m 20; Canonsburg ch Sab sch in part to ed Alexander Brown at Spencer Academy 10; Sharon ch 11 75	41 75
Pby of Alleghany.—Bull Creek ch bal 2; New Salem ch 15 25; Crossroads ch 36	53 25
Pby of Beaver.—French Creek ch	5 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Mill Creek ch to con JOSEPH MCCREADY and MATHEW GLASS 1 m's	71 19
Pby of Steubenville.—Waynesburgh ch 9 15; Harrisburg ch 1 95	11 10
Pby of St Clairsville.—Freeport ch 2; Sharon ch 3; Rev S Mahaffey for French Mission 5	10 00
Pby of New Lisbon.—Poland ch Ladies Miss soc	32 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Columbus.—Lancaster ch ann coll 31 75, mo con coll's 19 07, Sab sch 3 42	54 24
Pby of Zanesville.—Brownsville ch 6; Uniontown ch 11; Deerfield ch to con their pastor, Rev W M FURGASON 1 m 15 84; Rush Creek ch 9 87; Salt Creek ch in part to con their pastor Rev JOHN P CALDWELL 1 m 6 55; Blue Rock ch in part to con Mrs CALDWELL 1 m 10 35; Mount Zion ch in part to con their pastor, Rev JOHN ARTHUR 1 m 8 30, Rev J Arthur 5, Mrs Arthur 3, their children 22 cts.; Buffalo ch 64, children of Rev M M Brown 11 cts; Senecaville ch in part to con Rev JOHN E ALEXANDER 1 m 23 22; Washington ch 35 62; Cambridge ch 36 50, children of Mr McCraken 22 cts; Pleasant Hill ch, of which 6 50 is bal from last year 30 50; Norwich ch 11 65	277 95
Pby of Richland.—Jeromeville ch 35; Perrysville ch 26 75; Lake Fork Cross Roads 5 25; Maysville ch 3 50, Rev W T Alexander 5; Ashland ch of which 5 from Miss Elizabeth Stockton dec'd and 30 to con PETER RESSER 1 m 58 38; John F Robinson 20 cts, W Robinson 38 cts, H M Robinson 21 cts, S N Robinson 4 cts; Hopewell ch 15 25; Savannah ch 14 75; Olivesburg ch in part to con Rev ALEXANDER SCOTT 1 m 15; Blooming Grove ch 13; Sharon ch 16 43; Mansfield ch 19 50; Pleasant Hill ch 13 40; Waterford ch 3 41; Frederick ch ann coll to con Rev JOHN M FARIS pastor 1 m 38 83, children's coll 1 17, Master J H Faris 66 cts, Master W W Faris 66 cts; Mount Vernon ch of which 11 50 is bal from last year 30 51, Rev Mr Conrad 5; Mount Pleasant ch 17 35; Martinsburg ch 25 83; Utica ch 4 50, Miss Ellen and Harry and Edward Shephard 2 50	372 46
Pby of Wooster.—Sugar Creek ch	39 65
Pby of Coshocton.—Coshocton ch 14 10; Keen ch 12 25; Clark ch 7 51; Millersburg ch 14; Nashville ch 4 45; Hopewell ch 4; Unity ch 25 60	81 91
Pby of Hocking.—McConnellsville ch in part to con GEO A VINCENT and N SPRINGER 1 m's	41 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Miami.—New Jersey ch 26 50 less 5 for "Foreign Missionary;" Springfield ch 160; Yellow Spring ch ann coll 34 55; Ladies Mis Soc 10; Dayton ch child of Rev P D Gurley D D 50 cts; Middletown ch 8; Franklin ch 12 05	246 60
Pby of Cincinnati.—Walnut Hills ch	25 67
Pby of Oxford.—Harmony ch	18 30
Pby of Sidney.—West Liberty ch 30; Urbana ch ann coll 38 40 less 3 for "Foreign Missionary" Rev T F Magill 5; Troy ch 3; Salem ch 10 50	83 90

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—New Albany 1st ch 120; Livonia ch 23 15	143 15
Pby of Indianapolis.—Hanover ch mo con	10 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Lexington ch 8; Rossville ch Rev J Platt 10	18 00
Pby of Fort Wayne.—Bluffton, New Lancaster and Pleasant Ridge ch's	10 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Schuyler.—Presbyterial collection	10 00
Pby of Iowa.—Iowa City 1st ch	5 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of St Louis.—St Louis Central ch Sab sch to ed Alexander Van Court and John W Skinner at Ningpo, China	25 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Received from Treasurer of Synod 36 75; Pulaski Co Ky John Long 5; "——" ch 8	49 75
Pby of Louisville.—Bardstown ch 46 55; Louisville 1st ch mo con 14 35; Mulberry ch 1 Gold Ring	60 90
Pby of Muhlenburg.—Henderson ch 6 10; Princeton ch 12	18 10
Pby of Transylvania.—Paint Lick ch ann coll 75; Danville ch 340 30, from children, viz: John Young 2 40, Wm Young 2 50, Mary Barkley 50 cents, Jessamine, George and John Barkley 25 cts each, Martha Barkley 15 cts, S B and M W Russell 2 60 each; Harrodsburg ch 17 30; Springfield ch 27 70; Glasgow ch 8	479 80
Pby of West Lexington.—Winchester ch 15 50; Pisgah ch 35 25, mo con 2 20, Sab sch 2; Salem ch 13; McChord ch 78 05; Clear Creek ch 5	151 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Winchester.—Martinsburg ch Mrs John Strother	10 00
Pby of West Hanover.—College ch	26 63
Pby of East Hanover.—Richmond 1st ch mo con	24 83

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Concord.—Marion ch J H and Mrs M J Greenlee 20; Bethpage ch 13; Ebenezer ch 5 61; Hiwasse ch 4 39; Poplar Tent ch, Fem Benev Soc 10	53 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Collection at meeting of Synod	65 50
Pby of Maury.—Zion ch	19 50
Pby of Tuscumbia.—Tuscumbia ch 30; a friend 100	130 00
Pby of Nashville.—Nashville 1st ch 342 66; Nashville 2d ch 54; Clarksville ch of which 100 from JOHN MCKEAGE to con himself 1 d and 12 from children to ed John Hendrick 232 60, Mrs Sarah Ward 5, Mrs Mary J C Kerr 5	639 26

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Harmony.—Sumpterville ch Fem Miss Soc 30, Miss M Hort 4 50; Scion ch Winnsboro, S C Twelve mon's con coll's 111 35, two young persons, the fruits of their labor 3 87	149 72
Pby of Charleston.—Charleston 2d ch mo con July and Nov 36 45; Columbia 1st ch mo con coll's 46 70; Bethel ch Walterboro 20	103 15

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Richmond, Bath Co juv miss soc to ed Samuel Douse at Ningpo 38; "——" to ed Horace S Pratt at Ningpo 20; Burke and Bath Co Missionary Society for Church at Agra, Nor Ind 55	113 00
Pby of Georgia.—Midway ch fem miss soc for sup of Mr and Mrs Way at Ningpo 54; Jonesville ch 5; Savannah 1st ch mo con coll's 33 24, Doctor C P Richardson 25	117 24
Pby of Hopewell.—Mount Zion ch mo con coll's 41 57, a lady 5; Milledgeville ch mo con coll's 62 93, Otis Childs 9 68; Augusta ch fem miss soc 39, Sab sch ann coll 34 16; Clarksville ch mo con coll's 14 95; Greensboro ch six mos con coll's 28 69; Washington ch 50	285 98
Pby of Flint River.—Columbus ch 67 20; Americus ch 70 50; Griffin ch 70; La Grange ch 10; Goshen ch 5 90; Hopewell ch "a lady" 5; West Point ch 6 70; color'd members for African Mission 1 30; Bethany ch 5; Mt Tabor ch 10; Emmaus ch 5; Smyrna ch 1 50; Fairview ch 10; Long Cane ch 6 50; Carrolton ch 1 05; Brainerd ch 8 50; Ebenezer ch 6 75; Alcovia ch 3 62; Muscogee ch 13 75; Mrs Ann Reese 10; little Sallie (a child of Macon Co Ala) 5 cts; Albany, Ga, Dr G D Royston 5	323 32
Pby of Cherokee.—Roswell ch mo con coll's 52; juv miss soc to ed N A Pratt 20	72 00
		911 55
Less acknowledged in July rec'ts as rec'd from Treasurer of Synod of Ga. 414 37
" Exp of Printing &c by Sy'd of Ga 81 46	495 83
		415 71

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Synodical collection	58 75
Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Greensboro ch Sab sch to ed W Stedman Peck at Futtehgurh 10; Tuscaloosa ch 11 25	21 25

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Louisiana.—Franklin, La, D C Murphy	7 00
Total from churches	5,569 75

LEGACIES.

Urbana, O. Legacy of Sarah Smith dec'd 30; Pittsburg, Pa. Estate of Thos Patterson, dec'd 24 33	54 33

MISCELLANEOUS.

"——" Amount saved by discontinuing Tobacco	10 00
A friend	2 00
Proceeds in full of sale of Land in Indiana, donated by Mrs Jane Long, Mifflin Co Penn	885 00
A friend	30 00
L J A	1000 00
E R Alberti Florida for Alexander High School, Liberia	12 00
Cedar Hill S sch N Y for Tallahasse	7 00
Phila Pa Ladies Jewish Miss Soc	36 38
"——" Va G M	1 00	1983 38
		7607 46
Less expenses of Southern Board		79 20
Total Receipts in November		$7,528 26

WM. RANKIN, JR., Treasurer.

DONATIONS OF CLOTHING, ETC.

Ladies of Broadalbin ch N Y, Bundle Clothing	19 94
" " Pleasant Valley ch Pa 1 Box	20 00
" " Shelbyville ch Ky 1 do	63 80
Robert Carter & Bro's, New York, 156 vols school books.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M. D. Treasurer.

PRESBYTERIAN SABBATH SCHOOL VISITOR.

The readers of the Record are probably aware of the fact, that the Board of Publication have determined to issue a Sabbath-school newspaper, in accordance with the recommendation of the last General Assembly; and that it will make its first appearance with the beginning of the ensuing year. We have very favourable tokens already ,that the Presbyterian Sabbath-school Visitor will very soon find its way into a great portion of the Presbyterian Sabbath-schools. It will be handsomely illustrated with wood engravings, and well edited, and is offered at the low price of twenty-five cents the single copy, or forty copies to one address for five dollars. Whatever is done for the circulation of this paper should be done at once. Payment always in advance.

INCREASED OPERATIONS OF THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

We feel assured that it will afford pleasure to the readers of the Record, to know that the Board of Publication is steadily enlarging its operations. The sales for the ecclesiastical month, ending in November, were larger than they have ever been in any one month since the Board has been in existence. This institution seems to be finding favour with all who love the truth as it is in Jesus. May all the friends of Zion remember the interests of this Board at the mercy-seat. Both those who direct its operations, and those who are engaged in the arduous work of disseminating its publications, greatly need the prayers of God's people.

WESTERN DEPOT AND AGENCY.

The Synod of Kentucky's Action in regard to a Western Depot and Agency for the Board of Publication.

The brethren in the Synod of Kentucky and the West generally, may rest assured that the Board of Publication will spare no pains to bring its publications and its claims within reach of the churches throughout the West. All things considered, the Board of Publication has grown more rapidly perhaps than any similar institution in the country; and it is impracticable to hasten the expansion of its affairs much beyond the present rate of progress. For many reasons a large Western depot is highly important, and the only question as to its establishment would be, whether the Board can spare the large amount of capital which such a concern would require. The funds for the Publication House, to which the Presbyterian Herald alludes, were given expressly for that object, and if funds should be contributed expressly for a Western Depository, the Board certainly would not be slow in appropriating them to that object. The whole matter of such a depository, however, is now the subject of correspondence and consideration, and it is very sincerely hoped that there may be no obstacle in the way of carrying out the important suggestion made by the Synod of Kentucky.

As to an agency for the West, we have already a very energetic and successful agent for the States north of the Ohio river, and have more than once made some effort to secure a suitable agent for Kentucky and the adjacent States on that side of the Ohio. As a temporary provision, the Corresponding Secretary expects to visit the churches in Louisville and Lexington in the spring; and the Rev. Simeon Brown, agent of the Board, will visit some others of the churches during the winter. We feel really encouraged in our work by this voluntary action of so venerable a body as the Synod of Kentucky in the matter of extending the Board's operations in the West, as well as for the interest evinced in the editorial of the Herald; and whatever can be done consistently with the general interests of the Board, will cheerfully be done.

"HORRID PICTURES OF PRESBYTERIANISM."

A colporteur, whose field of labour was in one of the Western States, found not very flattering portraits of his branch of the Church, in the course of some of his explorations. Even some Presbyterian Church members were more or less ashamed or afraid of what they had been led to believe must be the distinctive features of their denomination. We are happy to know that this faithful colporteur scattered abroad the materials for a correct portraiture of Presbyterianism. He thus speaks on the subject:

"I soon sold out all I had of such as Bunyan, Doddridge's Rise and Progress, Confession of Faith, Great Supper, Divine Purpose, Religious Experience, Family Worship, and several others. In one neighbourhood where I sold several copies of the Great Supper, there is now, since I left, a demand for several more, as I was informed by the pastor a few days ago. That book is very much needed here. There have been so many horrid pictures of Presbyterianism exhibited to the people, and their prejudices so strongly excited that even some Presbyterians have been induced to believe that there is something terrible in the Confession of Faith. When these 'false accusers' make their attacks, these Presbyterians (some I mean) dare not contradict them, because they do not know but it is true. One man (a Presbyterian) when urged to buy the Confession of Faith, intimated that he did not believe all that was in it. This man had never owned, never read, and I think he admitted, he had never before seen the book!"

EMPLOYMENT FOR THE LONG WINTER EVENINGS.

A student who spent his last vacation as a colporteur for the Board, was greatly encouraged by the reception which he met with in the destitute places which he visited. To many he was a welcome visitor himself, and the books and tracts he left with them were welcomed as cheering companions for their long winter evenings and silent Sabbaths. Some prisoners and paupers are also to share his labours as a distributor of the tracts of the Board. We give an extract from the report of this colporteur:

"The tracts which are left, I would request the Board to let me distribute among the prisoners and paupers of our town-people who have no religious instruction, and no persons to feel interested for their bodies or souls.

"In closing my report I would say, that the short season of my engagement has learned me many useful lessons, and has stored my mind with much important knowledge of human life, in all its various shades and colours.

"I had some delightful meetings with some families residing far off from a house of worship. When I would tell them my business, they would not only receive me hospitably, but gladly, and express their thankfulness that these good books were brought to their doors.

"A pastor seldom visits these families along the mountain and in the swamp, and they are very glad to see a person who will talk with them about the blessed Saviour. Often have they followed me to the door, and with tears in their eyes, would ask God's blessing to go with me wherever I should go. They would often feel rejoiced that these good books were brought to them, and would say, 'Now we can have employment for these long winter evenings and lonesome Sabbaths.' Never will the impressions of those scenes which were made by some of those destitute families be erased from my mind; and never will I regret that I spent this short season in my Master's work, and I hope that eternity will tell that some immortal soul will be brought into the kingdom of heaven from reading some of those good books."

THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION IN NEW ORLEANS.

Few cities exert a more commanding influence for good or evil than New Orleans. We are happy to see that the people of God in that great city are by no means insensible to the importance and responsibility of their position. Evangelical religion has gained much ground there within the past few years, and with the spirit of zeal and efficiency which seems to be abroad amongst the churches there, we doubt not it will soon be much more extended.

Among other important agencies for disseminating the truth in New Orleans, colportage of the publications of this Board has not been neglected. The following extract from a sermon on the subject, preached in the church on La Fayette Square, by a clerical brother who was supplying the pulpit during the absence of the Rev. Dr. Scott, will show the plan upon which their operations are conducted, at the same time that it furnishes a striking view of New Orleans as a centre of influence:

"We come, now, to speak of something that is proposed here—in the city of New Orleans—in behalf of this great commercial emporium—this centre of far-radiating channels of trade and of travel.

"The session of this church, some time last spring, resolved to maintain a colporteur; and the time is at hand for him to begin his daily round—his errand of mercy to perishing souls. He is to receive all his instructions from the session of this church, and to be entirely under their control. He will colport the various works of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, the Bible, and such other books as the session may approve. He will make grants, as circumstances may require, subject to the order of session. He will have other important duties. He will assist the pastor, elders, and deacons in seeking out the sick and distressed; and, besides reporting them, he will assist them, to learn their spiritual and temporal wants.

"The members of this congregation will first claim his attention; then, any others, either of our own or of other communions. It will be especially his object to make known and distribute the sterling publications issued by our Board. He will make monthly reports to the session; and the congregation will be informed, at stated intervals, of the progress of the effort.

"How little do the Christians of New Orleans estimate the peculiar responsibilities of their position! It is a solemn thought, that God, in his Providence, has sent us hither—to this vast whirlpool—this vortex of souls—where the different nations of both continents are so numerously represented, and where their voices are heard 'like the sound of many voices.' In this strife of tongues, and of pursuits, and of races—in this war of Mammon, as his different hosts fight against one another—what is your duty? Have you not much to do? Are not facilities thus afforded to you, for dispersing the good seed of the kingdom far and wide—facilities, unknown to the Christians of any other city in this Western world?

"New Orleans is, or ought to be, one of the great centres of influence. It is one of the most important points on earth for a Christian to occupy, who desires to serve his Lord and Master. Multitudes in our midst speak the language of Luther and the language of Calvin. There are Spaniards, and Italians, and Portuguese, and Norwegians—and emigrants from other nations—continually pouring upon our levee.

"Besides this foreign tide, there is a throng, for more than half the year, of transient visitors from the mighty West. The mountains of Arkansas and Tennessee—the prairies of Illinois, Indiana, and Texas—the swamps, and plantations, and villages of our own and the adjacent States—are all represented at our hotels, and exchanges, and marts of business, and wheresoever men do congregate; while a stream of travellers is continually passing through, to and from California. Indeed, many colporteurs might find work where you are now preparing to send forth one.

"Let this work, then, be undertaken in the fulness of the blessings of the gospel of Christ. Let it be begun with prayer—with your united prayers, that the Holy Spirit may give prosperity to the effort.

"May the word of God grow mightily, and prevail. May the hearts of the people be opened to receive your messenger, and to receive the truth in the love of it. He goes to publish salvation—salvation from sin—salvation from its reigning power, its dominion, its pollution, its curse—salvation through faith in the atoning blood of Christ."

ERRONEOUS BOOKS IN PRESBYTERIAN SABBATH-SCHOOLS.

Much has been said about the fictitious, novel-like books with which Sabbath-school Libraries are almost everywhere polluted. We have more than once heard that books teaching decided and pernicious errors, have been found in these libraries. The following remarks on the subject we take from an exchange paper:

"It has been asserted, that works of decidedly infidel tenets have been detected side by side with the 'Life of Christ,' although for the truth of the statement we would not vouch. What we wish to notice is, that at this very moment, Episcopal books, teaching doctrines no less unscriptural than Baptismal Regeneration, are to be found catalogued in Presbyterian Sabbath-schools. We refer particularly to such works as 'The Shadow of the Cross'—'The Distant Hills,' and 'The Old Man's Home,' by the Rev. Wm. Adams, M. A. In these works, the doctrine mentioned is clearly and avowedly taught. Thus—'Holy Baptism not only purifies us from past sins, but endues us with the strength of the Holy Spirit, to enable us to walk in newness of life.' All this may do well enough for Episcopalians; but it is evidently out of place among Presbyterians, who have searched and found in the fountain of revealed truth other foundations on which to rest their faith.

"Our object is not one of censure. We know what difficulties lie in the way of guarding libraries from the influx of dangerous books. The subject deeply concerns the religious education of our youth. Nothing perishes more quickly in the using, than books in the hands of children. Not so impressions on the memory. These live to exert an influence, for evil or for good, over the whole course of life. Instead of purchasing books en masse—expending a year's appropriation in a few hours, would it not be better to make selections once a month? This would allow time for examination, and keep libraries furnished with the new books as they are issued fresh from the press.

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

My Own Book, or Select Narratives and Instructions Suitable for Youth, 16mo, square, 128 pages.

This is one of the most beautiful, entertaining, and instructive books which the Board has published for the young. It contains twenty-one different sketches or narratives, and is illustrated with a number of beautiful woodcuts. As it was prepared by a father who feels a deep solicitude for the spiritual interests of his children, there can be no doubt that its instructions are of the right kind. We hope each of our young friends may make this attractive volume their "own book."

IN PRESS.

Memoirs of Mrs. Andrew, of Paisley, Scotland, 18mo.

The Bruised Reed, and a Description of Christ. By the Rev. Richard Sibbes, 18mo.

Moriah, or Sacred Rites of Ancient Israel, 12mo.

The Three Last Things: the Last Enemy, the Last Day, the Last State, 18mo.

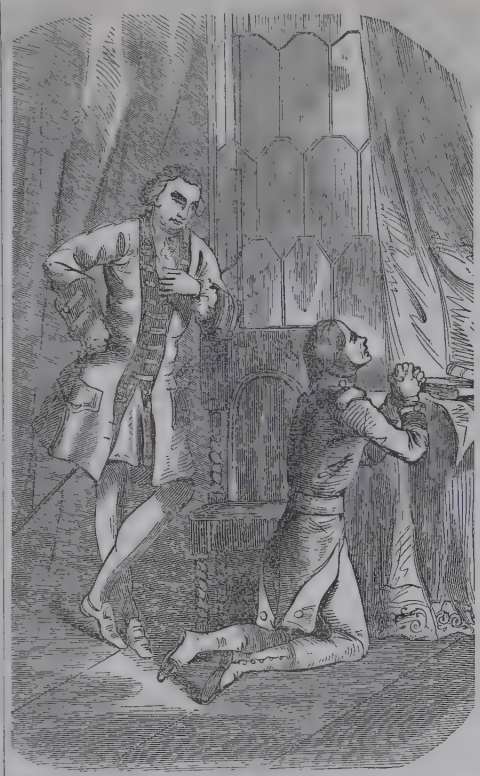
Light for the Dark Valley, 32mo.

The Ragged Scholar, &c., 18mo.

A Visit to the Holy Land, &c., 18mo.

And seven new Tracts.

THE PRAYING SOLDIER.



Acts x. 7.—A devout soldier of them that waited on him continually.

During the late unhappy commotions in Ireland, a private soldier in the army of Lord Cornwallis was daily observed to be absent from his quarters, and from the company of his fellow soldiers. He began to be suspected of withdrawing himself for the purpose of holding intercourse with the rebels, and on this suspicion, probably increased by the malice of his wicked comrades, he was tried by a court martial, and condemned to die. The marquis, hearing of this, wished to examine the minutes of the trial, and, not being satisfied, sent for the man to converse with him. Upon being interrogated, the prisoner solemnly disavowed every treasonable practice or intention, declared his sincere attachment to his sovereign, and his readiness to live and die in his service; he affirmed, that the real cause of his frequent absence was, that he might obtain a place of retirement for the purpose of private prayer, for which his lordship knew he had no opportunity among his profane comrades, who had become his enemies merely on account of his profession of religion. He said he had made this defence on his trial, but the officers thought it so improbable that they paid no attention to it. The marquis, in order to satisfy himself as to the truth of his defence, observed, that if so, he must have acquired considerable aptness in this exercise. The poor man replied, that, as to ability, he had nothing to boast of. The marquis then insisted on his kneeling down, and praying aloud before him; which he did, and poured forth his soul before God with such copiousness, fluency, and ardour, that the marquis took him by the hand, and said, he was satisfied that no man could pray in that manner who did not live in the habit of intercourse with his God. He not only revoked the sentence, but received him into his peculiar favour, placing him among his personal attendants, and in the way to promotion.—Anecdotes of the Old and New Testaments, published by the Presbyterian Board of Publication.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

DONATIONS

RECEIVED DURING THE MONTH OF NOVEMBER.

Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.

Frankford ch, per Rev. Thos Murphy	$18 00

Presbytery of Bedford.

Carmel, N Y, S S Wynck, through Mission House New York	3 00

Presbytery of Cincinnati, O.

Central ch, "A Friend," per J D Thorpe	100 00

Presbytery of Vincennes, Ind.

Clairbourne church	2 00

Presbytery of New Castle, Del.

New Castle ch, Dr James Couper 20; Wm Couper and family 50; Sam'l M Couper 5; Rev. J B Spottswood, D D 10; Wm D Ocheltree 3; Chancellor Johns 5; Mrs Dr Black 1; Miss Janvier 2; Wm Janvier 5; Mrs Chancellor Johns 1	102 00

Presbytery of West Jersey.

Williamstown, N J, per Rev Chas E Ford	2 00

Presbytery of Long Island.

Raynor South 1st ch, per Rev. F. Merrill	2 00

Presbytery of New York 2d.

Scotch ch, R L and A Stuart	100 00

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

1st ch Rahway, N J, Rev Ch S K Imbrie	20 00

Presbytery of Buffalo City.

Bethany Centre ch, per Rev. G W Lane	2 50

Presbytery of Flint River.

Fellowship ch 13 50; Griffin ch 19; Decatur ch Mrs Adelphia A Adams hon mem by her husband 30; per Rev Joseph FMahon, airview ch to const their past Rev James C Patterson hon mem 30; Mrs Elizabeth Raney to const Andrew R Liddell hon mem 30; Mrs Martha Alexander 5; W R Alexander 5	132 50

Presbytery of Cherokee.

Marietta ch Ladies of the congregation to const their pastor Rev John Jones hon mem 30; Roswell ch Mrs Eliza B Bayard hon mem by her husband 30; Rev Nathaniel A Pratt hon mem by the ladies of his church 30; John Dunwoody Esq hon mem by the same congregation 30; Cassville ch 1; Rome ch towards const their past Rev J M M Caldwell hon mem 22 25; Sardis ch 6 43; all per Rev Joseph Mahon	129 68

Presbytery of Hopewell.

Eatonton ch Mrs Susan W Harwell to const Miss Susan E Favor hon mem 30; Miss Mary C Fielder to const Miss Susan F Cobb hon mem 30; Mrs Caroline E Mason const hon mem by her husband 30; James N Merriwether 5; Summerville ch and Pleasant Green ch to const their pastor Rev A Y Lockridge hon mem 30; do to const Rev James Gamble hon mem 30; Collection in Summerville ch 15 50; A Friend 1 50; Augustus Bryant to const self hon mem 30; La Fayette ch Thomas E and Joseph J Patton to const Mrs Clarissa J Patton hon mem 30; Collection 5; All per Rev Joseph Mahon Augusta ch Miss Margaret Martin 5	247 00

Presbytery of Knoxville.

Knoxville ch Robt Craighead to const his son James P Craighead hon mem 30; Wm S Kennedy to const his son John Kennedy hon mem 30; Mr Baker to const his wife Mrs Mary Ann R Baker hon mem 30; Joseph L King 10; Thos L Williams 10; Geo M White 60; Wm Ingles 10; Collection 11 90; Collection by the Ladies to const Rev R B McMullin their pastor and Mrs Letitia Ann McMullin hon mem's 80; Pleasant Forest ch R T Wilson 5; Mr Heiskell 1; James D Swan 2; Saml Galbraith 25 cents; N Burnett 50 cts; Cash 25 cts; D Wills 1; G Rutledge 1; E M Doak 15 cts; J K Smith 25 cts; Mr McCampbell 25 cts	233 55

Presbytery of East Alabama.

Talladega ch Mrs Cornelia Napier per Rev A B McCorkle	5 00

Presbytery of Rich nd.

Sharon ch per Board of Missions	2 00

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

10th ch "A Friend" per Dr Boardman	10 00
H J Conway, of Wilton, Ind, per J D Thorpe 5; Mrs Orr, of Ohio, per J D Thorpe 2; J L 75	82 00
	$1193 23

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 31st of October, Mr. N. C. Burt was ordained to the gospel ministry by the Presbytery of Miami, and installed pastor of the church of Springfield, Ohio.

The Rev. J. L. Janeway, of the classis of Passaic, was, on the 2d of October, installed by the Presbytery of Raritan, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Flemington, New Jersey.

On the 5th of November, the Rev. John Wray, formerly Missionary to India, was installed by the Presbytery of Clarion, pastor of the Beech Wood's Church.

On the 13th of November, Mr. Thomas H. Newton was ordained by the Presbytery of Philadelphia, with a view to his becoming Seamen's Chaplain on the Island of St. Thomas.

On the 14th of November, the Rev. Robert S. Finley was installed by the Presbytery of Elizabethtown, pastor of the 2d church of Woodbridge, New Jersey.

On the 14th of November, by the Presbytery of Troy, the Rev. Thomas P. Field was ordained pastor of the 2d church of Troy, New York.

On the 18th of October, Mr. D. D. Sanderson was ordained by the Presbytery of South Alabama, with a view to his future installation in the churches of Fairview and Friendship.

On the 2d of October, Mr. Thomas K. Davis was ordained by the Presbytery of Carlisle, and on the 8th and 16th respectively, he was installed pastor of the churches at Bedford and Shellsburg, Pennsylvania.

On the 1st of December, the Rev. Reuben R. Frame was installed pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church of Wappenger's Falls, New York.

On the 4th of December, the Rev. N. C. Locke was installed pastor of the 1st church, Hempstead, Long Island.

On the 20th of November, the Presbytery of St. Clairsville ordained Mr. Wm. M. Grimes, and installed him pastor of the church of Concord.

On the 8th of November, the Presbytery of Concord ordained Mr. Peter T. Penick, and installed him pastor of the churches of Philadelphia and Union.

On the 19th of November, by the Presbytery of Newton, Mr. Henry Reeves was ordained and installed pastor of the church of Belvidere, New Jersey.

On the 24th of November, by the Presbytery of Mississippi, the Rev. T. H. Cleland, jun., was installed pastor of the churches of Lake Providence and Pecan Grove.

DISSSOLUTION OF PASTORAL RELATION.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. George Burrowes and the church of Kirkwood was dissolved on the 12th of November.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. U. Powers and the church of Salem has been dissolved by the Presbytery of Montgomery.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. James A. McKee and the church in New Washington, Indiana, has been dissolved by the Presbytery of Madison.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. M. Olmstead and the churches of Snow Hill and Pitts' Creek, Maryland, has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. C. Mitchell and Bethany church, Virginia, has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. N. Shepherd and the church of Utica, Ohio, has been dissolved.

CALLS.

The Rev. Septimus Tustin, of Hagerstown, Maryland, has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church of Germantown, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Samuel D. Alexander has received a call to the Presbyterian church, Freehold, New Jersey.

The Rev. James A. McKee has received a call to the church in Franklin, Indiana.

The Rev. J. C. Mitchell has accepted a call to the church at Greensborough, Alabama.

The Rev. James W. Alexander, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, has received a call to the Duane Street church, New York. This congregation propose to erect a new church edifice in the upper part of the city.

The Rev. Wm. M. Paxton, of Greencastle, Pennsylvania, has received a call to the 1st Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. J. E. Rockwell, of Wilmington Presbytery, has received a call to the Central Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, Long Island.

The Rev. Josiah D. Smith has accepted a call to become co-pastor with the Rev. Dr. Hoge, of Columbus, Ohio.

The Rev. John M. Lowrie has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church of Lancaster, Ohio.

The Rev. J. N. Shepherd has accepted a call to the Church in Wooster, Ohio.

CHANGE OF RELATION.

At the recent sessions of the Presbytery of Ohio, the Rev. Wm. G. Taylor, of the Presbytery of Chicago, (New-school,) was admitted as a member of the Presbytery of Ohio.

Rev. John Sailor, of the New-school Presbytery of Pennsylvania, has united with the Old-school Presbytery of Erie.

DEDICATIONS.

A new Presbyterian church in Gloucester, New Jersey, was dedicated on the 10th of December.

An elegant church edifice of the 3d Presbyterian congregation of Trenton, New Jersey, was dedicated on the 7th of November.

A new Presbyterian church at Fishkill Landing, New York, was dedicated on the 7th of November.

The new Presbyterian church, Old-school, under the care of the Rev. Daniel McNair, St. Louis, was dedicated to the worship of God on Sabbath, the 1st inst.

DEATHS.

The Rev. Nathaniel Randolph Snowden departed this life on the 3d of November, at Freeport, Pennsylvania, in the eighty-first year of his age.

The Rev. T. Marshall Boggs, pastor of the united congregations of Marietta and Donegal, departed this life on the 10th of November, at Mount Joy, Pennsylvania, aged thirty-seven years.

The Rev. Richard B. Cater, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian church of Selma, Alabama, died suddenly on the 25th of November.

The Rev. Junius B. King, pastor of the Valley Creek church, Alabama, departed this life on the 22d of November, aged forty years.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The post-office address of the Rev. D. Monfort, D. D., is changed to Kingston, Decatur county, Indiana.

The post-office address of the Rev. J. B. Poage is changed to Florida, Missouri.

The post-office address of the Rev. James C. Barnes is changed to Perryville, Boyle county, Kentucky.

The post-office address of the Rev. R. McPherson has been changed to Temperanceville, Pennsylvania.

The post-office address of the Rev. D. McKinley, D. D., is changed to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. James A. Lyon has resigned the care of the Westminster church, St. Louis, Missouri. The Rev. J. F. Green has resigned the care of the church at Little Rock, Arkansas. Both resignations have been caused by the inadequacy of the salary to the support of the families of these brethren. The resignation of each is a thing to be regretted in itself, and the more so from the causes assigned.

The Rev. Dr. McGill, of the Western Theological Seminary, has been chosen Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Polity in the Seminary at Columbia, South Carolina.

The post-office address of the Rev. Benjamin J. Lowe is Marietta, Washington county, Ohio.

The Synod of South Carolina, at its late meeting, appointed the Rev. J. L. Kennedy Professor of Mathematics, &c., in the Oglethorpe University, which the Synod of Georgia confirmed—so that its corps of instructors is now complete.

The post-office address of the Rev. Peter T. Pennick is Pioneer Mills, Cabarras county, North Carolina.

The post-office address of the Rev. Thomas C. Smith is Lunenburg Court House, Virginia.

The post-office address of the Rev. S. B. Lewers is now Looxahoma, Desoto county, Mississippi.

The post-office address of the Rev. J. H. Dinsmore is Bethel, Fayette county, Kentucky.

Varieties.

New Church in Philadelphia.—The Christian Observer states that a large Gothic church is about to be erected on Locust between Schuylkill Seventh and Eighth streets, at an expense of about $50,000, and that nearly the requisite funds have been subscribed. The church will be in connection with the New-school. As a matter of taste, we think the effect of such a building would have been much better on a wider street than Locust.

Religion at the World's Fair.—The Bishop of London has appointed a Committee to consider what measures should be taken to provide foreigners and other strangers with the means of attending Divine worship during the period of the approaching exhibition.

Decline of Popery in Ireland.—One of the delegates from Ireland to the Conference of the Evangelical Alliance in England, stated that there were 10,000 persons in Connaught who had been alienated from the Church of Rome, and it was the terror of the priests on account of this fact that had prompted the meeting of the Synod at Thurles. Another delegate from Ireland said that never had there been such an abundant opening in that island, since the Reformation, for the preaching of the gospel in the Roman Catholic districts.

Trial for Popish Heresies.—The trial of the Rev. Oliver S. Prescott, assistant minister of the Episcopal Church of the Advent, in Boston, upon charges of heresy preferred by the Standing Committee of the Diocese, was commenced in that city a short time since.

Observance of the Sabbath in California.—The people of Sacramento have passed a stringent ordinance against the violation of the Sabbath. All theatrical performances, bull-fights, and equestrian exhibitions, are forbidden under a penalty of from $100 to $1000 dollars. Gambling saloons, drinking shops, and business houses, are to be closed, under a penalty of from $100 to $500. We are glad to see this, and we think it high time that our Common Council take some action in the same line, as regards San Francisco.—San Francisco Courier.

Practical Tribute to Scotch Presbyterianism.—Prince Edward's Island, which lies near Nova Scotia, has a population of 60,000, about 20,000 of whom are Scotch Presbyterians. A large part of the latter are adherents to the Free Church, although they have only one Free Church minister among them. In all this deprivation of stated ordinances, godliness seems still to flourish, showing how deeply rooted in the Scottish mind are the principles of religion. The elders, and especially some aged patriarchs from the north of Scotland, have done much by catechetical instruction, towards maintaining the knowledge and influence of the truth in their neighbourhoods. "Such is the reverence for the word of God," says the Halifax Presbyterian Witness, "that it is no uncommon occurrence in some of the Gaelic settlements, to find, on a Sabbath-day, and sometimes on a week-day, one, two, three, or four hundred in attendance, for reading and expounding the Scriptures, and engaging in prayer; and on any day of the week, and in the busiest season of the year, if a Presbyterian Gaelic-speaking minister gives timeous notice of his intention to preach in the settlement, the place of worship will be crowded."

Petitions for Congress.—The Puritan Recorder suggests that of petitions to Congress, for things reasonable and unreasonable, there has been enough, and that it were far better there were more petitions for Congress to Him who alone can properly direct and sway aright the hearts of men.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

Board of Domestic Missions.—Notice in Relation to the Treasurer, p. 2. Church Extension, p. 2. Summary of Intelligence for October and November, p. 2. How the Work goes on, p. 3. Communications from Missionaries: New Jersey, p. 3. Oregon, p. 3. Cause of Infidelity and Religious Error, p. 3. A Missionary's Work on the Sabbath-day, p. 4. Rejoicing, p. 4. Receipts, p. 4.

Board of Education.—I. Ministerial Education: The Agency of Ministers in the Perpetuation of the Ministry, p. 5. The Sower to his Seed, p. 5. The Right Kind of Foreign Missionaries, p. 5. The Want of Ministers, p. 5. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 6. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies, and Colleges: A great Man Converted at School, p. 6. Shiloh Presbyterial Academy, p. 6. Dunlap's Creek Academy, Pa., p. 6. What can be done in a Missionary Church, p. 7. School and Church, p. 7. Education in England, p. 7. Receipts, p. 7.

Board of Foreign Missions.—Recent Intelligence, p. 8. General View of the Missions, p. 8. Missions in Papal Europe, p. 9. Enlarged Space, p. 10. Mission to the Jews, p. 10. China: Canton Mission, p. 10. Africa: Mission near the Equator, p. 11. Sandwich Islands, p. 12. Receipts, p. 13.

Board of Publication.—The Presbyterian Sabbath-school Visitor, p. 14. Increased Operations, p. 14. Western Depot and Agency, p. 14. Horrid Pictures of Presbyterianism, p. 14. Employment for the long Winter Evenings, p. 14. The Board of Publication in New Orleans, p. 14. Erroneous Books in Presbyterian Sabbath-schools, p. 15. Notices of New Books, p. 15. The Praying Soldier, p. 15. Receipts, p. 15.

Miscellaneous.—The Record Enlarged and in a New Dress, p. 1. The Last Year of Life, p. 1. Private Readings, p. 1. Filling One's Place, p. 1. What hath God Wrought? p. 1. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 16. Varieties, p. 16.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 2. | PHILADELPHIA, FEBRUARY, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

HASTENING IT IN HIS TIME.

Christians have never doubted the word of their Lord concerning the spread of the gospel in the world; for they have always remembered his power to do all his will, his faithfulness in all his promises, and his mercy to fallen men which will not suffer them all to perish. But their faith has always been wonderfully enlivened when they have discerned some signs that the time of hastening this work of the Lord was drawing nigh.

What life, then, must the faith of Christians receive from the signs which are now beginning to appear. The bloom of the spring which has been so luxuriant and so promising—behold it now, condensing and ripening into the substantial growth of summer, and the rich fruit of autumn, and giving assurance that an abundant harvest is at hand. Among the things now conspiring to hasten the work of the Lord we cannot but rejoice to notice,

The increasing respect of mankind for the claims of our common nature.

Liberty, of itself, does not save the soul, nor improve either the mind or the heart, unless it be the peculiar liberty given by Christ to his own people. The increase of civil freedom may be only an occasion of licentiousness. But there can be no security for true liberty where Christianity does not take the lead; and where the gospel is faithfully administered, the prospects for its prevalence are promising in proportion as the people are free. The increase of civil liberty, therefore, as things now are, will hasten the progress of Christianity.

A larger number of mankind are now free to seek their welfare, according to their own judgment and choice, than ever in the world before. More people are living under free governments; more of the governments of the world, nominally despotic, are administered with reference to the true welfare of the people; and under governments really despotic, the people enjoy more of their natural rights than ever before.

In this country the principles of true liberty unfold themselves progressively in the various departments of our social system, causing our religious practices to eschew the constraint of outward forms, and of human authority, and to stand forth on the inward basis as the offspring of the heart. Our religious people, in all their denominations, are bringing forth the maturer fruits of our free and voluntary system. The spirit of genuine liberty, which cherishes a noble disdain for ignorance, and abhors, above all, the least restraint upon the conscience, dissolves, by a process slow indeed yet sure and perceptible, the practical power of the Romish despotism and formality, though the latter remains, and may long remain unchanged. The genius of Protestantism, which is the power of the gospel, and which so often works without respect of forms, must mingle gradually with the movements of the Romish church in this land; and the brightness of the Saviour's coming will yet shine through and finally dissolve the cloud of ignorance and formality which has so long darkened and chilled the millions in bondage to Romanism.

So much for our own country. In other countries the signs are more encouraging, because the changes are more imposing. The monarchies of Europe, in some respects, how changed! And these changes but the beginning. And how stand these changes in almost every land in relation to the gospel? What are they but the breaking down of the middle wall of partition between barbarism and civilization, between heathen and Christian? How many obstacles have been taken out of the way of Christianity in France, and in most of the German States. The foundations of despotism in the Roman States have been loosened, and the elements of humanity there have been thrown into a new position. The reports of missionaries in Asia are bright with encouragement. The senseless and inveterate superstitions of India are yielding. The adamant of caste is beginning to dissolve. In China, the millions have become accessible to the gospel missionary. If recent statements of secular papers concerning the government of that empire are true, the people there have more real liberty than is generally supposed; and Christian missions may have freer scope, more facilities, and brighter prospects there than in any other quarter of the globe. It will be matter of great and agreeable surprise, if it shall be fully certified to the Christian world, that China, in her civil laws and order, in the free yet chastened and moderate spirit of her people, and in the mutual relations of the different classes, can be so easily conformed to the principles and practice of Christianity. The fact is, we have known so little of China, that any intelligence from that long-hidden portion of the world is welcome. And now when the geographical relations of that empire to the rest of the world are so suddenly changed, it is cheering to anticipate the strange and entertaining information we shall soon have from that vast and wonderful portion of the human family.

Thus in every part of the world, we see an increasing respect for the demands of our moral nature, a leaning towards light; a preparation to hasten the work of the Lord; a growing regard for those rights which Christianity teaches men to recognize and appreciate, to vindicate and enjoy. J. W. Y.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

EXTENT OF THE UNIVERSE.

It may give some idea of the extent of the Universe to know the length of time required for light, which travels 192,000 miles an hour, to come from different celestial objects to this earth. From the moon, it comes in one and a quarter seconds; from the sun, in eight minutes; from Jupiter, in fifty-two minutes; Uranus, in two hours; from a star of the first magnitude three to twelve years; from a star of the fifth magnitude sixty-six years; from a star of the twelfth magnitude four thousand years. Light which left a star of the twelfth magnitude when the Israelites left Egypt has not yet reached the earth. Our entire solar system itself travels at the rate of thirty-five thousand miles an hour among the fixed stars.

AN EXAMPLE WORTHY OF IMITATION.

We know not when we have been more gratified with the receipt of a donation, or more encouraged in our work of conducting the Record, than when the subjoined letter with its contents came to hand. The sum may seem small, compared with the large gifts which some others cast into the treasury, but it comes unsolicited; it comes from a widow, and if we mistake not, the widow of a young minister who was taken away after a few years' of successful labour and of great promise of future usefulness; and there is in the little that is said, much of the humble, child-like simplicity and engagedness of a true child of God. Would that there were many more such spirits.

"Messrs. Editors—Enclosed I send you five dollars which I will thank you to appropriate in the following manner, viz:

To Foreign Missions, $1 50. To Domestic Missions, $1 50. To Board of Education, $1 50. For Home and Foreign Record for 1851, 50 cts.

The above sum, although small, I feel it to be a privilege to give to a cause which is dear to my heart. I hope to be able to increase it as the Lord shall prosper me. We are a little church without a pastor, but your invaluable paper supplies, in some respects, the want of one, as it records the operations and wants of our beloved Zion, and reminds me from month to month of my duty and obligations to it. Accept this sum as the "widow's mite," given in the name of Christ."

CHURCH COLONIZING IN NEW ORLEANS.

A correspondent of the Southern Presbyterian states the following interesting facts in relation to the Rev. Dr. Scott's church and its colonies in New Orleans. The same spirit of Church Extension is greatly needed in other cities.

"Out of the First Presbyterian Church have grown six missionary churches in the city and suburbs within the space of a few years. They generally begin the new enterprise by selecting a favourable site, and starting a Sabbath-school. The parents and relatives of the children are gradually drawn together to witness their performances. The next step is the employment of a missionary to preach to them, and finally a church building is constructed and a regular congregation organized. Some seven or eight Sabbath-schools are taught, principally by the members of the church, in various parts of the city, and the attendance averages from seven hundred to eight hundred children in the aggregate.

"They have a very large and flourishing church and congregation. Their membership is about six hundred. The church will hold some fifteen hundred or sixteen hundred seated below and above, and it is often filled to overflowing."

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. Reese Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:
J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

The labourer is worthy of his hire. Preachers of the gospel, in our country, expect no more than a decent competency. If they sought riches they would turn their attention to some other pursuit. The sum requisite for the comfortable support of a small family varies according to the part of the country in which the minister resides. It is expected of ministers that they live decently in their houses; and it is desirable that their families should be so governed and educated as to be an example to the flock. Ministers have it enjoined on them as a duty, to exercise hospitality. As they are consecrated to the service of the Lord, and as his service requires all their time, they ought not to be under the necessity of resorting to any secular employment for their living. Those whom they serve in the gospel should take care that they should be kept free from the necessity of engaging in any secular business.

A family cannot be supported in decency and comfort in any part of our country for a less sum than $500. And when the family is large, this sum will be found inadequate. It is a remarkable fact, that in many country congregations, while land has trebled and quadrupled its value in the last fifty years, the salaries of ministers have been stationary or nearly so. The reasonableness of furnishing at least $500 to every settled minister is so evident that argument is unnecessary. The Church should not rest satisfied until a fund is created sufficient to accomplish this object. Our Board of Missions should be enabled to guaranty to any missionary, at least $400, and it should not be made to depend on the people where he labours, whether he should receive this sum. Let him be assured that he shall receive it, and whatever the people in the missionary field are willing to give, may go to aid in making up this sum. In many places where the gospel is most needed, the people will give little or nothing, because they are not sensible of the value of the gospel; or because they labour under prejudices against giving salaries to ministers of the gospel. In certain districts of our country, the people are in good circumstances; but they think it rather a favour to the preacher to attend on his ministry; and feel no obligation to support him. In such a population much good may be done by preaching the gospel; and, by degrees, the prejudices of the people would be removed. But until this is the case, they should be gratuitously supplied with the gospel; just as we send missionaries to the heathen, "taking nothing from them," which is the apostolic rule. (3 John 7.)

We need much larger contributions from the churches to make up an adequate support for the pastors of poor churches, and also to give to our missionaries the sum which it is equitable they should receive. If all our churches would contribute to this fund; and if those who do contribute something would double their contributions, we should have enough for both purposes. If for Domestic Missions every member of the Church would give only one dollar, it would reach the object. And who is there, that could not, by a little saving and self-denial, lay up one dollar for such an object? But multitudes in our congregations, who are not communicants, are, in a sense, members of the Presbyterian Church. All baptized persons are members. Of these, there is a number much larger than of communicants. All these should be contributors to the treasury of the Church. If the money expended in mere luxuries were appropriated to this object, there would be no deficiency; yea, if the money expended in ardent spirits, or in tobacco, or in useless but expensive furniture, were appropriated to this object, it would support all our pastors and missionaries. When will Christians learn their duty in regard to this matter? When shall we find them making such a use of the gifts of Providence as will promote the kingdom of Christ? And this is a use of our money which will better bear reflection than any other. If men knew the blessedness of giving freely of their earthly substance to the service of the Lord, they would need no urging, but would esteem it a privilege and a happiness, to have it in their power to give something to promote the honour of the Redeemer, who has done so much and suffered so much to accomplish their salvation.

Lay up something out of your savings every week; and when the Lord has granted you more than usual prosperity, make a thank-offering for his mercy: or when he has delivered you or any member of your family from dangerous sickness, make a public acknowledgment of his goodness. You will find such acts of beneficence more pleasant than spending money on any selfish indulgence.

Remember, O Christian, that you have but a short time to live upon earth; and whatever good you do, must be done quickly. Remember, too, that "whatsoever good thing any man doth, the same shall he receive of the Lord." Money given to the treasury of the Lord is money invested in the bank of heaven, for eternity. A rich increase will undoubtedly be received. We read that "Blessed are they who die in the Lord." And one reason of their blessedness is, that "their works do follow them." Even a cup of cold water given to a disciple shall not lose its reward. I know that Christians must act from higher motives than a regard to their own happiness; but this, as a secondary motive, is lawful and reasonable, and if duly considered would stimulate us powerfully to lay up our treasures in heaven, to make to ourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when we fail here, they may receive us into everlasting habitations.

Dear Brethren: As God has preserved you to see the commencement of a new year, I entreat you to determine that you will endeavour, by Divine assistance, to live more to the glory of God than in time past: to exert yourselves more for the salvation of perishing sinners; and to give more liberally to the treasury of the Lord. "Time is short." For aught you know, this new year may be your last. "This year you may die." "Work then while it is day, before the night cometh when no man can work." Every pious motive pleads strongly in favour of greater exertion and greater liberality. Remember that all you expend for your own pleasure, will receive no reward hereafter; but you may so make use of your wealth, that you may have, by this means, friends in heaven, who will welcome you to the everlasting inheritance. You may, by a pious use of what you can spare, lay up treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust can corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal.

May this be a happy new year to the Church and to all its members! May the Spirit be poured out from on high! May all the benevolent enterprises of the Church be successful, and God glorified!

A. A.

TEXAS.

Mission Rooms.

The area of Texas, with her late peace boundary, is stated to be 237,321 square miles, which is more than five times the size of New York! If a man leaves San Antonio on horseback, it will take him about half a month, steady travelling by day, to reach the nearest point of New Mexico. If he sets out from the mouth of the Rio Grande, and pursues his journey to El Passo, in a straight line, he will travel some eight hundred and thirty miles, and consume nearly a full month. There he will meet another traveller, who has come from the north-east corner of the State, and completed eight hundred and sixty miles, and consumed an entire month. This is a vast domain, embracing a diversity of soil, and portions of it of immense fertility; adapted to the cultivation of wheat, cotton, and sugar; producing, too, almost every variety of tropical fruits and vegetables; intersected at convenient distances by rivers and streams navigable in their natural state, at least for a portion of the year, to great distances, and which must hereafter be improved by an enterprising people. The climate of the State is deemed a healthy one; neither severe in winter nor oppressive in summer: we do not know that the settlers in Texas have suffered more in health than the settlers of any other of our new States and Territories; and with the necessary improvement in their dwellings and modes of living, and with greater access to the comforts and conveniences of life, and with better acquaintance with the climate itself, the health of the citizens must everywhere improve. The forests and plains abound in game, and afford the finest ranges for stock of all kinds.

Since the independence and annexation of Texas, the aspect of affairs within her borders has changed vastly for the better, and the recent settlement of her boundary with New Mexico has added to her prosperity. Texans divide their State, generally, into Eastern and Western Texas, although Middle Texas is another division. Eastern Texas embraces all that portion which lies east of the Trinity river, and bordering on Louisiana, Arkansas, and the Indian Territory, and is half as large as all New England. From the Trinity to the Rio Grande is called Western Texas. The mass of the population lies in the lower portions of the State. Emigrants, however, are settling higher up than heretofore.

The population of both Eastern and Western Texas is rapidly increasing, from the older States, and it is now of a richer, more intelligent, moral, and religious cast than formerly: indeed, as fine society may be found in Texas as in any State in the Union; and it must abound more and more. The inhabitants are not deficient in either enterprise or energy; and from present appearances the vast resources of the State will be developed rapidly. They have a remarkable attachment to the soil. They speak of "true-hearted Texans," and begin to catch in the distance the coming glory of the once Lone Star, and say they aspire to the position of "the Empire State of the South-West."

A very interesting emigration of one hundred and twenty souls has recently arrived in Texas from England; they bring a clergyman of the Church of England of decidedly evangelical opinions with them, thus setting a noble example to similar companies, and we shall shortly hear of their location as an independent community in Milan county. There are also a large number of foreigners, English, Irish, Germans, and Norwegians, making settlements in Eastern Texas. There are in the Valley of the Rio Grande, this side of El Passo, and on our side of the river, some 23,000 Mexicans.

While we rejoice as true lovers of our great country, in the rapid rise and future prospects of Texas, as Christians we necessarily feel the deepest interest in her intellectual and religious condition and future development. She is the great border State of the South-West, looking out upon the Gulf, and running along the borders of Mexico for hundreds of miles. She is destined to exert an unlimited and most potent influence upon our sister Republic, and may convey to her across the narrow stream that divides them the richest of God's blessings to nations, Civil and Religious Freedom. The stream of these blessings once fairly moving on its way, must overflow all that southern land to the Isthmus; and then uniting with that which comes from the west and north, from all our possessions on the Pacific, the barriers will be overtopped, and the southern division of this hemisphere will be disenthralled, and united to that KINGDOM which is ultimately to filt the whole earth. The ever-living and ever-blessed God and our Saviour hasten it in his time!

We observe that our brethren of other denominations are directing their eyes and their hearts to this field. They are circulating their books; establishing their schools and projecting colleges; settling ministers and missionaries, and endeavouring to meet the wants of the people. We rejoice in all the good they do. But no one denomination can accomplish every thing, while it is the duty of all to do what God in his providence and grace enables them to do. As Presbyterians, we must go forward and do our duty to the State of Texas, and to our own people, who are moving in no inconsiderable numbers into that State. She must have her fair and just proportion of men and means.

And what now is the condition of things with us there? A missionary of the Board writing from Eastern Texas says, "hundreds and thousands are emigrating annually to this part of the State, and among them a goodly number of Presbyterians, and descendants of Presbyterians, who of course desire to hear Presbyterian preaching." He states that many of our members have united with other denominations, because they were separated from a church of their own, and had little prospect of seeing one speedily among them. In October last, we had but five ministers of our communion in all Eastern Texas, and some of them, from circumstances, do not devote all their time to preaching. There are churches organized at Douglass, Henderson, Larissa, Marshall, Palestine, and San Augustine, and there are many other places where churches might be organized. The people are favourably disposed, and our great need is a sufficient number of ministers. In the language of one of our missionaries, "we want more labourers, for truly the harvest is great; and our prayer is, that God will send us zealous, active, self-denying men in this destitute field, who will be willing to sacrifice comforts and endure hardships for the Saviour." This same brother writes, (showing that blessings attend faithful efforts) "We have been exceedingly blessed in our labours; our little church, from eight, has increased to thirty members; and five or six more are expecting to unite with us. We preach in the court-house to large and attentive congregations; the people orderly, respectable, intelligent. We have raised $1400, and will yet raise more, which, with some assistance from the Church Extension Committee, will enable us to complete our house of worship. It may cost us $2300. We have a flourishing Sabbath-school and good library. I ride about 120 miles per month to reach my different appointments, and preach some sixteen sermons." There are but few religious books in Eastern Texas, and no country needs the publications of our Board more. The churches are yet few and feeble, and the support of our missionaries for some to come, must, in great part, be paid by the Board of Domestic Missions.

In Middle and Western Texas, the wants are equally great. We have only about six or eight church edifices of our own built, and in use or building in all Texas! Galveston, Independence, Victoria, Lavaca, Palestine, Austin (in connection with the Cumberland Presbyterians) San Antonio. We are not sure if a church edifice has been commenced in Brownsville. One is greatly needed at that important post, where we have an efficient minister and an active church; and where also the Evangelical Christian Union has located Mr. Montsalvage, as missionary to the Mexican population.

An interesting meeting of the Brazos Presbytery was held in November, in Washington. Two ordained ministers were received, and two licentiates ordained as evangelists. The Presbytery petitioned the Synod of Mississippi to set off their body into three Presbyteries. The one on the east of the Trinity to be called the Eastern Presbytery of Texas; the one between the Trinity and Colorado will retain the name of Brazos; and the third, west of the Colorado, will be called the Western Presbytery of Texas. Here is indeed some progress. If the Synod grants the request, then look out at the next General Assembly for the erection of a new synod, THE SYNOD OF TEXAS! and by God's blessing onward will be the course of our Church. We have been anticipating this event with pleasing hopes. Brazos Presbytery has under its care 25 churches, and there are in Texas about 20 Presbyterian ministers; some of them peculiarly men of talent, energy, and true devotion to the cause of Christ. The Presbytery in 1849 founded AUSTIN COLLEGE, at Huntsville, 10 miles west of the Trinity, and 150 from the Gulf by land, and 300 by the river. It is a Presbyterian college, of which Mr. McKinney is President; the Rev. Dr. Baker, who is known throughout the States, is the General Agent. The College, last April, had 45 students; the Trustees have contracted for the main college edifice, to be completed in July, 1852, at a cost of $12,000. The prospects are flattering. The subject of education, is, therefore, receiving the special attention of our church in Texas, and that education is laid upon the right foundation; it embraces in it the religious training of the youth. Great efforts are needed throughout the State for the cause of education. The destitutions are great.

It is impossible for us to do more than to give a hasty sketch of this wide field now open before us. We have presented this sketch for the purpose of replying to some inquiries recently addressed to this OFFICE, and especially to direct the attention of our students in the present senior classes in our Theological Seminaries, to Texas, peradventure God may call some of them to that field. There are students whose minds are turned to that field now. We close by presenting a few considerations, the suggestions of the experience and observation of men of God, who are now on the ground, and enduring the burden and heat of the day.

Missionaries and ministers who go to Texas in connexion with the Board, must have an appropriation sufficient for their support, so that they may be free of care, and devote themselves wholly to their work: their support to be drawn either wholly from the Board, or, in part from the Board, and in part from the fields they serve.

They should not go, because they cannot get settlements elsewhere, nor should they go as invalids, to repair wasted and wasting constitutions; strong men are needed: of good, enduring constitutions; able to meet hardships: of sound minds, and sound in doctrine, because of the state of society in Texas. The people are intelligent, shrewd, decided, and many opposers. They should be able to speak and to preach extempore. Often called upon suddenly, by the way, in a steamboat, in a court-house, "with perhaps one candle! How can he read!" And let them be decided Presbyterians; supporting calmly, temperately, charitably, and yet firmly, that faith and order, which we believe to be most agreeable to the word of God, and most necessary to the eternal welfare of men.

BENEFITS OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Illinois.

"Last week we organized a church of sixteen members; others are prepared to join us. This number contains the leading Christians in the community. We chose three elders; two of them have been elders for many years in other places. They are pious, active, intelligent, and influential men. We propose now to make an attempt to build a house of worship. The number, however, who will help us is small, and the means of most limited. You can scarcely appreciate the importance of such a movement in this place. I regard it as absolutely essential to the permanent establishment of a church here. It is the testimony of most ministers who have been instrumental in building up churches in the West, that the erection of a commodious house was the turning point in the history of the church. It gives the church a predominant influence over the other churches in the community; binds persons of different ecclesiastical connexions together; brings many under the influence of the gospel that never would attend otherwise, and causes an habitual attendance on the part of the community about. We labour under all the difficulties of having no house of worship. Last week I heard a minister say that since they have erected a house, it is as well filled as the small school-house was before; that many persons took pews and were generally present themselves and their families, who never entered the school-house."

MANY HOUSES OF WORSHIP MAY BE EASILY FINISHED.

Ohio.

"It may not be uninteresting to give you a brief account of the church since my connexion with it, about three years since. When I came here they had a house of worship erected, but unfinished. Nothing then but the shell. They had worshipped in it in this state about ten years! They are a feeble congregation, and thought they could not succeed in any attempt to finish the house. I prevailed upon them to undertake the matter; still they were undecided. Finally the Lord poured out his Spirit upon them, and revived his work in their midst. Some twenty-five were added to the church. The house was soon finished and paid for."

A GOOD RESOLUTION.

Georgia.

"Though we do not expect to be able to do much in the way of pecuniary aid for the different Boards of our Church, yet we have determined periodically and separately to bring before the people the objects and claims of these Boards, and to endeavour to inform their minds, engage their hearts, and encourage their zeal, prayers, and liberality. It has been, and will continue to be my aim to cultivate in the minds of our people an expansive missionary spirit, as I believe the more we have of this spirit, the more of spirituality there will be." The Presbyterian Church is engaged in a great work, and with this resolution in the hearts of all our officers and members, what may we not accomplish?

PLAN FOR BENEVOLENT CONTRIBUTIONS.

There is no harm done by directing the attention of the Church to this subject, occasionally at least. A minister says, "The people of my charge are a liberal people. They take a deep interest in all the Boards, the benevolent operations of our Church: they respond to the calls made upon them, and yet I know, and they know and acknowledge the fact, that our contributions, when footed up at the close of the year, are much less than they should be. We ought to have some system in this duty. Pray, tell me, how do you succeed in your church?" Another says, "I have no objection to agents, some judicious, efficient men, are needed to bring our great work of evangelizing our country and the world before our churches. Our experience thus far demonstrates this. But I would like so to arrange things in my own congregation, that we may not depend upon our agents to come and take up the collections. When they come we do well; when they do not come we contribute hardly anything. In fact, to tell the truth, I am myself depending upon the visits of our agents, and am no better than my people in this respect. When I went to Presbytery, I was perfectly ashamed at the statistical report from my church; it read 'Domestic Missions' blank! 'Foreign Missions' blank! 'Education' twenty dollars. 'Publication' five, and so on. A beggarly account indeed, thought I, of empty columns! My conscience said, whose fault is this? I confessed my sin. Give me some aid in this matter if you can."

It is indeed a serious matter, and conscience will speak. Here are elders and members willing and ready to give, but the way is not opened to them; and few, comparatively, will sit down and write a letter and inclose their contributions to the Boards over the heads of their pastors. Those who give largely, will so forward their contributions, but the innumerable sums of small amount, which like raindrops compose the full refreshing shower, do not come to us in this way. They must be collected into the Lord's treasury, in their own churches at home. We should, however, remark, that we do in all the Boards receive small remittances, in letters, from members of the churches and friends to the enterprise in which we are engaged. For example, we have received a day or two since an enclosure of two dollars, which came five hundred miles. These small enclosures evidence a love at heart to the Master that gives refreshment to the spirit.

But to the point. Here is a plan which has been adopted by a large and important church in one of our chief southern cities, and the pastor stated in conversation, that the contributions under it had exceeded their former contributions under the old method, by above one-third: and all done without noise, or any pressure upon the people. The same plan does not suit every-one: but we may obtain useful hints for our own guidance. It will be observed that the sixth head for contributions is set down for the "Bible Society and Tract Society." This miscellaneous head may be filled up by the pastor and elders, as they like. The little sheets containing the plan, are of course struck off and distributed throughout the congregation, and before this is done a sermon is usually preached, setting forth the duty of "honouring the Lord with our substance," of supporting Missions, or on any other subject which may awaken the minds and hearts of God's people to right action. Much of course depends upon the activity and fidelity of the collectors.

PLAN FOR BENEVOLENT CONTRIBUTIONS,

In the ——— Church, 1851.

The following plan has been in use in this church for twelve months. It is intended to afford assistance to persons in determining and indicating what amount they are willing to contribute to the cause of Christian benevolence, each week, according to the apostle's recommendation in 1 Cor. xvi. 2, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." Thus one person may not be able to give more than one cent a week to each of the objects named, or six cents a week to all of them; another may be able to give two cents a week to each of them, or twelve and a half cents a week to all, and so on. Who cannot give six cents a week to spreading the gospel? How many, with a little self-denial, could contribute according to rate No. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, or even 9, did they really feel an interest in a cause for which their Saviour gave his life; and would they practice a little of the self-denial which he practised, (Rom. viii. 9.) Some may prefer to give more to one object than another—for these blank columns may be left, that they may put down what they choose for each.

After examining the following list, each one is requested to fill up the blank and sign it.

Rates of contributions to the following objects.	No. 1	No. 2	No. 3	No. 4	No. 5	No 6	No. 7	No. 8	No 9
Foreign Missions,	0.01	0.02	0.04	0 12½	0.16⅔	0.25	0.50	1 00	2 00
Domestic Missions and Church Extension,	0 01	0.02	0.04	0 12½	0.16⅔	0 25	0 50	1.00	2.00
Board of Publication and Fund for aged Clergymen, their destitute widows and children	0.01	0.02	0.04	0.12½	0 16⅔	0.25	0.50	1 00	2.00
Board of Education,	0.01	0.02	0.04	0.12½	0.16⅔	0.25	0.50	1 00	2.00
Sabbath School, the Poor, and the Deacon's Fund,	0.01	0.02	0.04	0.12½	0.16⅔	0.25	0.50	1.00	2.00
Bible Society and Tract Society.	0.01	0 02	0.04	0.12½	0.16⅔	0.25	0.50	1.00	2 00
Total per week,	6	12	24	75	1.00	1.50	3.00	6.00	12.00

On considering the above rates, I agree to give the sums specified in rate No. and request the collector to call for it every*

(Signed)

P. S. After filling the above blanks, this paper can be sent to the pastor, or one of the elders or deacons.

Any person wishing to subscribe a given sum, payable weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and to be divided by the officers of the church among the several objects above mentioned, as may seem best at the time, can do so.

* Insert here whether you wish to pay it monthly or quarterly.

PSALM CXVII.

An exhortation to praise God for his mercy and truth.

"O praise the Lord, all ye nations; praise him, all ye people. For his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord."

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts in the Treasury at Philadelphia, Pa., from December 9th to 31st, 1850.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Ballston Spa ch 9 55

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of New York.—Duane st ch annual col 195 74; Fem Dom Miss Ass. Rutger's st ch 104 87 300 61
2d Pby of New York.—Stanton st ch 21 00
Pby of Hudson.—Deer Park ch 12; Good Will ch 51; Scotchtown ch 72 135 00
Pby of North River.—1st Pres ch Newburgh in part 100; Marlborough ch from following persons, Mrs E Fowler 10; Mrs E Vellee 1; Mr E Du Bois 25 cts; Miss Bont 25 cts; Mrs D Conklin 50 cts; Mr J O Conklin 50; Mr T C Bloomed 1; Mrs Sarah Du Bois 1; Mr C Wygant 1; Mrs E Maby 50 cts 116 00
Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 3 60; North Salem ch 4 80 8 40

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Burlington.—Mount Holly ch 21 67; Burlington ch 4 83 26 50
Pby of Raritan.—Kingswood ch 10 25; Frenchtown ch 8; Solsbury ch 16 50 34 75
Pby of Elizabethtown.—2d Pres ch Elizabethtown 153; Lamington ch 100; Chatham Village ch 35; 288 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Rev D Cook, Port Carbon 8 55
Pby of Newton.—Lower Smithfield ch 10 78; Harmony ch 30; Lower Mt Bethel 30; 2d ch of Easton 5 62 76 40
Pby of West Jersey.—May's Landing ch 28; Greenwich ch 54 82 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—10th Pres ch from the following persons, S A Mercer 10; Mrs Gardell 5; Mrs H Campbell 5; Z Gemmell 5; Mrs Fulton 2; Mrs S M Gilpin 5 32 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Milton ch $72, $50 of which to const Rev D Longmore an hon mem 72 00
Pby of New Castle.—"Benevolent fund of the New London Congregation" 40 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Chambersburg ch addl 28 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Erie.—Irvine ch 8 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Maury.—Zion ch 15 00
Pby of Holston.—Through Treasurer of same 17 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Montgomery.—Salem ch 36; High Bridge 7 43 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Fort Wayne.—German Pres ch of Fort Wayne 1 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Messrs R. and L. Stewart N Y 1000; A. B. C. New York 100; An unknown donor 50; a Friend in a Southern ch 10; a Family Missy Box 1 1161 00

Total 2523 76

C. C. JONES, Cor. Sec.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Fairmount ch in part to con Rev W P Harshe an hon mem 30; Clarksburg ch in part to con Rev Ezek Quillin an hon mem 26 43; Morgantown ch $30 of which from Sab Sch, 25 in part to cons Rev Billings hon mem 86 43
Pby of Ohio.—Monongahela city ch Bal to cons Mrs Alex Wilson 25; Sharpsburg ch in part to cons Rev J W Murray 30; Bethel ch in part to cons W Wilson sr 46 101 00
Pby of Erie.—Georgetown ch 8 70
Pby of Allegheny.—Pleasant Valley ch 6; Glade Run ch 1 50 7 50

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Upper Buffalo ch mon col 15 43; Upper Buffalo ch Fem Miss asso to const Miss Mary G Eagleson hon mem 71 17; Cross Creek ch 152 25; Wheeling 1st ch mon col 57 32; 296 17
Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 1st ch Mr Hans Wilson and lady 150 each; Steubenville 1st ch Sab Sch 11 50; Steubenville 2d ch addl, 1 312 50
Pby of New Lisbon.—Salem ch 15; Middle Sandy ch 15 30 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

From three ladies for Brownsville ch on the Rio Grande 1 50

Total $843 80

CLOTHING.

Ladies of Cross Creek ch a box valued at 38 00
do Meadville ch do do 68 00

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Receipts into the Treasury at Columbus, Ohio, from April 29th to October 18th, 1850.

Pby of Columbus.—Blendon ch 1 60; Hopewell ch 10 72; London ch 16 07; Mifflin ch 7; Columbus ch 8 43 39
Pby of Hocking.—Alexander ch 10 00
Pby of Marion.—Marion ch 4 12; Lower Liberty ch 1 60 5 72
Pby of Wooster.—Wayne ch 3 47; Congress ch 10 50; Mount Hope ch 13 03; Jackson ch 5 50; Springfield ch 10; Guilford ch 5 47 50
Pby of Coshocton.—Apple Creek ch 12 12; Trinity ch 19; West Carlisle ch 7 75; Linton ch 50 cts; Perry ch 1; Evans creek ch 2 42 42 79
Pby of Richland.—Orange ch 5; Hopewell ch 4 30; a friend 10, (five of which to support min among slaves;) Frederick ch 70 cts; Pleasant Hill ch 12; Lexington ch 6; 38 00
Orange ch in part to const M A Moody life mem 17 13; Hopewell ch in part to const M A Moody life mem 8 87 26 00

Total $213 40

THOMAS MOODIE, Treasurer of Synod.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts in the Treasury at Louisville, Ky. during the month of December, 1850.

1st Presb ch Louisville per Mrs C W Short 20 00
Miss Louisa Brown Flemington Ky 2 00
Lake Providence and Pecan Grove La per Rev T H Clelland 102 00
Logansville Ohio per W W Hill 9 00
Bethel ch 20 00
Pisgah, Woodford county Ky addl 13 00
Louisville 2d ch 72 10
do 1st ch 45 00
Xenia, Ohio 19 00
Harrison ch Ohio per J D Thorpe 7 00
Commercialville Presb ch do 4 00
Sheron ch Ky do 13 00
1st ch Walnut Hill do 23 50
Williamsburg ch Ohio do 10 00
Presb ch Chilicothe, Ohio, to const Rev Irwin Carson and wife hon mem 100 00
Ladies' Miss Soc same ch to purchase clothing 20 00
Infant Sabbath School do do do 3 00
Bloomingsburg ch Ohio per J D Thorpe 50 90
Washington do do do 3 20
1st Presb ch Cincinnati three mon con do 121 34
South Presb ch Galena per Rev T Foster 28 43
Georgetown ch Ky per Rev H V D Nevin 40 00
Columbia Mo per Rev W W Hill 20 00
Burlington ch Ky per Rev W Orr 8 00
M G Knight collected in his field Indiana 14 50
Huntsville ch Ohio per Rev J E Marquis 5 00
Stoney Creek ch per Rev W M Galbraith 15 00
Washington ch Indiana per Rev H S Maguire 11 00
Petersburgh ch do do 4 00
Almo ch per Rev D P Smock 6 00
Bloomington Ill per Rev D G Perry 14 65
Hopewell ch Ill per Rev B Leffler 5 00
Gilead ch do do do 5 00
Burnea ch do per Rev A B Church 1 40

Total $836 02

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

PRAYERS, FUNDS, AND PRINCIPLES.

We occupy our columns this month in pleading for prayers to bless the Church with heavenly influences in her whole educational movement; for funds to enable her to carry her plans into execution; and for a steadfast adherence to the principles which require thorough preparation for the ministry.

PRAYERS.

THE LAST THURSDAY OF FEBRUARY.

Not only is there a particular injunction to pray to the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth labourers into the harvest, but the whole process of education from infancy onwards, is a training "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," which demands in every stage the Lord's blessing.

The General Assembly, impressed with the importance of invoking more particularly the divine blessing upon the efforts to train up a ministry of the proper qualifications, and in sufficient numbers to meet the wants of the world, have set apart the last Thursday of February for this special object. The following is the resolution of the Assembly.

Resolved, That as the necessities of our country and the world call loudly on the Presbyterian Church for a large increase of ministers, this General Assembly would recommend to the churches under their care to observe the last Thursday of February as a day of special prayer for the outpouring of the Spirit on young men. And the Assembly would earnestly urge upon pastors, parents, and all who are intrusted with the training of the youth of our Church, to make united and fervent intercession to the Lord for their early conversion.

As many of the country churches may not be able to meet on the day specified, it is respectfully suggested to our ministers to give a special prominence to the subject on the preceding or succeeding Sabbath.

The following are reasons for the remembrance of the claims of the ministry before God.

REASONS FOR SPECIAL PRAYER FOR AN INCREASE OF LABOURERS.

1. Because the harvest is plenteous, and the labourers are few. Many organized congregations are destitute of the stated administration of the word and ordinances. Large tracts of territory densely peopled in our land, are but very partially supplied with the ministrations of the Gospel. And from heathen countries the repeated, urgent, importunate cry, is heard: Send those who will aid us in breaking to the perishing multitudes the bread of life—send quickly, and send many, for the harvest is ripe for the sickle.

2. Because it is the very object for which our Lord Jesus directed special prayer to be offered. The circumstances being similar, the Church will be guilty of neglecting his particular injunctions if she fails to do it. And the sin of omission, no less than the sin of commission, incurs his frown.

3. Because compliance with his direction in this respect is a test of discipleship—under the general rule, "if ye love me, keep my commandments." The love of Christ should therefore constrain us to obey him.

4. Because the ministry is the gift of God—"No man taketh upon himself this honour, but he that is called, as was Aaron." His special gifts to his Church should, therefore, be the subject of her special regard.

5. Because the hearts of all men are in his hands, and he can bring thousands and tens of thousands who are standing in the market places all the day idle, into his vineyard, and find them ample employment.

6. Because the ministry is the chief instrumentality which God has appointed for the conversion of sinners and for the edification of the Church. It is but reasonable, therefore, that we should offer special prayer for large accessions to the number to whom this work is committed.

7. Because God will be inquired after by the house of Israel for those very blessings which he has it in his heart to bestow.

8. Because there is no reason to anticipate the promised glory of the Church, until the multitudes are greatly increased who shall publish the salvation of the Gospel—and no reason to anticipate this increase, but in answer to the prayers of his people.

9. Because these gifts are more highly valued when they are bestowed in answer to prayer.

10. Because ministers, like other men, are mortal. And the congregation that has a pastor to-day, may be vacant to-morrow. If, therefore, there be not an increase of labourers, it may be very difficult to obtain a supply.

11. Because to pray for an increase of labourers, is to pray for the best interests, temporal and eternal, of a dying world.

FUNDS.

What farmer does not lay out money for the implements of agriculture? The soil must be cultivated, and he must have the means of doing it. This is right, but it is for a corruptible use. There is an incorruptible seed to be sown upon an immortal soil, even the truth of God upon the human soul; and this glorious sort of cultivation requires means also. The human instrumentality cannot thrive without supplies.

The funds of the Board of Education are becoming low. We, therefore, appeal to the churches for HELP.

Brethren in the Synods of Buffalo, Albany, and New York! we begin at the top of the ecclesiastical roll, and ask you to head it as you can. Many churches have as yet contributed nothing to the Board of Education. Do not all intend to do something? There is a "time for every purpose under the heaven"—"a time to build up"—it is now.

Our friends in New Jersey will be addressed in their own set time—when we hope for an improvement upon last year.

In the Synod of Philadelphia, we turn especially to Newcastle, Carlisle and Huntingdon Presbyteries—old soil, but full of "the seeds of things," and rich. We solicit of your abundance what your piety may dictate.

The Synods of Pittsburgh and Wheeling, strong and staunch with Scotch and Irish Presbyterianism, never forget education, unless they do so this year. But this is the beginning of a new half-century; they will do better than ever. (?)

Will our brethren of Ohio excuse us for saying that the Board appropriates about $800 this year to their candidates, and that as yet only $150 have been collected? Shall not the treasury at Columbus soon receive wonted and unwonted, and wanted supplies?

Cincinnati, Indiana, North Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, are Synods covering a mighty domain of States, churches, population and resources. A large amount of funds might be gleaned upon that vast field. The Board hopes to have an agent next year for the West; but until he comes, will not our brethren, the pastors, supply our lack of service?

Kentucky, with her Louisville, Frankfort, Lexington, Danville, &c., has generally done as much as the Board had any right to claim. This year our receipts thus far, however, have been small. If we had Kentucky eloquence to urge the argument of our wants, every rill and stream might unlock its treasures with the influences of spring. Brethren, John Breckinridge once stood among you the advocate, for his Master's sake, of the cause of education; this is a good cause still.

Virginia, after her great Synodical meeting at Fincastle, cannot fail to aid the Board with good will, and North Carolina will, we trust, co-operate in earnest fellowship to the uttermost.

South Carolina and Georgia do their full share, under their own organization.

Alabama is far off, but not too far for Christian sympathy and co-operation. As her crops have yielded well and brought large prices, is not the Board of Education to have a share, and a good share?

Mississippi Synod has within its bounds New Orleans and Natchez, each of which cities might transmit $500 with great advantage to the cause of Education. Natchez last year kindly sent about $400; but New Orleans has not aided us by the space of two years. We use the telegraph of the Record to lay the wants of this benevolent object before our brethren in these two cities and the regions round about.

Memphis and Nashville are small Synods, but some of their churches are large and able. We have pleasant recollections of the cities which give the Synodical names, and ask our friends there to help replenish the treasury of the Board of Education.

And now, having said a word, we trust in season, to each of the Synods of the Presbyterian Church, we turn away from man and church, and look up to heaven and God. May the Lord of the harvest help this plea for the sending forth of labourers into the harvest!

PRINCIPLES.

THOUGHTS AGAINST ALLOWING CANDIDATES TO SHORTEN THEIR THEOLOGICAL COURSE.

The Board of Education, (deeming it their duty to call the attention of the Church to whatever seems to have an injurious effect upon the thorough preparation of candidates for the ministry,) beg leave to submit a few considerations against the practice of allowing young men to enter upon the full work of the ministry before they have completed their theological studies. Several cases have occurred during the present year among the candidates under their care, which justify some remarks on this important subject. Whilst the Board disclaim all attempts at dictation, they believe that their statements will be received with candour, and weighed with deliberation.

1. The practice of allowing candidates to commence the full work of the ministry before completing their theological studies, is, in the first place, doing them personally an injury. The Bible has many allusions to the importance of knowledge on the part of those who are to minister in holy things. An undisciplined and unfurnished mind, or one imperfectly trained, will rarely be able to teach others to edification.* The existing arrangements of the theological course are believed to have been planned in wisdom, and to be sustained by the general testimony of experience. Ministers are never found to regret having remained in the Seminary the full period prescribed by its regulations. On the contrary, many a lamentation has been made by those who have unwisely shortened their theological course, and entered upon their work without adequate preparation. No future diligence can make amends for a deficiency at the beginning. It is far better for the candidate, whatever his application as a student may be after he has engaged in the ministry, to lay a good foundation in the Seminary, on which to build the superstructure of his future attainments. In most of our institutions the course is now so arranged that the student only goes through a part of systematic divinity, unless he remains during the third year. The Board are far from affirming that there may be no worthy exceptions to the three years' rule; but their own observation has led them to notice that those students whose attainments are the highest rarely wish to abandon prematurely the privileges of the theological institution. The candidates who are the least qualified to go forth into the vineyard are too often those who are seized with the desire to give up study. The practice of licensing young men while in the Seminary may be a good one, if it is linked with the obligation to complete their preparatory course. Otherwise, it is believed to be commonly fraught with evil.

* For a full discussion of the importance of a well-educated ministry, the reader is referred to a new Education Repository, entitled "Home, the School, and the Church," recently published by the Corresponding Secretary of the Board.

All the considerations which establish in general the necessity of a full course, apply with increased power to the candidates under the care of the Board of Education. Because the most of them, having commenced their preparations late in life, have greater need to prosecute their studies during the full time contemplated by the arrangements of the Seminary. The Board, therefore, do not hesitate to state their conviction that—with rare exceptions, such as are not now within their view—a great personal injury is inflicted upon the candidates who are encouraged to hurry through the Seminary, and to preach the gospel with imperfect preparations.

2. In the second place, the evil of allowing a few candidates to leave the Seminary in the midst of their studies, throws temptations in the way of all, and relaxes the authority of a general and salutary rule. It is probable that a large number of candidates, if they had their own way, would leave the Seminary at the end of the second year, if not before. Positive requirements are necessary to enforce the duty of mature preparation for the work of the ministry. Just in proportion, therefore, to the departures from the strictness of the rule, will be the tendency to unsettle the minds of students in regard to their own particular cases. All the candidates of the Board have indeed, either by a written or implied pledge, entered into obligations to pursue a three-year's course of studies. And yet during the present year, several have left the Seminary without even consulting the Board, professing to be called in conscience to preach the gospel of Christ. The Professors in one of our seminaries at the West lately memorialized a Synod on the subject of resisting the tendencies in candidates to shorten their time of study. It is believed that, if the Presbyteries would be more strict in this matter, the young men would consider it a settled thing to pursue their studies for three years, and would rarely think of interpreting providence to mean an escape from a full course. A thorough impression on the minds of students, of the necessity of remaining in the Seminary to the end of its session, is the surest mode of correcting the tendency complained of.

3. In the third place, a wrong is inflicted upon the congregations over whom superficially prepared ministers are placed. Our people expect to be instructed and edified by those who are set over them in the Lord. It is obvious, however, that this just hope is impaired by allowing candidates to shorten the process of their education. The requirements of our Church, even in their strictest letter, are not so high as to occupy time unnecessarily; nor do they aim at any attainments which may be dispensed with in safety. Our congregations, being composed very generally of thoughtful minds, and almost always numbering those who are well informed and educated, have a right to rely upon the authorities of the Church for well-furnished ministers. In cases where a call has been inadvertently made out to candidates, such as have been referred to, experience soon reveals imperfections of ministerial qualification which other congregations in rotation are left to the misfortune of discovering.

4. Superficial training brings into discredit the Board of Education, and the Church's entire system of benevolent aid. A large part of the candidates of our Church require assistance in the prosecution of their studies; and such assistance can only be rendered by retaining the confidence of the people in the working of the system. Every incompetent or ill-trained minister is a herald of wo to our educational operations. The amount of evil which a single man can thus inflict upon the plans of our Church, it is not easy to estimate. The suspicion, even, of laxity in our system retards its efficiency and impairs its capacity of usefulness. No good cause can be sustained in the midst of the indifference and lukewarmness produced by authenticated failures. The Board of Education, and the whole agency of our Church in providing for the training of indigent youth can only be successfully administered on the principle of a strict, unvarying, and high standard of ministerial qualification.

5. The Theological Seminaries of our Church have also a great interest in preventing unfurnished men from entering upon the ministry. They will lose also the confidence of the public just in proportion to the number of badly qualified men allowed to go forth from their walls. It is in vain for them to deny all participation in this shortening of the course of studies. The public has not the means of knowing in each case where the responsibility rests; and the odium almost always falls at last upon the institution which has had the misfortune of enrolling the names upon its catalogue.

6. The general character and prosperity of the Presbyterian Church are identified with raising, instead of lowering, the standard of ministerial requirement. If there be any one thing on which, under God, our resources for blessing the world depend, it is the character of our ministers—not merely their character for piety, which they possess in common with the ministers of other evangelical denominations, but their character for learning also. The Board would by no means magnify the latter above the former. The true and safe course is to insist upon both. This policy has been instrumental in giving to our church an influence which could have been secured in no other manner. And our present prosperity can only be perpetuated, in divine Providence, by the maintenance of strict, and even stern views of qualification for the sanctuary. The men who are the instruments of accomplishing the most for the kingdom of Christ are neither inferior in natural endowment nor in culture. The demands of the age, the increasing stature of the ministers of other denominations, and, in short, every consideration derived from the word of God and the history of the Church, in favour of a well-trained ministry, urge our Presbyteries to discourage the shortening of the theological course, to which some candidates are always prone.

In conclusion, the Board would again affirm that, whilst there are exceptions to the necessity of requiring in all cases a three-year's course of theological study, especially under the circumstances of a thorough preliminary training, and peculiar natural or spiritual endowments, it is their decided conviction that such indulgence should very rarely indeed be granted to those candidates who are assisted by the special funds of the Church, collected under the plea of a full and thorough ministerial preparation. The Board are also satisfied that the individual cases, which have called forth these remarks, are by no means clear exceptions, but that on the contrary two-thirds of the students in our Seminaries might with equal propriety turn their backs upon the instructions there offered by able professors. Further, in submitting these remarks to the Church at large, the Board have designedly avoided allusions to any Presbytery in particular, except so far as a knowledge of recent cases may exist; and a general allusion to these is the cause, and the justification, of coming before the public at all.

Praying for that "wisdom which is profitable to direct," and for that harmony which is a "good and pleasant sight to see" in Zion, the Board respectfully submit these remarks for candid condideration.

In behalf of the Board of Education,

C. Van Rensselaer, Cor. Sec.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

A VERY GREAT MISTAKE.

An elder in the Presbyterian church at ——— sent his son to a Roman Catholic school, being assured that no attempt would be made to interfere with his religious faith! The result was that the youth soon became a Papist. The father of course withdrew him from evil influences, to save him, if possible, from the contaminations of the Man of Sin! No, he did not. Not only was the young man allowed to remain at the corrupting institution, but his sister was sent to another in the neighbourhood. And what was the result? The young man became a priest of Babylon and his sister went a nun into a convent. Thus does God punish parental unfaithfulness. Oh when shall the Covenant of grace be first and uppermost in the thoughts and hearts of Christians!

HANOVER COLLEGE, INDIANA.

We wish that the friends of religion and learning would read the communication from President Thomas, which follows. It presents strong proof of the importance of the plans of the Assembly which assist our institutions through the Board of Education.

It will be seen that the College is in a flourishing condition as to numbers, that the course of religious instruction is thorough, and that active efforts are in progress for the endowment of the institution. There is, however, an interval of severe financial pressure, which requires the sympathizing liberality of the Church. This pressure has fallen upon almost every College in the land. Princeton College weathered the storm about a century ago, because the churches in Scotland supplied it with means. Hanover College needs help in its present struggle, and shall it not be granted?

We beg pardon of President Thomas for publishing those parts of the letter which refer to the self-denial of the Faculty. We consider it right, however, that the wants of the Institution should be known.

GENERAL PROSPECTS OF THE COLLEGE.

Our winter session opened encouragingly on the last Monday of September. More than one hundred and forty students are in attendance; and as a number usually arrive, especially from the South, after the Christmas recess, we shall probably have one hundred and fifty, or upwards, during the session; a considerable advance on the numbers of last winter. Of the whole number, seventy-three are professors of religion; namely, sixty-one Presbyterians, seven Methodists, two Baptists, one Lutheran, one Associate, and one Associate Reformed Presbyterian. At least forty-five of those who are connected with the Church may be confidently said to have the gospel ministry in view; and there are several others, who, we have reason to believe, will ultimately pursue the same object; to which their minds are already more or less directed. The conduct of these young disciples has, generally, been exemplary. A good degree of serious attention to personal religion has been manifested during the three months now nearly passed; and four young men have united with the church here, on examination, since the term commenced. There are others of whom we indulge encouraging hopes. Our Senior Class, twenty-two in number, includes thirteen who are seeking the ministry in home or foreign fields.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

In accordance with our plan of introducing daily Biblical instruction, (which is now fully carried out in every department of college and grammar schools) eighteen of the Senior Class are engaged in studying the Hebrew Bible; the Junior Class are studying the Evidences of Christianity in Horne; the Sophomore and Freshmen read the Greek Testament daily; and the younger portion of our students recite in the English Scriptures. So far, this feature of our course of study has, I believe, met the decided approbation of our students, professors, and non-professors; and there is abundant evidence that the addition of scriptural study, though it requires four recitations daily from every class, (i. e. three in secular and one in religious knowledge,) has in no way impeded their progress in secular learning.

FINANCIAL CONDITION.

The financial condition of the Institution, as presented in the Treasurer's last report to the Board of Trustees, is satisfactory, considering that five years ago we were without a dollar; and, in the re-establishment of a broken-down college, were impeded by the prejudices occasioned by a former failure. Our permanent funds are about forty thousand dollars; a considerable portion of which, however, is yet unproductive. About ten thousand dollars were secured last year, chiefly through the labours of our agent. Still, the whole amount, were it equally productive, would, in its present condition, uninvested for the most part, yield us less than $2500. The tuition fees have, indeed, increased; but there has also been an increase of expenditure, for the support of one additional professor. A considerable portion, too, of our permanent fund, which would otherwise have yielded us eight per cent., has been necessarily absorbed, for a time, in the purchase of land; as, I believe, I have already informed you. The result is, that not a member of the Faculty has received a cent of salary for the current year, commencing August 16th; the amount in the treasury, so far, being barely sufficient to meet claims accruing previous to that time. We try, however, to live by faith, and to live in hope: but hope deferred, you know, maketh the heart sick. We could, to be sure, even in our present circumstances, support the Institution with a reduced Faculty; but we could not, in such a condition, impart that education which the Church ought to expect from any thing called a college. Our only recourse, therefore, must be to the Board of Education; and the object of this communication is, to say, can you help us once more! and how soon can you help us? We know, from the statements published in the Record, the straitened circumstances of the Board; and we should not trouble you with a request for aid, but for the facts above presented.

Hoping that you may be able to send us an early and favourable reply,

I remain, Your fellow-labourer in Christ's gospel,

THO. E. THOMAS.

TWO FEMALE HIGH SCHOOLS IN GEORGIA.

Our brethren in Georgia are pushing forward their measures of education with a zeal which, under God, usually commands success. The Synod of Georgia, at its late meeting, resolved to establish two Female High Schools, one at Greensboro', Hopewell Presbytery, and the other at Griffin, Flint River Presbytery. The former place offered a subscription of $8000.

The following is the Constitution adopted by the Synod for the government of the High Schools.

The Boards shall consist each of eighteen Trustees, at least two-thirds of whom shall be ministers or laymen of the Presbyterian Church, and shall hold their office during their residence within convenient distance of the respective schools of which they shall be Trustees, or during the pleasure of the Synod.

The Boards shall apply for and obtain from the Legislature of the State of Georgia, as soon as practicable, charters, constituting them corporate bodies, to hold in trust for the Synod all the property of their respective schools.

It shall be the duty of the respective Boards of Trustees herein mentioned, to organize by electing each a President, Secretary, and Treasurer, at their earliest convenience—to receive and disburse all moneys belonging to their respective Institutions; to employ principals, assistants, and other officers, and to put their respective schools into operation at as early a period as in their judgment may be expedient: they shall make annual reports to the Synod of the moneys received and disbursed—of the progress and prospects of the schools, and of any vacancies, that shall have occurred in their respective Boards, and such vacancies shall be filled by the Synod.

The Synod shall at its present sessions, and annually hereafter, appoint a Board of Visitors, whose duty it shall be to visit the schools at their annual examinations, and at such other times as they may think proper.

The titles to all the property owned or held for the purposes herein mentioned, shall be vested in the Trustees and their successors in office for the use of the Synod of Georgia, subject to revert to the original donors, whenever the schools shall be abandoned by the Synod.

The Synod reserves to itself the right of sitting in judgment on all the acts and doings of the respective Boards of Trustees, and may at any time for sufficient cause, arrest, modify, or reverse them.

MILLER ACADEMY, OHIO.

This Institution, named after that venerable man and devoted friend of Christian education, the late Dr. SAMUEL MILLER, is steadily advancing. It is under the care of the Presbytery of Zanesville, and is located at Washington.

At a late meeting of the Presbytery, the Board of Trustees for the Miller Academy, at Washington, reported, that the new edifice is so far completed that two of the rooms can be occupied at the commencement of the next term. The amount thus far expended on the building is upwards of $2600; the whole cost, when the work is completed, being estimated at $3500. To liquidate the debt of $600, and to aid in completing the building, Presbytery apportioned the following amounts to the churches under its care, enjoining the officers of each to use their best endeavours to have the assessment collected, and to report at the next stated meeting, viz., the Church of Newark, $62 72; Norwich and Pleasant Hill, $133 28; Rush Creek, $68 88; Zanesville, $138 32; Mt. Zion and Hopewell, $62 52; Salt Creek, $84 00; Buffalo, $118 72; Olive, $56 00; Cross Roads, $28 00; Hebron, $12 32; Blue Rock, $38 08; Deerfield, $67 20; Uniontown, $16 80; Bristol, $42 56; Madison, $22 00; Marietta, $16 80; Centre, $7 28; Bethel, $16 80; Muskingum, $22 40; Deavertown, $4 50; Sarahsville, $6 72; Cambridge, $67 20.

The apportionments to certain churches which have already contributed to the Institution, are to be diminished by the amounts which they have paid respectively.

The Rev. James Anderson, of West Rushville, Ohio, was elected Principal of the Academy, in the place of the Rev. Samuel Mahaffey, resigned. Mr. Anderson has accepted the appointment.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

I give and devise to the Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the sum of ——— dollars, to and for the uses of the said Board of Education, and under its direction.

[When real estate, or other property, is given, let it be particularly described.]

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, DECEMBER, 1850.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Albany.
Albany 1st ch, Campbell Scholarship 75; Collection in church and Sabbath school 95	$170 00
Presbytery of Columbia.
Lexington Heights church	20 00
Presbytery of Hudson.
Bethel ch, C B Roosa	5 00
Presbytery of North River.
Marlboro ch, P V B Fowler 5; Mrs. E Fowler 1; J O Conklin 25 cents; Clements Wygant 1	7 25
Presbytery of New York.
42d st ch N Y, addl 5; Madison Avenue ch, to const Rev WM BANNARD and JNO CLARKE hon mems 100; Newtown ch L I 40	145 00
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
Pennington church	50 00
Presbytery of Raritan.
Kingwood church	75
Presbytery of Susquehanna.
Wyalusing church	5 20
Presbytery of West Jersey.
Blackwoodtown ch 6 50; Camden ch 12 46	18 96
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
Spring Garden ch, collection 13 33; Rev. Jno McDowell, D D 5, J M Johnson 5, Robt S Clark 5, Sarah Steinfelt 3, Mrs A Parker 50 cts Miss Craig 50 cents, Sam'l N Hall 1 25, John Hooker 5, Miss S G Freeman 1, in all 39 58; 2d ch, Fem Ed Soc for the Cuyler Scholarhsip 75; Central ch addl, Jas Wray 10, Thos Beaver 5, J Sibley 5; Jno C Taber 3, in all 23; 9th ch Miss Soc 25	162 58
Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.
Frankford church	12 65
Presbytery of New Castle.
New London ch Benevolent Fund	40 00
Presbytery of Carlisle.
Landisburg church	5 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Alexandria 1st church	27 50
Presbytery of New Lisbon
Brookfield ch 7; Rehoboth 7	14 00
Presbytery of Richland.
Mansfield church	14 00
Presbytery of East Hanover.
Chesterfield ch 3; Norfolk ch 108 71	111 71
Presbytery of West Hanover.
Sundry churches, through Rev Dr. Rice	60 00
Presbytery of Montgomery.
High Bridge ch 8; Mount Union ch 8	16 00
MISCELLANEOUS.
Refunded by J A A 25; A Friend in a Southern ch 10; A family missionary box 1; Rev Jacob Green, Sing Sing, N Y 4 50; Rev W H Kirk, Brownsburgh, Pa 9; Rev R Davidson, D D 3 50	53 00
Total	$938 60

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c

Scotch ch N Y, John Johnston 100, R Carter & Brothers 10, "A B C," N Y, per Rev S D Alexander 100; Madison Avenue ch, N Y, 41 97; 10th ch Philadelphia, "M" 15	$266 97

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE MISSIONS.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee on the 13th of January, the question of enlarging the force at some of the missions received particular consideration. It had often been brought to their attention, by the correspondence of the missionary brethren.

Most of the fields of labour occupied by the Board call for more men. Applications of this kind have come especially from the Lodiana mission, the Canton and the Shanghai missions, and the African mission in Corisco bay. Important places are mentioned where missionaries ought forthwith to be stationed. Important departments of missionary work need to be strengthened.

On the other hand, the Committee have reason to believe that several brethren of approved qualifications will be prepared to enter upon missionary service in the course of the next few months. And they are now asking the Committee, Will you send us forth?

It is for the churches to answer this question. They cannot be sent, unless the pecuniary means are furnished for that purpose; in other words, unless there be an advance on the contributions of last year from the churches.

But the Committee cannot doubt that the means will be provided; and they have decided on making arrangements, with a view to send out more missionaries during the coming summer, their number and designation being not yet precisely determined.

This decision will surely give great satisfaction to all who have considered the growing work of the foreign missions of the Church. Nor can we doubt that He, whose providence has opened so many wide and we hope effectual doors, and whose grace has inclined so many of our brethren to offer themselves for this self-denying work, will also incline his people to offer their gifts freely for sending them forth. Standing "between the living and the dead," in a real and deeply solemn relation, the Committee could not come to any other decision than the one above stated. We trust that our brethren in the ministry and in the Church will cordially sustain them, and then we may hope that thousands will bless God through eternity, for the onward course of our Church in this work.

RECEIPTS OF THE BOARD.

The receipts for the eight months ending January 1, 1851, were $49,990. Of this sum, $13,975 were received from legacies and miscellaneous donations, leaving the sum of $36,014 from the churches. For the same months of the preceding year, the receipts from the churches amounted to $31,777, showing an increase this year of $4237. In the department of legacies and miscellaneous donations, however, there is a falling off of $8016; so that the total receipts are less than those of the same months last year, by the sum of $3778.

The main support of this cause is derived from the collections made in the churches. This statement is therefore encouraging, as showing an advance in this department. And yet there is room for a large increase. The temporal prosperity of our country and of our church is unexampled. The calls for more labourers among the heathen were never louder. We hope and pray that our churches may greatly increase their offerings to this work of the Lord. And we would hope, also, that many private donors may be enabled and inclined to extend their aid to this cause; so that the entire sum devoted to it may be found, at the end of the financial year, to exceed that of any preceding year of the Board's operations.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Compiled from letters received at the Mission House, to January 14th, 1851.

China.—Letters from Shanghai, of September 12th, were not received in time to be acknowledged in the last Record. The missionaries were diligently seeking a suitable site for the mission premises. They found property in eligible locations to be held at very high prices; in one instance the price of a small piece of land was held at ten thousand dollars. They expected to meet with a property that would answer their purpose at a far less cost.

Africa.—Letters have been received from the mission near the Equator, dated to the 23d of October. The buildings at Corisco were finished, except the floors. The brethren had commenced their great work of preaching to the people, and expected soon to open a school. Mr. Simpson says, "We are rejoiced to hear that some of our brethren are looking this way. We are praying continually that the Lord would direct them to come. There is a wide field extending in every direction from this point. Every day, as our knowledge of it increases, it appears more immense. At two or three hours' sail from us on the north is Butanga. It is said to be very populous and ripe for missionary labour." Referring to the qualifications of missionaries to that part of Africa, Mr. Simpson says:—"We have hard work to do here. Give us strong men, men wise as serpents and harmless as doves. We assure such men that they will find free scope for the exercise of the greatest talents."

Choctaw Mission.—The Rev. A. Reid, writing on the 29th of November, says:—"The health of the Institution was never better. The number of boys present is one hundred and four. There is not one sick among them. We have much to be thankful for."

Creek Mission.—The Rev. W. H. Templeton, writing on the 19th of November, reports the school under his care as becoming fairly started. Of the scholars, 14 are studying arithmetic; 8 geography; 10 learning to read; and 15 in the letters. All are under religious instruction every day.

Papal Europe.—A letter from a highly respected correspondent in Switzerland, dated October 11th, in acknowledgment of a remittance of money, mentions also some particulars of interest in regard to other matters. The theological school at Geneva has upwards of twenty students, and "there is reason to hope it has weathered the storm of last year," [occasioned by the defection of Dr. Scherer]. Some of those who had been led astray have expressed their conviction of their error, and their desire to return. He speaks also of a visit made by two gentlemen of high standing to several of the stations in Eastern France, who had been particularly pleased with two evangelists, that are supported by funds remitted by the Board.

AFRICA: MISSION NEAR THE EQUATOR.

NARRATIVE OF EXPLORING TOURS.

A mission station to be chosen.—Difficulties of Travelling.

One of the first things that required the attention of the Rev. Messrs. Mackey and Simpson, after reaching the Gaboon, was the choice of a missionary station. Before coming to a decision on this important matter, they had been instructed to visit different places in order to obtain particular and reliable information concerning them. We have now before us Mr. Simpson's narrative of two or three journeys made with this object in view. It was written at Corisco, July 13, 1850.

Some persons may not have time to examine carefully such details as are given in this narrative. If not, it is their misfortune. We apprehend that most of our readers will consider themselves well repaid for the time spent in the perusal of the extracts, which we propose to insert from this communication.

The missionaries were visited soon after their arrival by native chiefs, who lived both north and south of the Equator, and who requested them to settle in their respective districts. Referring to this, Mr. Simpson proceeds:

We early made up our minds to visit all the places that were thus presented to us as open for mission operations, and to learn for ourselves their condition. This is the only way of procuring correct knowledge in Africa. But a tour in this part of the world is a very different thing, from what it would be in a cultivated and civilized land. We would have our dear friends at home, who desire to have us give them information of the interior parts of Africa, to remember this. We cannot here take our staff and knapsack, and travel even a few miles into the bush. Africa is a few years behind the age! The time for canals, and railroads, and coaches, has not arrived here yet. Even horses are useless in taking an inland trip, from the dense and impenetrable jungles which meet the traveller in every direction. A short distance along the coast may be accomplished in an open boat, with half a dozen natives to manage it, but for any considerable distance we must wait the opportunity of a trading or other vessel, which will touch at the points we wish to see.

Notice of a Voyage down the Coast.

In the month of April we had such an opportunity of visiting several parts of the coast south of the Gaboon, and we saw several places where a missionary would be favourably received, and where it is highly desirable that a mission should be located at an early period. [See Mr. Mackey's journal in the Foreign Missionary, October, 1850.] We could not, however, determine on a place for ourselves, until we had seen the country north of the Gaboon.

After returning from the southern coast, we remained with our friends at the Gaboon until the close of the wet season.

First Journey to the North.—Beauty of the Coast Scenery.—Singular Rock.

On the morning of the 24th of May, the commencement of our dry or winter season here, we set out in an open boat, accompanied by Brother Wilson, on a visit to the river Muni (Mooney). At an early hour we left King Glass's Town, and passed down the river with a favouring wind and tide. In an hour and three-quarters we had reached Cape Clara, fifteen miles below. We now took our course north along the coast to Cape Esterias, which is about eight miles from Clara.

Between these two capes the coast presents a variety of beautiful scenery, little streams running down to the sea, gentle elevations, and lofty bluffs resting upon large and regular tiers of rock, and all crowned with perpetual vegetation. Near Cape Clara we were shown a small rock of very curious form. It is about two feet in width, and the same in height. It rises at the water's edge, and winds its course like a snake up the beach, enters the bush, and with uniform dimensions extends for miles into the interior.

Little Corisco.—Corisco Bay.—Island of Ilavi.

In the vicinity of Cape Esterias is a cluster of towns, called Little Corisco. As we passed we saw some men on the beach, by whom we sent word to King Tambo that we were on our way to Muni, and would call to see him when we should return. Passing the cape we directed our course north-west, and entered the large and beautiful bay of Corisco. This bay is about forty miles across the mouth from Cape Esterias to Cape St. John on the north-west, and from twenty to twenty-five miles deep. It takes its name from the Portuguese word for lightning, the storms in this region, in the wet season, being accompanied by violent thunder and lightning. It embraces several small islands; the largest, which is twelve or fifteen miles in circumference, and called by the same name, is situated about twenty miles from the coast, and at about equal distances from Capes Esterias and St. John. Two fine rivers empty into this bay. The Mundah (Moondah) about twelve miles north-east of Esterias, and the Muni (Mooney) about twenty miles north of Mundah. In about four hours' sailing we came from Esterias to a small island a few miles west of the entrance of the Muni, called Ilavi (Elavey). It is a beautiful little island, and contains two or three hundred inhabitants. It has several fine little bays, in which boats can run up to the beach, even when the sea is rough.

A Portuguese Vessel under American Colours.

Sailing west and north round Ilavi, in an hour we reached the entrance of the Muni, and brought our boat to the beach at King Quaka's Town. There was a small trading vessel lying in the river, which, while we were entering, appeared under American colours. We hailed the "stars and stripes" with pleasure, and a thrill of premature delight pervaded our hearts, as we indulged the hope that we should now hear from our friends and native land. After unloading our baggage at Quaka's, we set out for the vessel. The flag was now lowered, and it proved to be Portuguese, and we had some doubts whether or not it was engaged in lawful trade. The captain and crew were evidently embarrassed as we went on board, having taken us, as they afterwards said, for English cruisers. They expressed a great deal of pleasure to find that we were missionaries, and our disappointment was just as great to find that they were Portuguese.

Reception at King Quaka's Town.

On returning to our lodgings, which consisted of a native house which the occupant had vacated solely for our use, we were surrounded by many of the neighbouring townsmen, who had come to learn what was the nature of our visit. King Quaka, after spending some time in arranging his dress, also came to see us. His head was almost white with age. His appearance was rendered different from that of the other head men who were present only by a round-about of blue cloth, which he wore over his other raiment wrong side up. He received us very kindly, and presented us, or in African phraseology, dashed us with a fowl for our supper. On being informed that we were come to see his town and country, and that our object was to find a place where to establish a mission such as that at Gaboon, he showed much pleasure, and said he was glad we were not French. The French had treated the Africans badly, but the people from big America had ever been friends to them. "But," continued he, "which way you no got rum for dash me?" We told him that we were not come to trade; we were ministers, and had come only to do the people of Africa good. Rum was bad, and, therefore, we did not bring any. With this he appeared satisfied, and at our request promised to call all the people together early in the morning to hear us preach. It was now night, and as we were fatigued we expressed a desire that the natives, who had gathered around us, should withdraw. This they at once did, leaving the house entirely to ourselves. Our beds were immediately arranged upon the bamboo frames, on which the natives sleep, and after some refreshment, we enjoyed a night of quiet rest. During the night there was a heavy rain. This was the last rain of the wet season.

Interview with the People.—Affecting Remarks.

At an early hour in the morning the people came together into the king's house to hear us. The assemblage was small, as many were absent engaged upon their farms or in cutting red wood. There were about forty or fifty men present, all of considerable age, some very old men. Many of them were chiefs of neighbouring towns. Brother Mackey explained to them a second time the object of our visit and the nature of our work. As it is a matter they are slow to comprehend, some care was taken to show them the difference between a trader and a missionary. They were shown the Bible, and told some of the great things which it taught about God, about death and eternity. They listened with great attention and profound respect, and were asked what they thought of these things, and whether they would like to have a missionary to live in their country, who would teach them these things? They answered in language which struck us with no little surprise. "We no sably (understand) these things. If missionary lived here we would know better. How can we say we no want missionary to live here? Suppose one man be far away for bush. Well, be dark night. Him be hungry, and wet, and him no sably which way for go. Him heart burn him plenty, because he be alone, and plenty bad thing live for bush. But after a while one man look him with light, take him for him house, give him eat, give him drink, give him fire, then him heart be plenty glad. That be all the same as we. We live in the bush, in the dark. We no sably God's book. Missionary come for do we good. We be glad very much. That be the good, for we be no fit for believe them thing. Suppose them time we look you come, then we believe"—Alluding to our coming to live among them.

The River Muni.—Forty Towns in fifteen miles.

After visiting some of the neighbouring towns, we entered our boat, and commenced ascending the river. The course of the river for ten or fifteen miles is nearly north-east. It is from two to three miles in width, has a deep channel, and is navigable for vessels of common size for, perhaps, thirty miles. The borders are clothed with mangrove, though in many places on both sides there are high banks, covered with tall trees. On these spots the natives have placed their towns, of which, in the space of fifteen miles, we counted about twenty on each side. We ascended about thirty miles. On an island in the middle of the river we found a town containing perhaps one hundred inhabitants, where we stopped and preached. An Albino was our interpreter here. We then returned a few miles to a cluster of towns, where we remained during the following day, which was the Sabbath.

Brilliant Evening View.—Lofty Mountains as far as the eye could reach.

As we ascended the bank on which these towns were situated, the sun was just sinking in the western wave. The sky, which during the day had been covered with clouds, was now perfectly clear, and at once a prospect burst upon our view, which gave us entirely new ideas of the country in which we stood. To the east and north, as far as the eye could reach, rose a lofty and unbroken chain of mountains, in some places forming a regular line upon the horizon, in others shooting to the clouds in broken and abrupt peaks.

The river at our feet was really grand. Bordered with the luxuriant mangrove, in the rear of which arose a larger and nobler vegetation, it seemed to be imbedded in a valley of perpetual verdure.

A Wish to Visit the Interior.—Native Accounts.

A desire to visit the head waters of the river, and to penetrate further towards the mountains than we had done, filled our minds. Every inquiry answered by the natives where we were, increased this desire. The region toward the mountain was said to be very populous and productive. The trees, and animals, and birds, &c., were very different from those found on the coast. There were to be seen droves of elephants, various tribes of monkeys, huge pelicans, and bush cats. We were told also that we could approach in our boat to the very base of the mountain, and row along it for a great distance. A growing belief that the interior regions of this country are not so unhealthy as the parts adjacent to the coast, caused us to wish still more to extend our journey to the mountains, but circumstances would not allow us to do so then. It was necessary for us to return to the Gaboon after Sabbath.

Sabbath-day Services.—A Surly Savage and his Prisoner.

On Sabbath morning we preached to the people of the towns where we had lodged, then leaving them we entered a canal and descended the river a mile or two and preached in another town. From this we proceeded to another town some distance further, intending to preach, but an occurrence took place which prevented us. The chief, who knew of our coming beforehand, received us very coldly. We informed him of our desire to preach to his people, but his thoughts seemed to be occupied so much about another matter that he gave but little heed to us. Our attention was attracted to a poor prisoner, whom he had confined in one corner of his house. He was a fine looking young man, and his mild but suffering countenance presented an interesting contrast to the surly savage visage of the chief who kept him. His feet were thrust through a log of wood, which had a hole made in it for that purpose, and were fastened with pins, the whole weight of the wood resting upon the feet and ankles. His hands were in a similar manner fastened into a board.

This is what they call "being in chago." It was however a very mild form of that punishment. In some cases they are known to stretch the arms of the criminal and fasten them in an extended position to a board. In this way he cannot help himself, and while his oppressors give him a small quantity of food to preserve his life, he is left to become a prey to swarms of ants, which literally devour him.

The Interpreter seized and bound.—African Justice.—Another man seized.

While contemplating this victim of savage justice, before we were aware, four stout natives called in by the chief, seized our interpreter, and were in the act of binding his hands. For a considerable time we were in suspense as to the cause of this procedure. On inquiring, the only answer we could get was the fierce looks of the chief. The boy said he had done nothing. At last we learned that it was a "palaver," on account of a Gaboon man, whom the chief said owed him for a tooth of ivory, and this was the manner he took of securing his pay. It was in vain that we expostulated with him. This was African justice. He was too intent upon securing his own rights to hear our plea. All we succeeded in accomplishing was an exchange for another boy, who was less serviceable to us, and whom we left behind us as a captive. On returning to the towns where we had lodged, we made complaint to the people there, hoping that they would interfere and restore to us our boy; but instead of doing this, on the ground of another palaver with Gaboon men, they also seized another of our boys. Our crew was thus reduced one third, and we concluded that the best thing we could do would be to set sail, and place ourselves beyond the reach of any further maltreatment. Among the Mpongwe people, [Gaboon people], although the method of administering justice is the same, yet they regard it as a great dishonour to take a man prisoner from the boat of a missionary. We have since heard that the people at the entrance of the river were displeased with their neighbours for treating us thus, and we hope that nothing of the kind will occur again.

Departure from the Muni.—Ilavi in an Uproar.—Sad Reflections.

We soon found ourselves out upon the bosom of the placid stream. The sun had just set before us, while the rising moon in full brightness was shedding its mild rays upon the forest and the river behind us, and notwithstanding our late harassment, we remembered that it was the Sabbath, and that it was our duty to cast all our care upon him who hath cared for us, and rest in the Lord. After passing out of the river, and after some hard rowing, we run our boat into the island of Ilavi, which we reached about one o'clock, A. M.

At this late hour we found the whole island in an uproar. They were drinking rum, with which they had lately been supplied by a trader. As we approached the house of Abapi, the principal chief, we heard the sound of voices singing, talking, groaning, and shouting in a most hideous manner. When the door was opened, we seemed to realize our youthful conception of standing at the mouth of the pit of darkness. The surrounding atmosphere was filled with the fumes of filth and rum. Heathenism at its worst, when unaided by the vices of civilized and Christian lands, is nothing to this. Here was an island as beautiful as any of the ocean, arrayed in all the verdure of a luxuriant tropical vegetation. Its inhabitants are naturally of a quiet and peaceful spirit. But a ship from a Christian city comes, and pours in her puncheons of maddening rum amongst them, and these children of nature, accustomed to think every thing must be good which the white man makes, become a thoughtless prey to the misery of drunkenness.

Farther incidents at Ilavi.—The Chief anxious to have a Missionary on his Island.

Abapi was somewhat embarrassed at being caught in such a plight by missionaries, and attempted to make some apology. Brother Wilson told him he could not converse with him then, as he was intoxicated, but we would be ready to talk to the people in the morning. With this they were pleased; the natives soon dispersed from the house, and we were put in possession of a large and comfortable African room, where we slept in quietness during the remainder of the night. Early the next morning, when we had scarcely awaked from our sleep, we were aroused by a man calling upon us to see about the house he said we were going to build at Ilavi, and wishing to be engaged to procure bamboo, &c. He was dismissed by telling him that we were not yet ready to make "palaver for house side," that is, to talk concerning building a house. It was some relief to find all the islanders sober this morning, and also to know that they would not be intoxicated again perhaps for many days; not until another vessel should bring them rum. We preached to the people at an early hour, and had a large congregation. We have been much pleased with the disposition of these people since our first visit, and we hope to be the means of doing them good. The king who was alive at our first visit has since died. He was a very aged man, and after we had preached to them, he made us write a promise, and leave it with him, on paper, that we would do what we could to send them a missionary from America. Abapi will probably be made king. He acknowledges that rum hurts him, but he says, "Me be no fit for stop drink him, all same them men stop drink him what live for Gaboon. Suppose Mr. Wilson or tother missionary came to Ilavi, and tell we people them thing every Sunday, then I think me no more drink rum."

A Missionary wanted at Little Corisco.—Notice of the Jesuit Mission.—Return to the Gaboon.

We here procured two men to take the place of the two we had left captive in the Muni, and set sail for the Gaboon. Owing to the nature of the winds, it requires two days to make the Gaboon in the dry season. The first night we put in at Little Corisco, at Tambo's, where we had promised to stop when coming up. There is here a Roman Catholic Mission. When the French first took possession of the Gaboon, a Protestant missionary from Germany had attempted to settle here, but was prohibited by the French, and a mission of the Jesuit order was established. Tambo wished us very much to come and locate in his country. Brother Wilson had at one time given him a "book," promising that he would use his best endeavours to procure him a missionary from America. (A book is any scrap of paper on which something has been written.) He was told that we could not stay here, but that we had a favourable opinion of the country around Muni, and wished to visit it again, and would stop in his town as we passed, and preach to his people. The Jesuit Mission is not flourishing. Everything around it wears a dreary and ascetic look. The chapel, a huge bamboo building, is leaning almost to the ground. It is frequented during service by a few boys who have learned to repeat Latin prayer and chants.

Turning our little prow again for the Gaboon, we reached our homes at Baroka about three o'clock, P. M. Our health we thought was improved by the trip, and the protection of a kind Providence exercised toward us all demand our profoundest gratitude and praise.

Reasons for settling on Corisco or Ilavi.—Another Visit to the Muni projected.

After our return from the Muni, we had several visits from the chiefs of Corisco island and Ilavi, who expressed a strong desire that we should locate amongst them. We were favourably disposed towards locating in this region in preference to any place on the southern coast, because the slave trade had been discontinued, and the inhabitants, at least of the islands, were in a higher state of preparation for missionary operations. Here also the circumstances would meet the main points of our instructions received from the Board. It was at a sufficient distance from the American station at Gaboon; and here were two large rivers of considerable commercial importance extending into the interior. It appeared to be as populous as any other coast district; and, should we settle upon Ilavi or Corisco, we might have a very healthy location. From the accounts of natives, the mountains which we had seen were easily reached. Here in time might be located a healthy station, for those who laboured on the coast to retire for a season, and recruit from their labours. From all these considerations, together with the advice of our brethren at the Gaboon, we concluded to make another trip to the islands of Corisco Bay and the Muni, and if possible, also to ascend the main branch of the Muni to the mountains.

(To be continued.)

INDIA: ALLAHABAD MISSION.

LETTERS ON MOHAMMEDANISM.—NO. V.

"Science falsely so called."

It is a common remark, amongst those who have become acquainted with Mohammedan countries, that their religion seems to contain enough of truth, (stolen from the Scriptures, and from Jewish and Christian traditions,) to keep them above absolute barbarism; but not enough to raise them up to real civilization. They seem capable of making progress in the arts and refinements of civilization up to a certain point; and there they inevitably stop. In their books of science, philosophy, history, and fiction, we find the same ideas advanced now as were prevalent hundreds of years ago; their poetry has undergone no change within the same period worth mentioning; their governments, except where acted upon by irresistible outward pressure, exhibit the same phase of despotism which they originally assumed; oppression may produce rebellion, but when the obnoxious ruler is removed, the people, as a matter of course, allow a new ruler to assume the same prerogatives and powers, which had just been so much abused; there are no such things as principles in their policy; there is no growth or progress of ideas;—and, accordingly, society remains unchanged. It would be highly amusing to trace the progress of science amongst them, if time and space permitted it. But I have inadvertently used an improper word—the progress of science cannot be found in their history, except the downward progress of it. It seems that when the Musalman armies overran so large a part of the world, they became acquainted with Grecian, Assyrian and Egyptian science; they cultivated it with some success; they set up colleges, which gained a reputation. But all this seems to have been only the effect of a strange and sudden impulse; the only real knowledge which the Musalmans now have was then gained; they have lost many parts of that which was then known; and they have not the ability to add new facts to that slender stock of knowledge, so as to make a homogeneous whole, but tack them on after the manner of excrescences. Thus their only knowledge of geography is derived from the time of the Arab conquest; and the countries that they have since heard of they are obliged to place on the map by guess. They have heard of America, and that it is in the west; but we can find no trace of it in their maps, lately published at Luknow, except as mixed up with Western Africa. I have recently sent a faithful copy of a map of the world, to the Mission Rooms at New York. If a skeleton engraving of that map could be printed with this letter, it would say to my readers more than all my words say. Nothing but a sight of it can show how egregiously erroneous it is, and not erroneous merely; its very foundation is error—the world, though called a globe, is treated as a circular plain—and every part of the map is as bad as that. Seven zones are mentioned, but they are all put down as north of the equator, which itself is not put in the centre of the plain, but far towards the South. The book from which it was copied, was published in the very centre of Musalman influence in India, where the learned men are deemed by all Musalmans to know whatever is to be known, and to whose opinions the greatest deference is paid by all classes. It was published very recently. Its statements on all subjects are made with that oracular air, which only learned ignorance is able to assume.

When we attempt to argue with the Musalmans respecting the authenticity of the New Testament, we find them so totally ignorant of all true history, and so absolutely filled with fables, that no common ground, on which to stand, can be found between us. They treat all the Biblical learning of Europe as one stupendous fabrication; they toss aside all Greek historians as beneath notice; they gravely call on us to produce the gospel in the original language, which, when we do, they say it is not the true; for if it were they should have heard of it before now. In short, their only ideas of history are gathered from such sources as the Mohammedan traditions, and admit of no increase.

Their logic is acute, critical, and often ingenious; but it is just such as prevailed in Europe before the era of Lord Bacon. And because we do not resort to the same modes of reasoning with themselves, and attempt to introduce a better system, they have it currently reported amongst themselves, and believed too, that we have no knowledge of any system of logic. On this account they hold themselves as immeasurably superior to us in real learning; they say they can well afford to grant that we are superior to them in physical science, such as the making of steam-engines and watches; because this only shows us to be a superior kind of mechanics; while, as to all that relates to the mind and the soul, they only are learned. Their learned men assume a tone of superiority towards us, that is sometimes amusing, and sometimes "almost too much for flesh and blood to bear." It is as if a monastery of monks of the middle ages were fully resuscitated, with all their Aristotle, and their pert questions and meaningless distinctions; and were to treat all the discoveries of modern science, and all the mental operations of modern logicians as an immense mass of imposture and ignorance. In short the Mohammedans are standing where they did five centuries ago, having the same learning, the same ideas, the same superstitions; and there they will stand, I fear, till some rude shock awakens them to a sense of their true position, relatively, to the rest of the world.

It is proper here to mention their opinion of modern occurrences. This is not a matter of science, though it bears a strong resemblance to it. They do not believe that the Turkish Empire stands so between the powers of Europe that only their mutual jealousy preserves it from subjugation. When we tell them so, they tell us, (if they dare—which often they do not,) that all this is an English lie—that the fact is, that the existence of England, France, and Austria is dependent on the Sultan's goodwill, which is purchased by an annual tribute of horses and broadcloths on the part of England—what the other European powers pay I have not heard, "something very like"—the people here tell me. They say that the English ambassador creeps towards the throne of the Sultan, and acknowledges his own sovereign to be the Sultan's slave; and thus obtains the Sultan's gracious permission to trade, on condition that English goods shall pay double the duty imposed on the productions of the faithful. Many of them fancy that there is a great and flourishing kingdom of Musalmans in Andalusia. They are but just beginning to believe that broadcloth is really made by Englishmen, the prevailing belief till lately having been, that a race of beings with the heads of horses, (a Centaur reversed,) living in some lone island, which the English only knew how to find, make it. They can believe any marvellous lie that can be made; but the simple truth seems to find no place of lodgement in them—they have no more appetite for it than a tiger has for grass.

I was greatly amused once by the floundering of a Mohammedan, who had received an English education. He brought forward the old objection to the gospel, that it could not be authentic, because the Caliph Omar burned up all the copies of it in the Alexandrian Library. Then I made him give me a general account of Rome, of Constantinople, of the countries of Western Europe, &c., in that age, how far Christianity had spread, to all which he gave tolerably correct answers. Then I asked him, "And is it possible that you can know all this, and yet have the impudence to tell me that all these Christian cities had no copy of the gospel among them; and that the three which you say Omar burned, were the only copies in the world?" He answered me, "Our people say so." "Your people say so! Do you not teach them better?" He replied, "No sir; nor can I. If I were to do so, they would not believe me; but would say I had become a Christian, and stop eating, drinking, and smoking with me." Then he said, "Well, let it be determined that Omar did not burn every existing copy of the Gospels—the next thing we say is, that you have corrupted your books; that is, that the Christians cut out and put in what they pleased, in order to rebut the claims and assertions of Mohammed." I answered, that he knew very well how that was impossible, when copies of the book were scattered all over Europe and Asia, and translations, still known and used, were in use two hundred years before Mohammed. I reminded him that of these facts he was fully aware. He said he must deny them—not that he could say we could not prove them—but that he could not admit them and remain a Mohammedan; yet a Mohammedan he must and would remain.

It will appear from the story of this young man, that those who exercise religious influence amongst the Musalmans, have the best of reasons for keeping out of view all right knowledge; that is, they have the worst of reasons for it—it is essential to the preservation of their "Diana." But I would not be understood as putting them all down as impudent witting hypocrites: on the contrary, I believe they have so entire a conviction of the truth of their religion—it presents such overpowering attractions to their natural hearts—that they cannot believe what is adverse to it. They lie so easily, too, in defence of their religion—they justify lying, for an end, supposed to be good, so completely that they coolly set us down to be liars too. They tell us so; and seem surprised that we resent the imputation. They see nothing opprobrious in it. So our evidence as to any fact goes no farther with them than they are conscious their own ought to go: that is, it is rejected as a lie, a pious fraud, if it do not tally with what they believed before. They are such universal liars, that, as far as their experience of mankind goes, they have a very well-founded distrust of all human testimony. If they did not consider us liars for our religion's sake, they would think us fools, for not resorting to so obvious, cheap, and easy a way of promoting the true faith.

When I began this letter I meant to have said more about the mental and moral science of the Mohammedans; but I have suffered myself to pass lightly over it. It is too late to remedy it now; for these letters must be written currente calamo, if written at all, in the midst of my many duties.

With one remark more I shall close. The state of the Mohammedan mind as to education in India, may be taken, to a great extent, as an index of the same thing in all the countries of the Islam, east of Turkey; for there is sufficient inter-communication to secure a great degree of uniformity of ideas. If any real progress were made in learning in Persia, we should find an inkling of it here. J. W.

Allahabad, 26th August, 1850.

INDIA: FURRUKHABAD MISSION.

"THE HEATHEN HAVE NO REST."

The Rev. J. L. Scott, writing at Futtehgurh, September 17, 1850, sends the following narrative. It is a painfully interesting one; showing particularly that even the best of the heathen can find no rest in their own religious observances. The prayers of Christians should be offered continually, and all other proper means used, that they may be led to Jesus, in whom alone they can find true rest and peace. Mr. Scott says:

"I send you herewith an account of a man named Gunga-Din, who has lately joined himself to us, and is now with us as an inquirer. It is partly a translation from an account of himself which he drew up at my request, and partly written down from his own mouth. I believe it to be substantially true. The man has evidently been a great traveller, and has kept his eyes open as he went along. He has also an extensive knowledge, as his account implies, of the various sects in Hindustán, and in regard to the tract of which he speaks, he has it at his tongue's end, and has repeated a good deal of it to me. It does not appear that he can have any mercenary motive in coming to us. His father is rather a rich man, and his brother-in-law in the city of Furrukhabad is worth not less than forty thousand rupees. But he says he wants none of their money. He only wants salvation. Time will show what is to be the result. We rejoice with trembling."

Narrative of Gunga-Din.

I was born at Sháhabad, a city about thirty miles from Futtehgurh, and am now twenty-two years old. My father is a merchant of that place, and is of the baniya cast. He attends to the duties of religion like his neighbours, but does not give himself any further concern about it, being immersed in the cares of the world. Eight years ago, one of my relations, who is a fakír, came to live with my father. This man taught me to read, and instructed me in the doctrines of Rámа Mundi. Some time after he declared his purpose of going on a pilgrimage to Dwárika, which is in the extreme west of India, about nine hundred miles from Sháhabad. As I had a great desire to see the world, I begged my father to allow me to accompany him, and permission being granted, I bound up in a bag my money for the way, and set out with my friend the fakír. After travelling many days, we at last arrived at Dwárika, and I there worshipped at eighty-four shrines, and had an image of the Disc and throne of Krishen, and two other marks, imprinted on my arm. Thence I set out on a pilgrimage to Seth-Badrameshwar, which is in the south of India, opposite Ceylon, and about one thousand five hundred miles from Dwárika. On the way I visited fifty-five shrines, and worshipped at them all. I then set out for Badrinath, which is in the Himmalaya mountains, at the extreme north of India, and by the way I travelled not less than three thousand miles from Seth-Badhrameshwar. On the way I visited Jaggernath, and worshipped at forty-five shrines. From Jaggernath to Badrinath I worshipped at forty-two shrines. I have visited all the holy places of India. Besides those I have mentioned, I have been at Benares, Gaya, Allahabad Muttra, Hurdwar, and many others. From Badrinath I returned home, and said in my heart, as also to my friends, all this is false. These gods are nothing but stone and water.

After all these pilgrimages, I tried many other ways of obtaining salvation, for I had begun to be troubled in my mind. I went to the Satnamies, to the 'Abápanthies, to the Parnámies, to the Bhikhampanthies, to the Anantpanthies, to the Rámsánchies, to the Udhárpanthies, and to the Dodapanthies. I joined myself to all these, and inquired of them the way of salvation, but I could find nothing that gave me any comfort. All was vanity. After this I connected myself with the Kabírpanthies, and remained with them many days, examining their religion.

Nearly two years ago, when I was in Sháhjehánpore, some one came to me and said that a pádrí sáhib (Missionary) had come, and was distributing books. I said to my friend with whom I was staying, let us go and get a Prem Sagur, (a story book of Krishn of which the Hindus are very fond). We accordingly went and asked for this book. The padri sahib told us he had none of this kind, but he gave, both to me and my friend, a tract, entitled "A Discourse on the Divine Revelation," and told us to read it carefully. So we took the little books and began to peruse them, but when my friend saw what it was, and how it was calculated to tear down the Hindu religion, he took it and threw it into the river. He then told me to do the same. I replied that he might do what he pleased with his book, but I would not part with mine. He then said he would take it from me. If you do, said I, I will destroy all your Hindu books, and will then go to the padri sahib and get more. So he let me alone. I read the tract many times, until I had committed nearly the whole of it to memory, and I also thought much about what it contained, and was troubled. Sometime after this I came to Futtehgurh, and as I was walking along the bázár, I saw a man [Madári, one of our catechists] preaching to the people, and distributing books. The thought immediately occurred to me that this was the very thing of which my book told me. I therefore went up and made his acquaintance, and had a long talk with him. Madari explained to me many things which my book contained, and conversed with me much about the way of salvation.

I went to him every day for some time. He also took me to one of the missionaries, who explained to me the doctrine of Christ, and I was much pleased with it. But when I returned to my friends, and told them my intentions, they dissuaded me very much from becoming a Christian. They told me that I would be ruined; that the missionaries would hurt me, and treat me very badly, and that I must not think of being a Christian. So I gave up the idea for a time, and went to Lucknow, to see if I could find out any great and learned pundit, who could remove my doubts, and give me comfort. But I found none. Then I came to Cawnpore, and went about among the Kabirpanthies, but I was more troubled than ever. At last I said to myself, what is the use of trying any more. I have wandered over Hindustán, and have found nothing but lies. These religions are all false. I will forsake them, and become a Christian. With this purpose I came back to Futtehgurh, and now I am a Christian. The padri sahib instructs me every day, and now I feel that I have found a resting-place. I know that the Christian religion is true, and I have made up my mind to embrace it. I know from experience that all others are false, and are but the productions of the pride and folly of men.

CHOCTAW MISSION.

REPORT OF SPENCER ACADEMY.

Its Condition for the year ending July 12, 1850.

The following Report was made by the Rev. A. Reid, superintendent of the Spencer Academy, and presented to the Trustees of that Institution. We take this document from a newspaper, printed partly in Choctaw and partly in English..

Gentlemen: It is with great pleasure I present to you the following report of the condition of Spencer Academy, for the year ending July 12th, 1850. With the history and condition of the Institution up to the time of my connection with it you are sufficiently familiar.

The last session commenced on the 3d of October, and closed on the 12th of July. The whole number of scholars connected with the Institution during the session was 124. Of this number 113 were on the appropriation, and 11 were boarders. The largest number present at one time was 106. On the last day of the session 100 scholars were present, although but 96 passed examination. From this statement it appears that the number of scholars in attendance last session was larger than at any former period since the commencement of the Institution.

The scholars were divided into three classes or schools. The new boys to the number of about thirty were placed under the care of Miss Dutcher. The rest were equally divided between the Rev. C. R. Gregory and the Rev. A. J. Graham. The teachers had the entire and exclusive charge of their own boys, both in and out of school. We had thus three small schools and three small families, instead of one large school and one large family. In this way we sought to secure to our pupils those benefits, which are supposed by some to belong exclusively to small schools, without incurring the loss of those which do unquestionably belong to well conducted large Institutions, such as the founders of Spencer Academy designed it to be.

The branches of study considered essential to a good English education, have been taught in the schools, viz. Spelling, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, Geography, Grammar, History, Natural Philosophy, English composition and Vocal Music. The interest manifested by our pupils in their studies, and the progress which they made, exceeded our most sanguine expectations. In witnessing the improvement of our pupils, the Superintendent and Teachers have been amply rewarded for all their toils and pains.

The knowledge which maketh wise unto salvation—confessedly the most important of all knowledge—we have endeavoured to communicate largely. The Holy Bible has been read and studied daily. Large portions of Scripture have been accurately committed to memory by every scholar able to read. We confidently hope that the good seed thus sown in the tender minds of our beloved boys, will in due time bring forth abundantly the fruits of virtue and religion.

The utmost pains were taken to preserve health and prevent sickness. Personal cleanliness was carefully attended to. Plenty of plain substantial food was furnished. Comfortable sitting-rooms were provided. The sleeping-rooms were kept clean, cool and thoroughly ventilated. I am happy to say we were well repaid for all our pains. Not one of our boys died during the year. Not one was compelled to leave school on account of sickness. Not one cent was paid for medical attendance.

In all this we desire distinctly and gratefully to acknowledge the merciful kindness of the Lord. An impression has existed to a considerable extent that Spencer is an unhealthy place. Nothing can be further from the truth than this. The soil about Spencer is too sterile to be sickly. In a family so large as is that of Spencer Academy, some sickness and some deaths must be expected; sometimes much sickness and many deaths. Should then sickness and death visit our family next session, or any succeeding session, it will not be because the situation of Spencer is unhealthy above other places, but because sickness and death are the inheritance of man in climes the most favourable and in situations the most salubrious.

The formation of industrial habits by our pupils we deem of the utmost importance to their future welfare and happiness. If they do not form habits of industry when they are young, they will never form them. We have therefore required the boys to work between two and three hours every day. I am expecting in a few weeks a gentleman to take charge of the working department. He intends bringing with him two or three young men to assist him. When he comes, I confidently hope this important department will be carried on with an efficiency hitherto unknown in the history of the Institution. Neither labour nor expense will be spared in teaching the boys to work. Unless the rising generation are taught to work, the education which they receive at the schools will prove to them a curse instead of a blessing.

We have a supply of clothing on hand for one year. This session we shall clothe the boys as heretofore. Not one-third of our boys would be properly clothed, if it was left to their parents to clothe them.

Since the examination, two of our scholars, Thomas Bond and David Folsom, have gone to prosecute their studies at Centre College, Danville, Kentucky. They were as well prepared for entering College as young men usually are. We hope that they will make rapid progress in their studies, and after completing their education that they will return an honour and a blessing to their people.

Since the close of last session, God, in his most holy and wise Providence, has taken from us two of our beloved brethren, the Rev. A. J. Graham and the Rev. C. R. Gregory; the former by death, the latter in consequence of physical debility. In the removal of these dear brethren the Institution seems to have met with an irreparable loss, but the loss is only seeming, not real. The Lord, who is wise in counsel and wonderful in working, is able to make the mysterious providence, which has deprived us of teachers of whom such high hopes were entertained, a real and permanent blessing to the Institution. We are persuaded that the Lord will supply the vacancies which his own hand has made. Already, I am happy to say, the Rev. H. Balentine is on his way from the Creek Nation to take Mr. Graham's place. I expect to have the charge of one of the schools myself until a teacher arrives to take Mr. Gregory's place.

Through you, gentlemen, permit me to assure the parents and friends of our beloved charge that everything in our power will be done to preserve the health and lives of our children whilst connected with this Institution. I am gentlemen, yours truly,

A. Reid, Sup't. S. A.

GENEVA.

NOTICES OF THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

College of Evangelical Theology.

We find the following interesting accounts in a letter of the Rev. Dr. D'Aubigné, of October 8, 1850, published in an English journal.

Since my return, we have resumed our annual labours in the College of Evangelical Theology. The opening of the session took place on October the 2d. The circumstances in which the institution is at present placed gave special interest to the occasion, and led many friends to be present. As President, I reminded them how, at this time, German science and German theology, with its recent conclusions, opposed themselves to all the arguments in favour of the Divine authority and inspiration of the Scriptures. I proposed, therefore, to bring before them the testimony of a learned man, who may be considered a most worthy representative of that theology, and to show the Christian biblicism of Neander, as exemplified in the expressions of that eminent Christian. Neander, far from denying the inspiration of the Bible, insisted on the necessity of recognising two agents or elements in the sacred Scriptures—God and man. Instead, also, of denying the authority of the Bible, he was desirous that the minister should be entirely eclipsed, while the Word of God, and its Divine authority, should alone be placed in a prominent point of view. But I will not longer detain you with a discourse which may, perhaps, be published.

Many of the brethren present also spoke, and I will give you a few of their thoughts. "We are," said Professor Pilet, "sometimes hurried away by certain books, we find in them more knowledge than we ourselves possess, and when they affirm anything, we resemble a soldier who receives a blow from a weapon which stuns him." . . M. Pilet expressed his gratitude to God, that he could not remember such a circumstance befalling him during his early studies. The attacks made against the truth, when he was a student, had only served to deprive him of all confidence in the heterodox. They thus carried with them their own remedy.

Dr. Gaussen spoke as follows:—"In all ages the enemy has endeavoured to hinder the work of the Lord. We have already seen three engagements, and twice the enemy has been confounded, and compelled to change his tactics. Sixty years since, Christianity scarcely showed any signs of life, when it had to sustain the attacks of the encyclopædists. That war ceased, but another succeeded. An attempt was made to overthrow the counsel of God, to rob the Word of God of that great mystery—the Divinity of Jesus Christ. But the truth was maintained, and testimony borne to it with perseverance, till the war ceased. We are now entered on another campaign. Persons speak of the Christian life, and they make it to consist in attacking the authority and inspiration of the Word, which is the sole principle of life. You must, then, prepare yourselves for this new assault, although you may be but a small number. It is by means of a few that the Lord is pleased to work. Did you but know what Socinianism was in Geneva, thirty years ago, you would be astonished at what God has done. And what he has done he will do again, in the new struggle which has already commenced."

Dr. Malan added these few words:—"Above all things else, cultivate piety. We live at Geneva amongst men of piety, but it is all subjective; and they imagine that to be all that is necessary. They put their ideas and their words in the place of the Divine Word. But this Word must dwell in you, before it can act by you."

Messrs. de St. George, de Watteville and Fayy-Alléan also spoke, and then the professors and the students separated, strengthened by prayer, and filled with confidence in God, ready for the new duties which await them. It is true that some friends without seem to be rather cold. According to the report, which is just published, the expenses for the past year have amounted to 25,783 francs, and the receipts to no more than 9943. But the directors are free from anxiety, and full of confidence in Him to whom all the gold belongs. Immediately after the meeting the course of study was recommenced.

Rectification of an Error respecting Geneva.

The topic next adverted to by Dr. D'Aubigné is one of no ordinary interest.

I will not close this long letter without giving you one word respecting an article on Geneva, which has appeared in the London Watchman, and has been copied in the Christian Times of September 31st, as well perhaps as in other papers. The impression conveyed by that article seems to be, that Geneva is turning Papist. I hope that such an idea is not entertained by the people of Great Britain. I see quite another opinion is expressed by an excellent Scotch paper, entitled the Witness, for September 28th. It is the demolition of our ramparts, which has given to the correspondent of the Watchman the idea that we are wishing to destroy the Geneva of the Reformation. I do not perceive that any relation exists between a half-moon or a glacis, and justification by faith! I believe that the Genevese Government intended, after having pulled down the fortifications, to commence anew, and to erect more pleasant quarters. About a month since I traversed the ground recently levelled, with the Rev. R. Burgess, rector of Chelsea, the excellent advocate of the interests of Protestantism on the Continent, and his friend, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird. Mr. Burgess, who long resided at Geneva, thinks that the demolition accomplished is a great improvement, and that Geneva will derive great advantage from it. Now, no one surely will accuse Mr. Burgess of any leaning towards popery. The following Sunday, I heard the Bishop of London preach in the chapel of the hospital, who announced, in his sermon, that the Genevese Government had granted a part of the ground occupied by the fortifications as the site of an English Protestant chapel. In fact, the journal for to-day (Oct. 8th), informs us, that amongst the laws which are to be kept continually before the Grand Council, by the Council of State, is one for the foundation of a chapel in which worship shall be conducted in English, at Geneva; and another for the donation of a piece of ground for the building of an English chapel. This does not look like favouring popery, for the English ministers whom we have amongst us are not Tractarians, such as you have unhappily in England, but good, evangelical preachers.

Geneva still a Centre of Christian Influence—The source of all true Strength.

. . . I firmly believe that Geneva is still one of the most important centres of influences for the extension of Christianity on the Continent, if not the most so. It is true, that all Protestant political institutions are being shaken at Geneva, as they are in England, but is it by means of political institutions that the kingdom is to triumph which is not of this world? There is, in other respects, a great difference between the state of Geneva and that of England. Amongst us, we do not hear of conversions from Protestantism to Catholicism, unless it be about once in four or five years; but we have, on the contrary, frequent conversions from Catholicism to evangelical Christianity. Some time past we were receiving at the Lord's supper as many as ten Roman Catholics each month. That number has lately decreased, but we still have many conversions taking place amongst us.

It is my own conviction, that at the present important period on which we have entered, evangelical truth can no longer be maintained, as formerly, by a human arm, and by the support of the State, by fortifications and cannon—but by means of the truth; by the power of the Word, and of the Holy Spirit; by the holiness and activity of Christians, and by the arm of the Lord. We must say now, as David did to Goliath, "I come not against thee with the sword, but in the name of the Most High God." The true church of God must be multiplied and strengthened, both in your great England and our little Geneva, and then we shall have nothing to fear from the Pope. This is what I said to the Bishop of London, when he was anxious to learn the state of religion here. I will conclude what I have to say on this subject by quoting a few words, which I added after reporting the words of Dr. Gutzlaff, when speaking as President of the Société Evangélique of Geneva:—"There is a great change going on among us, and in all parts of the old world. This is an important crisis. If we would that Geneva should still be a city on the top of a mountain which cannot be hid, we must be increasingly devoted to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ. Our ramparts may be demolished, but let the standard of Christ be elevated more and more courageously amongst us, that souls may be converted, and Christians baptised again with the baptism of the Holy Spirit—that Christian life may be revived in us, and Geneva become to future ages what she has been during those which are past."—Evangelical Christendom, November, 1850.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN DECEMBER, 1850.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Ballston Spa ch $13 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Mentz 1st ch 19 50, Ladies' Society 10, Sab Sch 2 50 32 00

Pby of Wyoming.—Moscow ch 7; Portageville ch 13 16 20 16

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Florida ch mo con coll's 11; Miss Eunice Sayer 1; Centreville ch 9; Deer Park ch mo con coll's 10 25; West Town ch 42 92; Hamptonburg ch mo con 10 84 17

Pby of North River.—Rondout ch Sab Sch to ed Walter Crane Phillips and Martha H Wurtz 12 50; Matteawan ch Dew Drop Soc to ed Margaret Smith Davie 15; Marlboro' ch mo con coll's at West Neighborhood 4 75, Mrs E Velie 1, Peter V B Fowler 10, J O Conklin 1, Thos D Bloomer 1, Deborah A Du Bois 1, Clements Wygant 1, Mrs E Meley 50 cts, Mrs E Cosman 1 48 75

Pby of Bedford.—South Salem ch "A Widow and daughter," (proceeds of Jewelry,) 1 54; Croton Falls ch mo con 4; North Salem ch mo con 5 50 — 11 04

Pby of Long Island.—Southampton ch Mrs Samuel Huntting in part to ed Hugh N Wilson 12, Sab Sch for Ningpo school 14 41, Sab Sch among the Shinecoe Indians for Spencer Academy 1 25; Middletown ch 23 54 — 51 20

Pby of New York.—Chelsea ch mo con 23 03; Forty-second street ch mo con 19, sab sch amt collected by a little girl 94 cts; Williamsburgh ch 3 mos con coll's 57 11; Madison Avenue ch mo con 5 18, sab sch to ed John D Wells at Canton 18; Yorkville ch mo con 2 36; Duane street ch ann coll add'l Mrs George Ireland 5, mo con 2 69, sab sch to ed Henrietta Romeyn Beers 6 60; New York, First ch ann coll add 178, mo con 127, Young Ladies to ed Mary K Lowrie and Sarah Whittesley at Ningpo, and Richard W Dickinson at Canton 18 75, sab sch to ed W W Phillips at Canton, and James Donaldson and Sarah C Dow among the Omahas 18 75, Infant sab sch to ed Aaron B Belknap at Spencer Academy 6 25; Brooklyn First ch sab sch to ed M W Jacobus and Anna Finley Sanford 15 — 503 66

2d Pby of New York.—Canal street ch "A Member," — 25 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Perth Amboy ch 44; Newark Third ch 112; Morristown, N. J. "a friend of Missions," 2 50 — 158 50

Pby of New Brunswick.—Village ch Freehold mo con coll's 16 88; Lawrence ch mo con coll's 26 68, sab sch 5; Allentown ch 30 — 78 56

Pby of Burlington.—Mount Holly ch 17 51; Burlington ch 26 85 — 44 36

Pby of West Jersey.—Pittsgrove ch in part 16 75; Cape Island sab sch 14 — 30 75

Pby of Newton.—Hardwick ch ann coll 19 29, collection at Johnsonsburg 2 51; Marksboro' ch ann coll 12 93; Newton ch Julia Anna and Susan Thompson (their birth day present,) 2 50 — 37 23

Pby of Raritan.—Clinton ch mo con colls — 70 00

Pby of Susquehanna.—Silver Lake church Miss Emily Rose to ed Francis D Ladd — 25 00

Pby of Luzerne.—Port Carbon, Pa., Rev D Cook — 5 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Spring Garden ch 46 91; Philadelphia 6th ch mo coll 30; Philadelphia 10th ch A W Cummings 5 — 81 91

Pby of Baltimore.—Balt 2d ch Sab sch, Mrs M A Albenson's class, to const Rev Jos T Smith l m 20; Taneytown ch ann coll 103, young ladies in Thorndale Seminary 24, and Sab sch 3, to ed Robert Bellville; Alexandria, Va, 1st ch 50, Sab sch young ladies' Bible class, to con F Knighton l m 10 — 210 00

Pby of Carlisle.—Dickinson ch, Miss Eliza Stewart for education of heathen children 5; Green Castle, Pa, Rev J R Agnew 91 cts; Middle Spring ch 30 — 35 91

Pby of Huntingdon.—Little Valley ch 28; Reedsville, Pa, Rev John Fleming and family 10 — 38 00

Pby of Northumberland.—Danville ch — 40 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Saltsburg ch 31 35, mo con 5; Pine Run ch 11; Congruity ch 22 45 — 69 80

Pby of Ohio.—Manchester ch Sab sch, in part to ed a heathen child at Futtehgurh, Nor Ind 7 81; Lebanon ch, to con Rev O H Miller l m 30; Fairmount ch 46 70 — 84 51

Pby of Allegheny.—Rich Hill ch 5; Plain Grove ch 20; Clintonville ch 6 25; New Salem ch 10 25; Union ch 17 75; Concord ch 53 75; Muddy Creek ch 10 10 — 123 10

Pby of Erie.—Georgetown ch 19 70; Fairfield ch in part to const their pastor Rev D Waggoner l d 35 80 — 55 50

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 1st ch mo con coll 48 37; Washington ch young ladies' For Miss Soc to const Mrs Sarah Neville and Mrs Sarah Ellen Bronson, l m's 60; Mt Prospect ch 19 50 — 127 87

Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 1st ch Mr and Mrs Hans Wilson, each 150 — 300 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Sharon ch addl 6; Ashland ch bal 1 60; Loudonville ch addl 3; Perrysville ch 18 50; Lake Fork Cross Roads ch 33 50; Waterford ch 18 50; Mansfield ch 16; Frederick ch 1 90; Pleasant Hill ch 24; Lexington ch 14 — 137 00

Note.—The acknowledgment in last month's receipts as from "Maysville" ch in this Presbytery should have been "Haysville."

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Chilicothe.—Hillsboro' ch ann coll in part 95 12, Miss Grand Girard's class in Sab sch 4 26, infant class 25 cts, little Frank 25 cts, pupils in Oakland Female Seminary in part to const Miss Emelie Grand Girard l m 16 30; Washington ch 1; Bloomingburg ch 29 60, James Allen 10, William Ustick and wife 10, Col James Stewart 10, George S Fullerton 5, William Pinkerton 5, George Stewart 5, Dr H Stewart 5, John Parker 5, Thomas Lannier 5, Alex Manarey 3, D E Bois 2, E Allen 2; Rocky Spring ch 5 90. Total from Presbytery for sup of Rev Robert Fullerton, Furrukhabad Mission — 219 68

Pby of Miami.—Dicks Creek ch 23 80; Harmony ch 7 70 — 31 50

Pby of Cincinnati.—Cincinnati 1st ch Sab sch Juv For Miss Soc bal of coll 19 51, proceeds of sale Dec, 24 1850, 85; Cincinnati 7th ch Sab sch coll to Dec 7, 1850, 15 53; Cincinnati Central ch, William Short Ridgley, (a boy 4 years old), for children in China 1; Cincinnati, Ohio, Christmas present from a private school for education in Nor Ind 2 47; from a friend 2 50; Somerset ch John Bigham 4 — 130 01

Pby of Oxford.—Bethel ch 2, dividend on Turnpike stock 2 18 — 4 18

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of Madison.—Hanover Ind, Rev J F Crowe, D D, for Ningpo Mission — 1 50

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Lake.—Valparaiso ch 15; and Salem ch 2, bal to con Rev F P Cummins l m; South Bend ch fem miss soc 1 — 18 00

Pby of Crawfordsville.—Alamo church — 6 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Rock River.—Galena south ch ann coll 20, mo coll 28 42, "a friend," 10 — 58 42

Pby of Peoria.—Peoria ch, of which 50 is to con their Pastor Rev Addison Coffey l m — 89 65

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of St. Louis.—Eagle Fork ch, Mrs Ann Ball, 1, St. Louis Co. Mo. And. J. Hibler, 5 — 6 00

Pby of Palmyra.—Big Creek ch 7, sab sch 3 — 10 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

"_____" to con Mrs P F Culbert and Mrs S P Lilly l m's 60; Mrs Sarah E De Haven 2 — 62 00

Pby of Louisville.—Mulberry ch proceeds of gold ring, 1 08; Louisville 1st ch mo coll 17 25, Mrs C W Short 20; Louisville 2d ch mo con 21; Big Spring ch 26; Shiloh and Olivet ch's, in part 14; Louisville 3d ch 17 50 — 116 83

Pby of Muhlenburg.—Salem ch in part — 10 00

Pby of Transylvania.—New Providence ch 23 10; Lebanon ch 31 30; Lancaster ch 33 30; Hanging Fork ch 54 50; Danville ch ann col addl 85 05, sab school in part 26 35, Doctor William Craig to con Mrs. Martha Ellen Craig l d 100 — 353 60

Pby of West Lexington.—Lexington 1st ch addl 8 95; Lexington 2d ch Rev J H Brown 5, H Brown1, A L Bartlett 2 50, E Dewees for scholarship at Allahabad 25, Mrs Dewees to ed Mary Ann Dewees at Allahabad 25; Frankfort ch 114 90, S Blair Todd 5; Bethel ch 44 — 231 35

Pby of Ebenezer.—Lebanon ch 5; Falmouth ch 2 20; Augusta ch 15; Sharon ch 15; all for sup of Rev C W Forman, Lahor — 37 20

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Montgomery.—Locust Bottom ch — 20 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Concord.—Charlotte ch ann col 66 75; Rocky River ch addl 10 — 76 75

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Holston.—New Providence ch 25; Rogersville ch 21 — 46 00

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Memphis.—Bethany ch 27 45, Ladies' sewing soc 10 — 37 45

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Mesopotamia ch, coloured members for Monrovia — 6 61

Pby of E. Alabama.—Eufaula ch 10; Bethel ch 19 — 29 00

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Jackson ch sab sch to ed Luther J. Halsey at Spencer Academy — 25 00

Pby of Louisiana.—Lafayette Square ch N. Orleans mo con colls — 94 35

Total from churches — $4,263 06

LEGACIES.

Ashland, O, Legacy of Miss Elizbth Stockton 5; Danville, Pa, Legacy of D S Montgomery, dec'd, per Rev D M Halliday, 820 — 825 00

SYNOD OF THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Recd from Treasurer of Synod for sup of Rev Messrs Campbell, Caldwell, and Woodside — 900 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend	1,000 00
A Lady	500 00
A Friend in a southern church	10 00
Net proceeds of bond and interest presented by Alexander Montgomery, late of Danville Pa	1,136 84
Marshall ch Mich, sab sch for sup of Rev H V Rankin, Ningpo	10 00
A. B. C.	100 00
From a family missionary box	1 00
An unknown donor	50 00
Cash left by a gentleman	2 00
Ellsworth, O. W. Ripley	5 00
New York, W. C.	5 00
German Pbn ch Fort Wayne, Ia.	1 00
Ladies' Jewish Missionary Society, Philadelphia	25 28
		2,846 12

Total receipts in December — $8,834 18

Wm. RANKIN, Jr., Treasurer.

NOTICES.

Letters relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to Walter Lowrie, Esq., or the Rev. John C. Lowrie, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Letters relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to William Rankin, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

Payments of Moneys for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., C. C. Jones, D. D. 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

Boxes of Clothing, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of ____ dollars in trust, to pay over the same in ____ after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

The Foreign Missionary is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts.
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents each.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "Foreign Missionary, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M.D. Treasurer.

TO PASTORS IN THE SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Our brethren of the Georgia Synod may rest assured that those who have the management of the Board of Publication most sincerely appreciate the cordiality and kindness with which the agent and colporteurs within their bounds have been met, and the strong manifestations of interest which the Board has in various ways received. It would be in the highest degree ungrateful, to say the least, for the Board not to do everything in their power to meet the views of such valuable and efficient friends. We beg our brethren, however, to remember that it is impossible for others to see the effect of particular plans proposed, as they can be viewed by those who have the management of these concerns; and that, as trustees of the funds sacredly committed to their charge, the Board are in conscience bound to use them as in their judgment will best subserve the interests of the whole Church.

In all cases where pledges have already been made, they will of course be to the letter fulfilled; but we trust brethren will see that in all such cases as are contemplated in the action of the Synod, the cash should be forwarded when the books are ordered. The present amount of the capital of the Board will not warrant them in sending out large supplies of their stock over the country, where there might not be the prospect of a speedy return.

A COLPORTEUR'S RECEPTION IN SPARSELY SETTLED DISTRICTS.

A colporteur who had been labouring where the population was sparse, and the privileges for hearing the gospel were few, thus speaks of his reception:

"I may add that I have been very much encouraged amongst those living in sparsely settled districts where the privileges of God's house are not enjoyed. with such, I hold prayer-meetings twice or three times a week, as I travel: they hear the word of truth from me with earnest attention. Some of them have made a profession of religion, and many of them, I trust, are savingly converted. Our tracts have been the means, in God's hand, of turning some of them from their sins to inquire what they must do to be saved."

A COLPORTEUR'S MISSIONARY LABOURS.

All our readers are doubtless aware that along our canals, railroads, and other public works, there is a large population greatly in need of evangelical instruction, which is but seldom reached by the labours of pastors, or even of missionaries. Our colporteurs are doing something for the supply of this destitute class, as the reader will see from the following extract from a colporteur's report.

"I have been travelling in the neighbourhood of the canal and new railroad, where there are hundreds of Irish, and many other poor people who are destitute of either the Bible or any other book. This is where all my tracts were distributed, and where my books were donated. I have assembled them at private houses, and spent evening after evening in reading Scripture, and praying, and distributing tracts. How it rejoices my heart in the Lord to see the care-worn sinner at such meetings, and to see the eager attention which is paid to the precious promises of the Redeemer, and the glad tidings of salvation; and when the meeting breaks up to hear the hearty response of 'God bless you,' and 'when will you come again.'"

AN ADMIRABLE SUGGESTION.

We transfer from the Presbyterian Herald the following admirable suggestion in reference to minister's libraries.

"A correspondent in our last paper, threw out some valuable suggestions as to the influence of a supply of good books, in the minister's library, upon the congregation to which he ministers. We have been pained, very frequently, in visiting worthy ministers in our Western churches, to see the meagerness of their supply of good books, and to learn from them their anxious desire to possess more, but the impossibility of their doing so, from their limited resources. We recur to the subject, now, to suggest, that where churches make what are termed donation visits, some two or more members, of the congregation, where they know that the minister stands in need of books and cannot get them, should combine and present him with "The minister's library" published by the Presbyterian Board of Publication. No more acceptable gift could be bestowed upon a pastor, in most cases, and certainly none, the reflex influence of which would more speedily descend upon the donors. Reader, if you really love your pastor, and wish to make him a better preacher than he now is, and are desirous of presenting him something nice, send for this library, and surprise him with the reception of it. If he should, at first, seem to feel a slight mortification at being thus treated, he will soon get over it, and we predict that he will preach you a better sermon the next week after he receives it, unless he is incorrigibly lazy, which we take for granted is not the fact, or you would not keep him as your minister."

A PASTOR HELPING ON THE GOOD WORK.

We take the liberty of inserting the following extract from a letter recently received from a neighbouring pastor, for the benefit of all whom it may concern. How many pastors will follow so praiseworthy an example?

"Dear Sir—At the late meeting of the Synod of ———, in your address you mentioned some startling facts, of whole Presbyterian churches being destitute of the Confession of Faith. I have no doubt there are just such instances, most lamentable indeed, and in no small degree owing to the indifference of pastors to circulate this and other books of the Board. I have repeatedly obtained copies and circulated them among my people, and aided colporteurs in doing the same. I have recently (since the meeting of Synod) paid all the families in my congregation (ninety-nine) pastoral visits, and have made it my duty to ask each family whether they have a copy of the Confession of Faith or not; and if not, urge them to buy one, saying I would procure them from the Board. Twenty-nine families have consented to take them, in addition to those already supplied, and I really feel I shall have done a good work when these copies are put into their hands. But how many pastors might go and do the same, yea, far more. And who can estimate the good that would result! I wish we Presbyterians were more distinctively such. Enclosed I send the money for twenty-four copies of the Confession of Faith."

PROSPECTS OF THE SABBATH-SCHOOL VISITOR.

As no little interest is felt by many in regard to the newly begun Sabbath-school newspaper, it affords us great pleasure to state that its prospects for success are highly encouraging. From all quarters of the Church orders are coming in, with expressions of strong approbation of the enterprise and great satisfaction with the numbers already issued. A well-known pastor of one of the most important churches in one of our largest cities says, "The Visitor is the best paper of the kind I ever saw." We can certainly do much more as a church through this and other methods than we have heretofore accomplished. Let us have a mind to the work.

THE PRESBYTERIAN RECORD'S TESTIMONY.

We do not know that we can do a better service to our readers than occasionally to let them see how our labours are appreciated in various parts of the Church.

The following is from the Presbyterian Record, published at Nashville, Tennessee, a paper to whose kind offices we feel much indebted.

"BOOKS PUBLISHED BY OUR BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

The more we become acquainted with these books, the more we are delighted with them, and are thankful for their publication.

Our Publishing Committee have shown, we think, great wisdom in their selection, and have thus conferred a rich blessing on our religious reading community. Many of them, it is true, have long been familiar to the Christian world, and their sterling merits have been almost universally admitted by all the friends of evangelical truth, for ages past. But their republication in our age of speculative innovation, on almost all subjects connected with Bible truth, is eminently calculated, not only to enlighten the blind, to support the weak, and to confirm the wavering, but to diffuse abroad wherever they may be circulated, a knowledge of those cardinal doctrines of revealed truth, the belief of which is essential to salvation. The minor and more modern publications of the Board, many of them quite small, contain such happy elucidations of scriptural truth and of Christian practice, as must render them not only agreeable and entertaining to all readers, more or less, but peculiarly attractive to such as have a taste for that kind of reading, which abounds in simple narratives, or in biographical sketches of individuals, in their religious faith and practice. Another desideratum in relation to these books, to which allusion has been often made is, that they are so handsomely gotten up. This we consider no small recommendation on their behalf."

BREAD CAST ON THE WATERS.

A most faithful and valuable colporteur of this Board, who had laboured on the steamboats at one of our western cities, has, within the last year, engaged in the service of the Board of Foreign Missions, among the Indians of the far West. In a letter received some time since from this brother, he states, that he had no idea what good he was doing when employed on those steamboats; that when he went among the Indians, he found away there in the far West, some of the books he had disposed of on the boats at C——.

NEED OF COLPORTEURS.

The following article which was published under the above caption, we take from the Presbyterian Herald. We presume the writer did not intend his statements in any way to reflect on the Board of Publication. Certain we are that the Board has always been as liberal in its arrangements as a proper regard to the safety and good management of the funds of the Church would permit. The brother suggests the proper remedy for all such difficulties, and we thank him for his word in behalf of the good work.

A pastor in a country congregation realizing the need of the excellent books of the Presbyterian Board of Publication among his people, wrote to the committee of the Board at Philadelphia, asking of them the donation of a congregational library to his congregation. The committee replied, that, as the means of the Board were limited, they had to be very discriminating, and could not grant his request in full, but would meet him half way, i. e., for every dollar sent, they would give two dollars' worth of books. Then the pastor tried for a whole year to bring his people up to the spirit of raising twenty dollars, that such a library might be purchased; but he utterly failed, and could not interest them in the subject. Again he wrote to the committee at Philadelphia, asking on what terms they would sell him fifty dollars' worth of books, he intending to purchase, if possible, on a credit, sell the books and make a return of the money. They answered that they would sell on a credit of six months, but required security or a reference from some merchant near said pastor, to some mercantile house at the North. Now it turned out that there was no merchant any where near said pastor, who knew any thing about any house at the north, of course the required reference could not be secured. Thus the whole matter appears to be hedged up. The pastor sees the necessity in every family for such books, and sees it growing stronger every year, yet want of interest in his church people, inability to secure the proper reference, and his own poverty, (which keeps him from borrowing or advancing the money himself,) have all tended to prevent the accomplishment of his desires. How, Mr. Editor, shall this pastor manage things so as to succeed in this matter?

If the late appeal to the churches, by the Board of Publication were answered by the lifting of collections in all our western churches, then colportage might meet the wants of this pastor and his people. But the case of this congregation is only one of a thousand in the wide West. The call is equally loud from all parts of the land, and the necessity equally pressing. Let the churches respond promptly to the Board's call, and our delightful books will be scattered like autumn's ripened fruits over our broad and happy land. AYTCH.

NOVELS IN POETRY AND PROSE.

The following advice, which one of the most eminently useful and judicious ministers gave to one of his children on the choice of books to be read, deserves to be remembered by all.

"Characters are speedily discerned by their choice of books. Novels in prose I need not now forbid; ignorant as you are of their bad tendency by experience, you, I am persuaded, trust me on that head, and will never sacrifice time, affection, nor attention to them. But beware of novels in verse. Poets are more dangerous than prose writers, when their principles are bad. Were Lord Byron no better poet than he is a man, he might have done little harm; but when a bad man is a good poet, and makes his good poetry the vehicle of his bad sentiments, he does mischief by wholesale. Do not be ashamed of having never read the fashionable poem of the day. A Christian has no time, and should have no inclination for reading that has no real tendency to improve the heart."

A PILGRIM OF MORE THAN NINETY YEARS.

A minister of the gospel who was once called to witness the death of the most aged member of his church, a lady ninety-two years of age, deaf and almost blind, says, "As I entered her chamber, she lay upon her bed, her eyes were closed, and she was pale as death. I approached her, seated myself by her side; but she did not perceive me. I thought she was dead. But while I gazed upon her marble countenance, I saw her lips moving; and bringing mine ear down close to them, I heard her whisper these words which she had committed to memory nearly a century before; 'adoption is an act of God's free grace, whereby we are received into the number and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of God'—'and if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ'—'O Lord, receive thy unworthy child through Jesus Christ, Amen.' What a lesson, thought I, is this for all, but especially for children and youth! I conversed and prayed with her, and she soon sweetly breathed out her soul to God.

LICENTIOUS PERIODICALS.

At a recent meeting of the London Tract Society, it was stated that there are no fewer than ten stamped newspapers of an infidel tendency, the circulation of which, throughout the country, is not less than eleven million seven hundred thousand. There are six unstamped newspapers, of which the circulation is six million two hundred and forty thousand. Of miscellaneous publications of evil tendency, there is a circulation of not less than ten million four hundred thousand. Of the worst class of all, the circulation amounts to five million two hundred and fifty thousand. In this country there are, doubtless, as many as in Great Britain, when the population is taken into account.

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

MEMOIR OF MRS. AGNES ANDREW, of Paisley. Illustrative of the Triumphs of Faith in Humble Life, by the Rev. Peter Mearns, Coldstream. 16mo. 108 pages. Muslin gilt.

This is an interesting illustration of simple-hearted piety in the humbler walks of life. The earlier part of Mrs. Andrew's life was spent as an operative in one of the bleach-fields of Scotland. The labours of a neighbouring minister, who was accustomed to hold meetings among the girls employed in the establishment, were blessed to her conversion. She afterwards married, and became a widow, and whilst holding much precious communion with the widow's God, laboured also to do good to all within the reach of her conversation or influence. Few can read this simple memoir without profit. We regard it as an important addition to the "annals of the poor."

THE BRUISED REED AND SMOKING FLAX: to which is added A DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST. By Richard Sibbes, D. D., 1620. 16mo.

To those who are familiar with "Sibbes' Christian's Portion," another work from the pen of the same author will need no further commendation. The republication of this spiritual and excellent old book has been repeatedly recommended to the Board. The title itself will suggest to any devotional mind themes for refreshing meditations. This edition is printed in fine clear type, and the style has been somewhat modernized.

A VISIT TO THE HOLY LAND, THE YOUNG JEWESS, THE RED BERRIES, AND THE TWINS. 16mo. 36 pages.

A series of narratives with these titles makes up another juvenile volume, which the Board has just added to their stock of entertaining and instructive reading, designed specially for the benefit of the young. Our youthful readers will here find four true stories, very well told, and also five very prettily engraved pictures. This little book will of course find its way into Sabbath-school libraries, as well as to many firesides.

THE RAGGED SCHOLARS, PERILS IN THE DESERT, AND THE AVENGER STAYED. 16mo, thirty-six pages.

Another interesting and excellent juvenile book made up of four brief narratives, and illustrated with four wood cuts, the first of which is particularly well executed. The stories of the Ragged Scholars will give a very good idea of the operation of what are called ragged schools among the poor of London.

NEW TRACTS.

THE LIGHT HOUSE, or Jesus Christ the Light of the World.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD, an address to the Lovers of the world.

THE DUTY OF FAMILY RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION. By the Rev. John P. Carter.

These tracts are all on subjects of the highest importance, are written with reference to practical effect, and bear upon their exterior a favourable introduction, from the cheerful and handsome covers in which they are gotten up.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION, IN THE MONTH OF DECEMBER.

Presbytery of Albany.
2d ch Albany, per Rev Dr Sprague (of which $30 to const Mrs Sarah Jane Vosburgh and $30 to const Miss Mary M Olcott hon mems)	173 11
Presbytery of Bedford.
Rye ch, per Mission House N Y	8 87
Presbytery of North River.
Rondout ch, per Rev B T Phillips to const Stephen Osterhondt, Walter B Crane, Mrs Eliza F Crane, Rev B T Phillips and Mrs Mary E Phillips hon mems	150 00
Presbytery of New York.
1st ch Brooklyn	77 18
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
Central ch Philadelphia. A Friend	25 00
Presbytery of Washington.
Washington ch, per Rev J S Brownson	42 57
Presbytery of East Hanover.
Chesterfield ch per Rev J D Dudley, a Friend	3 00
Presbytery of New Castle, Del.
Mrs D W Gemmill	5 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Graceham, John Stewart	5 00
Presbytery of Montgomery.
Christiansburg ch, Wm C Hagan	1 76
Presbytery of Orange.
Charlotte ch per Mission House, N Y	36 50
Presbytery of Concord.
Rocky River ch per Rev D Penick	12 00
Presbytery of Western District.
Brownsville ch, per Rev J E Bright Dr Charles Read to const self hon mem 30; Prosperity ch per Rev Robt McCoy 5	35 00
Presbytery of Zanesville.
Brownsville ch 12 62½; Washington ch 20 75; Chandlersville 16; Norwich 15 22	64 59½
Presbytery of Richland.
Frederick ch	9 31
Presbytery of Columbus.
Mt Pleasant ch	4 60
MISCELLANEOUS.
Rev S W Watkins, Troublesome P O, N C, Miss A P Warner, Binghampton N Y, 1	6 00
Total	659 49½

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 5th of December, by the Presbytery of Florida, the Rev. Jesse W. Hume was installed pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Tallahassa, Florida.

On the 19th of November, by the Presbytery of Zanesville, Mr. Robert Robe was ordained as an evangelist, with a view to a mission in Oregon.

On the 19th of November, by the Presbytery of Zanesville, the Rev. Wm. M. Ferguson was installed pastor of the church of Uniontown.

On the 8th of December, by the Presbytery of Florida, Mr. Wm. E. Hamilton was ordained as an evangelist.

The Rev. Robert McGuigan, late of the Free Church of Scotland, has accepted a call from the churches of Union and Keosauque, Iowa. His post-office is Birmingham, Van Buren county, Iowa.

The Rev. R. E. Sherrill, formerly of Pontotoc, Miss., has taken charge of the church in Somerville, Tenn.

The Rev. W. C. McPheeters has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church in Marshall, Mo.

The Rev. S. B. Cheek was installed pastor of the Columbia Church, on the 10th ult., by a committee of Transylvania Presbytery.

On the 8th inst. the Presbytery of Clarion ordained Mr. Laverty Grier, and installed him pastor of the churches of Bethesda and Bethlehem.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. Simeon Brown and the church of Zanesville, Ohio, has been dissolved, he having accepted an agency for the West for the Board of Publication.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine and the Penn Church, Penn Township, Philadelphia, has been dissolved.

CALLS.

The Rev. John Woodbridge, late of Greenport, Long Island, has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church at Saratoga Springs, New York.

The Rev. S. J. P. Anderson, of Norfolk, Virginia, has received a call to the Central Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Missouri.

The Rev. Samuel D. Alexander has accepted a call to the Freehold Village Church. His address will be Freehold, Monmouth county, New Jersey.

The Rev. James W. Alexander, D. D., has accepted a call from the Duane Street Presbyterian Church, New York, on condition that his resignation of the Professorship he now holds in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, New Jersey, is accepted by the Directors of that Institution; and also by the General Assembly. Among the reasons for his decision, is that of impaired health, induced by too sedentary a position.

The Rev. J. L. Rogers has accepted a call from the church at Waynesborough, Georgia.

The Rev. Moses A. Hoge, of Athens, has received a unanimous call to become the pastor of the Zanesville Presbyterian Church, vacated by the resignation of the Rev. Simeon Brown.

DEATHS.

The Rev. S. S. Templeton of the Presbytery of Tombeckbee, departed this life on the 1st of December last.

LICENSURES.

On the 6th of January the Presbytery of Philadelphia licensed Mr. James M. Crowell to preach the gospel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Rev. Edmund C. Bittinger, Chaplain in the Navy of the United States, has been appointed Chaplain of the new steam-frigate Susquehanna, bound to China, and thence on a cruise round the world.

A new Presbytery, to be called Cedar Presbytery, has been formed by the Synod of Illinois, by a division of the Presbytery of Iowa.

The Post-office address of the Rev. John K. Kornyn, is Warsaw, Wyoming county, New York.

On the 6th of January, the Rev. William C. Windel was received by the Presbytery of Philadelphia as a foreign minister on probation.

Rev. Daniel L. Gray having accepted the appointment by the Board of Missions, of Missionary Agent for the Synod of Memphis, has resigned his charge at Henderson, Kentucky, and removed to Memphis.

The Rev. W. H. Woods has become the stated supply of the church of Six Mile, Jackson county, Missouri. His post office is Sibley, Missouri.

The Rev. B. D. Thomas has accepted an invitation as stated supply of the church of Raleigh, Tennessee.

The Rev. James D. Mason has accepted the appointment, by the Board of Missions, of Missionary Agent for the State of Iowa. His post-office is still Davenport, Iowa.

The Rev. W. C. Mason, of Ohio, has become the stated supply of the Davenport church.

The Rev. Joseph Templeton, of St. Louis, has been appointed Missionary Agent for Missouri, but has not yet signified his aceptance.

The Rev. Samuel C. Logan, formerly of South Hanover, Indiana, has accepted an invitation to labour as stated supply of the church in Constantine, Michigan.

POST-OFFICE ADDRESS CHANGED.

The post-office address of the Rev. Seth Howell, Columbus, Ohio, is now Mount Sterling, Madison county, Ohio.

The Rev. David Wells, Dirt Town, Georgia, now Laurens C. H., South Carolina.

Varieties.

THE "OLD WAY" OF THE PURITANS.—The Puritan Recorder says, "From various quarters, we have received letters commending the spirit of our journal. The number in the religious community, who wish to understand 'New England Theology,' and adhere to the 'Old Way' of the Puritans is rapidly increasing. Rev. Dr. Woods, of Andover, has commenced a series of articles showing what the Theology of the Puritans is. No man in New England is better qualified to do this."

EMIGRATION TO MEXICO.—It is said that more than seven hundred persons of both sexes have moved into Mexico, from the United States, intending to settle permanently. A tract of territory at the confluence of the San Antonio and San Rodrigo rivers has been appropriated for their residence.

LIBERALITY OF POPERY AT ROME.—The Pope has withdrawn from the American residents in Rome, the right to worship in the Protestant form within the walls of the city.

In a letter addressed to the London Times, the Earl of Winchelsea states, "that the English Protestants are not allowed to have a chapel within the walls of Rome." "The present place of worship," says the noble lord, "for Protestants at Rome, is an old granary over the pig market, the noise and stench of which render it the most disgusting place of the kind I ever entered.

THE GOSPEL AS AN ELEMENT OF PROGRESS.—The sons of Chinese peasants could read and write, when the princes of England were ignorant of both. China has since made no advance; while England has reached a height of civilization, that no one at that time could have formed any idea of. England has had the gospel, China has been without it. This accounts for their relative change of position.

EPISCOPAL THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS.—One of our exchange papers says, it is an alarming fact that candidates for the ministry in the Episcopal church have greatly decreased of late years.

METHODIST PERIODICALS.—The Northern Advocate says, that the Methodist Episcopal Church now issues about 175,000 copies of periodicals in a year; half of this number is made up of large weekly journals.

THE CINCINNATI BOOK TRADE.—The aggregate amount of the book trade in Cincinnati is estimated at $1,000,000 per annum. There are some thirty bookstores in the city; three stereotyping establishments; ten binderies; and twenty-nine power presses, of which fifteen are running principally on book-work. One of these is constantly employed on German publications.

THE CURSE OF A FORTUNE.—The Records of the French Police mention the case of a lady who came unexpectedly into a large fortune, and immediately fell into profound melancholy. She expected to be robbed every moment, and at length locked her doors, and received food through a small window. She soon became afraid of being poisoned, dismissed her cook, and starved herself to death.

CHANGES OF MINISTERS AND CHURCHES.—Since the rising of the last Assembly, while only two ministers are known to have withdrawn from the Old School connection, seven ministers, with six churches, embracing nine hundred and seventy-one members, have withdrawn from the New.

NOTHING LOST BY KINDNESS.—A Colonel Daniels, who recently died in England, bequeathed to a "certain bookseller in New Haven, Connecticut," whose name he did not remember, £400,062. He gives as a reason, "that the said bookseller showed me many marks of kindness and courtesy, and visited me during a sickness of several days." "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers," says Paul, "for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

ECCLESIASTICAL INCOME.—The Church of England is supposed to have an annual revenue of fifty millions of dollars—a tax which bears with insupportable weight upon the people. A large portion of this is for the clergy. The cost to the country, of the parochial clergy, in tithes alone, amounts to about thirty millions of dollars, making an average of twenty-five hundred dollars a year, to the ten thousand seven hundred and eighteen benefices. This is all monopolized, however, by some seven thousand incumbents.

A FRENCH PROTESTANT CHURCH IN NEW ORLEANS.—The noble design of erecting an edifice for the use of the French Protestants of New Orleans has been started, and with some prospect of success. That city contains some fifty or sixty thousand French population, the larger portion of whom are Roman Catholics. The little band of French Protestants, headed by their pastor, the Rev. P. Wolf, formerly of Canada, have already accomplished much good, and have subscribed with primitive liberality toward the erection of a house of worship, and now appeal to their brethren throughout the land, to aid them in their enterprise.

THE CLERGY OF MEXICO.—A pamphlet published in Mexico, states that the income of the clergy of that country, amounts to $20,000,000 per annum. They are also in possession of landed property representing an enormous capital. The revenues of the General Government itself are stated not to exceed $6,000,000.

AN OLD MEETING HOUSE.—The old Presbyterian church in Bensalem, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, is said to be, with one exception, the oldest Presbyterian house of worship in Pennsylvania. It "stands in the same churchyard in which William Tennent preached. Whitefield also laboured in that vicinity, and the Log College was hard by the spot." The old building has been remodelled and improved, and was re-opened for public worship on the 18th of December.

A SABBATH-KEEPING WHALER.—The new whale-ship Arctic, which recently sailed from New-Bedford, is commanded by Captain Charles Gillet, a member of the Evangelical church in Kingston. Captain Gillet carries his religion to sea, and is governed by religious principles in conducting a voyage. On the Sabbath he holds religious services on board his vessel, and does not lower a boat on that day to take whales, however great the temptation. He has been blessed—making short voyages, and returning with a full ship.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—Domestic Missions, p. 18. Texas, p. 18. Benefits of Church Extension, p. 19. Many Houses of Worship may be easily finished, p. 19. A Good Resolution, p. 19. Plan for Benevolent Contributions, p. 19. A Psalm, p. 20. Receipts, p. 20.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—I. Ministerial Education: Prayers, Funds, and Principles, p. 21. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies and Colleges: A Very Great Mistake, p. 22. Hanover College, Indiana, p. 22. Two Female Schools in Georgia, p. 23. Miller Academy, Ohio, p. 23. Receipts, p. 23.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—Enlargement of the Missions, p. 24. Receipts of the Board, p. 24. Recent Intelligence, p. 24. Africa: Mission near the Equator. Narrative of Exploring Tours, p. 24. India: Allahabad Mission—Letters on Mohammedanism, p. 26. Furrukhabad Mission. The Heathen have no rest, p. 27. Choctaw Mission—Report of Spencer Academy, p. 27. Geneva: Notices of the Church and of the World, p. 28. Receipts, p. 28. Notices, p. 29.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.—To pastors in the Synod of Georgia, p. 30. An Admirable Suggestion, p. 30. A Pastor helping on the Good Work, p. 30. Prospects of the Sabbath-school Visitor, p. 30. The Presbyterian Record's Testimony, p. 30. Bread Cast upon the Waters, p. 30. Need of Colporteurs, p. 31. Novels in Poetry and Prose, p. 31. A Pilgrim of more than Ninety Years, p. 31. Licentious Periodicals, p. 31. Notices of New Books, p. 31. Receipts, p. 31.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Hastening it in His time, p. 17. Extent of the Universe, p. 17. An Example Worthy of Imitation, p. 17. Church Colonizing in New Orleans, p. 17. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 32. Varieties, p. 32.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 3. | PHILADELPHIA, MARCH, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

THE RECORD A HIGHLY PRIZED VISITOR.

As the churches will naturally desire to know the success and prospects of the Record, it gives us pleasure to state that the subscription list has been considerably increased since the commencement of the present year. There have been some discontinuances, and a few of these—shall we tell it?—have been ministers in our own connexion to whom it was sent gratuitously! But the additions to the subscription list very much exceed the losses. Last year we printed 11,000 monthly, we now print 12,300, and are receiving new subscribers almost every day.

To show what is thought of the Record, we subjoin the following extracts from letters received from as many different sections of the country. Many more of a similar character might be added.

"The Home and Foreign Record is a most highly-prized monthly visitor. May God prosper the Record and bless it wherever it goes in the salvation of souls."

"I can but add my humble testimony to the worth of the periodical and shall do all in my power to extend its circulation."

"Of the success and great usefulness of the Record no one can doubt."

"The Record has made such a favourable impression where it has been read, that I hope to procure several more subscribers."

STATISTICAL REPORTS FROM CHURCH SESSIONS.

It is highly desirable and important that there should be a full and accurate annual report of the statistics of the Presbyterian Church. Heretofore, on account of neglect in some, and carelessness in making out the report in others, the tables printed in the Minutes of the Assembly have been scarcely an approximation to the truth. It will be recollected that the last General Assembly adopted a new schedule for those reports, the form of which may be found in the Appendix to the Minutes of the Assembly for 1850. Will not pastors see that this duty is attended to?

PLEASANT WORDS.

How very gratifying are pleasant words, to all, the rich, the poor, the high, the low, all classes enjoy pleasant words. They cost nothing, they are free, all have the privilege of using them; but, alas, too few use them, some are almost strangers to them. In the words of the wise man, "Pleasant words are as an honey-comb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones." Yes, as honey is sweet to the taste, so pleasant words are sweet and cheering to the heart. Pleasant words are full of kindness, no bitterness in them, they truly savour of things that are good. Ye that are morose and gloomy, by their influence, if you feel sad and desponding, try, O try to speak pleasantly to all around, and you will find they are indeed "health to the soul;" your own soul will be cheered and softened by them. "The words of the wise are pleasant words."—Presb. Herald.

From the Independent.

MY BIRTHDAY.

"O world! so few the years we live,
Would that the life which thou dost give
Were life indeed."
Coplas de Manrique.

Once more complete the yearly round,
I reach the quick returning bound
From which I ran:
Swift as the winged arrow speeds,
Behind me far the way recedes,
A wasting span!

I pause to count the perished years,
And weep with unavailing tears,
Their rushing haste:
Like shipwrecks scattered on the strand,
They lie half-buried in the sand,
A fearful waste.

Yet 'tis not that our years are few,
And speeding all so swiftly through,
That moves the tear;
'Tis that the golden moments given,
A treasure to lay up in heaven,
Are squandered here.

O thou whose Spirit only gives
The life in which my spirit lives,
To thee I call:
Mould every purpose to thine own,
And let me give to thee alone,
My life—my all. W.

THE CONSTRAINING POWER OF THE LOVE OF CHRIST.

Love to Christ is a motive equal to all emergencies. There is a ruling passion in every mind; and when every other consideration has lost its power, this ruling passion retains its influence. When they were probing among his shattered ribs for the fatal bullet, the French veteran exclaimed: "A little deeper, and you will find the emperor." The deepest affection in a believing soul is the love of its Saviour. Deeper than the love of home, deeper than the love of kindred, deeper than the love of rest and recreation, deeper than the love of life, is the love of Jesus. And so, when other spells have lost their magic, when no name of old endearment, no voice of onwaiting tenderness can disperse the lethargy of dissolution, the name that is above every name, pronounced by one who knows it, will kindle its last animation in the eye of death. And when other persuasives have lost their power—when other loves no longer constrain the Christian—when the love of country no longer constrains his patriotism, nor the love of his brethren his philanthropy, nor the love of home his fatherly affection—the love of Christ will still constrain his loyalty. There is a love to Jesus which nothing can destroy. There is a leal-heartedness which refuses to let a much-loved Saviour go, even when the palsied arm of affection is no longer conscious of the benignant form it embraces. There is a love which, amidst the old and weary "feel" of waning years, renews its youth, and amidst outward misery and inward desolation preserves its immortal root—which, even when the glassy eye of hunger has forgot to sparkle, and the joy at the heart can no longer mantle on the withered cheek, still holds on, faithful to Jesus, though the flesh be faint. This was the love which made Paul and Silas, fatigued and famished as they were, and sleepless with pain, sing praise so loud that their fellow-prisoners heard and wondered. This was the love which burned in the apostle's breast, even when buffeting the Adriatic's wintry brine, and made the work which at Rome awaited him, beam like a star of hope through the drowning darkness of that dismal night. This was the love which thawed his pen, when the moan of wintry winds made him miss the cloak he left at Troas, and impelled him to write to Timothy a testamentary entreaty to "hold fast" the truths which were hastening himself to martyrdom. Devotedness to Christ is a principle which never dies, and neither does the diligence which springs from it.—Hamilton.

THE MOTHER'S REWARD.

I saw a little cloud rising in the western horizon. In a few moments it spread over the expanse of heaven, and watered the earth with a genial shower. I saw a little rivulet start from a mountain, winding its way through the valley and the meadow, receiving each tributary rill which it met in its course, till it became a mighty stream, bearing on its bosom the merchandise of many nations, and the various productions of the adjacent country. I saw a little seed dropped into the earth. The dews descended, and the sun rose upon it; it started into life. In a little time it spread its branches and became a shelter from the heat, "and the fowls of heaven lodged in its branches."

I saw a little smiling boy stand by the side of his mother, and heard him repeat from her lips one of the sweet songs of Zion. I saw him kneel at her feet, and pray that Jesus would bless his dear parents—the world of mankind, and keep him from temptation. In a little time I saw him with the books of the classics under his arm, walking alone, busied in deep thought. I went into a Sabbath school, and heard him saying to a little group that surrounded him, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Long after, I went into the sanctuary, and heard him reasoning of "righteousness, and temperance, and judgment to come." I looked, and saw that same mother, at whose feet he had knelt, and from whose lips he had learned to lisp the name Immanuel. Her hair was whitened with the frosts of winter, and on her cheek was many a furrow; but meekness sat on her brow, and heaven beamed in her dim eye glistening with a tear; and I thought I saw in that tear the moving of a mother's heart, while she reverted to days gone by, when this Boanerges was first dawning into life, hanging on her lips, listening to the voice of instruction, and inquiring, in childlike simplicity, the way to be good: and I said—This is the rich harvest of a mother's toil; these are the goodly sheaves of that precious seed which probably was sown in weeping; and your grey hairs shall not be "brought down with sorrow to the grave," but in the bower of rest you shall look down on him who "will arise and call you blessed," and finally greet you where hope is swallowed up in fruition, and prayer in praise.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. Reese Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:
J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

NOTE.

The space allowed us in the Record was exhausted before we had presented a third of our matter. There are a number of letters under the head of "Fruits" excluded, exceedingly interesting, from the South and West. We have over forty letters, conveying intelligence of the Religious instruction of the coloured population, of most gratifying character: and many other items, which we are compelled to postpone to our next number.

TO SEVERAL FEMALE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH.

Mission Rooms.

Christian Friends and Helpers—We are glad to learn that you take the Home and Foreign Record. You see that it is considerably enlarged this year. It is a cheap paper, costing not more than five cents a number, and containing an account of all the benevolent and missionary operations of our Church from month to month: and thus, making our ministers and members acquainted with what the Church is doing for the Redeemer in our country, and in foreign countries, it is a most useful paper. The officers of the different Boards, whose duty it is made to edit the paper, in their several departments are trying to make it an interesting paper: a paper not only for ministers and elders, a paper not only to be taken into the monthly concert and missionary prayer-meeting, but a paper for private members: to be taken into our families, for ourselves and our children and friends to read, that we may have our memories refreshed, and our hearts revived, and our prayers quickened in the great work of glorifying our Lord upon the earth. Yes, we need something of the kind, by God's blessing, to revive us thus. We know the happy influences of this very Home and Foreign Record, and of kindred publications. We have lived in town and country. We have felt the dull influences of the world, and the effect of care and occupation on our hearts. We want something to give us expansion: we want a view out on the world to enlarge our conceptions: we want to know how it is with our Christian brethren in the great kingdom of grace; how it is with mankind estranged from God: what we as a branch of Christ's church are doing, and what other branches of Christ's church are doing. Open the Holy Scriptures. Read the precious pages! A Saviour's life: His dying love: His living care: His animating promises: the day of glory yet to settle on his Church, and make it cover over all the world. The soul expands—rejoices. Bring the Record of what Christ's people are now doing, that they may fill up the measure of their duty to him and to their perishing fellow-men. The father reads to his listening loved one and their dear children: or the tender mother reads. "No," saith son or daughter—"let us read, and you listen." We are not at home, we have gone abroad. Now we are with the faithful domestic missionary in the crowded city, visiting with him, the rooms of the poor, the sick and dying: we are in his prayer-meeting: his Sunday-school: his growing church: we leave him rejoicing in his work. Now we are in the South, on the plantations, attending meetings with all the household, at the country church, in the midst of an attentive people. We are in the West: the village bell calls us to worship: here is the missionary—this is his smiling field, won from the frightful deserts: we pass along, and see a new church rising in the wilderness. Hear the hymns of praise from their Sabbath-schools of bright and lovely children! We are beyond the Mississippi; here are missionaries, whose circuits skirt the silent plains over which the wave of life is creeping. Their voices are heard by the listening Mexican and the wild Indians across their lines. Lo! we are at the Rocky Mountains! we descend into the valleys, and on the shores of the great Pacific we enter churches and greet the heralds of the cross. And all along as we have come, there has been the colporteur, descending rivers, climbing mountains, traversing plains, exploring towns and districts, and disseminating the word of life, and works that tell mankind of the things to be believed, and the things to be done: and we have met with young men called of God, as was Aaron—pursuing their studies with their eyes and hearts upon the ministry, making the hearts of parents, brothers, sisters, and the hearts of all God's people glad: and we have stayed in places with the multitude, and seen them licensed, ordained, and sent forth to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. But we are suddenly beyond the seas. We are in Africa, in Asia. We see the idols, the temples, the crowds of debased heathen. But the ambassador of Christ is there! Come into his Christian church on this heathen ground: into his schools: here are the trophies of redeeming love. The Lord is present in power: he is converting the heathen to himself. We catch the reviving light from point to point all over the world. We see the Spirit of God at work at home and abroad. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's people are labouring, praying, striving. The kingdom of sin, and darkness, and misery is giving way. A mighty work of regeneration is going forward on the earth. We bless God, we belong to the noble army of God's people. We sympathize with them. We awake to renewed prayer and effort. We conclude our hour of reading and conversation. Our spirits are refreshed, our hearts softened in love, our zeal quickened, our life becomes more active, our influence is more powerful in our own field assigned us of God. We shall not live unto ourselves, but unto Him who loved us, and gave himself to die for us.

Tell us: will not the Home and Foreign Record be a useful paper if it does this for us. It has done this for some we know. Why may it not do the same for all. We trust it may.

But you have an objection to the Home and Foreign Record. What is it? "Why much is said about money in it: and the duty of giving: and it seems intended very much to raise money. We want to hear more of fruits and works of the Church." You know that according to the arrangement of the Church, an arrangement entered into to secure economy, promptness, and efficiency and careful supervision, all the moneys which she raises for sending out and supporting ministers and missionaries at home and abroad, for building churches, for publishing books, and educating her sons for the gospel ministry, she intrusts to her central committees, or Boards as we call them; and to these Boards she commits the conduct of these great operations, and regularly demands from them an account of all that they receive, pay out and do, every year. More than this, the Church wishes to know from time to time what the Boards are doing, what is the state of their treasuries, and whether they need more labourers, or more funds, that she may come up to their aid and support. Under these circumstances, we are obliged sometimes to tell you the state of our treasuries, and beg you to think a little of your Lord's work, and help us on if you can. This is all. You will see the propriety and necessity of it. And we do not mean to put any more into the paper about money than we are obliged to do. And if the Church will enable her agents to keep all her operations going forward without it, we will not say a word on the subject. But if she does not, and she holds her agents responsible, we shall have to do it.

Now, perhaps, Christian friends, you have not thought upon the subject with your usual carefulness and accuracy. The other Boards can answer for themselves. We will answer only for the Domestic Missionary Board. Do you know that nearly one-third of all our active ministers in our Church are in connection with your Board of Domestic Missions? You do not send these brethren a warfare at their own charges, surely not. Does it take a little sum to aid near six hundred strong men in the field? Think too of the number of new churches you are building? We had to answer the calls of four new churches last week, and it took near six hundred dollars? And how much do you suppose it requires weekly, to meet all the claims against the Board of Domestic Missions for building churches, supporting missionaries and so on? Why taking the average for eight weeks past, we require over twelve hundred dollars per week from the office in Philadelphia alone. What the Western Committee at Louisville pays out weekly we cannot definitely state on the moment, but it is a very considerable amount, and added to the sum paid out in Philadelphia, the average amount per week would be much larger. Do we not need then a pretty full and constant stream of solid help from the Church to keep all her works in motion? If you bear these things in mind, you will hereafter sympathize with your Church in her struggles to glorify God. You, Christian friends, have always been forward in the Lord's profession and service. We have too many instances of your zeal and devotedness, to doubt that you will continue to be efficient helpers in the Master's cause. Helpers you have been, helpers you are, helpers you will be. We receive many encouraging tokens from you, sent by your own hands in various ways. The good Lord pour upon us all his Holy Spirit, and enable us to live unreservedly to his glory. But as you wish to hear something to cheer you, let us now beg you to read the specimens of precious fruits in the vineyard we cultivate, that you may know that means, and labour, and prayer are not spent in vain.

FRUITS.

Revival.—Faithful Pastoral Visiting.

Connecticut, Dec., 1850.

The attendance on the means of grace is better, and a larger number are inquiring what they must do to be saved. Early in November our stated Thursday evening lectures become so full that our place of meeting was too strait for us; and so deep was the feeling manifested by many, especially among the young, that we found it necessary, in order to meet the new state of things, to multiply the means of grace: and especially we deemed it expedient to appoint an inquiry meeting once a week, in which instructions more suitable to the case of each individual might be given, than can be in a public lecture. The attendance on these meetings is about fifteen, and the meetings have been seasons of great interest and solemnity. Some of those who attend are now rejoicing in hope, and give promise of being an honour to the Church of God.

A special prayer-meeting, to supplicate the influences of the Holy Spirit upon the church and congregation, has been also held from house to house on Tuesday evenings, and has been well attended. The graces of at least some of God's professing people have been revived, and earnestly have they besought the Lord that he would arise, and cause his face to shine, that this people may be saved.

Besides the young who attend our inquiry meetings, there are many older persons—heads of families, and others—who appear to be much concerned about their salvation. In a very general pastoral visitation, which I have recently made, seldom have I found an individual unwilling to converse on the subject of religion: and in some instances have found and left them in tears. Yesterday afternoon, I called upon a family who seldom attend church, in reference to a little secular business, and found the lady weeping. On my referring to her feelings, she stated that she had been reading one of our Sabbath-school books, and was led to feel that she was a great sinner—that she had felt so for some weeks past, and had been praying for mercy; but that being unwell, and the weather unfavourable, she had not been able to get out to church. I mention this as a single instance out of many, to show the secret and silent work the gracious Spirit seems to be carrying on in our community, and often in quarters where we least expect it.

The good work thus far has been characterized by a deep sense of sin, and of the lost condition of the soul; it has been without noise or confusion. It seemed to commence imperceptibly, and has increased till we have been graciously permitted to witness some very striking displays of Divine power and grace. R. G. T.

Activity.

New Jersey, January, 1851.

During the past quarter I have preached sixty sermons in eight or more different places, mostly, however, in my own field; visited a considerable number of families and schools; distributed and put in circulation a goodly number of good tracts, papers, and books; and in general, in the midst of much unfaithfulness and many hindrances, endeavoured to sow the good seed of life. I have seen Sabbath breakers reformed, the careless become attentive, the indifferent interested, and I hope some sinners converted. E. E.

Progress.

New Jersey, December, 1850.

A few years ago, there were three taverns in the bounds of the congregation, all thronged on the Sabbath. At present we have but one, and hope before long to get rid of it also. The church, at that time, was very poorly attended; they could scarcely raise one hundred dollars to support the gospel at home. At present the church is well attended, and the people can raise three hundred dollars to support the gospel among themselves, and some little for the cause elsewhere. There seems to be a growing and steady attendance on the means of grace.

J. M.

Fidelity and Success.

Coal Region, Pennsylvania, Dec., 1850.

This mission is almost exclusively to coal miners. In the four villages which it originally contained, there was no church organization, no Sabbath-school. It was an unbroken moral wilderness, the Sabbath was a day of drunkenness and rioting, and Schuylkill Valley was notorious in all the surrounding country for its open and unblushing wickedness. This was in July, 1848. On the 3d February of the present year, our church was organized with twenty-one members; eighteen on certificate, and three on profession. The Lord poured out his Spirit upon this new organization, and on the 24th of March thirty-six were added by profession; in July, one; and December 15, four. There are two stone houses of worship erected, in a neat style of architecture, with lecture rooms in the lower stories, in which we worship at present, not having funds to complete the upper rooms. I organized three Sabbath-schools when I entered on my labours, which have been sustained all the time. A parochial school was commenced in one of the churches last May, and a second in the other church in September. I had to walk eight miles and preach twice on the Sabbath, and walked often many miles through the week to attend evening meetings, and visit the people. A month ago, or rather two months, another village was added providentially to this extensive field; a mining village, hid among the mountains, containing about six hundred souls. I went there to visit a sick man who was anxious about his soul; he died expressing a hope in Christ. I went to see him every other day for two weeks. I attended his funeral, and the people expressed a strong desire for preaching. I told them that if they would come to the church at Middleport on the one Sabbath, I would preach at their village on the evening of the other. The village is two miles from Middleport. As there are no horses kept here but those which work at the mines, we have all to walk. This has added greatly to my labours; every other Sabbath I preach thrice, and walk twelve miles. In this village there was no religious instruction of any kind. I organized a Sabbath-school two weeks ago, which is well attended, and the people seem to be interested generally. There are a great many Romanists among this population; they come occasionally to hear me preach; I treat them kindly, and they all pay me great outward respect. W. R. G.

Progress.

Coal Region, Pennsylvania, Dec., 1850.

The school-house in which we worship at present is now well filled every Sabbath. I suppose it can seat comfortably one hundred and fifty; this is a decided increase in our regular congregation. Our people here are now making strenuous efforts to complete our church edifice, which has been in an unfinished state since May last. All the money is subscribed but fifty dollars, which can be raised; this will complete the church, with two hundred dollars we expect from the Church Extension fund.

A committee of the Presbytery of Luzerne met here on December 8th, and organized a church of twenty-two members: ten of whom were received on certificate, and twelve on profession of their faith; four adults were baptized. One of their number was chosen and ordained to the office of ruling elder. The church being organized, the little band of disciples sat down to the table of our Lord to commemorate his dying love. It was delightful to see this little company in this place entering into covenant with God. It was a solemn time; we felt that Christ was himself at his table. A number were prevented from joining the church, some from sickness, others we considered it advisable that they should wait until the next season. Some of those who joined us were young converts; the Spirit of God was working silently amongst us; there was no excitement; we held no series of meetings; nothing but the stated preaching on the Sabbath, and prayer-meeting during the week. Though silent, yet it was a genuine work. But a few, however, were the subjects of this work; there are many under deep impressions still. S. A. G.

Result of Revival.

Ohio, December, 1850.

The result of the outpouring of the Spirit of God upon us about two months ago, was, that the few sickly, half-starved lambs of the flock that had lingered here for years, were very much quickened; whilst their number was strengthened by an addition of three heads of families the most respectable in the town. These were admitted by examination to the communion of the church, at the same time they brought all their children with them to enter into covenant with God and his Church, and were baptized. This people have never been so generally and so deeply interested in the preaching of the gospel as they are now. Never have they thought so much, and been so deeply impressed with the desirableness of a permanent ministry. The people flock in crowds to hear the gospel, and our place of worship is becoming too strait for us. I hope another season will find us able, and at least willing, to tax our own ability to the utmost, for the erection of a more commodious edifice in which to worship the God of our fathers. S. H.

Family Worship in every Family.

Ohio, January, 1851.

In this church, I find that every family have the altar of prayer erected, and morning and evening send up their petitions to a throne of grace. This feature is as encouraging to the heart of the missionary as it is profitable to them. May they continue in it. L. A. B.

Necessity and Progress of Home Missions.

Ohio, January, 1851.

When I came here eleven years ago, the Presbytery of Sidney numbered only about five or six efficient members, and they were at such a distance from each other that it was hard for them to have a quorum at their meetings, some of them having to travel one hundred miles or more. Now see the change. If you will look at the Minutes of the last General Assembly, you will see that there are twenty-eight ministers on the ground which was then covered by the Presbytery of Sidney. Truly, we may say, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." The Presbytery of Maumee was struck off from the Presbytery of Sidney, and now the Presbytery of Finley is, by an act of the Synod of Cincinnati, at its last session, struck off with some six ministers, and our territory is yet too large by one half, embracing seven counties in the north-west part of the State. In closing up my labours as your missionary in this place, I would not be considered as unmindful of the source whence all our help cometh. And while I express my gratitude, I may say, without error, that I also express the feelings of the churches where I have so long laboured and suffered.

I can truly say, that had it not been for the aid afforded us by the churches, through the Board of Missions, probably one half or three fourths of the little churches now in the bounds above mentioned, must have remained without the stated ordinances of God's house until this day. Now, in conclusion, as it may be my last communication to the Board from this point, permit me, as their unworthy servant, to make one remark for the encouragement of the churches who are engaged in the glorious work of sending the gospel to the destitute.

Christian brethren and sisters, who enjoy all the comforts and blessings of the gospel, and all worldly good things necessary to your comfort in this life, if you, by contributing a small portion of the talents committed to your care for improvement, can cause the hearts of the destitute to sing for joy, and the wilderness to blossom as the rose, and the desert to become a fruitful field—if you can thus strengthen the hands, and encourage the hearts of your unworthy servants, who are engaged in this glorious, but self-denying work, surely you ought to thank God and take courage. P. C.

These pleasant items of intelligence will certainly be grateful to all who love the Lord, and are looking for his salvation on the earth. We close them for the present.

SYMPATHIZE WITH YOUR BRETHREN

WHO ARE LEADING THE VAN ON OUR FRONTIERS.

Hear some recent statements from different points, West and South.

Hard Field.—"When I came here I found no preaching except one sermon in two weeks by another denomination, in a community of some three thousand inhabitants! And though there is a flourishing and promising village here, situated on the rail-road, and a rich, well-settled country, settled ten or twelve years, yet there is not a meeting-house or minister of any denomination, or any organized church, except a small one of the Methodist connexion! And what renders things still worse, is the complete failure of former attempts. There are in this field the ruins of three church organizations, attempted by denominations not our own, and the bad example of some who stand high in the Church! Another difficulty here is, the number of dead professors; some who were members of churches elsewhere, are now infidels or Universalists; others are Sabbath-breakers, and neglecters of religious duties. Another difficulty is the different connexions to which Christians have belonged—Seceders, Congregationalists, New and Old-school Presbyterians, from different parts of the world. It has been my object to unite them together. The prospect now seems flattering."

Pastor's Library.—"I am informed by Brother Hill that you are in the habit of donating to your missionaries the Minister's Library, and am requested by him to write to you on this subject, as he was requested by my friends to secure me some books which I very much need at this time. My library is small, and mostly composed of classical and literary books, as I have heretofore been engaged in teaching. My Commentary I was compelled to sell from necessity, and I greatly need the Minister's Library, and have not the means to purchase it, as my family expenses will eat up my salary, which is small for such an expensive country. I have been labouring here six months, and during that time have used neither milk, butter, tea nor coffee, at my table. The books will be thankfully received by one who is willing to sacrifice happiness and comfort, and to endure privations, to labour in this destitute field."

And now for a PASTOR'S STUDY! described by a brother.—"Before coming out here, the venerable Dr. Alexander, of Princeton, showed me a letter from a member of this Presbytery, asking for more labourers. He was very particular to remark, that whoever came out should not come looking for "feathered nests." Two of us responded to the call. Providence has so ordered it, that I, being a single man, have found my nest pretty well feathered thus far. But I cannot say the same for my brother who came out with me. He has now a family of five, besides himself—a wife, two children, a sister, and a nephew. Let me explain myself. He occupies one half of a house, that is, two rooms, one above the other. The upper room, 14 by 7, in size answers the purpose of a bed-room, and an omnium gatherum. The lower one, which is only three feet wider, answers for a bed-room, sitting-room, dining-room, nursery, kitchen and study! That part of this room which comprises his study, is literally four feet by five and a half, being hemmed up in one corner by the foot of a bed and the stove. The family, in all honesty, are cramped, and feel it very much, having never experienced the like before. My excellent brother is, by nature and practice, a student. He is a thorough-going Presbyterian minister, a capital hand at out-door work in the congregation, and no less able as a student in the midst of his books. But, my dear sir, what could reasonably be expected of him as a student under such circumstances? Just imagine to yourself, the chorus of sounds continually filling that small room! Not only from the living voices—from the oldest to the youngest—but also those emanating from the rattling, and buzzing, and hissing of the culinary department! All these sounds, in themselves innocent enough, and quite necessary—but studying in the midst of this family melée, I consider quite out of the question. The practical inference then is, that the congregation ought to have a Parsonage for their minister, and they know and acknowledge it. But they need a church building no less; and they are talking of that too, but they are not able to accomplish both objects. I think these facts furnish material for an argument, which a certain class of able men at the East can appreciate as a reason why they should help the feeble congregations and ministers of the West." And we may add throughout all our frontier settlements.

And a Pastor's Wife.—"My salary and subscriptions from the church have not supported us by a considerable sum, since we came here. This deficiency has been supplied chiefly by my wife's labour, teaching music, and a few girls in our house, with some assistance from me. That I might not be compelled to engage in teaching to any extent, but have my time to devote to my high calling, she has laboured often beyond her strength, and is still for the same object willing to do all she can." The full appropriation asked for this brother by his Presbytery, has been allowed by the Board.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts for January, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Londonderry.—Londonderry ch	$30 75
Pby of Troy.—2d Pres ch city of Troy	445 87
Pby of Albany.—Mrs Mary Speer, Balston Spa ch	1 50
Pby of Saratoga.—Ballston ch	33 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Wyoming.—Pres ch of Wyoming	30 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Penfield ch mon coll for past year 12; Pendleton and Wheatfield chs 12 30	24 30
Pby of Michigan.—Orion and Independence	7 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Dr J S Crane of Goshen Pres ch	10 00
Pby of North River.—Matteawan ch (2 payments) 35; Newburg ch additional 10	45 00
Pby of Long Island.—Southampton ch ann coll	25 00
Pby of New York.—Brick ch ann coll 1212 79; Williamsburg ch ann coll in part, 32 37; Duane st ch Sab Sch Miss Association 65; Chelsea ch, N Y in part 151 27	1461 43

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—New Providence ch 34; Westfield ch addl 1; Lamington ch ann coll addl 15; 1st Pres ch Rahway 80	130 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—Cranberry ch 35; 1st ch Princeton 3	38 00
Pby of West Jersey.—Williamstown ch 7 61; Greenwich ch 50	57 61
Pby of Newton.—Hackettstown ch 45; Blairstown ch 20; Knowlton ch 16; Belvidere ch 40	121 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Churches under care of Rev S H Gayley	21 09

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Robert Creighton, Esq, 6th Pres ch 10; Sab sch class in Great Valley ch 2; "A Friend" 10th Pres ch for sustentation fund 30, and for Dom Miss 25, Hon R C Grier 10, Dr W Shippen 5, Mr W Kirk 5, Mr H Catherwood 3, making together 78 from 10th ch; From Central ch as follows: By teachers of S S to con Rev W H Green, pastor, an hon mem 50, Mr J A Freeman 10, Mr Thos Beaver 10, Mr G C Napheys 5, Mr J F Taber 5, Mr James Wray 10, Mr J W Campbell 3, Mr C Hickling 1, Miss E King 1, making 95; Cohocksink ch 20; "Mrs S" 2d Pres ch, for California 10; 9th Pres ch, special deposit for Books (addl) 26 86	241 86
Pby of Philadelphia 2d.—Doylestown ch 21 22; Deep Run ch 4 78; Bridesburg ch 17 50	43 50
Pby of New Castle.—Forks of Brandywine church 50 60; "Rock Cent So." 7 20; Dover ch 8 16	65 96
Pby of Donegal.—Marietta Presbyterian ch	12 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Franklin street ch Balt 140; Bethel ch 12; Long Green ch 10 70; Same ch, Warren Factory Station 6 30; F Street church Washington city 91	260 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Petersburg ch 14; Fem Miss Soc Petersburg ch 18; Mr Brandson's children same ch 75 cents	32 75
Pby of Northumberland.—Shamokin ch	7 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Clarksburg ch, addl to const Rev E Quillan an hon mem	24 45

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Frederick ch 6; Fem Miss Soc of Frederickstown ch 50 cents	6 50

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Camden ch	2 00
Pby of Lake.—La Porte ch	40 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—North Sangamon ch	10 20
Pby of Wisconsin.—Milwaukee ch	5 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Church at Everettsville	16 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Georgia.—St Mary's and Linton Grove chs	21 50
Pby of Hopewell.—New Hope ch	9 00
Pby of Cherokee.—Summerville ch 17; Canton ch 3; Roswell ch 23; Pleasant Green ch 17	60 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

L Kirkpatrick, Esq. N Brunswick 150; Mrs. S E Baxter, Kesnick Depot, Va 1 50; Rev R C Galbraith, Baltimore 3 70; "J H" 7 50; "S." Summit Hill, Pa 2 50; Mrs E P Lewis, Blairsville, Pa 15; Rev J McCord, Amenia, N Y 1 50; C L Stewart Dickson, Honesdale, Pa 5; F C M 65 cts; Mrs A B, Clark co, Va 10; Rev Geo Hall, Pennington, N J 1; Rev C. R Lane, Tunkhannock 5; M T Dunlap, Greenwich, N Y 2; Jacob Sutphen, Brockport, N Y 3 50; A Young Friend of Missions, New Year's gift 1; A H R, N Y, 5	214 85

LEGACY.

Legacy of the Late Archibald McCallum, of Robeson co, N C, per Rev H McLean	50 00
Total	$3604 12

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts for January, 1851.

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Elizabethtown and Wolfs Run chs 10; West Liberty ch 21; Claysville ch 35; Fairview, a little Sab sch boy 12 cts	66 12
Pby of New Lisbon.—Liverpool ch 6; Champion ch 8	14 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Beulah ch	42 00
Pby of Redstone.—Uniontown ch, (of which from sewing soc 16 87, and Miss Duncan's Sab sch class 1 32) 107 25; Laurel Hill ch 50; New Providence ch 20	177 25
Pby of Ohio.—Monongahela City ch in part to const HENRY FULTON and ISAAC VANVORES hon mems 68; Hopewell ch addl 19; Racoon ch 39 19	126 19
Pby of Allegheny.—West Nebo ch from Mr Thos Cratty 5; Butler ch in part 35	40 00
Pby of Beaver.—Unity ch	5 83
Pby of Erie.—Evansburg ch 1; Conneautville ch 7 50, ($5 of which by ladies;) Girard ch 1 75; Sturgeonsville ch 3 25; Franklin ch 8; Sandy Lake ch 3; Amity ch 4; Meadville ch 30	58 50
Pby of Clarion.—Licking ch 5; Mill Creek ch 2 22	7 22

LEGACY.

Legacy of Robert McFarland, Jr (less Tax) per Executor	23 75

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Meadville church	10 00
Total	$570 86

CLOTHING.

From Miss Soc of Cadiz ch box valued at	75 53

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts in the Treasury at Louisville, Ky. during the month of January, 1851.

Lebanon ch Ohio per Rev C Levenworth	$80 00
Naddy Run ch in part do do	36 00
do do do	32 52
Fellon Springs ch in part per Rev C Levenworth	34 45
Buck Creek ch do do do	25 05
Mrs Mason Urbana do do	5 00
Individual donation in Dayton, O. per Rev C Levenworth	97 00
Pisgah ch West Lex Pby per I S Berryman	15 00
Geo Benson part of Note per Rev C Sturdevant	100 00
Danville Ky (in part) do do	165 35
Harrodsburgh do do do	65 00
Nicholasville do do do	77 00
Perryville do do do	16 75
Lancaster do do do	19 00
Washington Ky in part do do	25 00
Female Miss Soc Maysville Ky balance of 150 to sustain Rev Mr Scott Mo per Rev C Sturdevant	50 00
One individual of same ch do do	5 00
Mrs M C Irwin Fayette co Ky do do	5 00
A few persons in Richmond Ky do do	19 25
McCord ch addl Ky do do	56 15
Lexington 1st ch coll Ky	57 45
Dr R J Breckinridge	45 00
Ladies Dom Miss Soc Ky	33 00
Indianapolis ch Ind addl	55 00
Louisville 2d ch per Rev E P Humphrey	100 00
New Washington ch per Rev Wm C Walker	5 00
Mulberry ch Ky per Rev J D Paxton	11 00
Mrs F Dewees Lex Ky to sustain miss'y in the West	100 00
Oquawka ch Henderson co Ill per Wm R Talbot	5 00
Louisville 1st per Miss M A McNutt	20 00
Mulberry chs Morton 5, Mrs E Morton 50, per C Sturdevant	55 00
Wm Hanna 10, Step Hanna 2, per C Sturdevant	12 00
Shelbyville in part do do	55 00
Shiloh and Olivet addl do do	37 00
Mrs Hall's last year sub do do	5 00
Coll in Sab Sch Oxford Ohio do do	3 00
Rising Sun Ind ch per Rev W H Moore	6 00
Louisville 1st ch (in part)	30 00
Do do do	50 00
Do do do	50 00
Shiloh and Olivet do	10 00
South Presb ch coll Galena Ill per Rev Thomas Foster	44 00
Goshen ch Ky (in part) per F Snowden	88 00
C J Cist per Rev W W Hill	2 50
Louisville 4th ch mon con per Mr Stone	10 65
Perryville ch Ky per Rev Wm E Crawford	16 00
Clayland ch Vincennes Pby Ind per Jas R Alexander	2 00
Indiana ch Vincennes Pby Ind per Jas R Alexander	6 80
Upper Ind ch do do do do	17 20
Mount Hope ch Ind per D A Wallace	2 50
Adams ch Tenn per Rev J W Ogden	6 00
James Griffith Tenn per Rev J W Ogden	5 00
Jamestown do do do	1 50
Concord do do E S Campbell	3 65
2d ch Memphis do do John Hancock	62 50
Truro ch Ohio do W R Brice	3 75
Honey Creek ch Ohio do Edward Wright	7 00
Bath do do do	9 00
Brunswick ch Ill do Wm J Frazier	6 00
Graham ch Ind do Dan'l Lattimore	5 00
Cambridge ch Ind do F P Monfort	8 00
Ebenezer do do do	5 00
Newport ch Mo do Jos F Fenton	3 05
Washington ch Mo do do	3 50
Lynn Grove ch do J S Fullerton	5 75
Marion Iowa do do	3 45
Raleigh Tenn do Dan'l L Gray	36 55
Holly Springs Miss do do	120 00
Union ch Ind do Robt Irwin	11 50
Hopewell ch Ind do do	11 05
Yorktown do do do	9 25
Total	$2341 66

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

MIND AND CULTURE.

The ministry of the church is to be recruited from the mind and the culture of the rising generation. The talent should, if possible, be of the best, and the culture of the highest. The natural endowment is to be discovered in time for early training, and tested to a reasonable insurance of future usefulness. The culture is to be applied to the germ, and the twig as it grows must be bent as the tree is to be inclined. The whole work of education should therefore be conducted on the basis of religion. The child must be trained from the first in the way he should go. The nucleus of character should be developed by the Christian standard, and the nurture and admonition of the Lord must form and preserve the principles of the future minister of the gospel. The servants of the sanctuary should be more of them like Samuel, dedicated to the Lord, and sanctified from infancy. Then the office of the ministry will be more sought as the chosen sphere in which the devotion of the soul to Christ shall find its happiest exercise and fairest expression.

A PASTORAL LETTER

TO CANDIDATES FOR THE GOSPEL MINISTRY.

Issued by the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church.

Presbyterian Education Rooms,
Philadelphia, February, 1851.

Dear Christian Brother—May "grace, mercy, and peace," be given unto you "from God our Father, and Jesus Christ our Lord." Few stand in greater need of a divine, helping power, than one, who like yourself, is a candidate for the office of the holy ministry. We deem it a privilege to address you, in behalf of the Church, a few fraternal words with a view to practical improvement, and have selected as a topic, the importance of reading and studying the Bible, the great and good book of God, written by "holy men of old, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Our object is to urge upon your attention the daily, prayerful, intelligent and conscientious study of the Bible.

Among the motives which should consecrate the word of God to every Christian, and more particularly to a candidate for the ministry, is the great fact that,

I. The Bible contains the only plan of salvation. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" is the substance of prophecy, the joyful hope of promises, the solemn prefiguring of moral and ceremonial law, and the grace and glory of evangelical precept and exhortation. The Bible keeps before the mind and heart the atoning sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ. It exalts the Son of God as the Saviour of sinners. It is filled with salvation by grace. The Bible is the student's help in preserving his interest in the plan of redemption through the merits of another. As a dying sinner, you need to be reminded daily of the first principles of the gospel of Christ; as a future minister of the Church, you need to be thoroughly indoctrinated into all that pertains to the scheme of reconciliation between God and man. Therefore, dear brother, read, study your Bible. It will bring you every day to Calvary and Christ. "Search the Scriptures: for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

II. The Bible is the rule of life. Does the mariner require chart and observations to guide him over the seas? How much more do you and we require the instructions of the Book of Life in our journey to eternity? The Bible contains principles to regulate human conduct in every possible variety of daily circumstances and emergencies. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, and thy neighbour as thyself," is the high requirement of moral excellence it holds forth. Its precepts inculcate holiness in every form of virtue—meekness, gentleness, temperance, purity, brotherlykindness, diligence, forbearance, charity. The human heart, prone to undervalue these sacred graces, is constantly exhorted to their cultivation in the written word with the authority of its uncompromising and intelligible standard. The Bible, in the solemn and persuasive spirit of intimate friendship, converses with us about "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."

III. The reading of the Bible is auxiliary to devotion and to high christian attainment. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth," is the petition of Christ in behalf of the spiritual welfare of his redeemed. The Holy Spirit, who indited the Bible, comes down to bless those who bend over its pages. The work of His own power is the instrument of grace to them that honour it. The word of God enjoins the necessity of daily prayer, of "praying always," of "continuing instant in prayer." Its truth is the ally of devotion, the help of the exercises which its precepts inculcate. Was there ever an eminent Christian that did not love his Bible? If any one does not read diligently the Holy Scriptures, it is proof that he has not made high attainments in the divine life. Nor can he ever rise to much elevation of Christian character, whilst neglecting communion with the Father, Son and Spirit in the sacred pages of Revelation.

IV. The Bible is a delineator of human character. There is a constant tendency to overlook our real condition, to forget our depravity, selfishness, pride, and natural aversion to divine things. The word of God is the Mirror of Human Nature, to reflect back the depths of our depravity. It delineates the character of man in all the reality of its imperfections, in all the perversity of its guilt. "Thou art the man" is the emphatic alarm of its secret-knowing pages. Yes, brother in Christ, the Bible describes us as we are; it lays open our evil hearts of unbelief; it keeps us in the dust; it makes us realize our sinfulness. Therefore, let us diligently read our Bibles.

V. The Bible is the text-book of the theologian. It is the repository of Christian doctrine—the storehouse of the truth of Heaven. A mind that is well versed in the knowledge of what is written, and that has long fed upon the abundance of Divine Revelation, has the intellectual preparation for the ministry which no other learning can supply. The great danger of students is in not going to the Bible for their mental resources. They often place more reliance upon some able text-book of human composition than upon the oracles of God. Some of them, owing to early neglect, have a very imperfect acquaintance with Biblical history — not so much, sometimes, as Sabbath-school scholars of ordinary attainment. And others, who make it a matter of conscience to read the Bible, day by day, are, nevertheless, unable to quote texts readily in proof of theological doctrine. The absurdity, as well as criminality, of this oversight of the word of God, in the preparations that aim at expounding and preaching it, is apparent. It is a great evil of the times. It is an evil that every candidate for the ministry is under the most solemn obligations to eradicate from the history of his personal experience. No minister can expect to preach "in demonstration of the Spirit and with power" who neglects the use of "words which the Holy Ghost teacheth." "The sword of the Spirit" is "the word of God." A verse of scripture, well applied, seals the exposition of doctrine with divine authority. The old maxim, "a good textuist is a good theologian" is true in all ages. A thorough knowledge of the Bible is indispensable to a thorough acquaintance with theology, or to the edifying proclamation of its gracious truths. We beseech you, therefore, to place your main reliance, in your preparations for the ministry, upon the word of God, and not upon the word of man.

VI. A practical acquaintance with the Bible affords comfort in sorrow and trial. We are born to sorrow; trials are our natural allotment. Especially must the faithful minister of Jesus Christ expect trial in standing up between the living and the dead, and "in warning every one night and day with tears." The minister needs consolation in the midst of the ordinary dispensations which come upon him, and in the official temptations and griefs more immediately connected with the sacred office. The Bible is to him, as to all, a chief source of strength, support and joy. "Thy testimonies also are my delight and my counsellors." "This is my comfort in my affliction; for thy word hath quickened me." "Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage." You may be assured, young brother, that in reading diligently and prayerfully your Bible, you are laying up for yourself consolation against the time of trouble.

VII. The Bible is a stimulant of evangelical activity. Who, more than a minister, should glow with zeal, be forward in every good word and work, and be clad with the whole armour of God, down to the sandals of the "preparation of the gospel of peace?" And whence does the ambassador of Christ derive the enterprise and the energy to spend and be spent in his Master's service? Not exclusively from the Bible, but from the Bible as one of the means of this grace. In the universal spirit of its doctrines, in the fervour of its exhortations, in the joy of its rewards, in its examples of apostolic deeds and endurance, in the glorious light of the unceasing benevolence of the Son of God, the Bible furnishes animating motives to Christian activity. No one, more than a minister, has need of his Bible to arouse him to work for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ.

VIII. The Bible brings heaven to view with the glories of its everlasting rest. Our life of sin and sorrow is to end, if we are the Lord's, in perfect holiness and peace. The Christian minister is refreshed by the anticipations of "the glory that is to be revealed." With the Holy Scriptures in his hand, he looks upward with the gracious assurance that there is "a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give him in that day." "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal immortality." Sweet to the believer in the hour of death is the life-giving "truth as it is in Jesus." Precious always has been its influence in preparing for the conflict with the king of terrors; and oh, how precious is the Heaven which its revelations, having brought to view in life, leave to be entered upon at death, "to the full enjoying of God through all eternity!"

We have thus in a cursory manner and in a friendly and pastoral spirit endeavoured to "stir up your pure mind by way of remembrance" in regard to the sacred Scriptures. The most profitable mode of reading them is believed to be at stated hours of the day, in regular course and with prayer. Hoping that this communication may tend in some humble measure by God's grace, to strengthen your sense of the value of the Bible, and to increase your determination to become more and more familiar with its contents, in your preparations for the ministry,

We are your fellow-servants in Christ,

C. Van Rensselaer,
Wm. Chester.

In behalf of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Good Aims.—Aim with the most conscientious solicitude, at purity of motive in all your ministerial engagements.

Repress, to the utmost, the feelings of vanity, and pride, and the undue desire of popular applause.

Let the grand points in religion have the due prominence in your discourses.

Aim, in preaching, at the utmost seriousness and earnestness of manner.

Laziness Contagious.—A most curious instance of a change of instinct is mentioned by Darwin. The bees carried over to Barbadoes and the Western Islands ceased to lay up honey after the first year. They found the weather so fine, and materials for honey so plentiful, that they quitted their grave, prudent, and mercantile character, became exceedingly profligate and debauched, ate up their capital, resolved to work no more, and amused themselves by flying about the sugar houses and stinging the negroes.

Suffering.—There is a great want about all Christians who have not suffered. Some flowers must be broken or bruised before they emit any fragrance. All the wounds of Christ sent out sweetness, all the sorrows of Christians do the same. Commend to me a bruised brother, a broken reed, one like the Son of Man. To me there is something sacred and sweet in all suffering; it is so much akin to the Man of Sorrows.

Humility.—Remember, Moses wist not that his face shone. Looking at our own shining face is the bane of spiritual life and of the ministry. O for the closest communion with God, till soul and body, head, face and heart shine with divine brilliancy; but, oh, for a holy ignorance of our shining!

Bereavements.—O God, how thou breakest into families! Must not the disease be dangerous, when a tender-hearted surgeon cuts deep into the flesh? How much more when God is the operator, who afflicteth not from his heart, nor grieveth the children of men.

Christ's Intercession.—I ought to study Christ as an intercessor. He prayed most for Peter, who was to be most tempted. I am on his breastplate. If I could hear Christ praying for me in the next room, I would not fear a million of enemies. Yet the distance makes no difference—he is praying for me.

Wearing out for Christ.—The oil of the lamp in the temple burnt out in giving light; so should we.

WORK AND CONTEMPLATION.

BY ELIZABETH B. BARRETT.

The woman singeth at her spinning-wheel
A pleasant chant, ballad, or barcarolle;
She thinketh of her song, upon the whole,
Far more than of her flax; and yet the reel
Is full, and artfully her fingers feel
With quick adjustment, provident control,
The lines, too subtly twisted to unroll
Out to a perfect thread. I hence appeal
To the dear Christian church—that we may do
Our Father's business in these temples mirk,
Thus, swift and steadfast; thus, intent and strong;
While, thus apart from toil, our souls pursue
Some high, calm, spheric tune, and prove our work
The better for the sweetness of our song.

Hint to Ministers.—The Rev. J. Brown, of Haddington, tutor in divinity to the Associate Synod, in a letter of paternal counsels and cautions to one of his pupils newly settled in a small congregation, wrote thus:—"I know the vanity of your heart, and that you will feel mortified that your congregation is very small in comparison with those of your brethren around you; but assure yourself, on the word of an old man, that when you come to give an account of them to the Lord Christ, at his judgment-seat, you will think you have had enough."—Life of Dr. Waugh.

Heart Work.—Heart work is difficult work.—Heart work is hard work indeed. To shuffle over religious duties with a loose and heedless spirit, will cost no great pains—but to set thyself before the Lord, and tie up thy loose and vain thoughts to a constant and serious attendance upon him, this will cost thee something. To attain a facility and dexterity of language in prayer, and put thy meaning into apt and decent expression, is easy; but to get thy heart broken for sin, while thou art confessing it; melted with free grace, while thou art blessing God for it; to be really ashamed and humbled through the apprehensions of God's infinite holiness, and to keep thy heart in this frame, not only in, but after duty, will surely cost thee some groans and pains of soul.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

THE SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES AND COLLEGES OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

It is a common remark that a great deal depends upon the education of the rising generation. The truth of this remark is relied upon to gain attention to the following statement.

The Presbyterian Church, anxious to train up her children for God, has resolved to unite religion and learning in her public institutions. Without waging an indiscriminate warfare with those who differ from her in her views of education, she is aiming to establish on Christian principles schools and other institutions of a suitable grade, wherever it may be practicable. The oversight of this matter, especially so far as relates to feeble institutions, has been committed to the Board of Education.

The following are the educational statistics of our Church during the last year. There were in operation

100 Schools under the care of Churches.
34 Classical Academies under the care of Presbyteries.
11 Colleges under the care of Synods.
5 Theological Seminaries.

The following disbursements were made by the Board of Education during the same period, to assist in establishing and sustaining such of these institutions as needed aid, viz.

$1,435	for Schools.
2,064 89	for Academies.
2,750	for Colleges.
843	for Theological Seminaries.
$7,092 89	for all.

It is perfectly obvious that, without a good supply of funds, the operations of our Church in this department must be very unequal and deficient.

In 1848 a meeting was held in New York, for the purpose of forming a Society to aid feeble Colleges and Seminaries in the West; but it was finally resolved to engraft the contemplated movement upon the existing Board of Education. One of the motives which induced the New York pastors to favour this measure was the necessity of systematizing the whole work of aiding educational institutions. So many demands were made upon the churches in New York and vicinity by agents from the West, that it was deemed essential to the prosperity of the common cause to arrest what was felt to be a growing evil. The remedy proposed was to make the Board of Education the channel through which the donations of the churches were to be received and disbursed. Hitherto the Board have not been under any necessity of making a special appeal for Schools and Colleges. That time has, however, now arrived. There is not a single dollar in the treasury. Our school funds, which last year amounted to $7200, were chiefly derived from a balance of $2300 from the preceding year, and from a private donation of $4000.

Instead of encouraging agents to visit the East for the endowment of Colleges, &c., the Board of Education have acted upon the principle of endeavouring to secure endowments within the local territory of the institutions themselves, and of encouraging them to make this effort by the promise of some annual aid during this interval, or until they could take care of themselves. In this way the Board were the means of endowing a College last year, at a very small expense to the general treasury.

As a specimen of the wants to be supplied within the bounds of our Church, we refer to three colleges in the North-west—one in Illinois, one in Iowa, and one in Wisconsin. These institutions, in their preparatory stages, rather resemble academies; but with the growth of the States in which they are located, they will become in time flourishing colleges, and contribute largely to the supplies of the learned professions, and to the general elevation of the community. The Rev. John A. Savage of Ogdensburgh, who is known as one of our ablest and most worthy ministers, has recently accepted the Presidency of Carroll College, Wisconsin, but, as the college is in its infancy, a large part of his salary for a year or two must come from the Board.

A letter lately received from the West, and addressed to Dr. Krebs, and through him to the New York churches, contains the following statements:

"By turning to the Minutes of the Assembly, you will see there has been but little progress in the churches in this Presbytery for fifteen years. Our churches are not as promising as they were five years ago. The population is increasing, and our country is improving rapidly. Other denominations have their schools, academies and colleges, male and female. We have not one respectable institution of learning that we can call our own. Our children go to those of other denominations. In this way, the best portion of our youth are brought under other influences than our own. In former years I have made these representations to other ministers in the East, but without success: I now make them to you, and request you will take the matter under serious advisement, and inform me if anything can be done to furnish us the means whereby to educate our own youth. At the present time we need one male and two female academies in our bounds, of as good character and reputation as any in the country. $1300 for each, with what could be raised at home, would answer our purpose to begin with. . . . . Unless we can have such schools, I apprehend our churches will decline, until we will have to abandon them and seek other locations."

Other facts might be mentioned to show the absolute necessity of aiding our brethren in various sections of our Church in establishing and sustaining institutions of learning. We shall merely introduce an additional statement to illustrate the true working of the Assembly's plan of education. It is taken from a letter of the Principal of one of our academies.

"We think we can safely affirm, that our school conducted upon the principles recommended by the General Assembly, has proved these things, viz.

"I. That schools thus conducted are easily governed, the scholars being made kind and affectionate towards each other and towards the teacher, thus almost entirely dispensing with corporal punishment.

"II. That a due proportion of religious study is no hindrance to the acquisition of other knowledge. As those pupils, who are exempt, by the command of their parents, from studying the doctrines and order of the Presbyterian Church, do not excel in any respect (if they equal) those who make these a part of their study.

"III. That where church schools are started, and conducted prudently, no opposition need be feared. Our school is constantly increasing, so much so that we do not expect to ask any further aid from the Board."

These principles of education recommended by the General Assembly, are not new. They are Bible principles: they are the principles of the Reformation; they are Puritan principles. In the language of Dr. Chalmers, "the schools for which we are pleading are scriptural schools, in the character and system of the good olden time—where the Bible and the Catechism are taught, and the minds of children are brought into contact with those holy principles and truths, by which alone they can be made wise unto salvation. We trust you perceive a momentous interest involved in the support and multiplication, not merely of schools, but of such schools." Our New England and Presbyterian fathers acted upon these principles in the olden time, in founding their schools and colleges. Nor is the plan of aiding feeble colleges a novelty. The buildings of Princeton College were originally put up by funds which the Synod of New York begged in Scotland, through the agency of Gilbert Tennent and Samuel Davies. More recently, the Society to aid colleges and seminaries in the West has been established by our New England and New-school brethren. Our own Church owes it to her past and present history to take a share in this great work.

It is hoped that the requisite aid will be given to the Board to carry their plans into successful execution.

Presbyterian Education Rooms,
Philadelphia, Feb. 1851.

HARD WORK AND COURAGE.

Educational institutions are not built up in a day. It takes time to consider the plan; time to lay the foundation; time to build the walls; time to put on the roof; time to furnish with men and apparatus; time to gather in students; time to secure results. We must be patient. But we must work hard and take courage. One of the poets of the day, Tennyson, has beautifully written:

> What time I wasted youthful hours,
> One of the shining, winged powers
> Showed me vast cliffs, with crowns of towers.
>
> As towards that gracious light I bowed,
> They seemed high palaces and proud,
> Hid now and then with sliding cloud.
>
> He said "The labour is not small;
> Yet winds the pathway free to all:
> Take care thou dost not fear to fall!"

Brethren, who are nobly and zealously toiling for the rising generation; whose hearts and hands are engaged in building up institutions of learning and religion to the glory of the Redeemer's name, who are founding schools, academies, and colleges in these "youthful hours" of the educational movement of our Church—to you, the poetry is reality, "The labour is not small;" but take courage, and "Do not fear to fall!" Let faith add energy to humility, and let enterprise be stimulated with hope!

ANOTHER PRESBYTERIAL ACADEMY, AT MONTPELIER, OHIO.

MAUMEE PRESBYTERY.

If the blessing of God accompanies Christian training, is not the Church wise in attending to the institutions of education? All admit that Home nurture is first of all in importance. But Christian nurture should not stop at home. Our sons and daughters need the inculcation of religious truth, wherever they go. The same covenant of grace must be kept in view at home, at the school, at the academy, at the college, and at the Theological Seminary.

The Presbytery of Maumee have resolved to establish, with the Divine blessing, an institution which shall secure suitable religious training for its youth in connexion with their advancement in other departments of knowledge. The following letter contains an account of the action of the Presbytery:

"The Presbytery resolved to attempt to establish a Presbyterial Academy in their bounds on the plan proposed by the Assembly, and appointed J. M. Crabb, Philip Condit, and D. S. Anderson, ministers, and Arthur Cleland, P. C. Parker, and Robert Ogle, elders, a committee with full powers to carry the plan into operation. The committee were further authorized to make application to the Board of Education for aid to sustain a teacher.

"The Committee met after the adjournment of Presbytery, and elected the Rev. James H. Anderson to give instruction in said institution. Mr. Anderson is an experienced teacher, and the Committee feel confident, that with the blessing of God on his untiring exertions, such an institution may be built up in this new and interesting portion of our country, if brother Anderson can be sustained in its infancy. It is to be located in Williams county, near Montpelier, in the bounds of the congregation of West Bethesda. This church has very kindly granted, without charge, the use of their house of worship until a more suitable house can be erected. It is designed that the course of studies shall be varied and extensive, embracing all that is necessary to enable young men to enter with credit to themselves institutions of a higher order. The daily exercises of the school will be opened and closed with reading the Scriptures, prayer; and catechetical instruction in the doctrines and duties of the Christian religion, will claim the attention of the pupils a part of the time daily."

"COME OUT OF HER, MY PEOPLE!"

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE, KY.

This is the name of a Roman Catholic seminary located at Bardstown. A difficulty arose some time since between the students and the faculty, from the recent enforcement of a rule requiring the Protestant students to kneel in the chapel at the ceremony called "the elevation of the host," when the priest lifts up the consecrated wafer in sight of the people. Heretofore, they had only been enjoined to respectful and quiet behaviour. They could not kneel in adoration without in fact adopting Romanism and forswearing their own belief. On the attempted enforcement of this outrage, they sent a committee to the President to ask a repeal of the law. The Presbyterian Herald says:

"He answered them, as he says, by quoting the rule, and remarking, 'There it is; it is all you may ever expect from me.' The feelings of the young gentlemen were hurt by this abrupt manner. They had looked for something which, though it might be firm, would yet be kind. They retired, and immediately some twenty of the Protestant boys, constituting almost all the large ones, left the college. Some hours after they had left, some of the professors came up and told them that the law was repealed, and offered them many inducements to return, but without avail. Their rights had been infringed, and their endeavours to protect those rights met with harshness and rudeness, and they would not again place themselves in a situation where such a thing might once more occur."

Dr. Rice, of the Presbyterian of the West, adds:

"St. Joseph's College is an old acquaintance of ours, though it did not, in years gone by, take quite so high ground as now. Its aim, however, was the same, as we had occasion repeatedly to prove. It never did make scholars; but it did sometimes make converts to Popery. We know not to what extent the Jesuits have improved its literary character, but when we were acquainted with it, it was one of the poorest concerns, as to its literary attainments, in the State. We trust this flareup will open the eyes of Protestants."

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

I give and devise to the Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the sum of ——— dollars, to and for the uses of the said Board of Education, and under its direction.

[When real estate, or other property, is given, let it be particularly described.]

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, JANUARY, 1851.

Presbytery of Londonderry.
1st ch Newburyport Ms to const Rev A G Vermilye an hon mem	$80 00
Presbytery of Troy.
2d st ch Troy	260 50
Presbytery of Albany.
Schenectady church	128 00
Presbytery of Columbia.
Lexington Heights ch addl	2 00
Presbytery of Hudson.
Mount Hope church	31 00
Presbytery of North River.
Matteawan church	20 00
Presbytery of New York.
1st ch N Y in part 881 50, less 73 for General Education Fund 808 50; Duane st ch 181 92; Brick ch collection 616 86, Mrs Ruth Terbell 75—691 86	1682 28
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
Pennington ch addl	1 50
Presbytery of West Jersey.
Greenwich church	20 00
Presbytery of Susquehanna.
Silver Lake ch (of which $20 in part from a lady to const an hon mem)	60 00
Presbytery of Luzerne.
Mauch Chunk church	8 00
Presbytery of Newton.
Belvidere church	25 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
2d ch, a member 50 cts; 10th ch, coll 286, A B Cooley 5, Moses Johnson 75, T H Hoge 25, W G Billin 1—392 in part; 11th ch, coll 21 20, J D Reinboth 25, Wilfred Hall 10, Rev Jno Miller 5, H D Sherrerd 5, A M Herkness 5, Chas Raynor 5, D J Kennedy 5, M E D 3, I Harbert Jr 2 50, Mrs C Umsted 2, A J Montgomery 1, Mrs A Hipple 1, B Thackara 1, W G Baker 1, Miss E W Jeffries 1, A Widow's mite 25 cents, in all 93 95 in part of subscription; Central ch, G W McClelland 25, Mrs Richards 5, W W Fleming 15, Mrs Alex Henry 20, making 65 addl; Spring Garden ch, J Neill 2	553 45
Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.
Newtown church	11 00
Presbytery of New Castle.
Forks of Brandywine church	31 35
Presbytery of Donegal.
Marietta church	7 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
F street ch Washington D C	60 00
Presbytery of Carlisle.
Dillsburg ch 8; Hunterstown ch 30	38 00
Presbytery of Huntington.
Derry and Washingtonville chs 28; Sinking Creek ch 70 25; Spring Creek ch 48 10	146 35
Presbytery of Sidney.
Piqua church	10 00
Presbytery of Lake.
Valparaiso ch, Mrs Mary E Brown	5 00
Presbytery of Sangamon.
North Sangamon church	4 07
Presbytery of Wisconsin.
North ch Milwaukie	5 00
Presbytery of East Hanover.
1st ch Richmond Va	283 00
Presbytery of West Hanover.
Roanoke church	20 00
Presbytery of Hopewell.
New Hope church	4 05
MISCELLANEOUS.
A Friend per Rev Dr Boardman 100; An Individual through Rev Dr Plumer for a candidate 100; A Friend, quarterly payment on three scholarships 150; Rev W J McCord, Amenia, N Y 1; J Suthpen, Brookport N Y 3 50; Mrs S E Baxter, Kenswick Depot Va 1 50	356 00
Total	$3852 55

II. Fund for Schools, &c.

1st ch New York 73; Brooklyn 2d ch N Y 51 25; Titusville ch N J 15	139 25

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,

No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Compiled from letters received at the Mission House, to the 10th of February.

Furrukhabad Mission.—A letter has been received from the Rev. A. H. Seely, of December 7th. Mr. Seely's health was so far restored as to permit him to resume his duties at the station. The examination of the Furrukhabad school had been held, before a number of English and native gentlemen—amongst the latter, the Maha Rajah Delup Singh. Great satisfaction was expressed at the progress of the scholars, and the Rajah gave a donation of two hundred rupees to enable poor boys to come to the school.

The letters by the overland mail of November have not yet come to hand, nor any of the December letters except Mr. Seely's. We infer from his that Messrs. Wilson and McAuley, with their families, have set out on their return to this country. This measure has been expected for some time, on account of health, Mr. Wilson having been so long in India, nearly seventeen years, that his constitution has become impaired; and Mr. McAuley being subject to a complaint that requires a change of climate. It is somewhat uncertain whether Mr. McAuley will be able to go back to India. Mr. Wilson hopes to return to his field of labour. In consequence of these changes, Mr. Walsh has removed to Futtehgurh, and Mr. Scott to Agra.

Creek Mission.—Letters have been received to the 3d of January. James Junkin, M. D., and his wife have been appointed assistant missionaries in connection with this mission, and have reached their station at Tallahassee. A church was organized at Tallahassee, with three elders, one of them an Indian, the other two teachers; and one of the scholars was received as a member on examination. Others profess to be anxious about the salvation of their souls. At this station there are eighty boarders, and some day-scholars.

Otoe and Omaha Mission.—By a letter of the Rev. E. McKinney, of December 26th, we learn that the condition of this mission was marked by no material change. From the Report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, transmitted to Congress with the President's Message, we extract a paragraph, which is found on page 41, in the report of John E. Barrow, Indian Sub-agent at Council Bluffs: "The Rev. E. McKinney, who is in charge of the Otoe and Omaha mission, is effecting much good among these tribes. His school numbers constantly from thirty to forty children, and many seem to be making rapid strides in civilization and education." Mr. Barrow recommends that Pawnee children should be placed for the present in this school; and adds, what must be read with deep interest, "The number of children, under the age of twelve years, belonging to this tribe, (the Pawnees,) would, I am confident, reach twelve hundred, a most astonishing number, when it is recollected that their whole population will not amount to over four or five thousand. What a vast field is here open for the philanthropic and benevolent!"

Iowa and Sac Mission.—The number of scholars in the Mission School, when last reported, was thirty-nine. The Rev. W. Hamilton says, "In addition to the instruction given to the children at the station, the adult Indians are visited at their homes, for the purpose of imparting to them religious instruction. These visits are made three times a week, unless something providential occur to prevent them. The attention they give to preaching on these occasions is often good, and at other times quite indifferent. No special improvement is manifest among them, yet, we hope, our labours in their behalf are not altogether in vain."

Concerning the brethren of this mission, the Rev. Messrs. Hamilton and Irwin, the Indian Sub-agent, Major Richardson, in his report to Government, gives his "testimony to the fidelity, diligence, and prudence with which they have discharged their responsible and laborious duties to these poor Indians, labouring faithfully and industriously for their present and future welfare."

AFRICA: MISSION NEAR THE EQUATOR.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. G. W. SIMPSON.

(Continued from page 26.)

Leave Gaboon.—Arrive at Corisco.—Interview with the Natives.—Notice of a Romish priest.

The first journey of Messrs. Simpson and Mackey to the river Muni was described in our last number. It made them anxious to penetrate further into the interior by that route; but their arrangements compelled them to return to the Gaboon, without accomplishing this object. They made a second journey, therefore, to Corisco and to the Muni—of which we have the following narrative.

June 12th. Having collected our boatmen, and having made every preparation for a journey of two weeks, we set sail about 8 A. M. for Corisco Bay. Our boat was altogether manned and commanded by natives: Tom Whitemen was our Captain. The expense of crew to us would be about $2 per day. We made the island of Corisco at three o'clock, P. M. having run about seven and a-half miles per hour.

As we drew near the land, we were met by a boat, asking us if we were the missionaries, and requesting us to come to their town. They were told we were coming to visit Corisco, and would go to all the towns. We were met on the beach by a number of natives who conducted us to the house of the head man of the town. Immediately the house was filled with men. Their demeanor was very civil and respectful. Bro. Mackey spoke to them a few minutes of the object of our visit, and asked some questions in regard to their views of missionaries coming to live on their island. Several chiefs replied with great earnestness. The substance of the reply was, that they were glad to have us come to Corisco. They were friends to the Americans. That they feared the French would come, but they were determined to oppose them. "Suppose," said one, "French ship come for put man for we town, and dash we ship load dollars, we no fit for let him come. Every man, every child, yes every woman would die first. No more they let him come."

We were now at the south-west part of the island. Entering the boat again we sailed to the east about a mile to Munga's place. The town of the King of Corisco is a few hundred yards in the rear of Munga's. On landing here almost the first individual we met was one of the priests from Little Corisco. He was dressed in a long black gown, buttoned from the feet to the chin, and carried his book with him beneath his arm. Having been informed of our purpose to visit Corisco Island, and that there was some probability of our locating there, it appears that he had come up a couple of days before us, in order to get the consent of the people to establish a Mission. He had taking lodgings in Munga's house, where we intended also to remain during the night.

The night spent in a native house.—Privations of the first missionaries to Africa.—The Priest's offer, and the cause of it.

A crowd of noisy natives gathered around us, but the symptoms of an approaching fever prevented me from conversing with them, and I soon found a place to sleep. The room which was given us to lodge in was a filthy apartment about ten feet square. Although it contained neither window nor chimney, yet it appeared to have been used for a kitchen. The floor was composed entirely of ashes and loose sand, several inches in depth. A frame of bamboo rods, raised a few inches from the dust, served to put our beds upon; and over this was suspended a large native cloth in the form of a bag, which served as a mosquito curtain. Our boatmen talked till midnight, which, together with the swarm of rats, which infested our little apartment, deprived us considerably of rest. One who has become acquainted with the manner of living among native Africans, can well conceive of the privations of the first missionaries who came to this country. They were thrown houseless, and unprotected amongst a savage people. And, with such accommodations as their habitations could afford, the wonder is, not that their lives were so short, but that they lived as long as many of them did.

June 13th. Early this morning the house was again filled with natives. The priest called us into the yard, and informed us through our interpreter, with whom he could speak some Mpongwe, that if we wished to remain, or locate here, he could not stay. That if we wished, he would give place to us and go to the other side of the island. He appeared to be very humble and yielding in his manner; but his Jesuitical craft was too manifest not to be noticed. For, as we learned in less than an hour after, the king, Mumbi, had refused his consent to his staying here. A native came and told us a few minutes after we had been talking with him, "That man heart burn him plenty because Mumbi no like him for live here." What he said, therefore, was merely converting a necessity into the appearance of an humble yielding of preference to us. We informed him that we had come to see the Corisco people, and intended to visit a number of the principal towns that day—that we would meet the king and his people in about an hour, and if we should be pleased with the island as a location for a Mission, and the people should be desirous to have us come, we would then settle on it, we knew not yet at which side. We also invited him to accompany us to Mumbi's to the palaver. This he declined.

Site for Mission premises.—Visit to the western side of the island.—Hospitable reception.—Desire of the Natives for a Missionary.

The "palaver," or council, was held, and the people expressed a great desire that our brethren should remain with them. On the inquiry being made for a suitable place for building houses for the missionaries, the people—

All arose at once, and told us to follow them. They took us along a crooked path, lying through little valleys and over little hills, and past two towns till we came to a fine brook of cool, sweet water, which they told us rose in the centre of the island, and flowed down here to the sea. We were then shown two elevated spots, overlooking the sea, which would afford good sites for a house.

Calling our men together, we loosed and sailed round to the western part of the island. The appearance of the island from the sea, especially opposite the south-west point, called Ugoni, is beautiful. The breeze was very fresh when we passed this point, and the sea, as the natives would say, was saucy. Around the base of Ugoni, which is composed of solid rock, it broke and roared in wild grandeur. Running three or four miles along the western side of the island, we came to a quiet little bay, in which we stopped, and visited a couple of towns. The native with whom we stopped, known by the name of Short Jim Glass, is quite a respectable man. On this occasion he gave himself considerable trouble to prepare us dinner, and took great pleasure in showing us how nearly he could come to "White man's fashion of living." Finding that I was fatigued, he had a bed made for me, of a long and beautiful patched quilt, of American or English work, and a pleasant pillow. He spread a table with a white cloth, and white plates, and the plantains, fish, and eggs were served up in very agreeable style. While enjoying this African hospitality, we felt that we were not entirely removed beyond the bounds of civilization. The chiefs of this part of the island showed a strong desire to have us build at their towns, showed us good sites, &c., and when they found we could not promise to come ourselves, they got us to leave a book, telling that we had been there, that we would return and preach again, and that we would use our endeavours to get them a missionary.

Sail for Ilavi.—Notices of the Shikanai, the Elwes, and the Corisco people.

About three o'clock we set sail for Ilavi, which we reached between two and three hours, a distance of fifteen or sixteen miles. During the whole time we were passing over, we conversed with Tom on the birth of Christ. I never met with a man who received with such fresh and lively interest the story of the birth of the Saviour. The islanders at Ilavi appeared in a much more civil condition than they did on our first visit. They had heard of the manner in which our boys had been taken from us up the Muni, and attempted to dissuade us from a second trip. They are very jealous of the Muni people, lest we should prefer the river for our location to the islands. They told us many stories about their "bush fashions," and endeavoured to give it as low a place in our estimation as they could. The people of the islands have, indeed, attained to a degree of civilization far above that of their neighbours on the main land. They are of very different tribes too. Those in the river, at least on the south side of the river, and extending from the river to the Mpongwees are the Shikanai. On the north side of the river, the Elwes. The Corisco people, taking refuge from wars, began to inhabit these islands nearly two centuries ago. Being superior to their neighbours of the main land in many respects, they have become their factors in trade, and all the trading done in the river is through them. It is natural that they should look down upon them, and be jealous of their receiving any privileges.

The Law of God made known—The People urgent in their request for Missionaries.

June 14th. We spoke to the people in the king's house of God's law. Recently a law had been made in Corisco, that no man should cut another with a knife upon the penalty of being liable to be killed. This was used to illustrate in some measure the nature of God's law. One law which God had made was, "That no drunkard should ever enter his house above." Abapi seemed to think that the assertion was rather too universal, and said he thought if a man did get drunk, but did not hurt anybody with a knife he was a good man still. They requested us very much to build on Ilavi. We told them we wished to be friends to all people, but we could not live at every place. Abapi's son engaged to come and live with us to "learn to sably book," as he said, wherever we should put our house. Ilavi would be a delightful spot for a mission station, and as it is only about four or five miles to the coast, the missionary who lived here could preach also on the main land.

Enter the Muni.—The Kongwe branch taken.—Kaiyenye; Kindness of the Native Women.—Overflowing Hospitality.

Taking the sea breeze at ten o'clock, P. M., we entered the Muni and passed up about fifteen miles. Here a large branch empties in from the north. We intended, when we left home, to have ascended the main branch of the Muni, which bears nearly an eastern direction, to the mountains. But here, our head man Tom, prevailed upon us to ascend the Kongwe. From his account, we could reach a lofty peak of the chain of mountains, which was now already in sight, and at a place where we could easily climb them. After considerable discussion as to whether the river rose beyond or on this side the mountains, which was the longer branch, the Kongwe or the Muni, and which the most populous,—from which we gathered not a particle of correct information, as the result proved,—we entered the Kongwe. The stream, like the Muni, is bordered with Mangrove.

After running ten or fifteen miles up, we entered a small creek which brought us to Kaiyenye, a small town. Here we tarried till the next day. The chief, and most of the men of the town were absent. The women, most of whom, perhaps, had never seen a white man before, received us, and entertained us with true African hospitality. A house, with two apartments, was vacated at once for our use. The door of the outer apartment, placed upon four posts driven into the ground, served for a table. Presently as we were preparing to make our evening meal upon a few articles we had brought with us, a woman came in and placed before us a large plate, or rather wash-bowl, full of cooked plantains, itself a sufficient supper for ten men. Soon another appeared, carrying a pot of boiled fish, which, with all its contents were placed before us. Directly she was followed by another bearing a vessel of fried fish; and this, again, by another as large as the first containing plantains. And thus it continued, dish after dish for some time, till it would seem that every woman in the town had brought of her stores to our table, which now threatened to give way under its burden. These mothers and daughters seemed to enjoy the occasion exceedingly, and when we made signs to them that there was plenty upon our table, they laughed immoderately, and before we were aware another dish or pot had been placed before us.

The People not interested in Houses and Mills, but in the Gospel.

After our men had finished their supper the people were called in. We sung and talked to them about an hour. In the discourse, brother Mackey thought he would try to interest as well as inform them, by describing to them some of the improvements, &c., of our native land. But, to our surprise, the things of which he talked—for example, the construction of a brick house, a mill—were so utterly incomprehensible to them that they did not awaken the least curiosity. On no occasion have we found an assembly of natives who would not be interested in the simple truths of the gospel to a greater or less extent.

The Muni formed of many streams.—"Mount John" visible—Native Accounts Incorrect.

Saturday 15th. This morning we wished to make an early start, but our men were very tardy. It was with much difficulty we got under way by seven o'clock. We had an upward tide, but no wind. At four miles from Kaiyenye, we entered a left branch called Mangani. The river now begins to form many branches, each growing rapidly less as you ascend until it is lost in a Mangrove Swamp. The Mangani is still about three-fourths of a mile in width. When the mists of the morning had blown away, the lofty head of Mount John appeared but a few miles to the north of us. In about an hour we entered another left branch of still smaller size called Jubu. We now began to be undeceived in reference to many expectations grounded upon accounts of natives along the immediate coast. They all agreed in telling us that there were multitudes of people in this country. We saw, however, but one small town on the branches we ascended.

Singular reception at a native town.—Head of Navigation in this direction.

This was Jomba, about ten miles from the mountains. The people in this place, when they first saw us, and as we drew near them, were very much excited. With the exception of a few individuals, who had been down as far as the mouth of the Muni, none had ever seen the face of a white man before. When we came opposite the town they were in a perfect uproar—some clapping their hands, some shouting, some laughing, and some putting their heads to the ground, uttering the wildest exclamations of wonder. Many had fire-arms. Women and children kept in the rear. Sometimes they ventured out from behind a cluster of plantain stalks to take a look at us, and then skulked away to their retreat. Our men asked them permission to come on shore and cook, but it was refused. They allowed one man to go off with tobacco to buy plantains.

The stream now narrowed upon us rapidly, and in less than an hour terminated in Mangrove and Swamp Palm. It had been several years since our Head man, Tom, had been up this stream; at that time it was boatable to the mountain. But now he could not tell what had become of it! The mangrove is evidently encroaching upon the waters all along this stream, a few years ago it reached to the mountain, now its extremity is between two and three miles distant. Our boat was turned about, and at one o'clock we had again reached Kaiyenye.

Attempt to ascend the main stream.—Difficulty with the boat people.—New men employed.

Being unable to reach the Mountains in this direction, we resolved upon trying the Muni. This was the course which we had marked out for ourselves at first. The Head man was informed of our intentions, and after we had rested a couple of hours, we attempted to get under way. To our surprise, every man of our crew refused to move. They protested against the course; said that they had not engaged to go with us up the Muni, although that was precisely the engagement we had made with them; and refused to enter the boat unless we returned to the Gaboon. They also feigned that they were afraid to go up the Muni lest they should be caught. They were told that unless they entered the boat at once, they should forfeit their wages. They still refused, and we resolved upon the hard expedient of setting out with our Head man and his two boys, and going with the tide that evening down to the Muni, and ascending as far as Gandi. Getting the baggage into the boat as well as we could, we pushed out of the creek, and left the men behind us, in a very sullen mood. The tide, however, was still going up, and we found ourselves compelled to cast anchor, and wait for its turn.

We had not waited long when a canoe came along side with three men. Two of them were prevailed upon to hire for two days. In a few minutes another canoe came up from an opposite direction, and we succeeded in hiring another man from it. These men were from an adjacent town, and were ready to go with us in a few minutes. In the course of half an hour we were again under way, and, with five oars, and as many fresh spirited men, we buffetted the rapid tide towards the mouth of the Kangwe. Soon we were followed by a light canoe, which as it came nearer we found it contained our deserters. One of them, on being requested was glad to return to our boat. Others wished to return also, but we could not receive them. Our complement was now full, and we went rapidly forward. Reached Gandi about 10 o'clock at night.

The Sabbath at a native town.—A heathen Chief's acknowledgment of God's providence; wonderful escape.

Sabbath 16th. Enjoyed a sweet and delightful day of rest. Twice we called the people of the town together and preached to them. They were very solemn and attentive to the word. Albadi, the king, is a man of more than ordinary capacity. He showed more thought and good judgment in answering questions than any native I have ever met with on the coast. When asked if the people believed there was one God. He said, "The man who said there was no God had lost his head," and he gave us an instance of a fact, which he regarded as incontrovertible proof of the existence of God, and also of his universal Providence. Pointing to a man who was present, he said. That man was once a captive. He tried to escape from his masters. They were enraged, pursued him and determined to kill him. He took shelter upon a narrow eminence, which terminated in a lofty and precipitous rock. To the very front of this precipice he was forced. Beneath him a few bushes grew out from the rock, but at the bottom were large stones, upon which to fall would be death. As his enemies approached with uplifted knives, he said to himself, "I can only die, but you shall not kill me," and plunged over the giddy height. All sense was gone. He caught with his hands upon the bushes, was turned like a wheel in the air, from rock to rock, and from bush to bush, till, filled with surprise and wonder at his escape, he found himself safe and sound in the vale below. "Could he," asked the serious chief, as he raised his finger from the sand where he had been describing the whole matter—"Could he have done so had not God helped him?" He gave us also other instances of narrow escapes which he thought surely proved the existence and providence of God.

How shall the Heathen know when the Sabbath day comes?

We told Abadi about the Sabbath. He said they would be willing to keep it. "But," said he, "which way we sabby when him come." We instructed him to take a small stick, just as he would count billets of red-wood, put one notch for the first day, and so on till the seventh. That would be the Sabbath, and he ought then to quit work and remember God. He said for his own part, he and his wife could do it, but he did not think the people would. This was a remarkable expression, as it was the first time I have ever heard a native African associate the name of his wife with that of his own in any thing that he was going to do. He expressed a strong desire to have a missionary to come and live with them to teach them these things always. He was also taught some things about prayer: that God was very good, and willing to help us and do us good, if we called upon him; and that it would be proper for them to pray to God to send them a missionary to teach them his word, and his Sabbaths. While we engaged in prayer, though scarcely an individual present understood our words, yet they seemed to be impressed with the idea that we were talking to God, and asking good things for them, and were solemn and quiet.

Notices of the River.—Many Towns on each side.—Curiosity of the Natives.

Monday, 19th June. We made an early start, expecting that it would require the whole day to reach the mountain. The river, from the forks where the Kangwe comes in, as we learned from our men, changes its name for that of Otánga. Four or five miles from Gandi, a branch comes in from the south, which the men told us extended far towards the Ommbopoln, a branch of the Gaboon, and that from it a man could travel across to Mr. Preston's station at Bakali in one day. Where this branch empties there is a considerable island, called Ivange, said to abound with parrots and other birds. We counted many towns on each side of the river as we passed. The further we ascended the more wonder we excited among the natives. Passing a town at one place, the natives wished us very much to stop, but on our refusing they launched a couple of canoes and came after us, both men and women, hallooing and rowing as if for their lives.

Arrive at Fresh Water.—Change of Scenery.—Cool Breezes from the Mountain—Beautiful Views.

After running up about seven hours we found ourselves in fresh water. The Mangrove had disappeared, and the change in many respects was so great that we felt ourselves to be in a new country. The water was sweet and clear, the best we had drunk since we left our native land. Instead of low marsh and mangrove, the banks were now high, and rocks appeared along the sides of the stream, from which little streamlets of fresh water trickled down. The banks, too, were crowned with large tall trees. As we advanced, and the stream narrowed, and approached nearer to the mountain, which was now but a few miles before us, it grew more and more beautiful. The cool and refreshing breeze which blew upon us from the mountain was delightful; not less so the cool water which we could now drink from the stream. The tall trees of a century which bordered the water, were in some places hung with a drapery of vines and dotted with beautiful flowers, presenting to the eye a profusion of beauty which baffles all description. No marks of the hand of man were to be seen in these beautiful solitudes, except that here and there some trees had been felled to procure a monkey. At length the sound of waterfalls was heard, and little brooks were seen pouring over the rocks along the hill side which extended up to the right. A few minutes further and the white foam of the mountain stream, as it broke over a bed of rock, some fifteen or twenty feet in height, burst upon our eyes. The main fall was about ten feet, but the whole stream bounded over a bed of rock for two or three hundred yards.

A Walk on the Mountain Side.—Important Facts ascertained.

We were now at the very base of the mountain, which rose upon our right quite abruptly, and to a considerable height. We possessed no means of measuring it, but we would suppose its height about sixteen hundred feet. Leaving our boat, we walked along the rocks and the mountain side about half a mile up the stream. It was bordered here and there with natural grass, like the mountain streams of Pennsylvania, and in every respect the scenery wore a more natural and healthful appearance than what we were accustomed to see on the coast. We had not the means of ascending further, and at any rate, exploration any further was not necessary to our object. We satisfied ourselves of two or three very important facts:—That the mountains are accessible by means of a boat in about ten hours from the mouth of the river; that the mangrove and swamp cease at about fifty miles from the coast on this river; and that the water is good and the air pure. From the appearance of the land and the vegetation, one could not help supposing it as healthy a country as any in the world. With a canoe or on foot we might have ascended further. In about two hours walk, our men thought we might "be fit to catch [come to] half a dozen towns." A great deal of trade they say is brought down here from the country beyond the towns.

Descending Voyage.—A Boat Race.—Exciting Scene.

In returning we again took the advantage of a tide. The canoes which had followed us from the towns below had continued with us all the way. The men were told that we were missionaries, but our object in coming to look at the mountain and the fall was to them perfectly incomprehensible. As they seemed to paddle their light canoes pretty rapidly over the water, our men proposed to them a race. A scene the most lively and exciting ensued. Every one exerted his strength to the utmost. The canoes, though they had quite the largest number of men, yet could not keep pace with the boat. The forest around rang again with their shouts. At last a very old woman, who had followed to see the white men, and could not with pleasure see her sons beaten, seated herself flat in the bottom of the canoe, and dashed her paddle into the water with might and main. Soon we passed the stream on which their town was situated, and thither they turned, shouting as they left us, "Emen tangoui!" Wonderful white man!

Continuing their journey they reached Gandi about midnight. After some trouble in hiring boat people for the journey from that place to the Gaboon, their "deserters" were again employed. Preaching at Mbini to a large audience, they proceeded on their voyage, spent the night at Ilavi, and reached their temporary home at Gaboon on the 20th. Our next number will contain the remaining part of this interesting journal.

The attention of our readers will be particularly arrested by the statement, under date of the 19th June, as to a healthy climate in the mountains visited by these brethren.

TURKEY.

Progress in the Interior Cities.

The Rev. Mr. Homes, of the important mission of the American Board at Constantinople, thus writes on the 4th of September last.

It has strongly impressed itself on my mind, as the prominent fact of the history of the last twelve months, that there has been such a marked development of the work of the Lord in the interior cities of Turkey. I need not speak of the glorious results of the labours at Aintab, but they should be included in the general picture. I need not speak of Diarbekir, or Mosûl, or Kaisareah, from all which places we have American brethren to give you the details. But you will have noticed that in all these places there has been found, on the arrival of the missionary, a people prepared for the Lord, in a more significant and deeper sense than at any previous time in the history of this mission. Those who have come to listen to the preaching of our brethren have not been the ignorantly curious, but those who knew what they were about, who had already heard, as brought to them on the four winds of heaven, much about this new doctrine, and who were willing to declare themselves on the side of truth, and to incur the odium and suffering connected with their accepting the name of Protestant. Quite a number, in each place, also give evidence of intelligent piety.

To the places already mentioned I ought to add Sivas, Tocat and Rodosto, and our brethren of Erzrûm and Aintab give you the names of many other places in their dioceses or districts, where are a class of avowed Protestants, all from among the Armenians.

The process of development in these places has not been of one kind, with the essential exception that it has been by the presentation of the truth, either by scriptures, tracts, or the preacher. In some one or all of these ways, by a colporteur, or an evangelist, or a brother returning to visit his native country, the seed is sown; and it is freshly watered, from time to time, by the passage of a Christian brother, by the arrival of a few copies of a new book from our press, or by a residence for a few weeks of an evangelist from one of our missionary stations; and as a result, we soon have a small company meeting regularly for spiritual edification, who receive from their countrymen the reproachful name of Protestant, and who send their urgent entreaties to some of us to establish an American or an Armenian preacher in their midst.

Sivas.

Sivas illustrates the mode of growth of a congregation from combined causes most admirably. First, during the past twelve years, we have at different times sent there various packages of scriptures and tracts. Then a shoemaker, who, we hope, became converted in Constantinople, on account of his avowal of evangelical sentiments, on his return there was beaten, chained and imprisoned by the bishop, about five years since, and the causes of his treatment excited much attention. Our book-agent at Tocat visited the place from time to time and circulated the light. About eighteen months since another man from Sivas, who had suffered much from the ecclesiastics for his avowal of adherence to the gospel alone, on returning thither from Constantinople, obtained through the impartiality of the Turkish government, a letter to the Governor requiring that he should have efficient protection as a Protestant. After that, two or three members of the Constantinople Protestant community were residing there for a time, and an evangelist spent several weeks there; and they have maintained meetings regularly for about a year. The pastor of the church at Trebizond is now spending several months among them, and there are eight or ten families of avowed Protestants, some of whom give evidence of piety. They have asked, with great earnestness, that we would send them a school-teacher from Constantinople. To this we have answered, that henceforth, according to our arrangements, every thing regarding their wants should be addressed to the brethren at Trebizond.—Miss. Herald, Dec. 1850.

CREEK MISSION.

REPORT OF THE MANUAL-LABOUR BOARDING-SCHOOL AT TALLAHASSEE.

We have been furnished with a copy of the Annual Report of this school. It was drawn up by the Rev. R. M. Loughridge, and submitted to Col. Raiford, Indian Agent, on the 25th of last December. This paper gives such a satisfactory view of the school, that we insert it entire. It will be seen that Mr. Loughridge, than whom no one in the Creek nation is better qualified to form an opinion on the subject, expresses encouraging views both of this particular department of labour and of the general progress of the missionary work among the Creeks.

Dear Sir:—In compliance with the regulations of the Indian Department, I beg leave to submit the following report of our labours among the Creek Indians during the past year.

In regard to the Tallahassee school, under the care of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, I am happy to be able to inform you that every thing progresses pleasantly and prosperously.

Buildings of the Station.—Fine site of the Institution.

The buildings now at the station, consist of the main building, (embracing school-rooms, sitting and sleeping-rooms for pupils and teachers, dining-room and kitchen:) there is also a meat house, stable and corn-house, mechanic-shop, house for hired men, well house, &c. The main building is a commodious, substantial three story brick house, 96 by 34 feet, with a back wing two stories high, 30 feet by 20. It contains twenty-one rooms besides the attic story and cellar. The plan of the building could not, we think, be better. It is very convenient and in every way suited for a mixed boarding-school.

A very handsome cupola has been placed upon the main building, by the liberality of the chiefs of this district, in which we hope soon to hear a large bell ringing, if the means to purchase one can be obtained.

The house stands in a beautiful, forest grove, on a high, dry ridge of land gently descending in every direction. It is surrounded by a large body of woodland, which has been set apart by the Council for the use of the Institution. The situation is, we think, very healthy, and as good in every respect as the country affords. The Arkansas river rolls along about a mile and a-half to the south, the Verdegris about two miles to the north, and form a junction about six miles to the east; while on the west, about half a mile distant, opens the prairie, which is here about four miles wide, and extends westward, it is said, to the Great Plains or American Desert. The prairie affords an abundance of excellent pasturage for cattle about two-thirds of the year, and also good hay for the winter if cut at the proper season.

Commencement of the School.—Conduct of the Children.

Notwithstanding the many difficulties we have had to encounter, in the erection of such a building in this country, it was so far completed on the 1st day of January last, that we were enabled to open a day school of thirty pupils. On the 1st day of March the boarding-school was regularly commenced; fifteen boys and fifteen girls were received as boarders, embracing ten of the day scholars, thus giving us a school of fifty pupils.

The number of boarders was increased during the session as rapidly as was thought consistent with the proper training and government of the children. So that, at the end of the session on the 1st of August, we had fifty-one boarders and thirteen day scholars.

On the 1st day of October after a vacation of two months, the present session was commenced; at which time we were prepared to receive the full number of eighty pupils. Our number was immediately increased to seventy-seven; and during the quarter the remaining three were added.

The ages of our boarders are from seven to fifteen years, with the exception of six or seven older, who are considerably advanced in their studies, having been pupils of the Presbyterian school at Kowetah and elsewhere.

The children are generally kind and affectionate in their dispositions, and with proper rules and regulations, judiciously enforced, are very obedient and easily managed.

Their improvement during the past year has been generally good, and in some cases remarkable.

At the close of the last session we had a very interesting and satisfactory public examination, which was attended by a large number of people.

Classification of the Scholars.—List of Missionaries.

The school is divided into nine classes, as follows:

1st Class: six in number, who are studying English Grammar, Geography, and Arithmetic, part of them having gone through Vulgar Fractions, and the rest being in denominate numbers.

2d Class: fifteen in number, who commenced 1st Reader, 1st January, 1850, are now in 3d Reader, are writing, have gone through Multiplication in Arithmetic, and advanced to the 18th page of Smith's Geography.

3d Class: twenty-one in number, who began the alphabet in January, and are now in 2d Reader and Testament.

4th Class: fifteen in number, who began the alphabet in March, have read through two primers and 1st Reader, and are now reading Russel's Series and Testament.

5th Class: fourteen in number, who have read the Eclectic Primers and half of 1st Reader.

6th Class: nine in number, who have read the Eclectic primers and commenced 1st Reader.

7th Class: thirteen in number, who have read the Primer, and are now reading at page 50.

8th Class: nine in number, a Primer class, in words of two syllables, at page 20.

9th Class: eight in number, a class of A B C darians.

Thus during the year one hundred and ten have been connected with the school, some of whom however remained but a short time. Ninty-one boarded with us.

But for a particular account of the progress and present standing of each pupil, I must refer you to the accompanying tabular view, presented by the principal teacher, W. S. Robertson, A. M., whose qualifications and skill as a teacher are excelled by few.

In regard to the teachers employed, and the manner of conducting the Institution, I suppose I should report more particularly; I would therefore, state that the following persons are connected with the Institution as teachers and assistants:

Rev. R. M. Loughridge, A. M., Superintendent and Chaplain;
W. T. Robertson, A. M., Principal Teacher;
James Junkin, M. D., Physician;
Mr. Jos. B. Junkin, Farmer and Steward;
Miss N. Thompson, Care of Domestic Department;
Mrs. A. E. Robertson, Care of Girls out of School;
Miss Mary Bowen, Assistant Teacher;
Mrs. Esther Junkin, Assistant Teacher;
Mrs. Mary Junkin, Care of Boy's Clothes.

Employment, Hours of Study, &c.—The Children cheerful and happy.

The exercises at the station are as follows:

At early dawn a bell is rung, when the pupils rise, make their beds, wash, comb, sweep their rooms, &c.

Then the boys engage in feeding the stock, drawing water, cutting wood, &c.

The girls assist about breakfast, setting tables, setting on victuals, sewing, knitting, &c.

Breakfast, about seven o'clock in winter, and earlier in summer. Immediately after breakfast, we have family worship, consisting of reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer. Then, work for about one and a-half hours. School from 9 A. M. until 4 P. M., excepting one hour at noon for dinner and recreation. Then, work again for one or one and a-half hours. Supper, usually about dark. Immediately after supper, the children each repeat a verse of Scripture. Then family worship as in the morning. Then study until 8 or 8½ o'clock, when all retire to rest.

The children are usually cheerful and happy, whether engaged in study or work. Some are rather discontented, when they first leave home, and are inclined to return; but generally as soon as they become acquainted with the teachers and the rest of the scholars, they love to remain.

Importance of Schools of this kind.

We are more and more convinced of the great importance of the manual-labour boarding-school system, for the Muskokee people, at the present time; that it is the only system which can succeed. This we think has been reduced to a demonstration. It has been conclusively shown by actual experiments in this nation. Day schools have been tried for years, and thousands of dollars expended for their support. But as some of the chiefs have repeatedly asked, "What good have they done?" "Where are the persons who have been educated at them?"

It must be admitted that they have been almost if not altogether, a total failure; and such they must continue to be for many years to come.

The Indians are proverbial for allowing their children to have their own way, from their infancy up. The necessary consequence is, whenever the novelty of going to school is over, and the children get tired, as all children will—they leave the school, and with bow and arrow, betake themselves to their sports; while the desponding teacher is left to preside over his empty benches.

But in the boarding-school it is different. The children are under the care of their teachers all the time; whom they soon learn to love and obey. Their progress in study and improvement in their general deportment are more rapid and satisfactory, than even the most regular and attentive day scholars.

The Boarding-school, whether large or small, is too almost the only hope of teaching the Indian children to speak the English language.

Such are my conclusions from experience in the management of a boarding-school in this country for the last seven years; and the history of schools here and also among the Cherokees and Choctaws establishes the same facts.

It is therefore greatly to be desired that the whole amount of funds and labour to be expended for the education of this people, be laid out in the establishment and support of manual-labour boarding-schools.

Much Encouragement.

Upon the whole, we are much encouraged in our work. This people are evidently improving. They are advancing as rapidly in civilization as could be expected.

While I have laboured among them as a missionary, great changes for the better have taken place. The number of schools has been increased from one to seven, four of which are boarding-schools; Temperance societies have been formed; churches organized; the law against the Christian religion has been abolished; while the desire for schools and the preaching of the gospel has become almost universal.

Hoping that that they will continue to advance, and soon become a Christian people, and that you may be the honoured instrument of doing much in this great and good work, I remain yours, most respectfully.

IOWA AND SAC MISSION.

REPORT OF THE BOARDING SCHOOL.

Names, &c. of the Children.

The Rev. Messrs. Hamilton and Irvin, writing on the 31st of December, give the following particulars in regard to the manual-labour boarding-school under their care. The minuteness of some of these details will not diminish their interest, to many of our readers.

O. 1. Rhoda Jane Wagoner. 15 or 16.* Reading, writing, geography, catechism.
Wag-ku-ha-me. One who cooks a man. Of the Bear family.

O. 2. Catharine Bushnell, H. 13. Reading, writing, spelling, &c.

O. 3. Ann Richardson. 11. Writing, spelling.
Wa-ye-shtun-yœ-me. Tender-hearted. Of the Pigeon family.

4. Caroline C. Donaldson. 12. Writing, spelling.
Maw-nean-chœ-me. One that brings the arrows. Wolf family.

O. 5. Eliza Irvin. 8. Spelling.
Pa-the-ho-wœ-me. Dreaming of Cedar. Bear family.

O. 6. Fanny Lee. 14. Reading, writing, spelling.
Neu-ke-krœ-me. One that puts herself in the water. Buffalo family.

7. Louisa Rog, H. 9. Spelling. Daughter of the Good Interpreter. She was playing on Christmas afternoon, and fell from the writing desk and broke her thigh. Is now at home.

O. 8. Mary Childs. 12. Reading, writing, spelling.
Esh-na-tan-yœ. The only one that sees. Eagle family.

O. 9. Rebecca Boyd. 12. Reading, Ioway, Eng. Writing, spelling.
E-chœ-pe-kra-me. One that puts her eggs in a good place. Pigeon family.

Oo. 10. Sophia Campbell, H. 10. Reading, Ioway, Eng. Writing, spelling.
Pa-hu-chœ-me. An Ioway woman.

11. Sophie Rubedeoux, H. 7. Spelling in one syllable. Eagle family.

O. 12. Jane Irvin. 9 or 10. Spelling.
No-wœ-ta-me. A twin (sister). Bear family.

13. Martha Whitecloud. 4. Spelling one syllable.
The-kra-pe-me. Pretty tracks. Bear family.

14. Sarah Cook Whitecloud. 9 or 10. Spelling, writing.
Pah-tu-the-kra-me. Making tracks in a canoe. Bear family.

O. 15. Arvaile Higley. 10. Letters.
Mahe-thka-me. The white knife. Wolf family.

16. Polly Reed, H. 9. Spelling. She is of the Fox tribe of Indians, or her mother is; and as children follow the father, they would call her a white girl.

O. 1. Samuel Humes. 17. Reading Ioway, Eng. Writing, spelling, &c.
A-ko-he. The South Wind. Buffalo family.

2. Lewis Cass. 12. Writing spelling.
Wakantainga. Little god, or little thunder. Eagle family.
Thunder is supposed by some to be a large bird.

O. 3. Charles Whitecrow. 13. Reading, spelling, writing.
Nawo-pe. The good Road. Pigeon family.

O. 4. Francis Dupuy, H. 11. Reading, writing, spelling.

O. 5. John Dupuy, H. 9. Reading, spelling.

O. 6. Henry Roy, H. Spelling.

Oo. 7. Daniel Barber. 11. Spelling, writing.
Chœr-hœ-tung-œ. Eagle family.

Oo. 8. Nicholas M. Kerwan. 14. Reading, writing, spelling.
Ora-chœ. Left handed. Bear family.

O. 9. Mitchel A. Rubideoux, H. 6. Spelling.

O. 10. Joseph Hull. 9 or 10. Spelling.
E-tun-thœ. Bad smelling mouth. Wolf family.

Oo. 11. Robert Hamilton. 10. H. Reading Eng. and Ioway, writing, spelling, &c.
Ma-ya-pe. Peace, (Literally, Good ground.)

O. 12. Sandie Reed. 11. Reading Eng. Ioway. writing, spelling.
Má-o-hra. Corn-tassle. Pigeon family.

O. 13. Slater Hepburn. 12. Reading, writing, spelling.
Ha-wœ-ku. Day-spring, or Morning-dawn. Wolf family.

O. 14. William Smith. 15. Writing, spelling.
Ma-shuh-che. A real feather. Wolf family. This name belongs to the Eagle family, but was given to the boy by one of that family.

15. Wm. Richardson Whitecloud. 7. Spelling.
Muntokœ. A He-bear. (Child's name.) Bear family.
Esh-ta-ohu-chœ-ing-œ. Little red eyes. This name was given to him because he was with the Ioways when they went to cut up the Pawnee girl the Sacs murdered.

Oo. 16. Gardiner Spring. 12. Reading Eng. Ioway, writing, spelling.
A-ho-pa-krun-chœ. Scalp-lock-cut-off. Bear family.

O. 17. Robert D. Whitecloud. 17. Reading Eng. Ioway, writing, geography.
Wa-roosh-ka. The Wizzard, or Giant. Bear family.

* The figures following the names represent their ages; but most of them are conjectural, as we have no certain means of ascertaining their age.

Oo. 18. Wm. Campbell, H. 6. Reading.
Wa-en-chœr-hoe. Unfeeling disposition.

Otoe.

Oo. 19. Moses a Pelainga. 9. Reading Eng. Ioway, writing, spelling.
Kœ-ra-to. Blue Sky. Owl family.

Sac.

O. 20. Wilson McKinney. 8. Spelling one syllable.
Má-que-pá-la-sa. Little White Bear. Bear family.

Black Feet.

O. 21. Henry Moncrovie, H. 8 or 9. Reading, writing, spelling.

O. 22. Alexander Moncrovie, H. 6 or 7. Spelling.
This tribe inhabit the country on the head waters of the Mo., and near, or among the Rocky Mountains, about 35° west, from Washington, and latitude 45°. About 150 lodges. See A.

Sioux.

O. 23. Felix Boyer. H. 9. Spelling.

O. 24. Henry Boyer. H. 6. Spelling in one syllable.
There are several bands of Sioux (pronounced Soos.) These children are from near Fort Laramie, near the mountains, and on the route to Oregon and California. See B.

Snake.

O. 25. Mitchel Lajeures. H. 15. Reading, writing, catechism.
This boy has been in St. Louis. Left his people when about 5 years old. Speaks French and English. The Snake Indians dwell near or among the mountains. Perhaps not far from the head waters of the Yellow Stone. See C.

Notes on Different Tribes.

A. These mountain and northern tribes, that depend principally on the buffalo for a subsistence, have no settled place of residence. They sometimes encamp in large numbers near their trading posts. Sometimes they spend the winter near the foot of the Rocky Mountain. Traders say it is quite moderate near the base of the mountain in the winter season, and often rains, even in those high latitudes. The Black Feet are much dreaded by trappers and traders, as they are considered a very fierce and warlike people. Their women are quite fair. Before the small-pox made such ravages among them, in 1837, '8, the Black Feet numbered about 400 lodges, but were reduced to about 150. Two warriors are generally estimated to each lodge, and the warriors are considered a fourth part of the population. The only missionary who has been among them is Jothe Smet, a Jesuit, who baptized many of them.

Piedgons, (pigons.) Numbered 800 lodges, reduced to about 100 by the small-pox, but are now estimated at 300 lodges, or 2,400 souls.

Blood Indians numbered 500 lodges, reduced to 250. We are not certain, but think these all go under the general name of Black Feet. This would make them at the present time number near 5000 souls, and before the small-pox was amongst them, about 13,000 or upwards. This is the estimate of the fathers of the two little boys who spent ten years among them trading.

B. The Sioux (called by themselves Da-ko-ta) are much the largest of any of the northern tribes of Indians, and are divided into various bands, and sometimes bear a different name, as Assiniboins, etc. They range over the vast extent of country lying between Ioway and the Rocky Mountains, living principally upon the buffalo. Hence they have no permanent village, at least most of them, but live in skin tents. The two little boys from this tribe were brought to us last fall from a band that live near the Rocky Mountains, and trade with the various trading establishments near Fort Laramie.

C. The Snake Indians live at the Rocky Mountains. A California emigrant told me he passed some of them on his way to California. They often seem to be found further north, and for some years lived with the Crow Indians.

Explanations of the List of Scholars.

1. In the list of the children's names, those marked with an H after their name are half blood. Those with one O prefixed have lost one of their parents, those with two (Oo) have lost both their parents. You will perceive that most of the children are orphans.

2. I have given their Indian name as an item of curiosity, and the family to which they belong. There are at present seven families. The Eagle, Bear and Wolf, are the first families, i. e., they came first out of the ground, and are nearly related. The Buffalo, Pigeon, and Snake families, are also nearly related. The Elk is alone.

Among the Otoes there are the Beaver and Owl families, and if they once existed among the Ioways they have become extinct. There is but one boy of the Snake family.

They do not marry into the same family with themselves, because as they say they are near relations. A man, e. g. of the Bear family would marry a woman of the Wolf or Eagle family, and his chilren would all belong to the Bear family; and so of the others. Each family has names peculiar to itself, handed down from one generation to another, the signification of which is not often known except by the family that bears the name, and even then only by a few of the older ones. These names and their signification are taught by the principal or old men to the younger ones for pay.

Names are given to children, but they take a new name when they do some exploit. See Judges vi. 32. It is therefore something of a disgrace for a grown person to be called by the name he had when a child. The name often indicates the family, as 9. E-chœ-pe-kra-me, Rebecca Boyd. 15. Wm. R. Whitecloud, Muntokœ, or Esh-ta-shu-chœ-eng-œ, see list. He-wa-tho-choe, one that sheds his hair; alluding to the buffalo which has little or no hair in the summer.

The origin of these names and families is coeval with their earliest history, which is involved in obscurity. It is their sacred history.

3. Some of those marked spelling, were beginning to read Ioway when we commenced teaching them English. For the better improvement of the children, there ought to be another teacher, even with the present number of scholars.

It was stated to Mr. Richardson, Indian Agent, that inasmuch as he took a lively interest in the establishment of this school, it might be interesting for him to have a statement of its condition from the commencement, which is as follows:

Extract from Report to the Sub-Agent for the year, September 30th, 1850.

	1847.	1848	1849.	1850.
No. received, including those in school	70	45	46	40
No. left during the year	50	16	8	2
No. at the end of each year	20	29	32	38
Average attendance	24	24	34	32
Reading and writing, English and Ioway				15
Spelling, some of them writing				20
Geography				1
Alphabet				3
Half Bloods, Boys				12
Do. Girls				5
Ioways				30
Otoes				1
Sacs				1
Fox				1
Snake				1
Black Feet				2
Sioux				2
			Total	38

For the quarter ending on the 31st December, 1850,

Highest No. of scholars during the quarter,	41
Lowest " " " "	38
No. received " "	3
No. left " "	0
No. to the close of the quarter,	41
Average for the year,	34½

25 boys, and 16 girls; 19 reading.

Besides the studies already mentioned, they are also instructed in the Catechism and in the Scriptures.

Concluding Reflections.

In reviewing their missionary cause, our brethren make some remarks which cannot be read without awakening feelings of tender interest in them and in their work. Surely their long and faithful labours will be rewarded—in heaven, and we believe also on earth. It is pleasing to see that their faith does not fail. We trust they will be particularly remembered in the prayers of the people of God.

When we look at the length of time we have been here, and the little that is yet done, the reflection sometimes steals upon us, that, either we are not the workmen whose efforts God will honour, or that there are no blessings in store for these poor people. But when we consider that God has brought us here and preserved us so long, while there are so many ways of removing us out of the way; and that the Saviour has not excepted these, or any other heathen people in his offers of mercy, we cannot entertain such thought without indulging in palpable unbelief. We may expect too much while we do not sufficiently value what is already done. When planning for our school, years ago, we remember saying, and writing, that if we had thirty or forty children in the condition, and under the same influence that we then had two or three in the mission family, we would be greatly encouraged. Already that desire has been more than realized.

True, many of these children may be reckless of their advantages and education; they may adopt all the external forms of savage life, and still not utterly destroy the seeds of Divine truth sown in their hearts. These seeds once lodged in the young mind are hard to destroy. This is illustrated among the Otoes. They once had a devoted missionary who closed his life among them, after having spent six years of apparently unsuccessful labour among them. In our sojourn among the Otoes last spring, we took some pains to find the spot where that beloved brother had lived. But we could not find a foot-print, or plough-mark, or a single log of the cabin in which he lived, and in which he had for hours stood with one hand grinding corn, and the other holding his manuscript of Indian words, memorizing the Indian language. To all appearance, there was not a trace left of the labours of this beloved man. But it was a relief to find among the rude villagers those who could sing hymns and answer many Scripture quotations, which they had learned from the beloved man who went to his rest more than ten years ago.

The seeds of Divine truth may lie as safely under an Indian blanket, or in a smoky wigwam as in the splendid mansion. These children, many of them, may return to the practices of heathenism—they may engage in the war-dance, or even handle the scalping-knife, and live in heathen licentiousness for thirty or forty years, and yet by the Spirit of God be brought, through the truths already learned, to a knowledge of themselves and of the Saviour. It is enough for us to know, while we sow the seed, that "God's word will not return to him void," and that "God is not slack concerning his promises."

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN JANUARY, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Ballston Spa ch Mrs Mary Speer	$1 50
Pby of Columbia.—Windham 2d ch	14 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Wyoming.—Scottsville ch	10 00
Pby of Ogdensburg.—Le-Ray ch	10 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 1st ch Sab sch for sup of Rev Henry V Rankin, Ningpo 30; Lockport 2d Ward ch 16 50	46 50

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Goshen ch Dr J S Crane 10, Sab sch to ed Nathaniel Webb and Catharine Jessie McCartee 50; Rockland Lake ch 10 47	70 47
Pby of North River.—Matteawan ch 20 50, Juv miss soc to ed William B Leonard 10; Amenia N Y Rev W J McCord 1 75	32 25
Pby of Bedford.—South East ch 72; South Salem ch mo con colls 34 75	106 75
Pby of Long Island.—Bridgehampton ch 21 12; Middletown ch 3 75	24 87
Pby of New York.—Jewish Missionary Station 1 50, J N 5; Forty-second street ch ann coll 73, less 8 for "Foreign Missionary," L B Ward 100, mo con 16 25, Sab sch Mrs Hepburn's class to ed as before 12 79; Madison Avenue ch mo con 21, "A Member" 150; Williamsburg ch mo con 20 13; New York First ch mo con 120 02; Duane st ch mo con 3 38; Rutgers st ch ann coll 224 30; Wallabout ch mo con 5 50; Brooklyn Central ch Sab sch for education of heathen children 5 50; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 15 67; University Place ch ann coll of which 100 to const W M Halsted Jr l d 737 80, mo con coll 26 63; Chelsea ch ann coll 109 65, Sab sch for Bazar sch at Allahabad 28 30	1668 42
2d Pby of New York.—Scotch ch three mos con colls 270, A R Walsh 50, Sab sch for Spencer Academy 135; Canal st ch mo con 5	460 00
Pby of Connecticut.—Tariffville ch	20 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Rahway 1st ch ann coll in part 25, Young ladies Jewish miss soc for Jewish Mission 27; Elizabethtown 1st ch ann coll 350, Juv Miss Soc 150, less 20 for "Foreign Missionary;" Mount Olive ch 12; Springfield ch 17 87; Westfield ch X Y Z 10	599 12
Pby of New Brunswick.—Trenton 1st ch ann coll

95 67; Lawrence ch 60; Ewing ch 4, Sab sch 4; Shrewsbury ch 17, Rev R Taylor 5 — 185 67

Pby of West Jersey.—Williamstown ch 7; Greenwich ch 50 — 57 00

Pby of Newton.—Mansfield ch 30; Belvidere ch 34, Sab sch 5 — 69 00

Pby of Raritan.—Clinton ch fem miss soc 30, Sab sch 13 71 — 43 71

Pby of Susquehanna.—Towanda 1st ch — 6 50

Pby of Luzerne.—Kingston ch 8 50; Tunkhannock ch Rev C R Lane 5; Mauch Chunk ch mo con colls 9 50, Sab sch miss soc 10 50, Miss Julia A Lathrop's school 2 50, Miss Margaret Young 1 50, Miss C Smith 1, in all 25 to ed Maria B Salkeld — 38 50

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Philad. Sixth ch ann coll 157, mo con 28 50, Robert Creighton 15; Phila Tenth ch mo con Dec 33 50, Jan 40 70, "A Friend" 50 — 324 70

2d Pby of Philadelphia.—Abington ch 140; Frankford ch to const their pastor Rev Thomas Murphy l d 100; Newtown ch 15; Bridesburg ch 40 — 295 00

Pby of New Castle.—Dover ch Del for African Mission 5; New Castle ch 2 50, Miss Ann Dunlap 2, Miss Moody 50 cts, Miss Booth 5, Miss Louisa Janvier to ed John Janvier 20, Mrs Cannon 1, Mrs Black 1, Miss E Scofield 2, Mr Motherwell 2, John Janvier 5, Dr. Cowper to ed James Cowper 20, Mrs Potts 1, Kinsey Johns 5, Miss Johns 2, Miss Hart 1, W Cowper 30, mo con colls 80, Sab sch to ed Sarah McCalmont 20, in all from New Castle ch 200 — 205 00

Pby of Donegal.—Upper Strasburg Pa W 1; Leacock ch 30; Marietta ch 17 — 48 00

Pby of Baltimore.—Bridge St ch Georgetown D C ann coll and mo con coll's since October 1850 59 06, Juv Miss Soc to ed Robert T Berry at Canton 32; Warrenton ch "a member" 1; Baltimore, Franklin St ch 100 — 192 06

Pby of Carlisle.—Dillsburg ch 7, children of Samuel Clark 1 87, Henry (bond boy of Mr Clark) 1 38; McConnellsburg ch, of which 25 from Col James Agnew 73 50 — 83 75

Pby of Huntingdon.—Spruce Creek 1st ch — 93 00

Pby of Northumberland.—Lock Haven Pa Union Sab Sch — 5 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Blairsville ch 91 75; Salem ch 13 53; Indiana ch 37 71; Harmony ch 7 94; Glade Run ch Young Ladies miss soc 16 50, young people's miss soc 16 27; Leechburg ch 23 62; Pine Run ch 5 91 — 213 23

Pby of Redstone.—Long Run ch 17; Spring Hill ch Rev W W McLain 10; Uniontown ch mo con coll's 30; Greensburg ch Sab Sch 17 10 — 74 10

Pby of Ohio.—Lawrenceville ch children 14 42; "———" John Clark 23; "———" Mrs Blair 10; Pittsburgh 2d ch 151 15; Concord ch 28; Alleghany City 1st ch, of which 60 for American Indians, and 58 22 from Sab Sch's 265 22 less, 8 33 for Foreign Missionary; Fairmount ch Thomas Stevenson 50 — 533 46

Pby of Alleghany.—Butler ch 38; Scrub Grass ch 30; Union ch 66 61; Muddy Creek ch 2 10 — 136 71

Pby of Beaver.—Bethlehem ch — 25 00

Pby of Erie.—Conneautville ch Ladies 5, Gentlemen 2 50; Franklin ch 9 50, Mr Dodd 2, children of Mrs Lane 50 cts; Sandy Lake ch 3 94; Brightstown ch 3 37; Evansburg ch 2 75, Mrs Stratton 1; Meadville ch 20 — 50 56

Pby of Clarion.—Licking ch — 5 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Fairview ch 122 56; West Liberty ch 2 24; Elizabethtown and Wolf Run chs 10; Washington ch 40, young ladies miss soc 16, sab sch to ed Lung Asz in Canton 30; Frankfort ch 6 10; Ritchiestown Sab Sch 4 — 230 90

Pby of Steubenville.—Wellsville ch — 20 67

Pby of St. Clairsville.—Martinsville ch 21 25; Fairview ch 18 40; Wheeling Valley ch 23; Norristown ch 14 75; St Clairsville ch 34, Sab Sch 3; Nottingham ch in part to con their Pastor Rev T K Crawford l d 19 06; Cadiz ch 29 50; Beach Spring ch 66 50; Short Creek ch 6 75; Rock Hill ch in part to con their Pastor Rev H Mitchell l d 41 36 — 297 57

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Zanesville.—Senecaville ch bal to con their Pastor Rev J E Alexander l m 22, "a member" 2; Salt Creek ch addl to con their Pastor Rev J Caldwell l d 59 95; Buffalo ch bal to con their Pastor Rev Moses M Brown l d 47 — 130 95

Pby of Richland.—Utica ch 25; Frederick ch 95 cts; Sharon ch 5; Waterford ch 2 75 — 33 70

Pby of Wooster.—Fulton ch 15; Sugar Creek ch 38 28; Pigeon Run ch 8 75 — 62 03

Pby of Coshocton.—Keene ch 16; Unity ch 26 15; Millersburg ch 1 — 43 15

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Miami.—Harmony ch ann coll — 26 00

Pby of Cincinnati.—Cinna 1st ch Sab Sch miss soc 104 51; Cinna High St ch mo con 1 04; Pleasant Ridge ch 12 79; Mount Carmel ch 4; Bedford Ohio Mrs Margaret Brown 1 — 123 34

Pby of Sidney.—Troy Ohio, James Telford — 10 00

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of Vincennes.—Vincennes Ia "a lady" — 5 00

Pby of Madison.—Hanover ch ann coll — 60 00

Pby of Palestine.—Mount Carmel ch — 10 00

Pby of White Water.—"———" John M Gordon's family — 2 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Delphi ch Sab Sch — 8 00

Pby of Lake.—Valparaiso ch Sab Sch — 2 50

Pby of Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne German ch — 1 50

Pby of Muncie.—Indianapolis 1st ch ann con 177 30, Miss sewing circle 29 — 206 30

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—Sangamon ch — 38 28

Pby of Peoria.—Chicago North ch mo con colls 23, Sab sch to ed R H Richardson 6; Peoria ch Sab sch 16 45 — 45 45

Pby of Iowa.—Davenport ch — 8 50

Pby of Wisconsin.—Milwaukie, North ch S Chapman — 5 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of Missouri.—Millersburg ch 12; Round Prairie ch 21 — 33 00

Pby of St. Louis.—St Charles 1st ch in part for sup of a missionary to the American Indians — 141 90

Pby of Palmyra.—Big Creek ch Mrs Eliza Perry — 2 50

Pby of Potosi.—Brazeau ch 24 55; Apple Creek 1st ch 7 60 — 32 15

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

"———" to con William Butler, Tompkinsville, Ky l m 30; "———" C J Cist 2 50 — 32 50

Pby of Louisville.—Louisville 1st ch mo con 16, ann coll in part 136 20, Mr Crawford 1; Louisville 3d ch mo con colls 30 50, Mr Barnes 2; Louisville 4th ch 45 65; Louisville Chestnut st ch ann coll in part 165, W C Brooks 100; Mulberry ch mo con 6 40; Shelbyville ch mo con 10; Pennsylvania Run ch 7; Shiloh and Olivet chs 42 — 561 75

Pby of Muhlenburg.—Greenville ch 8; Princeton church 1 — 9 00

Pby of Transylvania.—Danville Ky Miss Patsey Hughes 5; Bethel ch 8 — 13 00

Pby of West Lexington.—Walnut Hill ch — 70 00

Pby of Ebenezer.—Lebanon ch Rev G B Armstrong for sup of Rev C W Forman 5; Flemingsburg ch 10 — 15 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Clarke co Va. Miss M P 5, and Miss A B 10 for China — 15 00

Pby of Lexington.—Lexington Va. Miss E Baxter 3; Fairfield ch 4 — 7 00

Pby of West Hanover.—Keswick Depot Va. Mrs S E Baxter — 1 50

Pby of East Hanover.—Petersburg ch ann coll 197 29, A G McIlwain 100, D Dunlap 50, John Donnan 10, D Donnan 15, L B Makepeace 5, J Prichard 5, Wm Smyth 5, J Lynch 5, T W Bradbury 5, Ro. Dunn 5, Mrs Campbell 2, Miss Given 2, B Harrison 2, R H Mann 1, R H Talieferro 1, W J Morton 1, J T Robinson 1, H McCleery 1, First Sab sch to ed Robert Ritchie 25; Richmond 1st ch mo con 36 70 — 464 99

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Concord.—Salem church — 12 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Nashville.—Clarkesville church — 1 00

Pby of Knoxville.—Knoxville 1st ch. 2 mos con colls — 19 50

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Hopewell.—Mount Zion ch 25, Rev C P Beman 5; New Hope ch 5 — 35 00

Pby of Cherokee.—Marietta ch — 20 00

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Port Gibson ch Sab Sch to ed A J McGill at Spencer Academy — 5 00

Pby of Louisiana.—Lafayette Square ch N O ann contbn of which 100 from Robert A Grinnan to con himself l d 400; less 10 for Foreign Missionary; Prytanea St ch N O to con their Pastor Rev Elias R Beadle l m 78 45; Pine Grove ch 1 80; Madisonville ch 3 55; Covington ch 3 80 — 477 60

Pby of Tombeckbee.—Good Hope ch — 5 00

Total from churches — $9,024 76

LEGACIES.

Juniatta Co Pa Legacy of Isabella Patterson dec'd in part — 500 00

St Charles Co Mo Legacy of Thomas Lindsay dec'd — 220 90

Randalsville, N C Legacy of Archibald McCallum dec'd — 25 00

Less — 745 90

Expense on account Patterson Estate — 138 48 — 607 42

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pulaski, Tenn J P Alexander — 4 50

A M (left at Mission House) — 18 00

"———" Ga Mrs G R Gilmer — 10 00

Mercer st ch N Y "a lady" — 10 00

New Year's gift from "a young friend of Missions" — 2 00

Geo S Woodhull for building a church at Creek Mission — 2 00

A donor at Princeton N J for sup of A D Wilson at Monrovia — 50 00

J. E. G. — 98 50

A friend, for Papal Europe — 1000 00

T. W., for American Indian Missions — 10 00

" Jewish Mission — 5 00

'———' Rev J M C Bartley — 2 00

Ladies' Jewish Miss'y Soc'y Phila Pa. — 26 11

Alleghany City, Pa, Master H R Wilson 1 03, Miss Elizabeth Wilson 1 03, little Mary Jane Wilson 1 50, (the contents of their missionary boxes, a New Year's gift to the heathen) — 3 56 — 1,241 67

Total receipts in January — $10,873 85

Wm. RANKIN, Jr., Treasurer.

DONATIONS OF CLOTHING, ETC.

New York, two ladies 286 garments 12 pair shoes — 206 12 — 12 00

Ladies of Plainfield 1st ch N J two quilts — 6 50

Chapel Hill, N C, Juv miss soc one bundle of clothing

New York, Jane Femster two quilts — 6 00

Ladies of Huntington Pa. one box clothing — 62 00

" " Belvidere N J, one " " — 32 62

" " Concord ch Alleghany Pby Pa, one box clothing — 40 27

" " Hamilton and Rossville O, " " " — 75 00

New York, John Campbell & Co, five reams writing paper

NOTICES.

Letters relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to Walter Lowrie, Esq., or the Rev. John C. Lowrie, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Letters relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to William Rankin, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

Payments of Moneys for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

Boxes of Clothing, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

The Foreign Missionary is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts.
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents each.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "Foreign Missionary, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M. D. Treasurer.

CLOSE OF THE ECCLESIASTICAL YEAR.

The ecclesiastical year of the Board of Publication closes with the present month—one month earlier than that of either of the other Boards. The business of the preceding twelve months is then wound up, and the results are embodied in the report to the General Assembly.

It is with unfeigned gratitude that we look upon the results, which we shall probably be able to communicate in our next annual report. The Board of Publication has always seemed to be peculiarly the child of Providence, and surely never more so than in the last two or three years. Its operations within that time have been constantly and rapidly extending, and its popularity has been as steadily on the advance. Unbecoming as some may think it in us to say it, in duty to the Church, whose servants we are, we cannot refrain from stating, that from a constant perusal of most of the religious periodicals, we are convinced that the works of this Board are at this moment the most popular publications issued by any religious publishing institution. Our colporteurs, too, have been greatly blessed by a large measure of success, and in the kind reception they have met with, both in our own and almost all kindred branches of the church. The receipts for sales for the last ecclesiastical month were about $7000—the largest ever reported in any one month.

In view of the favour which the Great Head of the Church is showing this Board, may we not, with renewed confidence, ask for the favour of all of "Zion's friends and our's?" Our fund for the support of colportage and for making grants is largely overdrawn, and, unless the donations are greatly increased, the close of the ecclesiastical year will show a considerable balance against this department of the Treasury. It is highly important that churches intending to make collections for this object should make them and remit the amount, so as to reach us before the last day of the present month. Are there not many individuals who will forward their own donations where there are no church collections? Surely, reader, you will not permit your own Board to suffer for want of funds. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

THE SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA AND THE BOARDS.

We have been highly gratified to find that this excellent body is taking hold of the Boards of the church right cordially. All the Boards received the full endorsement of the Synod at its late sessions, and an increasing interest in their behalf was reported, as will be seen from the following extract from the narrative:—

"We are happy, too, to report an increasing interest in behalf of Foreign and Domestic Missions and Church Extension. The deeply interesting work of circulating the books of our Board by means of colporteurs is successfully prosecuted by all of our Presbyteries, and we have reason to believe is doing great good within our bounds."

FIRE ARMS.

The Puritan Recorder gives the following notice of a book recently published by the Board of Publication, entitled, "An Affectionate Address to Mothers. By the Rev. Daniel Baker, D. D., of Texas." We copy it not only to direct the attention of mothers to the book, but as showing the estimation in which the publications of the Board are held in New England.

"This comes from the Presbyterian Board of Publication, whose spiritual armory is furnished with all sorts of weapons, from great guns down to pocket-pistols. Here we have a very neat little revolver, with a dozen barrels. May the shot be well sped between the joints of the harness!"

12,000 SUBSCRIBERS IN LESS THAN TWO MONTHS!

Our junior sister, the Sabbath School Visitor, seems disposed to pay but little deference to our superior age and dignity—she has already outrun us in the numbers she can chronicle on her visiting list, and is making no little noise in the world. By the time this reaches the eye of the reader, the subscription list of that paper will probably exceed 12,000! Of the January Nos. we first printed 10,000; then we had to print a second edition of 5,000; and then, still another of 5,000. How many more editions will be called for we cannot predict. This success, we presume, is unprecedented by any newspaper, in so short a time. As we furnish the Visitor free of charge for transportation in New York, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans, Charleston and Richmond, we shall expect a large increase of subscribers from all sections of the church. Orders to be addressed to "Presbyterian Sabbath School Visitor, 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia," and all moneys remitted at our risk. Bankable notes current where subscribers reside received in payment.

TRIBUTE OF THANKS FOR A COLPORTEUR'S LABOURS.

The following article is from the Presbyterian Record of Nashville Tennessee, and the writer speaks in terms of such strong approbation of the labours of one of our colporteurs that we cannot refrain from transferring his remarks to our columns.

"It would neither be doing justice to our valuable Board of Publication, nor to its energetic Colporteur, Mr. McCormick, were we to withold our tribiute of thanks, for the good work the Board has done us through his instrumentality.

"Brother Mc Cormick has just finished his labours within the bounds of the Gallatin and Shiloh congregations, and although he laboured among us but three weeks, he sold during this short time, books to the amount of 152,00. This large amount sold, was no doubt owing to the interest manifested by the elders of both churches, who showed their zeal in this good cause, by co-operating with our colporteur; riding with him from house to house in their neighbourhoods, recommending our excellent books. This is as it should be. We need more such Aarons and Hurs, who are willing to sustain the hands of the colporteur when he comes to their doors, by themselves engaging in this laudable enterprise. Every family of our denomination was visited, and where one was found destitute of a copy of the "Confession of Faith," it was supplied. Our hymn books were the very books needed; some four dozen were distributed.

"Families of other denominations received the Board's publications with favour as well as our own; of this we are glad. These sentiments are not merely the sentiments of the writer, but of many of the elders and laymen of both churches, who cordially unite in bidding "God speed" to this noble undertaking; and would earnestly recommend the books of the Board of Publication to all the families our colporteurs may yet visit, in the bounds of our Presbytery. We believe, that Presbyterianism—the Presbyterianism of our fathers, is not dead, neither on the decline, but that it is only in its infancy; and this feature of colportage is but the dawn of a brighter and a better day. C. F. W."

THE FIRST PRINTED BOOK.

It is a remarkable and most interesting fact that the very first use to which the discovery of printing was applied was the production of the Holy Bible. This was accomplished at Mentz between the years 1450 and 1455. Of the first printed Bible, eighteen copies are now known to be in existence, four of which are printed on vellum. Two of these are in England, one being in the Greenville collection. One is in the Royal Library of Paris. Of the fourteen remaining copies, ten are in England—there being copies in the libraries of Oxford, Edinburgh and London, and seven in the collections of different noblemen. The vellum copy has been sold as high as $1300.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"SALVATION: OR THE SINNER DIRECTED IN THE WAY OF LIFE."

This little work, in its style and matter, is well adapted to arrest the attention—impress the heart, and awaken the conscience. It clearly and forcibly describes the sinner's ruined state; and then as clearly points him to the only remedy: "The Lord, our righteousness." It is an excellent safeguard against those fatal errors into which persons, under serious impression or deep conviction, are in danger of falling. The excellency of this little work has not escaped the notice of Christians beyond the Atlantic. It has been re-published by the London Tract Society. R. E.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

A WORD TO PASTORS.

Dear Brethren—Will you permit an obscure individual to say a word to you just at this juncture?

The Church of Jesus Christ is the light of the world. She is set for its illumination and salvation. She should know her exalted mission, and gird herself for the work given her to do. Our branch of the Church, as you well know, is putting on the harness. She is equipping herself for the battle, and going forth under the guidance of the great Captain of Salvation. Her Boards embrace most of the legitimate schemes of benevolence. Missions Foreign and Domestic, Education, Publication, Church Extension, all have their place in her scriptural organizations. These schemes and others claim her attention and support. Each should have its own proper time and place. Hence the need of system. There should be a system in every one of our congregations, embracing all the benevolent schemes of our Church. We must, I think, have a system of benevolence in all our borders, or we shall never fulfil our high mission as a church of Jesus Christ.

Brethren, the Board of Publication, as you are aware, is now taking rank with our most interesting and useful Benevolent Schemes. By the adoption of the colportage system it is doing missionary work. It is not only publishing books and tracts, but employing colporteurs to carry them to the needy and the destitute. It is also supplying poor ministers and Sabbath-schools with libraries, and distributing tracts with a liberal hand; all which requires funds. Wide and inviting fields are opening before it, into which it is ready to enter so soon as the means are furnished. It must be evident to you, dear brethren, that to sustain this system the Board must call upon the churches for collections; and to obtain these collections it must depend mainly upon the PASTORS of our churches. May I then ask for this Board a place in your benevolent plans? Will not your churches give it an annual collection, as has been recommended by the General Assembly? Will you not, at an early day, lay this matter before your respective charges; and from this time forth include the Board of Publication in the list of annual benevolent contributions among your people?

In conclusion, two points are respectfully submitted for your prayerful consideration :—1. The importance of a system of benevolence; and, 2. The desirableness of embracing the Board of Publication in this system, so as to bring it regularly before the churches every year. W. J. M.

"WE ARE ALL WRONG!"

In London, where there are thousands of poor, ignorant children wandering about the streets, getting a miserable living by begging, stealing, or sweeping the crossings, schools have lately been established, called Ragged Schools. Here, on Sabbath and week days, are found kind pious ladies and gentlemen, who devote themselves to the instruction of these wretched outcasts, in religion and the elements of human learning, that they may be raised from their degraded and miserable condition, made useful in life, and happy in time and eternity. Is it not a blessed charity?

One day, a little boy came to one of these ragged schools to have his name put down as a scholar. His dress was a very old coat, which had been made most likely many years before for a man, and now, when worn by the boy, its skirts dragged along the ground as he walked. He had no shirt, no shoes, no stockings; and, instead of trowsers, an old dirty apron was tied around him, outside of the coat. The poor little fellow was covered with dirt from head to foot; plainly showing that his home was one of great neglect and discomfort, as well as of poverty.

The parents of this poor boy were not generally reckoned dishonest people; but they were well known as being very careless about their family, and very profligate. Their occupation was that of selling vegetables and fruit in the streets; and they might have gained a comfortable living in this way, but for their sad habits of drunkenness. Almost all they earned they spent at the public-house, leaving their children to wander in the streets, and to obtain food for themselves as well as they could.

You may think what a wretched home they had. A few shavings served for a bed; an old basket, turned bottom upwards, was the only table, and two old saucepans were the only seats the room contained. The parents themselves were always dressed in tatters, and covered with filth; and the neighbours around them, though, alas! many of them were very ignorant and debased themselves, looked upon this family with pity and contempt.

It was hard work, no doubt, to make the son of such parents pay any regard to cleanliness, and take any real pleasure in learning. After a time, however, he was more decent in appearance, and in a few months was able to read. His teacher then gave him, as a reward and an encouragement, a New Testament: and he was told to take it home and to read it to his parents, if they would like to listen to him. He was to read to them the third chapter of the Gospel by John.

The boy had soon an opportunity of doing this; for, degraded as his parents were, they were proud of the success of their son, and pleased with the gift he had brought from school. They sat and listened, and the child read:

"There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: the same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Now, neither the father nor mother of the boy could read; and most likely they had never before heard this chapter read. If they had, they certainly had not listened to it as they did at this time; for, as soon as the boy had read the third verse, his father stopped him, and cried out, "You are surely reading wrong. 'Except a man be born again!'—you must have read it wrong."

The little reader was sure that these were the very words; but this did not satisfy the father, who said that the teacher must come to tell him whether or not his son was right.

The teacher was glad to go to the miserable abode on such an errand; and when he got there, he took the Testament, and beginning to read at the same place, soon came to the words, "Except a man be born again."

Well, this was just the same as his son had read; and the man could no longer doubt that the exact words were in the book; but this only increased his difficulty. "How can a man be born again?" he asked.

The teacher then told him, that the new birth spoken of there meant a change of heart; that a person who had passed through such a change would no longer live for his own sinful pleasures, but for the glory of God. He said that, instead of the love of sin, new desires and affections would spring up in the heart; that there would be a love of holiness, and a constant fear of doing what is forbidden by God. He said also, that this change of heart and of affection would produce a change of conduct; that the man thus changed would forsake the sins which he had before loved, and become sober, honest, industrious, and frugal; and also, in all things would adorn the doctrine of God his Saviour. He told him, lastly, that such a change could only be wrought by the Holy Spirit of God, through the mercy of the Lord Jesus Christ, and on account of what he had done and suffered.

These words made a great impression on the mind of this poor, sinful and ignorant man; he exclaimed, "We are all wrong!" The truth of the gospel had touched his heart with power, and caused him to feel what a wretch he had lived through the whole of his life.

He looked around him and saw everything to convince him that his own sins had brought him to ruin and desolation, even in this world; and he felt that they were hurrying him on to eternal destruction. Like the jailer, whom he read of in the Acts of the Apostles, his thought was, "What must I do?" No doubt, after this, he was shown the way of salvation more clearly; and his conduct gave great hope that he had experienced what it was to be born again. After several years, it was found that the sins he had once loved and followed had been forsaken, and that the word of God was the rule of his life. His wife, too, became an altered woman; she was no longer neglectful of her children, and caring for nothing but her own sinful gratification, but desirous of learning the will of her Maker and Saviour, and of doing it.

You may be sure that such a change as this made a difference in many other respects. The money that they earned, and which once would have been squandered in sin, was employed in making home decent and happy. The children, as well as themselves, were comfortably clothed and fed. By degrees, their abode was furnished with tables and chairs, bed and bedstead; while cleanliness gave additional value to every new comfort they enjoyed. They were no longer "all wrong;" but had reason to hope, and others had reason to hope for them, that the gospel, which had brought such a change to their dwelling, had also been the power of God unto salvation, because it was believed and obeyed. Do you not think, then, that these persons were proofs of God's mercy; and that they had great reason to be thankful for the instructions received by their son at the Ragged School?—"The Ragged Scholars," published by Pres. Bd. of Publication.

BLANK FORMS FOR SESSIONAL REPORTS.

The Board of Publication have published the above in very neat style, and can supply church sessions, on moderate terms.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION, IN THE MONTH OF JANUARY.

Presbytery of Albany.
2d ch Windham, Rev Alfred Gardiner	5 00
Presbytery of North River.
Marlboro ch 7 67; Wappinger's Falls 3 22; New Hamburg 10 60; Delhi 8 10; Smithfield 10 all per Rev W J McCord	39 59
Presbytery of Long Island.
Huntington ch	7 12
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
Princeton ch, per Rev Wm E Schenck, Richard Brittain for colportage in the West	10 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
Central ch Phila Sab sch to const their pastor Rev Wm H Green hon mem per M Newkirk 30; Seventh ch A Friend 5	35 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.
Newtown ch per Rev R D Morris	8 75
Presbytery of Huntingdon.
Sinking and Spring Creek ch Wm Milligan	1 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Franklin St ch per Rev Dr Plumer (in part) 140; Monokin ch per W R Carpenter, "Ladies" 1 44	141 44
Presbytery of Wooster.
Guilford ch per Rev V Noyes, John Lee	10 00
Presbytery of Marion.
Merseilles ch per Rev S Brown	6 00
Presbytery of Sidney.
West Liberty ch to const Rev J H Gill h m 30; Kenton ch 20 per Rev S Brown; Urbana ch in part 5	55 00
Presbytery of Miami.
Lebanon ch in part to const Rev S Newell h m	30 25
Presbytery of Nashville.
Clarksville ch per J M Rutherford, Dr Wood	4 75
Presbytery of Muhlenberg.
Henderson ch per J M Rutherford	1 00
Presbytery of Orange.
Bethworth Wm J Bingham to const self hon mem	30 00
Presbytery of Flint River.
Hopewell ch S J Saunders to const self hon mem 30; Talbot co Robt Duncan to const self hon mem 30	60 00
Presbytery of Hopewell.
New Hope ch Rev G H Cartledge	4 00
Presbytery of Tuscaloosa.
Eutaw ch per Rev Mr Stillman	25 75
Presbytery of Wisconsin.
Milwaukie North ch S Chapman	5 00
MISCELLANEOUS.
A Friend in the Lutheran ch 10; Family missionary box 1; Rev Wm J McCord 50 cts, Gulielma T McCord 10 cts; "G N" 10; "A Friend" per J D Thorpe 2 50; T W 5	29 10
Total	508 75

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

The Rev. John Woodbridge was installed by the Presbytery of Albany, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Saratoga Springs, on the 21st of January.

The Rev. Thomas T. Magill was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church of Urbana, Ohio, on the 11th of January.

On the 5th of January, by the Presbytery of Brazos, the Rev. Joel T. Case was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church at Victoria, Texas.

On the 23d of January, the Rev. Wm. Burnett was installed by the Presbytery of Ohio, pastor of the church in Manchester, near Pittsburgh.

On the 31st of January, by the Presbytery of Ohio, the Rev. Wm. M. Paxton was installed pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church in Pittsburgh.

On the 15th of January, by the Presbytery of Troy, Mr. Andrew M. Beveridge was ordained as an evangelist.

On the 17th of January, the Rev. Edwin Town was installed by the Presbytery of Eastern Shore, pastor of the churches of Wicomico and Barren Creek Springs.

On the 5th of November, the Presbytery of Susquehanna ordained Mr. Albertus Vandewater as an evangelist.

On the 6th of February, the Presbytery of New Brunswick ordained Mr. John T. Duffield to the full work of the gospel ministry. Mr. Duffield is Adjunct Professor of Mathematics in the college of New Jersey, and stated supply of the Second Presbyterian church in Princeton, New Jersey.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

The Rev. S. C. McCune has been dismissed from the church of Canton, Illinois, and become stated supply of the churches of Salem and Liverpool.

The Rev. B. T. Bittenger has resigned the charge of the Presbyterian church at Tamaqua, Pennsylvania. His address now is Georgetown, District of Columbia.

CALLS.

The Rev. Robert McGuigan, late of the Free Church of Scotland, has accepted a call from the churches of Union and Keosauque, Iowa. His post-office is Birmingham, Iowa.

The Rev. R. E. Sherrill, formerly of Harmony church, Pontotoc, Mississippi, has taken charge of the church in Somerville, Tennessee.

The Rev. W. C. McPheeters has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church in Marshall, Missouri.

The Rev. Samuel A. Gayley has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church of Lock Haven, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. R. Lewis has accepted a call from the church of Salem, in Blairsville Presbytery. His address is New Derry, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. John Hancock has accepted a call from the church of Greensburg, Kentucky.

The Westminster church, St. Louis, has given a unanimous call to Rev. S. B. McPheeters, of Virginia.

The church of Batesville, Arkansas, has given a call to the Rev. W. K. Marshall, of Fort Smith.

The Rev. Dr. Smith, Agent of the Board of Missions for the Synod of Pittsburg, has received a call to the church of Round Hill, of which his father died pastor in 1803.

CHANGE OF RELATION.

The Rev. S. S. Pettie, of the New-school Presbytery of Newark, has been received by the Old-school Presbytery of Whitewater, and has accepted a call to the church of Lawrenceburg, Indiana.

The Rev. William Burnett has been received by the Presbytery of Ohio, from the Associate Reformed church.

LICENSURES.

Mr. Henry Rinker and Mr. William C. Davis have been licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of New Brunswick.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Synod of Mississippi, at its late session in Vicksburg, at the request of the Brazos Presbytery, constituted three Presbyteries within the State of Texas, with boundaries as follows:—Presbytery of Eastern Texas, east of Trinity river; of Middle Texas, between the Trinity and Colorado rivers; and that of Western Texas, west of Colorado river.

The First Presbyterian church in Stockton street, San Francisco, of which the Rev. Albert Williams is pastor, was blown down on the 19th of November last, in a heavy gale, we are glad to learn by the last advices, was rebuilding, and was expected to be completed about the 1st of January.

The Rev. John Kennedy has removed from Louisville, Kentucky, and has taken charge of the First Presbyterian church of Chester, Illinois.

The Rev. James C. Barnes is now labouring as a stated supply in the church of Perryville, Boyle county, Kentucky.

The Rev. Mr. Rogers, late of South Carolina, has taken up his residence in Corpus Christi, Texas, with the view of building up a Presbyterian church there.

The Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, pastor of the Chartiers church near Pittsburg, has accepted the professorship of Natural Sciences in Hampden Sidney college, Virginia.

The post-office address of the Rev. John M. Dinsmore is changed to Utica, Licking county, Ohio.

The Rev. J. P. Riddle, of West Lexington Presbytery, has accepted an invitation to labour as stated supply of the churches of Salem, Kentucky, and Golconda, Illinois.

The Rev. Hugh Marshall has removed from the Kenawha Salines to Spring Creek, Greenbrier county, Virginia, to labour as a missionary in that region.

The Rev. Wm. W. Backus, of New York, has accepted an invitation to become the stated supply of the churches of Camden and Edwards, near Rock Island City, Illinois.

Varieties.

THE BACKBONE OF PRESBYTERIANISM.—The Presbytery of Ohio, which embraces the cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, according to the Presbyterian Advocate, is not only the largest Presbytery in the United States, but the largest in the world, consisting of forty-five ministers—enough to form five Synods, each composed of three Presbyteries.

MORALS OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDERS.—In 1847, there had been among them but five executions, and these for three murders, for ten years. No one, since that time, has been convicted of murder. Rarely is a native seen intoxicated. As a nation, they observe the Sabbath, and attend upon the means of grace, read the Bible, and seek God with their families.

BIBLES AND TRACTS.—In Italy the demand for Bibles and Tracts is incessant, especially in all the towns along the Ligurian coast.

BEAUTIES OF POPERY.—It is said that among all her seaward-looking cliffs, Spain has not a single light-house, from the Pyrenees to point Europa; she has no railroads, no canals, no telegraphs; and till recently there has been no safety for travellers on the highways. We suppose that the Pope thinks that the people don't need light-houses.

LIBERTY IN REPUBLICAN FRANCE!—For giving or loaning to friends some seven or eight religious tracts, Mr. Estevule, an Evangelist, has recently been imprisoned eleven days, besides being condemned to ten dollars fine, and costs of trial!

PROTESTANTISM NOT DECLINING.—"Do any tell you that evangelical Protestantism is on the decline? How strange their error! Every school that tells the story of Luther and the Reformation—every unmuzzled press—every tract that speaks of Christ's blood as the only atonement for, and cancelment of sin—every sermon that preaches him, God and man, the one and the sufficient, and the only Mediator, every Protestant Bible sent on its glad errand—is a new triumph—is a new protest of a living Protestantism against presumptuous edict that calls dead, in the murderous hope of burying her alive!"—Dr. Williams.

INTOLERANCE IN SWEDEN.—The Rev. Fredrich Olaus Nilsson, a native of Sweden, was condemned to banishment and confiscation of goods, on account of his having seceded from the Lutheran Church, and officiated as pastor of a Baptist congregation in Gottenburg. Appeals in his behalf from various bodies and from different countries had been made to the king, but in vain.

PRESBYTERIANS STRONG IN NUMBERS.—The Rev. Dr. Robert J. Breckinridge stated, in a sermon lately preached in Kentucky, that the Presbyterian body was the largest numerically in the United States. In this estimate all who hold to the Presbyterian order and doctrine were included. The Doctor made this statement, not, as he affirmed, in a way of boasting, but to show the high mission with which the Presbyterian Church was invested—that where much was given much was required.

FRUITS OF CALVINISM.—Sir James McIntosh says in his Journal: "The Calvinistic people of Scotland, of Switzerland, of Holland, and of New England, have been more moral than the same class in other nations. Those who preached faith, or in other words a pure mind, have always produced more popular virtue than those who preached good works, or the mere regulation of outward acts." The remarks of Sir James are a fine comment on the words of Paul, "Faith worketh by love."

DISASTERS ON THE LAKES.—The total loss of lives on the lakes during the year 1850 was 395. The loss of property during the same period was $558,926, as follows: steamboats, $265,700; propellers, $30,444; sail vessels, $262,782. Ten steamboats, including the "two tugs," 21 sail craft, and probably one propeller (the Petrel, whose fate remains in doubt), have gone out of existence entirely.

PREACHING TO THE NEGROES.—The Treasurer of the South Carolina Conference Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, reports the sum of $17,700, as the amount collected during the past year, for the support of missions, which is expended in the support of the preachers to the slaves on the plantations.

EMIGRATION OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.—The Ellen lately left Liverpool for New Orleans, having on board 465 emigrants, on their way to the Mormon establishment in the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. The emigrants were from all parts of England; fifteen families coming from Sheffield alone. A second ship, the George William Brown, is also ready to sail, with about 280 emigrants of the same persuasion, and for the same destination, whilst another vessel, the Ellen Maria, has been laid on to sail on the 29th inst.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH IN OREGON.—A Congregational church was dedicated, with interesting services, in Oregon city on the 18th of August last.

DR. ACHILI is engaged in writing an account of his experience with the Inquisition. He is also to publish in London a weekly Italian journal. Besides this, he is intent on the preparation of an Italian version of the Scriptures.

THE ALEXANDER HIGH SCHOOL, at Monrovia, has gone into full operation, and increased attention is paid to the subject of education in Liberia.

"MORE JEWS," says Professor Tholuck, "have been converted to Christianity during the last twenty-five years than during the seventeen centuries preceding."

NOTICE.

In renewing subscriptions, or giving notice of removal, or of discontinuance, it is necessary to furnish us with the Post-office address. Post-Masters and others who have not done so, will please supply the omission, and take this as an explanation why their orders have not been attended to.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—To several Female Members of the Church, p. 34. Fruits, p. 34. Sympathize with your Brethren who are Leading the van on our Frontiers, p. 35. Receipts, p. 36.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—I. Ministerial Education: Mind and Culture, p. 37. A Pastoral Letter to Candidates for the Gospel Ministry, p. 37. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 38. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies and Colleges: The Schools, Academies and Colleges of the Presbyterian Church p. 38. Hard Work and Courage, p. 39. Another Presbyterial Academy, at Montpelier, Ohio, p. 39. "Come out of her, my People," p. 39. Notices, p. 39. Receipts, p. 39.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—Recent Intelligence, p. 40. Africa: Mission near the Equator. Journal of the Rev. G. W. Simpson, continued, p. 40. Turkey: Progress in the Interior Cities, p. 42. Creek Mission, p. 42. Iowa and Sac Mission, p. 43. Receipts, p. 44.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.—Close of the Ecclesiastical Year, p. 46. The Synod of South Carolina and the Boards, p. 46. Fire Arms, p. 46. 12,000 subscribers in less than Two Months, p. 46. Tribute of Thanks for a Colporteur's labours, p. 46. The First Printed Book, p. 46. "Salvation: or, The Sinner directed in the Way of Life," p. 46. A Word to Pastors, p. 46. "We are all Wrong!" p. 47. Receipts, p. 47.

MISCELLANEOUS.—The Record a highly prized Visitor, p. 33. Statistical Reports from Church Sessions, p. 33. Pleasant Words, p. 33. My Birthday, p. 33. The Constraining Power of the Love of Christ, p. 33. The Mother's Reward, p. 33. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 48. Varieties, p. 48.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 4. | PHILADELPHIA, APRIL, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

ALL THINGS FOR CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

Let Christians remember their claims on the world for the furtherance of the great work of the Church on earth, and see well to it that those just and invaluable claims be not neglected and sacrificed.

If the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof, and if Jesus Christ the Head of the Church is the heir and actual holder of the whole, then are the members of the Church his agents to apply the world to his spiritual purposes. All things are theirs, to be held in the active and healthful service of the Church. Governments, with all their imperfections, are the Lord's for this end. The social and economic systems of the world are never in right use but when they form a medium of spiritual influence from God to mankind. The same invisible Spirit, which was so abundantly bestowed on the person of Christ, so diffused through his being, and so effective wherever he went, takes up the world as an incorporation of its heavenly agency, and works through it the redemption of the souls and bodies of men. It makes all things the carriers of its spiritual provisions to the Church.

If men use sounds in a spoken language, those sounds shall express the grace of God in the gospel. If men write language for the eye, that writing shall set forth the grace of the gospel. If men nourish the art of eloquence, their eloquence shall find its noblest office in winning souls to Christ. If men multiply the charms of literature, those charms shall enchase the pearl of heavenly wisdom. If art unfold itself in architecture, then architecture must lend its attractions to the scenes of divine worship. If in music, she owes a tribute of her harmony to the service of God. If men construct mechanism for printing, their machines must print the word of God, and furnish the world with a Christian literature. If men erect and endow institutions of learning, their seminaries must be the golden candlesticks for the light of divine truth. They must be nurseries of a learned ministry, and scenes of the spiritual power and grace of God. If men build their vehicles to outfly the winds, those vehicles must carry to and fro the many who are employed in spreading the knowledge of Christ. The swift post maintained by the nation to diffuse intelligence and aid the business of the world, must carry the millions of printed pages glowing with the words of heavenly love. The sails of commerce must be the wings of the angel having the everlasting gospel to preach to every tongue, and people, and nation.

See how the kingdom of Christ, though not of this world, applies this world to its use. The kingdom of Christ is not of this world; but this world belongs to the kingdom of Christ. There is a connexion between the business of the world and the work of the gospel, which gives that business a sacred character. The prophets looked towards a future which wore over all its secularities, in their view, a spiritual aspect; and they foretold the time when holiness to the Lord would be written on the bells of the horses.

But though all things are thus made for Christ, we see not yet all things used for him; and this diversion in fact becomes the occasion of dangerous error in theory. Men presume against the title of Christ, because of deferred possession, as though some human statute of limitations could have availed here. But this is a case in which the longest diversion in the use does not alienate the right. And we have other cases in abundance to show us how slowly things may come to their place in the divine economy of the world, yet surely come at last. You have a tree for fruit; but how many long years may some beholder, not versed in the laws of horticulture, mock your doctrines and your hopes, while he sees the tree through the many autumns of its immaturity, yielding leaves only. The fuel of our fires, how many centuries has it served no office but to uphold the mountains, while men dreamed not that it was made for any thing else.

As Christians put off the old man and put on the new, they learn to place the world in its proper relation to the kingdom of Christ. They understand more clearly and more profoundly, that the kingdom, and the power, and the glory are his; and that his right to them should be claimed and maintained by his people.

J. W. Y.

NEARER TO THEE.

Along the mountain-track of life,
Along the weary lea,
O'er rocks, 'mid storms, in joy, in strife,
Let this my heart-cry be,
"Nearer to THEE!" "Nearer to THEE!"

This pilgrim-path by Thee was trod,
JESUS! my King! by Thee!
Traced by Thy feet, Thy tears, Thy blood,
In love, in death, for me—
O bring my soul nearer to THEE!

Let every step, let every thought,
Sweet memories bear of Thee!
And hear the soul Thy love hath bought,
Whose way-cry oft shall be,
"Nearer to THEE!" "Nearer to THEE!"

Thou wilt! Thou dost! A small still voice
Teacheth of faith in Thee;
Of hope, that might in grief rejoice,
If still the way-cry be,
"Nearer to THEE!" "Nearer to THEE!"

Yet a few days to me, perhaps,
And Time no more shall be:
But boundless love can know no lapse,
Thou art Eternity!
Draw thou my soul "Nearer to THEE!"

Be it the heaven I hope above,
To live and move in Thee!
Oh by Thy past, Thy promised Love,
Grant these blest words to me,
"ASCEND, FORGIVEN!—Nearer to THEE!"

THE CHURCH IN THE HOUSE.

It is with the church in the house as with the church in the village. The wayfarer may get a word in passing which he can never forget. The stranger that turns aside to tarry for a night, may hear at your family worship that word that will save his soul. Some years ago, an Irish wanderer, his wife, and his sister, asked a night's shelter in the cabin of a pious school-master. With the characteristic hospitality of his nation, the school-master made them welcome. It was his hour for evening worship, and when the strangers were seated, he began by reading slowly and solemnly, the second chapter of the epistle to the Ephesians. The young man sat astonished. The expressions, "Dead in trespasses and sins," "children of wrath," "walking after the course of this world," were new to him. He sought an explanation. He was told that this is God's account of the state of men by nature. He felt that it was exactly his own state. "In this way I have walked from my childhood. In the service of the god of this world we have come to your house." He was on his way to a fair, where he intended to pass a quantity of counterfeit money. But God's word had found him out. He produced his store of coin, and begged his host to cast it into the fire; and asked anxiously if he could not obtain the word of God for himself. His request was complied with, and next morning, with their new treasure, the party who had now no errand to the fair, returned to their own home. Perhaps by this time, the pious school-master has met his guest within the gates of the city, outside of which are thieves, and whatsoever maketh a lie.—Hamilton.

PEASANT ON THE WELSH MOUNTAINS.

I was told of a poor peasant on the Welsh mountains that month after month, year after year, through a long period of declining life, was wont every morning, as soon as awake, to open his casement window, towards the east, and look to see if Jesus Christ was coming. He was no calculator, or he need not have looked so long; he was a student of prophecy, or he would not have looked at all; he was ready, or he would not have been in so much haste; he was willing, or he would rather have looked another way: he loved, or it would not have been the first thought of the morning. His Master did not come, but a messenger did, to fetch the ready one home; the same preparation sufficed for both, the longing soul was satisfied with either.

Often, when in the morning the child of God awakes, wearily, and encumbered with the flesh; perhaps from troubled dreams, perhaps with troubled thoughts, his Father's secret comes presently across him; he looks up, if not out, to feel, if not to see, the glories of that last morning when the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall arise indestructible; no weary limbs to bear the spirit down; no feverish dreams to haunt the visions; no dark forecasting of the day's events, or returning memory of the griefs of yesterday.—Fry.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. Reese Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

STATE OF THE TREASURY.

Mission Rooms, March 1851.

As this will be our last opportunity before the meeting of the General Assembly, and before the usual Spring collections in our Presbyteries, we shall embrace it to lay before the churches the present state of the Treasury of the Board of Domestic Missions.

There are nine Treasuries, which have been established at various points, and in different parts of the great field, mainly for the sake of convenience for the receipt and disbursement of funds.

There is the Principal Treasury in Philadelphia in immediate connection with the Board.

Within that portion of the field assigned to this Treasury, there are the following Treasuries, established by Synods and Presbyteries, which receive their funds; but the funds paid into these Treasuries are paid out by drafts on them from the Treasury in Philadelphia.

The Treasury at Pittsburgh, for the Synods of Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

The Treasury at Columbus, Ohio, for the Synod of Ohio.

The Treasury at Petersburg, Va., for the Presbytery of East Hanover.

The Treasury at Farmville, Va., for the Presbytery of West Hanover.

The Treasury at Staunton, Va., for the Presbytery of Lexington.

The Treasury at Statesville, N. C., for the Presbytery of Concord.

The Treasury at Hamilton, Ga., for Flint River Presbytery.

All these are, by arrangement with the Presbyteries and Synods, in connection with the principal Treasury in Philadelphia.

Then we have the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., of the Western Executive Committee of the Board, which has under its care and for its field, ten Synods, namely, Memphis, Mississippi, Cincinnati, Northern Indiana, Alabama, Kentucky, Nashville, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri.

The Western Executive Committee collects and disburses its own funds, appointing all the missionaries within its field, and reports regularly to the Board in Philadelphia: and when short of funds, is assisted by the Treasury in Philadelphia, when it is itself in funds that may be devoted to that purpose.

The Missionaries in connection with the Treasury in Philadelphia, and with the other Treasuries that act through it, are all paid up to date, and we owe no one any thing; and all the Treasuries, so far as heard from the past month, are free of any over-draft, and some of them have a small surplus.

The increase of missionaries under the care of the Western Executive Committee, and the consequent increase of expense, and the absence of legacies the present year, has left that Committee short of its liabilities. And in consequence of the heavy expense of sending out a missionary and his family to Oregon the past month, the office in Philadelphia has not been able to assist the Western Committee to the full amount which it required; so that Treasury is at the present time, in pressing need of supplies; and it is our earnest hope that the churches will make no delay, but take up their collections a second, or even a third time, if necessary, and enable the Western Committee to go forward, free of embarrassment.

And while writing, we embrace the occasion to say that the drafts which will be made upon the general Treasury of the Board for the months of March and April, will be large; and there is need of prompt action on the part of all churches and Presbyteries, and liberal contributions, in order that we be enabled to close the year the 1st of May, and present our Report to the Assembly, free of all debt, which is indeed most desirable. This is the principle upon which our Church has carried on all her benevolent operations in years past; it is the only correct and true principle, and by the good hand of the Lord upon us, we must not depart from it.

NOTICE TO CHURCHES AND PRESBYTERIES.

In order that your contributions for the work of Domestic Missions should appear in our Report to the General Assembly, they should be made and forwarded to the different Treasuries, that you are in the habit of sending them to, before the 1st of May. We give this notice, that there may be no disappointment to any. The Treasurers of the Presbyteries will be good enough to let us have their accounts in time for our Report to the Assembly.

NOTICE TO MISSIONARIES OF THE BOARD.

We are now forwarding the blank Statistical Reports, which the brethren will please fill up and return in due season. We shall be very glad for them to insert what efforts have been made for the erection of Parsonages during the year in their respective fields: and whether any of them already occupy Parsonages.

We would also respectfully request that if the blank Statistical Reports should fail to reach any of the brethren, as is sometimes the case, that they will not delay forwarding full Reports of their year's labour, as near the usual form as possible, on the 1st of April.

SUMMARY FOR DECEMBER AND JANUARY.

During these months there were received at the office in Philadelphia, two hundred and seventy-seven Reports from our missionaries: of which 3 were from the New England States; 79 from the Middle States; 100 from the Western States; 92 from the Southern States, and 3 from the Pacific States and Territories.

They assure us of the continued health of all our brethren and their families, and of the people of their charge, with a few exceptions; and of the general prosperity of the missionary work. And it is our pleasing duty to record for our gratitude to the Great Head of the Church, and for the encouragement of all who love His cause and kingdom, and pray for the salvation of souls, that we have received a number of Reports, that contain accounts of the presence and power of God's Spirit in the churches, manifested in the revival of religion in the hearts of Christians, and in the conversion of many who were living without God and without hope in the world. May these gracious influences be extended until our whole Church is abundantly revived. Our space is so limited that we can furnish no extracts in this number. We cannot resist the impression gathered from the Reports, that there is an increasing interest among the Missionaries of the Board in their great work, and a spirit of prayer for the outpouring of God's Spirit on their respective charges.

PROGRESS OF THE BOARD.

For eight months up to January 1st, 1851.

The increase of Funds over the corresponding months, the last year, in the Treasuries of Philadelphia, Louisville and Pittsburgh, about $5,500.

The increase of Missionaries over the corresponding months the last year, in connection with the office in Philadelphia, 33. In connection with the office at Louisville 18. Total 51.

In commission on 1st of January from the office in Philadelphia, 332. In connection with the office at Louisville, 210. Total 542.

While we have this encouraging increase, we must bear in mind that we have corresponding expenses, and our entire income is not up to our wants, as will be seen by the article on the State of the Treasury.

A corresponding increase of appointments and reappointments for the remaining four months, will make the whole number in commission during the year, range between 630 and 650.

Resolutions of the Board of Missions and of the Church Extension Committee, in relation to ante-dating Commissions, and appropriations for building Churches. Passed March 8th and 10th, 1851.

We earnestly request the Presbyteries and Churches to give the following resolutions attention, and to keep them in view when applications are hereafter made either for commissions for missionaries, or for appropriations to aid in the erection of churches.

Action of the Board of Missions in relation to Ante-dating Commissions, March 10, 1851.

In consequence of the constantly repeated applications of Presbyteries to ante-date Commissions; some for three, others for six, and some even for twelve months, and without any apparent reason other than want of attention and prompt action on the part of Presbyteries and Committees of Presbyteries on Missions, thereby embarrassing the business of the Board, and depriving the Board of an accurate knowledge of the expenses of our Missions, for which provision must be made weekly, therefore,

1. Resolved, That the Presbyteries and the Committees of Presbyteries on Missions, be respectfully requested to have Commissions of their Missionaries renewed, before the expiration of their time of service, if practicable to do so; and in all cases to state definitely the time when they wish the Commission to be dated.

2. Resolved, That from and after the 1st day of May, 1851, the Board will ante-date no Commission beyond two months from the time of the reception of the application at the Mission Rooms, either in Philadelphia or in Louisville.

3. Resolved, That the 1st and 2d Resolution of this action of the Board be printed on the Commissions of our Missionaries.

4. Resolved, That this action of the Board in relation to ante-dating Commissions, be communicated to the Presbyteries, through the Home and Foreign Record, and other papers of the Church.

True extract from the Minutes,
A. W. Mitchell, Secretary pro tem.

Resolutions of the Church Extension Committee in relation to Appropriations.

The following preamble and resolutions in relation to appropriations, were adopted, viz:

It being impossible for the Church Extension Committee ever to know the exact state of its available funds, without subjecting the appropriation to some limited time, during which the Committee will be responsible, but no time beyond that limit: and in consequence of appropriations being made and continued to churches for a series of years from whom nothing is heard, and the funds are thereby locked up, and more recent applications cannot be responded to from churches which would immediately build if their applications were granted, and thus destroying that equality of right to this Fund, which should be open upon just conditions to all the churches:—for these considerations, and the necessity of the case, the Committee unanimously adopt the following resolutions in relation to all future appropriations, as well as to those already made.

1. Resolved, That if appropriations to churches are not called for within two years from the date of their application, the appropriations shall be considered as withdrawn, and the Committee be no longer liable for the same.

2. Resolved, That this rule shall apply to all appropriations which have been made to churches within a year from this date.

3. Resolved, That all appropriations of one year's standing, unless called for by the churches within a year from this date, shall be withdrawn, and the Committee be no longer responsible for the same.

4. Resolved, That all appropriations which have been made two years and over from this date be withdrawn; and the churches notified, that if they still desire their appropriations they will be required to make new and regular applications for the same, and give assurance that their churches will be completed within a year from the date of said application.

5. Resolved, That this action of the Committee be communicated to all the churches to whom appropriations have been made, and that it be published in the Home and Foreign Record, and other papers of our Church.

True extract from the Minutes of the Church Extension Committee, March 8th, 1851.

S. D. Powel, Secretary of Ch. Ex. Com.

Approved by the Board of Missions, March 10, 1851.

A. W. Mitchell, Secretary of Board, pro tem.

BOUNDARIES OF SYNODS AND PRESBYTERIES.

The brethren to whom we are now sending circulars, that we may obtain the accurate boundaries of all our Synods and Presbyteries, will greatly oblige us by forwarding their replies as speedily as possible. We have received from Fort Wayne Presbytery, not a description of the boundaries of that Presbytery, but a perfect map of the Presbytery drawn with the camel's hair pencil, on transparent paper, in a beautiful manner. The counties are all accurately outlined, and the exact position of the churches of the Presbytery given; and the rivers and railroads marked down; and a table on the margin gives the population of each county, and the total of all. We dare not expect so much from all our Presbyteries, but we hope for clearly expressed and accurate boundaries.

MISSIONARIES TO OREGON—GONE.

The Rev. Edward R. Geary and Family sailed from New York, Febuary 13th, in the steamer Empire City, on their way to Oregon by the Isthmus route. Mr. Geary will spend a short time at San Francisco, seeing an only brother, who is now Mayor of that city, and making the acquaintance also of the brethren there; and then proceed to Astoria. His field of labour will be determined after he reaches Oregon.

The Rev. R. Robe will leave in a very few days from Columbus, Ohio, if he is not now on his way, and connecting himself with emigrants, take the overland route. Mr. Geary is in the prime of life, of robust constitution, and in the enjoyment of perfect health: and Mr. Robe, although younger in years, is no less fitted for this noble work which they have undertaken, of planting the gospel on the shores of the Pacific. They both have determined, by the favouring smiles of Providence, to make Oregon their future home, and field of service in the Ministry. We would unite with a large circle of their attached friends, and with all who love our Zion, in prayer to Almighty God that their lives may be spared, and all their plans of usefulness be crowned with success. The Board would gladly send out more missionaries to these distant fields, but from the state of the Treasury, they cannot do so at present, unless more abundant resources are placed at their command.

We now gratefully acknowledge the generosity of William H. Aspinwall, Esq., President of the Pacific Steam Boat Company, in presenting the Board with Three hundred and seventy-five dollars towards the payment of the passage of Mr. Geary and family, from New York to Astoria.

THE RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF THE COLOURED POPULATION.

During the last quarter, over forty letters have been recieved from missionaries and ministers in Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, in which special mention is made of the religious instruction of the coloured population who are connected with their respective charges.

We are confident that we have received but a small part of the information which might be obtained of what is now doing in this interesting and important field, had we reports from all our missionaries and ministers who are located throughout the Southern and South-western States. But many of the reports go directly to the Western Executive Committee, in Louisville, under whose care a number of the Southern States are placed, and we do not receive duplicates of them, and our missionaries have heretofore not made special mention of this class of our population, independent of the white population.

The Presbyterian Church in the Southern States feels a deep interest in the good work, and our ministry, whether connected with the Board or not, have free course in all the labour they desire, and are enabled to bestow upon them. And in this access to the people, we are not peculiar, for it is enjoyed by all denominations of Christians. And the faithful, judicious, religious instruction of the Negroes, is what is not only approved, but desired by all intelligent and engaged Christians in our Southern Zion.

We proceed to give as many extracts from our letlers as our limited space will allow.

A young Lady's coloured Sunday-school in Maryland.—"I at first took charge of a coloured class, that was taught at the same place, with the white Sunday-school, but afterwards, obtaining the use of a comfortable and pleasant room in the basement of the Presbyterian church, I adjourned my class there and took entire charge of my small school, which was increased by some additions. Several were grown persons. Soon after Miss G. became my assistant and fellow labourer. We have had more than we could profitably teach, and more teachers could be employed. Many of these poor children were almost entirely ignorant of the way of salvation. Would that the professed people of God were more interested and active in this good work. I read the pamphlets you sent me carefully, and with interest, for which accept my thanks. Remember before a Throne of Grace, the teachers and scholars of this school. M. L. H."

From Virginia.—"In this country the negroes are not numerous, and perhaps in no part of the State is there more attention paid to their spiritual wants than with us. In some instances they are taught the Westminster Catechism: ample church accommodation: attendance on divine worship, very general; a larger proportion of them members of the Church than the whites; preaching to them in particular, frequent. I commenced ten years ago and have continued to preach to them. H. B."

"I have preached regularly every Sabbath to the coloured people: a few have made a credible profession, and been admitted to church membership. J. J. S."

"I continue to labour among the coloured people, having a regular appointment for them in the evening of each Sabbath day—and there are many encouraging indications in this most interesting part of my charge. During the summer at nearly every meeting, some have waited after the congregation has been dismissed, to talk with me on the great concern of salvation. I am more and more convinced that this part of our population can be brought not only to endure, but to prefer instructive preaching to any other kind. S. B. McV."

From North Carolina.—"I have always regarded them as an important part of my flock, and as such have made it my business to give them special instruction: sometimes preaching to them in the afternoon at church; at other times, at private houses. At one time I formed a number of them into a class for the purpose of instructing them in your excellent Catechism. I also ordered 184 copies of that work; all which, with the exception of some 15 or 20 copies, I distributed among my own and neighbouring congregations for the purpose of having the servants of each family instructed at home. I feel this subject to be an important one, but I fear none of us, in this region at least, feel it as we shall, when called to meet them at the bar of that God who is no respecter of persons. E. H."

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Faithful Action and great Blessings!

Ohio, Feb. 9th, 1851.

Dear Brother,—Your's of February 1st, enclosing check No. 73, from our treasurer, Mr. Powel, came duly to hand; and was paid by me to the Trustees of the Hill Grove Church. Our neat house of worship is now free of debt. We are truly thankful to the Board, and the Church; but more especially to the Head of the Church.

In this enterprise, dear brother, God has been with us from the beginning. A little more than one year and a half ago, I preached for the first time at that village, to about thirty persons, in a small unfinished house, belonging to the Methodists. At each subsequent meeting the numbers were increased; and our people, though few in number, resolved, in reliance upon God for his blessing upon the undertaking, to build a house of worship. The friends thought that they could raise as much as five hundred dollars for the work; and planned the house accordingly. The plan was subsequently enlarged. The house was commenced in October 1849, and finished in July 1850. While the house lasts, it will stand as a monument of the goodness of God to that interesting little people. For it is a neat and substantial house; will seat more than two hundred and fifty persons; cost rising eight hundred dollars; built by a handful of poor men, and is free of debt.

And blessed be God, this is not all. About the time that the friends of Christ commenced making efforts to build a house for God, the presence of the Spirit began to be manifest amongst them. And soon conversion followed conversion, and addition to the church succeeded addition, on to the present time. And now, from twenty-five, they have increased to seventy; and have a brighter prospect now for increase than ever.

When the first timbers were laid on the wall of the proposed house, one of the best men said, "That house will not be filled in five years." On the day of its dedication it was literally packed. It is well filled on every Sabbath when I preach there, if the weather is at all favourable. And on the days of our communion, it is too small! God has done, and is doing this for his own glory. J. A. M.

SPEEDY SYMPATHY, AND A LITTLE MORE STILL NEEDED.

In the last number of the Record we published a piece headed "Sympathize with your Brethren who are Leading the van on our Frontiers:" in which appeared a notice of a "Pastor's Library," and a "Pastor's Study." The Board of Missions on receipt of the letter about the Pastor's library, immediately forwarded a donation of books to the worthy brother.

A pastor in Philadelphia read the piece to his people, and it awakened a lively interest among them. At a meeting of the Board of Publication, at his suggestion, the members of that Board contributed individually, and purchased Scott's Commentary, (than which, as a whole, there is none better) for the "Pastor's Library"—and then the Board of Publication itself resolved to make such donation of Books to the same and to the "Pastor's Study," as might appear necessary. A day or two after, a gentleman in New York placed at the disposal of the Board forty dollars to be appropriated at the discretion of the Board of Missions to these two cases. We thank you kindly, brethren, for this sympathy in the name of the brethren whom you would aid and encourage: we thank you kindly. No doubt there is much of this real interest in Domestic Missions in our Church. It would do no harm to give it expression, and for contributions to be sent up to the Board, to be used at the discretion of the Board for such special cases, which are coming into notice from time to time.

Here is one, just at hand to-day, from a laborious Missionary in Western Virginia, March 1st.

"Am afraid I shall be necessitated to abandon my post. A series of misfortunes have befallen me since coming here. First, a trunk of clothes miscarried, and I can get no trace of it. Next my books were mis-shipped, and did not reach me for four months, and then quite a number of them gone! And, the other day, my horse died! Don't know what I shall do: can't possibly buy another. The one I lost, is to be paid for out of my year's salary! I can neither borrow nor hire one; and it is impossible for me to get along without one. Have six regular preaching places: one from six to ten miles distant from another, and the roads are any thing but comfortable for walking; besides I have a good deal of occasional preaching and riding to do."

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts for February, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Troy.—Stillwater ch ann coll, to con Mrs Nancy Bartlett, Cyrus Gilbert, and Mrs Margaret Comstock, hon mems	$125 00
Pby of Saratoga.—Northampton ch	10 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Ogdensburg.—Oswegatchie 1st ch	8 62
Pby of Steuben.—Windsor ch	11 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of North River.—Marlboro' ch per P V B Fowler	4 50
Pby of Bedford.—Ladies Miss Soc Bedford ch 60; Yorktown 1st ch 2; South Salem ch, W Home Miss Soc 21 93	83 93
Pby of New York.—Cambridge 1st ch 50; Madison Avenue ch ann coll 183 57; Williamsburg ch 6; Wallabout ch Long Island, 4 25; Brick ch ann coll addl 20; 1st ch Mrs King 5; Nyack in part ch to con the pastor an hon mem 25	293 82

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of New Brunswick.—Square ch	8 00
Pby of Raritan.—Amwell United 1st and 2d chs	34 00
Pby of Susquehanna.—Silver Lake ch to const Mrs JANE ROSE an hon mem 60; Orwell ch 9 50; Troy ch 7; Warren ch 14 85; collection at Orwell after a sermon on Dom Miss before Presbytery 5 35	96 70
Pby of Luzerne.—Wilkesbarre ch 25; Tamaqua 1st ch 6 50; White Haven ch 2 03	33 53

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—A member of the North ch 10; 10th Pres ch from Moses Johnson 50, and from Morris Patterson 20; A member of 2d ch for California 50, and for general purposes 50; 2d ch collection 94 80; and additional 5	279 80
Pby of New Castle.—Smyrna ch Sab school	3 00
Pby of Donegal.—Wrightsville ch 26; Cedar Grove ch 23 22	49 22
Pby of Baltimore.—Havre de Grace ch 5; Bridge st ch Georgetown from a friend thro' E Myers, Deacon 10	15 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Lower Marsh ch 50; Hancock ch from Robert Wason 5	55 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Sab Sch of Lick Run ch	12 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Lewisburg ch 46 98; Bloomsburg ch 42; Danville ch 50	138 98

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Ebansburg and Summit chs	20 00
Pby of Redstone.—Petersburg ch	5 00
Pby of Erie.—Sugar Grove ch	3 00
Pby of Clarion.—Brookville ch	12 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 2d ch	42 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Orange ch 3; Hopewell ch 5; Ashland ch (of which $13 bal to const Mrs Mary A Robinson an hon mem) 17	25 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Sidney.—Stoney Creek ch	5 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Penn ch 8; Monticello and Rock Hill chs 2	10 00
Pby of Lake.—South Bend ch 14 34; Sumption's Prairie ch 3 96	18 30

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Wisconsin.—Oakland ch	6 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Orange.—From following churches per Rev J A Gretter Treasurer Nutbush 14 50; Shiloh 19 25; Clarksville 17 30; Spring Garden 25 30; Buffalo 17; Hillsboro' 26; Raleigh 62; Bethlehem 15; Bethel 6 30; Eno 5 50; Fairfield 3; Allamance 10; Lewisburg 10 25; Oxford 10 12; Grier's 21 60; Danville 16; Pennel 14; Hawfield's 10 50; Cross Roads 8 75; Rev S W Watkins 5, and Mrs Baker, of Nutbush ch 10; (Less exchange 1 63)	325 74

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Pleasant Grove ch 5; Bethesda ch per the pastor for Spanish Bibles and Testaments for Texas 10	15 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

David Buttolph and others, Chenango, N Y 7; Philad. Society of Nassau Hall, N J 5; "A Friend" N Y thro' Rev Dr Boardman 500; Rev G D Stewart 2; A thank offering from parents, children and servants of a family in the South 10; A Benevolent Lady, Newberryport, Mass 15; W H Aspinwall Esq Prest. of Pacific Steamboat Co for Oregon 375; Through Mr E M Samuel, of Liberty, Mo. Webster M Samuel 1, Virginia Samuel 1, Daniel B Samuel 1, Edw E Samuel 50 cts, Martha Samuel 50 cts, Ddw W Samuel 1—$5; "Knox Hill" Florida 2; Thos Inglis, Christianburg Va 5; Edw Penfield N Y 50	1064 67
Total	$2813 81

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CLOTHING.

A Box clothing from the Ladies of Blairsville congregation, Pa valued at	30 00

NOTE.—The acknowledgment of $35 from Cranbury church in the last number of the Home and Foreign Record should have been from the 1st church of Cranbury, Rev. S. Henry, pastor.

CHURCH EXTENSION FUND.

Receipts into the Treasury, during the months of October, November, December, 1850, and January and February, 1851.

October 1850.

Chambersburg ch per Rev D McKinley DD	75 00
First ch Spruce Creek per Rev D S Hughes	12 00
Baltimore 1st ch per Rev Dr Backus	50 00
Carlisle Presb ch per Rev M E Johnston	21 54
Bryan Neck ch per Rev John Winn	10 00
Bryan Neck ch from Mrs Anne W Rogers	5 00
Troy 2d ch per Dr Halley thro' Dr Mitchell	167 67
		341 20

November 1850.

Smithfield ch N Y through Board For Miss	2 00
Madison Avenue ch do	16 45
Wilkesbarre ch per Rev J Dorrance	5 00
"A friend" per Rev Dr Engles	2 50
10th Presb ch Phila, Mrs Roberts	5 00
do. Collection per W E Du Bois	187 20
do. do. pastor addl	25 00
do. Mr Chapin	2 00
		245 15

December 1850.

10th Presb ch Phila, Morris Patterson	25 00
do. do. S A Mercer	10 00
do. do. W A Porter Esq	5 00
A Lady, Hamptonburg N Y thro' Bd F M	5 00
		45 00

January, 1851.

German Presb ch Fort Wayne	1 50
"A Friend" 10th Presb ch, per the pastor	50 00
Thos N Paxton Lexington Va	4 00
Towanda 1st church	8 50
W G Billin 10th Presb ch Phila	2 00
Franklin st ch Baltimore per W S Plumer DD	60 00
Rev W J McCord Amenia N Y	50
Belvidere ch N J per Rev Dr Van Rensselaer	15 00
W J Bingham Bethmont N C per Rev Dr Engles	13 25
Mrs Hoge per J H Hoge Esq	10 00
Smyrna church Delaware	3 84
Salem ch N J per Rev Mr Helm	20 00
		188 59

February 1851.

R L & A Stewart N Y	500 00
Wilkesbarre ch per Rev J Dorrance	5 00
Bethesada ch S C per pastor for the South or Southwest	10 00
Moses Johnson Esq Phila	25 00
"A Friend" N Y thro' Rev Dr Boardman	1000 00
Knox Hill, Florida through Bd of Pub	1 00
A Friend, Bridge st ch Georgetown per E Myers	5 00
Oakland ch per Rev W Cargen	2 00
Troy ch Pa per Rev Julius Foster	3 00
A Lady, N Y thro' Bd For Miss	2 00
		1553 00
		$2372 94

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts for February, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Rehoboth ch, in part to con Mrs Mary D Hughes (Pastor's mother) hon mem 58 70; Tyrone ch 25; Brownsville ch 20; Little Redstone 10; New Providence addl 12 25; Dunlap's Creek ch in part to const Mrs Anna Maria Wilson hon mem 47 75; Long Run ch 6 34; Tent ch 29; George's Creek ch 11; Connellsville ch (of which $12 from "Eldad") 92	312 04
Pby of Ohio.—East Liberty ch in part, (of which 2 25 by Miss McKean's infant sch class) 52 25; Bethany ch (of which from Fem Benev Asso 23 85) 54 39; Chartiers in part 20; Sharpsburg ch bal to const Mrs Eliza Jane Murray, hon mem 20	146 64
Pby of Beaver.—Bridgewater ch 53; Pleasant Valley 2	55 00
Pby of Erie.—Deerfield ch	6 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 1st ch (of which 14 16 from Sab Sch) 100 78; Do 2d ch 87 20; Richietown ch 15; Forks of Wheeling 44 63; West Liberty ch addl 13 50; West Alexandria 41 75; Amity ch in part 10 50; Upper Buffalo addl 50 57; Washington ch, Rev Dr Clark 15; Ladies mis soc 30, in part to const Miss Sarah H Vowell—mon col in part to const Joseph Henderson and Geo Baird Esqs, hon mem, in all from Washington ch 110	473 93
Pby of Steubenville.—Richmond ch 2; East Springfield 9	11 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev Luther Dodd 50 cts; A Friend of Missions 10; Check on Southwark Bank refunded 25	35 50

LEGACY.

Legacy in part of Mr John Campbell, Poland O. per Rev J Ker	50 00
Total	$1090 11

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts during the month of February, 1851.

Pleasant Township ch Ind Madison Pby per Wm Sickles	16 00
Jefferson do do do do	3 00
Yellow Spring ch Ohio per Rev J D Thorpe	36 00
Pine Grove ch La do	2 75
7th Presby ch Cincinnati O do	30 00
Bethel ch Sab sch do do	10 60
A Lady in Vincennes Ind do	5 00
Pleasant Ridge ch O annl col do	5 90
do C Williams donation Rev J D Thorpe	10 00
Mrs Margret Browne Bedford O. do	1 00
Mount Carmell ch O. do	3 35
Mulberry ch Ky (in part) per Rev J D Paxton	5 00
Jos J Bullock	50 00
Mrs H L Farbrique Corydon Ind per Rev W W Hill	2 50
2d Presb ch Louisville (in part) per J A Taylor	77 00
Donation of Maria H Evans Christian co Ky	10 00
Petersburg ch Sangamon Pby (in part) per Geo McKinley	30 00
New Providence ch Mercer co Ky per P R Dunn	24 55
P R Dunn do do do	10 00
Mulberry ch do per J C Venable	2 00
Donation of John Paul mem of Honey creek ch Carlisle Ohio per Edward Wright	50 00
Popes River ch Ill per Rev Lyman B Crittenden	15 00
Mrs Elizabeth M Morton to constitute W Q Morton life mem per W W Hill	50 00
Collection in Presb ch Grandview Ill per J Y Allison	25 00
Franklin ch Ind to con Rev David Monfort D D hon mem per Rev W W Hill	50 00
Camp Creek ch McDonough co Ill (annl coll) per John Clark Treasurer	11 00
Augusta ch Ky per James H Henderson	12 00
Collection from a friend per Rev H P Goodrich	5 00
Big Creek ch Mo do	7 50
Carondolet do do	5 00
Hillsborough Ill do	14 55
Coll in his field Ill per E S High	8 00
Lancaster ch Ind per Rev Josiah Crawford	4 25
Bethany do per Rev B F Wood	12 00
New Prospect do do	8 60
Georgetown to constitute Mr Wood hon member Board of Missions	12 35
Ripley ch per Rev D A Wallace	2 00
Coll in his field Ohio per Rev W C Hollyday	17 00
Simpsonville ch Ky do Moses C Knight	6 00
Delta ch Ohio per Rev D S Anderson	3 20
Princeton ch Ill per Rev Ithamar Pillsbury	15 00
Louisville 1st ch (in part) per Col P B Atwood	5 00
	$673 10

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Donation of John Paul, Honey Creek ch Carlisle O.	50 00
Total	$723 10

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

THE THRONE AND THE LAMBS.

Every Princeton student remembers with affection the venerable Samuel Miller. One of them, before leaving the Seminary to enter upon the work of the ministry, lingered behind a day to receive the parting word of instruction and blessing. He went to the dwelling of his revered instructor, then emaciated with disease and almost in the act of laying down his tabernacle, and he was receiyed with that benignant and sympathizing courtesy which graced that noble specimen of a Christian man. After a brief interval of edifying conversation, the patriarch offered up a fervent prayer for the young student; and then, taking him by the hand, said to him with the solemnity and sweetness so characteristic: "Brother Paxton,* live near to the throne of grace, that you may be filled with the love of Christ; and take care of the lambs of the flock, the hope of the Church."

OUR WORK IN THE WEST.

The Board of Education has been labouring under some disadvantage in the collection of funds in the West, in consequence of its inability to secure the services of a well-qualified agent. One of our ministers has this subject now under consideration; but in the mean time, the wants of the Board are pressing. Dr. Chester, the Associate Secretary of the Board, is on a temporary visit to the West; and in the hope of assisting him in his earnest efforts to replenish our treasury, we present the following facts, showing the operations of the year to our latest dates.

Our payments to candidates for the year, at the West, will amount to	$8602 50
Our total receipts this year (so far as known) are	$2835 89
Total receipts last year	$4502 05

The following will show the payments and receipts at the different treasuries. The receipts at Pittsburgh are given up to March; at Columbus to December; at Louisville to January, including Dr. Young's collection.

PITTSBURGH TREASURY.

Payments for the year	$3352 50
Receipts thus far	$1638 32

COLUMBUS TREASURY.

Payments for the year about	$1000 00
Receipts thus far	$175 62

LOUISVILLE TREASURY.

Payments for the year	$4250 00
Receipts thus far	$1021 95

Under these circumstances, it is thought that the Board of Education has some claims upon the pastors and churches at the West to co-operate in furnishing means to carry forward its operations. Will you not then, brethren, who have not done so, take up collections for the Board of Education, if possible without delay?

* The Rev. William M. Paxton, recently installed over the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh.

THE SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

The time appointed by the Synod of New Jersey for collections for the Board of Education is on the first Sabbath of April. The following hints are respectfully submitted.

1. Every church in the Synod will this year do something for the cause of education, if the ministers and elders will authorize collections to be taken up at the Synodical time.

2. Every church this year can do more for education than it has ever done before; because the limit of its ability has never yet been reached.

3. Few Synods enjoy greater educational privileges than New Jersey. And those to whom much has been given, in the way of schools, academies, colleges and theological seminaries, ought to assist pious and indigent young men in enjoying the advantages of such institutions.

4. Perhaps this is the last time that some of the ministers, elders and people will have the opportunity of aiding in training young men to preach the gospel to every creature. "And so much more as ye see the day approaching."

AN IMPORTANT DOCUMENT.

The Board of Education have in press, as one of their "Permanent Documents," an Address to Christian teachers on the importance and means of an increase in the number of gospel ministers, written at the request of the Board, by James W. Alexander D. D. This document discusses the whole subject of educational influences and opportunities in their relation to an increased ministry. After alluding to the wants of the Church, the writer brings before teachers the importance of regarding themselves as labouring primarily and directly for the Lord Jesus Christ, and he shows that Christian teachers have a great work before them in giving increase to the number of ministers. Having thus stated in general terms the duty of teachers, a variety of motives to its performance are earnestly and truthfully exhibited, and then some of the modes of its performance are affectionately pointed out.

We trust that this appeal will be accompanied by the Spirit of God, and that great good will be accomplished in Zion by its instrumentality.

The Document will be ready for distribution at the meeting of the General Assembly.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Luther's Advice.—"You have entered the ship with Christ; what do you look for? fine weather? Rather expect winds, tempests, and waves to cover the vessel till she begins to sink. This is the baptism with which you must first be baptized; and then the calm will follow upon your awakening with Christ, and imploring his help; for sometimes he will appear to sleep for a season."

Need of the Spirit.—"After having composed and delivered a sermon," says Bishop Horne, "I have often thought of and repeated the following lines of Thomson:

"Be gracious, Heaven! for now laborious man
Has done his part. Ye fostering breezes, blow!
Ye softening dews, ye tender showers, descend!
And temper all, thou world-reviving sun,
Into the perfect year."

No Self-trusting.—A minister has no ground to hope for fruits from his exertions until in himself he has no hope; until he has learnt to put no faith in the point and energy of sentences; until he feels that a man may be mighty to compel the attention, and mighty to regale the imagination, and mighty to silence the gainsayer, and yet not mighty to the pulling down of strong holds.—Chalmers.

Napoleon's Value of Time.—Napoleon Bonaparte having one day visited a school, said to the scholars, on his leaving them, "My lads, every hour of lost time is a chance of future misfortune." One of his biographers, Bourienne, adds, that these remarkable words afford the maxim which formed, in a great degree, the rule of his conduct. Well did he understand the value of time; even his leisure was attended with some exertion of mind.

If this soldier of the world found, as he did, numerous advantages resulting from a careful use of time, should not the Christian soldier obey the injunction of his Master—"Redeem the time?"

Work.—The conversion of human souls from sin to holiness is the digging up of the roots of all evil. The dissemination and preaching of the gospel is the efficient instrumentality. In no other way can we make a happy world. Come then, let us go to work.

A Promise.—A promise should be given with caution, and kept with care. A promise should be made by the heart, and remembered by the head. A promise is the offspring of intention, and should be nurtured by recollection. A promise should be the result of reflection. A promise, and its performance, should, like the scales of a true balance, always present a mutual adjustment. A promise delayed is justice deferred. A promise neglected is an untruth told. A promise attended to, is a debt settled.

Pulpit Divinity.—Lord Bacon once said to King James: "If the choice and best observations upon texts of Scripture, which have been made dispersedly in sermons, within this, your Majesty's Island of Britain, by the space of these forty years and more, leaving out the largeness of exhortations and applications thereupon, had been set down in continuance, it had been the best work in divinity which had been written since the Apostles' times."

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

AN EDUCATION SERMON.

When in New York, a short time since, the writer went to the Tabernacle to hear a discourse on "religious influences in schools" by an Episcopal clergyman, "the Rev. * * *, Principal of * * Academy." In the absence of any knowledge of the preacher or his academy, I attended out of interest in his subject. Mr. —— soon commanded attention. Small in size, he nevertheless had hold of a sling of Judah, and in it was a smooth stone from the running brook of God's word. His discourse was well handled, full of sound truth, delivered in an animated style, and successfully aimed at the irreligion of the common-school system. After a few remarks on the true nature and objects of education, he pointed out the means of Christian training, which he defined to be through Christian teachers and through a Christian course of instruction. He enlarged very happily upon these two ideas, insisting upon piety in the instructor, and urging the Bible as a text book. He then presented some motives to carry out the Christian plan in our schools. Among these he mentioned our baptismal vows; the advantage of religion in developing the mind, indirectly by supplying motives, and directly by an expanding, elevating power; the wants of the country; and the salvation of the souls of children. It was good to be there.

BOARD OF EDUCATION AND THE VOLUNTARY SOCIETIES.

The Board of Education is sometimes brought into contrast with the voluntary societies. Recently one of our most intelligent and able ministers wrote as follows:

"The New England Society for Western Colleges collected and disbursed over $17.000 last year.. Our Board of Education secured less than $3000 for the same object. We remember that time is necessary to bring your entire system into effective and successful operation. But what if the patient die while the physician is concocting a remedy?"

Such a statement as this, coming from one of our most intelligent ministers, seems to render some explanation necessary. Comparisons, we are aware, are odious; and there is virtue often in silence. But when the character of one of the organizations of the Church is directly or indirectly involved, it is the duty of its officers to remove the imputation, if a statement of facts will allow them to do so. The following is a part of the reply which was sent to the foregoing communication:

"You will find that the Western Society collected for colleges $13,593.72, $4129 having been collected for candidates. From this sum deduct expenses and salaries (page 22) which amount to $6,538.53, and add balance of last year, $289,08, and exclude the balance of $76.29 in treasury, and you will find that that Society disbursed for Western colleges, not as you say, "over $17,000," "but $7,267.98." You will find furthermore that the amount actually disbursed by the Board of Education for Schools and colleges was $7,092.89. True, our amount collected this year was only about $5000, the remainder being a balance of preceding year, and a part of our disbursements was for schools and academies, in addition to colleges. But all things considered, I think you must admit that we do not come so far behind after all, our actual disbursements nearly equalling those of the other Society.

In the second place, please remember that our Board combines in one organization efforts for candidates and for colleges, thus occupying the ground worked by the two Societies at the east, viz. the American Education Society and the Western Collegiate Society. By looking at their Annual Reports, you will find that the sums collected last year for candidates (exclusive of legacies and permanent funds) was $15,473.11, giving the aggregate as follows:

Am. Education Society for candidates, collected	15,473.11
Western Collegiate Society for colleges, &c.	13,593.72
The two Societies under Congregational and New School Presbyterians	$29,066.83
Board of Education of Old School	30,780.70
Difference in favour of our Board,	$1,713.87

So that exclusive of legacies and permanent funds, nearly $2000 were raised by the Old-school Presbyterian Church for the two departments of education over and above the amount collected by the two societies representing the Congregational and New-school Presbyterian churches. If legacies are included, our Board falls behind the two Societies, only about $2000.

Although the above statement is creditable to the Board of Education, it will be found still more so, when you look at the amounts actually disbursed, as follows:

Am. Ed. Society to candidates	16,786.00
West Coll. Soc. to colleges, &c.	7,267.98
		24,053.98
Bd. of Ed. to Candidates	23,940.45
do. to schools, colleges, &c.	7,092.89
		31,033.34
Leaving a difference in favour of our Board of in its disbursements to candidates, schools, colleges, &c., beyond what was disbursed by the Congregational and New School Presbyterian Societies.		6,979.36

The Board of Education is aware that it comes short of meeting the full and reasonable demands of the West in sustaining educational institutions. One difficulty is the impossibility of getting access to the churches for two collections; and it is hoped that the Assembly will authorize the Board to present the cause in its two-fold aspect of ministerial and general education, so as to secure a more general co-operation among the churches, and to place donations, except when specific, in a common treasury. Unless this is done, the Board will have to increase the number of its agents and to aim at two collections.

If the Board had $50,000 per annum at its disposal, it could largely promote the establishment of educational institutions in addition to assisting indigent candidates. And it cannot be doubted that, with the combination of all relating to education, the cause would be elevated in importance before the churches, and that the scale of contributions would be increased to enable the Board to accomplish its great work. We have no fear that any of our patients will die, as long as they put their trust in the great Physician. God has taken care of them in severer trials, and will yet do it. It is the duty of the Church, however, in the spirit of her great Head, to do the work intrusted to her hands; and if ministers, elders and people will sustain with proper zeal the organization, which is their own agent in doing good, great results will go down to the rising generation—in new institutions founded, and old ones strengthened—in all of which the truth of Christ is inculcated, according to the promises, to the praise of His glory.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.

"On the religious education of children," says Dr. Chalmers, "I shall only say at present in the general, that you cannot begin too early; that God should be spoken of to the very youngest, and the name of Jesus Christ familiarized to them, and every association of reverence and love that the tone and style of the parents can attach to the business of religion, should be established in them. Their consciences are wonderfully soon at work. They know what a fault is in reference to their parents, and they can soon feel and understand the same thing with reference to God. And there is much about God being the giver, and the maker, and the upholder of all things, about which their minds can take in the information, and their hearts can be made to 'feel a solemn and touching impression.' And we would add, there is much about the life and death of the Redeemer that is adapted to the feeblest unfolding of their powers. If they cannot understand the theory of Redemption as explained in systems of divinity, they can understand the fact that Jesus loved them and died to save them."

REVIVAL IN HANOVER COLLEGE, INDIANA.

We are informed that a work of grace is progressing at Hanover, with great power, especially amongst the students of the College. At the regular weekly meeting of one of the literary societies of the College, it was ascertained that every individual present, numbering near fifty, was either a member of the church, or had recently obtained a hope in Christ, and, on motion of one of their number, it was unanimously resolved that the exercises be suspended for the evening, and those of thanksgiving and prayer be substituted in their place. There has been no violent excitement or unusually protracted public exercises. Scarcely a single student now remains unaffected. The presence and power of the Spirit of God are everywhere visible in their effects upon those who but a short time since were utterly careless and indifferent on the great subject of their soul's salvation.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

ELDER'S RIDGE PRESBYTERIAL ACADEMY.

The attention of the friends of sound and thorough education is respectfully invited to the following statements in reference to the important literary institution bearing the above title.

It is located in Indiana county, Pennsylvania, a few miles north of the Pennsylvania canal, in a region of country highly favourable in point of healthfulness, possessing also great moral and religious advantages, and a more than ordinary exemption from influences of an opposite character.

This institution owes its origin to the individual enterprise of the Rev. Alexander Donaldson, pastor of the churches of Elder's Ridge, and Currie's Run. It has been in successful operation under his immediate control for the last four years, and during that time has won for itself a very large measure of public confidence.

In April 1850, an arrangement was perfected between Mr. Donaldson and the Presbytery of Blairsville by which it became a Presbyterial academy, subject to the general supervision of a board of directors appointed by said Presbytery; of which board, Mr. Donaldson, as Principal of the Institution, is ex officio, a member.

The design of this academy contemplates, as one of its leading objects, the elevation of the standard of common education, by furnishing well taught teachers for public schools. Young men wishing to engage in that department of philanthropic service will find at Elder's Ridge preparatory facilities not easily surpassed.

The institution embraces also in its plan of studies all the branches, literary, classical, and scientific, necessary to prepare the student for entering reputably, the Junior Class in the regular collegiate course, accompanied with daily Bible instruction suited to impress upon the mind of every student the great truth, that religion is the chief concern.

During the latter half of the past year, this academy was favoured to a very encouraging extent with the reviving and converting grace of God, in the happy effects of which many have participated, and still rejoice. The fact of such a visitation of spiritual influence is well suited to make glad the hearts of all who love the Redeemer's kingdom. It is full of hope in its bearing upon the future, as it regards the general interests of religion, and it indicates the best of all encouragements to the officers, patrons, and friends of the institution. viz: the smiles of Heaven.

The attention of the Principal to the conduct and progress of the students is close, constant, and parental; and in the business of instruction he is careful to employ none but well-qualified and competent assistants. A good apparatus has been procured, for illustrating the studies in geography, astronomy, and philosophy.

There is also the advantage of a good literary society.

There are two sessions in the year, of five months each, but the summer term is divided into two parts, by a short harvest vacation.

Boarding can be obtained in a regular boarding house near the academy, and in very respectable families in the vicinity, at from $1,25 to $1,50 per week.

Terms per Session.

English studies	$5,00
Philosophical and Mathematical	$8,00
Classical	$10,00

JOHN CARUTHERS,
President of the Board of Directors.

LAFAYETTE COLLEGE, EASTON, PA.

This institution, now under the care of the Synod of Philadelphia, is making a vigorous effort to secure an endowment on the scholarship plan. The following action of its Executive Committee shows the details of the plan.

"At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board, together with the Faculty, held December 26, 1850, the following paper, embracing a Plan of Endowment, was submitted by the Rev. D. V. McLean, D.D., President elect, which was unanimously approved and adopted, viz:

The importance of thorough Christian Education to the happiness of the rising generation, and to the best interests of the Church and the world, can never be too highly estimated. To a certain extent this education may be obtained in our primary and parochial Schools, and Presbyterial, and other academies. But in addition to this, the interests of the Church and the World require that a large number of our youth should receive the advantages of a thorough collegiate training. And as experience proves that a very large proportion of the most useful and efficient men, both in Church and State, have sprung from those who were in humble circumstances, or whose means were limited, it is of the first importance that our colleges should be open, as far as possible, to all—that talent and worth, however restricted in resources, may have access to their privileges. With the view of opening wide the doors of Lafayette College, and making her still more emphatically a nursery for the Church and the World, the following plan for the permanent endowment of the Institution is respectfully submitted:

PLAN FOR THE ENDOWMENT OF LAFAYETTE COLLEGE, EASTON, PA.

1. One hundred dollars paid shall entitle the subscriber to the tuition of all his sons, without further charge, in the College proper;* or, instead of his own sons, those of any family he may designate; and for every additional hundred dollars which the same individual may pay, he shall have the privilege of designating the sons of any family he may think proper to receive tuition in the College, as above.

2. Five hundred dollars paid by an individual, an association of individuals, or by a congregation, shall entitle the individual, association or session of the church or congregation to a perpetual scholarship, to which the party may appoint any individual they may select—and the scholarship may be devised by will as any other property. The incumbents on any of the scholarships to be subject, of course, to all the rules and regulations of the College, as well as the discipline.

3. No subscription shall be binding until the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars has been actually subscribed, at which time all subscriptions shall be due and payable, and shall draw interest until collected. Upon the payment of the subscriptions, scrip will be issued, which may be transferable as other property, as above specified. The funds invested, to be secured by bond and mortgage on unincumbered real estate, or other good and sufficient security.

4. The Trustees bind themselves and their successors, that the funds thus contributed shall never be used for purposes inconsistent with the views of Christian Truth as now entertained by the Synod of Philadelphia, in connexion with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

5. Donations of any sums will be thankfully received.

This plan it is fondly hoped will commend itself to the friends of religion and learning and to all God's people. The Institution which it is proposed to endow, although young in years, has already done much for the cause of sound learning and evangelical religion. Of one hundred and twenty-eight graduates, at least sixty-two have entered the Ministry of the Presbyterian Church, or are studying theology for that purpose. A number of those, also, who have received part of their education at Lafayette College, have entered the ministry—at one time, there were twenty-two of the Alumni of this Institution in the Theological Seminary at Princeton.

The College is located in the Borough of Easton, Pennsylvania, in a beautiful, healthy, and improving country, where the habits of the people generally are plain, provisions abundant and cheap, and the necessary expenses of a student comparatively small. The College property is now worth at least thirty thousand dollars, consisting mainly in lands and large and well-arranged buildings, and the location of the Institution is such that its entire success can interfere with no existing College.

The earnest desire of the Trustees, therefore, is that the interests of the College may lie warm on the hearts of God's people, and live in their prayers—that while the poor man gives his son to the Lord, a gift which no money can buy, the rich will furnish the means to educate him—and that Christian parents, who possess a competence, will avail themselves of the present favourable opportunity to make provision for the education of their own sons.

The College is a Presbyterian Institution, under the care of the Synod of Philadelphia, which body has the sole right to nominate all the Trustees and Members of the Faculty, and to appoint a board of visitors from their own number to attend all the examinations, and to which the Trustees are bound to report the condition of the College. Subscribers and donors therefore have a guarantee that the Institution will always be supplied with able and faithful Instructors and Officers, and that as long as that venerable Synod remains orthodox, no religious instruction will be given in the College inconsistent with the standards of the Presbyterian Church.

This Circular is handed to you for your serious consideration, and you will be solicited to co-operate with the friends of learning and religion in this noble work, should it meet your approbation.

In accordance with the previous action of the Board and the resolution of Synod, the President elect is requested to visit the churches of the Synod, and other friends of the College, and endeavour to secure the endowment as soon as possible."

ENOCH GREEN,
JOSEPH DAWES,
A. McCOY. } Executive Committee.

D. V. McLEAN,
JAS. H. COFFIN,
GEO. BURROWES,
W. McCARTNEY,
J. M. PORTER, } Faculty.

Dr. McLean, the President of the College, is now engaged in prosecuting the plan for its endowment. His success thus far has been very great. The subscription of Easton will amount to at least $10,000; and the subscription of the Second Presbytery of Philadelphia, not a large Presbytery and composed of country churches, will, it is supposed, be at least $7000. Similar success in other Presbyteries will secure the endowment. It will be a laborious work, but, with God's blessing, we expect to record its success.

* The regular tuition fees for one student, for a full course, is One Hundred and Sixty Dollars.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

I give and devise to the Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the sum of ——— dollars, to and for the uses of the said Board of Education, and under its direction.

[When real estate, or other property, is given, let it be particularly described.]

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, JANUARY, 1851.

Presbytery of Troy.

Lansingburgh ch 53 67

Presbytery of Wyoming.

Moscow ch 2; Rev M Miller 1 3 00

Presbytery of Buffalo City.

Rochester 3d ch a young man 2 00

Presbytery of New York.

1st ch, a friend 500, Jersey City ch 58, Chelsea ch 93 04, Williamsburg ch 36 64, Brooklyn 1st ch 54 741 68

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

Morristown 1st ch 50 00

Presbytery of Luzerne.

Wilkesbarre ch addl 5 00

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

2d ch scholarship of H L Hodge, M D 75; 10th ch A friend 25, W Goodrich 10, S A Mercer Esq, 10, H Campbell 5, cash per Dr Boardman 2, a friend per the same 25, in all 77 addl; 11th ch C B Dungan, 50, W A Duff 1, R H & C Gillin, 1, addl 52; Central ch J A Freeman 10, Spring Garden ch Mary Black additional 1 215 00

Presbytery of New Castle.

Oxford ch 50 00

Presbytery of Donegal.

Churchville ch Jas Pannell 3 00

Presbytery of Baltimore.

Franklin st ch 100, Bridge st ch Georgetown, a friend 5 105 00

Presbytery of Carlisle.

Dickinson ch 20, Fayetteville ch 20 40 00

Presbytery of Huntington.

Waynesburg ch 38, Newton Hamilton ch 33 71 00

Presbytery of Northumberland.

Derry and Washingtonville chs 5 00

Presbytery of Richland.

Ashland ch balance 4 00

Presbytery of Maumee.

Lima ch 5 00

Presbytery of Fort Wayne.

Fawn River ch 9 37; Ontario ch 4 13; Lagrange ch 2 50; Fort Wayne ch 60 76 00

Presbytery of Wisconsin.

Oakland ch 2 00

Presbytery of West Hanover.

Sundry chs, through Farmers Bank Farmville Va 86 86

Presbytery of Concord.

Salem ch mon con collection 7 00

Presbytery of Lodiana.

Lodiana ch mon con cols to Sep 30, 1850 45 55

REFUNDED.

"J. C." Indiana 75; Checks returned from dead letter office 25 100 00

LEGACIES.

Estate of Robert Work, late of Knox Co. O $50, less exchange 49 42; legacy of Andrew McLanahan White Deer Pa addl 68 33 117 75

MISCELLANEOUS.

Robert Winter, Zanesville O 50, Mrs M Simonton Harrisburg Pa 1, a deceased little boy 2 16 Knox Hill Florida, John Newton 1 25 54 41

Total $1842 92

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c.

6th ch Philadelphia a friend 200, Central ch Phila J. B. M. 25, "A Friend" 1500 1725 00

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH, DECEMBER 1850, AND JANUARY 1851.

Presbytery of Blairsville.

Fairfield ch 5 62

Presbytery of Redstone.

Connellsville ch 46 50

Presbytery of Ohio.

Miller's Run ch 15 00

Presbytery of Allegheny.

Butler ch 2 00

Presbytery of Beaver.

Unity ch 10 07

Presbytery of Erie.

Meadville ch 15, Mill Creek ch 4 19 00

Presbytery of Clarion.

Licking ch 5 00

Presbytery of Washington.

Elizabeth and Wolf Run chs 5, Mill Creek ch 11 52, Wheeling Valley ch 7 23 52

Presbytery of St. Clairsville.

Martinsville ch 5, Mount Pleasant ch 26 12, Rock Hill ch 17 20, Crab Apple ch 25, Rev McK Williamson 2 75 32

Presbytery of New Lisbon.

Madison ch 6 00

Total $208 03

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & Co., Treasurers.

RECEIPTS AT COLUMBUS, OHIO, FROM MAY 1ST TO OCTOBER 18TH, 1851.

Presbytery of Columbus.

Columbus ch 11 75, Mount Pleasant ch 53, London ch 5 63, Truro ch 31, 101 38

Presbytery of Zanesville.

Buffalo ch 10 00

Presbytery of Wooster.

Springfield ch 5 00

Presbytery of Coshocton.

Trinity ch 5, Evans' Creek ch 1 24 6 24

Total $122 62

THOMAS MOODIE, Treasurer.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions will be held at the Mission House, on Monday, May 5th, at two o'clock, P. M. The sessions of the Board will be continued during the meeting of the General Assembly, at St. Louis, Missouri.

The Rev. William C. Anderson, D. D. is appointed to preach the annual sermon before the Assembly. The Rev. William A. Scott, D. D. is the alternate preacher.

It is expected also that a sermon will be preached and a statement of the affairs of the Missions made, on the Sabbath evening preceding the meeting of the Board in this city, of which a particular notice will be given hereafter.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Compiled from Letters received at the Mission House to the 13th of March, 1851.

India and China.—Letters have been received from Lahor, to December 31st; Lodiana, to January 7th; Amballa, to December 25th; Saharunpur, to December 24th; Agra, January 9th; Futtehgurh, to January 6th: Allahabad, to December 7th; Calcutta, January 7th; Canton, to December 28th; Ningpo, to December 14th; Shanghai, December 19th.

These letters, by the overland mails of November, December and January, have all come to hand since the last number of the Record was issued, excepting one, which was acknowledged last month. With them, we have received the annual reports of the Lodiana, Furrukhabad, Allahabad, Canton and Ningpo Missions.

We can give here but short notices of the leading points in these letters. As to health, the families connected with the Lodiana Mission had nearly all suffered severely from an epidemic fever, which had been extensively prevalent, and fatal to great numbers of the natives and to many of the foreigners. Several of our missionary friends had been dangerously ill, and two infant children, Mr. Morrison's and Mr. Woodside's, had been taken to the arms of the Saviour. All the missionaries were on the recovery at the latest dates, though Messrs. Rudolph and Woodside were still very feeble. At Ningpo there had been some cases of sickness, but none of an alarming kind, except that of Mrs. Way, whose life had been for some time despaired of under an attack of dysentery, but she was mercifully restored to health. With these exceptions the mission families were enjoying their usual health.

As to the missionary work, these letters contain favourable accounts. The brethren were going on with their usual labours. In India, some of them were out on missionary tours. Mr. Owen mentions the happy Christian deaths of two more of the native church members at Allahabad—see his letter in the "Foreign Missionary" of March. He also gives a good account of the annual examination of the mission college at that city.—The Rev. Messrs. Hay, Shaw, Campbell, Fullerton and Orbison, arrived at Calcutta, on the 30th of December, having had a long but pleasant passage, all well. They met the Rev. Mr. McAuley and his family at that city, on their return to this country.—The brick-work of the walls of the church in Ningpo, was laid to the heighth of two or three feet above the windows; and the foundations of a chapel in another part of the city, which will be forty-one feet by twenty-three inside, holding two hundred persons comfortably. Eleven new girls had been received on trial for the boarding-school within a few weeks, and a number of others were offered as scholars by their parents. Two of the girls in this school continue to show much interest in the things that belong to their salvation. On the other hand, one of the young men, Ko-kuing, had been separated from the communion of the church. Light and shade often alternate with each other in these letters. The paragraph next to the one mentioning poor Ko-kuing's case, reports that the Presbytery of Ningpo met in November, Mr. Quarterman being elected Moderator.

The China letters report two events of a very distressing nature, the suicide, under temporary aberration of mind, of the Rev. J. G. Bridgeman, an estimable young missionary of the American Board at Canton; and the murder by pirates of the Rev. Mr. Faust, a Swedish missionary, lately settled at Fuhchau, who is spoken of as a man of much promise. These are deeply painful events; but "the Lord reigneth."

Siam Mission.—Letters have been received, dated to the 11th of December. The political obstacles referred to in our number for January, seem to be rather increasing than diminishing. The latest advices report a disturbed state of affairs, under apparent quiet, among the high nobles and officers of Government. Mr. Bush says, "There are evidently some things wrong, as the Mohammedan merchants from Bombay and other parts of India proper, are sending off a large amount of goods brought here to sell," and he mentions having information that many of these native merchants were about to leave the country.

Besides these things, and partly on account of them, the missionaries have found it impossible to obtain suitable premises for their residence in Bangkok; and they have been compelled to consider the question of removal from Siam to some other field of labour. They think of this with great reluctance and regret, and if they finally decide to do so, it will be only for the strongest reasons. (See Mr. Mattoon's letter in another column, where the subject is fully presented.) Besides the Province Wellesly, spoken of by Mr. Mattoon, we learn that Sarawak, the new British territory in Borneo, has been recommended to our brethren by Sir James Brooks, the Governor, and other places have also been spoken of. We trust they may not have to leave Siam. Their health suits the climate; they are now acquainted with the language; they feel at home among the people; they consider their field of labour a highly important one. In view of these and other considerations, we would commend these brethren and their mission to the special prayers of God's people.

Africa: Liberia Mission.—Letters have been received, dated to the 2d of January. We observe that three persons have been admitted to the communion of the church at Kentucky, and the missionary teacher of that station, Mr. Erskine, writes in encouraging terms of his work and prospects. The number of communicants is eighteen, all of them, excepting Mr. Erskine himself, having been gathered into the church from that vicinity—and not partly by dismissions from the church in Monrovia, as has been erroneously stated.

AFRICA: MISSION NEAR THE EQUATOR.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. G. W. SIMPSON.

(Concluded from page 42.)

Mission station on Corisco Island.—Notices of the Corisco People.

After completing their exploring tours, the Rev. Messrs. Mackey and Simpson decided to form their station on Corisco Island, as our readers have been already informed. They reached the Island on the 3d of July, of last year. Under date of September 16th, Mr. Simpson gives the following notices of the inhabitants of this Island.

The Corisco people have been advancing toward civilization, perhaps for a long time. In some respects they are behind, and in many respects they are in the advance of their Mpongwe neighbours. Formerly the slave trade was carried on here extensively by the Portuguese. The islanders were employed as factors in the trade. Not long ago the establishment of the Portuguese was burned by an English cruiser, and a treaty was then made with England, by which the trade was abolished for ever. Since then the natives have been brought in contact more with English and American traders, and about three-fourths of them have learned to speak the English language intelligibly.

First efforts to preach the Gospel.

By means of an interpreter, taken from the most experienced of them, we can preach the gospel to them; but as their ideas, and their knowledge of our language are confined to trade, our work in preaching is very restricted. Yet we are rejoiced to say that it is not without interest; they already begin to receive the gospel of life. In understanding, they are children, and it is but the first and simplest truths that they are able to receive. The substance of our discourses is, that there is a God, and that he is good, holy, and just. He is the Maker of all things, and the Father of men. He loves men. Men have bad hearts. God wishes men to become good; and promises to give them a new heart, if they ask him. Christ, the Son of God, has become our Saviour; and every man that believes his word, and follows him, will become good in this world, and will be saved, &c. These are great truths; truths without which no man can be saved, and with which we believe the Holy Ghost may raise dead souls to life; and we feel that it is no mean privilege to preach these sublime truths to those whose souls are in darkness.

The heathen then ask, Why were these truths not made known to them long ago?—Their dread of death and fears of the Devil.—Their deportment in time of Prayer.

The king and the chiefs are very favourable to the gospel, and frequently tell us that they want to hear about God. "Them thing what live for God book be very good. Which way man no come for tell me them thing long ago." Talongo, a chief, said last Sabbath evening after preachings—"Me want for hear them thing every Sabbath day. Me want to sabby all about God. Me think when me die, me go for God," &c. The people for the most part live in great dread of death, and of the devil. Their natural or acquired knowledge of God does not lead them to trust in him, because they have no idea of salvation by the blood of Christ. They suppose that Ekuki, the devil, has great power over their houses and their persons. Hence the truths, that the devil is a creature of God, and completely under his control; that though stronger than man, yet he has no power to injure them, unless God permits it on account of a man's sins, are received with delight.

In every place we have preached we have been struck with the seriousness the people manifest during prayer. We tell them first that God is great, and is in every place, and knows all things. That he is pleased to have us ask him for good things, especially for his Holy Spirit, and that now we will ask him to do them good, &c. They are at once serious, bow their heads in silence and reverence, as if they felt the presence of God.

The general desire to have Missionaries; how accounted for.

In every place the desire for the missionary is the same. "When more missionary come from big America? Give me one book for let me know when him come." These books are kept with great care, and regarded as almost sacred. Many, I believe, suppose that they will actually bring them a missionary after a time. You will not be deceived by supposing that their desire for a missionary arises from any proper notion of what a missionary is, or what is the exalted nature of his work. They conceive of a missionary as a very good man. They repose great confidence in him, and can trust him when they cannot trust one another. They regard him as a far superior being, one that has the true religion, and loves them. He does not come to buy ivory and ebony, but he comes to do them good. He will preach every Sunday about God. They expect, too, that he will be of no small temporal advantage to them. Ships will come and anchor where he lives, and thus they will get trade. He will also have houses to build, and will have plenty of cloth to buy bamboo, and mpabo, and poles; he will have some tobacco to buy fowls and eggs with; and he will also have plenty of plates, and cups, and wash-bowls to give them for plantains and fish. And more than all, a missionary living amongst them will give them a name in their own country; for all esteem it a great honour to have a missionary residing in their town or vicinity. Hence the strong desire which they often manifest on this subject. The greatest attention, kindness, and ingenious flatteries will be resorted to, to induce newly arrived missionaries to settle in a particular place.

A singular narrative: the Chief of Ilavi attacking the Missionaries, because of their not settling on his Island.

This feeling often becomes so strong as even to prove troublesome. We had an instance of this in the case of Tambo, at Little Corisco, the man whom I spoke of in the former part of the letter. He was formerly a warm friend of Mr. Wilson's, and had sent his son to Baraka to school. At his request, Mr. Wilson once gave him a "book," promising to use his best endeavours to procure him a missionary. Tambo built very much upon this "book." It was going to bring him a missionary from big America. The first time we visited his town it was presented, and we were claimed to be his. Mr. Wilson explained the book to him, and also showed that he had no power to place us in his town, and moreover, as he had a Catholic missionary already, why did he wish for another? Tambo replied—"Plenty room for both." He afterwards came to see us at Baraka, and tried to prevail upon us to come to his town. Time after time he sent for us, till at length discovering that we were to locate on Corisco Island, he was deeply offended, sent to Baraka for his son, and declared himself no longer the friend of Mr. Wilson, or of the Gaboon people. The latter, because they had many wives from Corisco, he supposed had induced us to settle there.

He also gave us to understand, that we should lodge no more at his town. This was very much to be regretted, because in the dry season the winds are such that it is impossible to make the Gaboon in less than two days from Corisco; therefore we must spend one night somewhere on the coast, and Tambo's town is the most convenient place to be found.

The next trip downward was made by Bro. Mackey. They arrived at Tambo's town about midnight. Tambo refused to receive them as he had formerly done, and had not a native given them a house, they would have had to lodge all night in an open boat. On the following morning, Tambo appeared to be in a very bad humour. He was told that it was very unkind and inhospitable to treat one whom he had before received as a friend, in this way; but he could not be made to understand that we were under no obligation to settle in his town. The next trip to the Gaboon was made by myself. Early in the evening we made the land near Tambo's, not intending however to lodge in his town, but to procure some fire, merely, from some houses beyond. Soon we were noticed by some natives on the beach. The whole town was immediately aroused, and came flocking to the beach. They were told that we wished only fire, and as some was brought, we supposed they intended nothing against us; but when within a little distance of the shore, and they thought we were going to land, the cry was raised to kill one of our boys. This is African justice. When they have a quarrel with any, it is no matter whether they can secure the guilty or not, if they can only get one of the same town or people. So they tried to kill one of our crew.

In coming to this place, we had run along into a little bay; between us and the sea there were rocks, over which the waves dashed and roared with great fury. The night was pitchy dark. Nothing could be seen but the little fire on the beach, the dark frowning coast, on which stood a tumultuous company of excited savages, and before us the white angry frown of the boiling sea. To lie here we could not, to go to sea was terrible, and to fall into the hands of our enemies was still worse. Committing ourselves to the Ruler of the winds and the waves, we ordered the boat to head out, and buffetted the sea. A few large waves tossed us as we crossed the rocks, but soon we were safe. As we departed, the noise of the people ceased, and we indulged the hope that we might row some distance further, and come near enough to cast our anchor and rest till morning. But just as we were about to "lay to," a few yards only from the beach, a gun was fired from a rock immediately over our head. With the report, there arose from a hundred voices, males and females, a savage yell, which ran along and reverberated from the neighbouring coast for miles. Our little crew was much alarmed, not knowing but that the next moment our defenceless lives might fall a sacrifice to the excited passions of this wild mob. We pushed out a second time, when at last their shouting ceased, and we supposed they had lost sight of us in the dark, and had returned to their town, and we again came to the shore and dropped our anchor. Here in our boat, which rocked like a cradle upon the tops of the waves, we endeavoured to take our rest until the morning, whose first dawn we hailed with no common gratitude.

The Chief's anger abated.—Things much to be desired.

Tambo was afterwards sent for several times to come to the Gaboon, to settle this "palaver," but he obstinately refused. He considered himself dishonoured by our passing him by, and taking up our home on Corisco. He also ordered the Catholic missionary to leave his country, and charged him with being the cause of our going past him to live on Corisco. His slaves attacked the cattle of the Missionary, and would have killed them, had they not been removed to the Block-house in the river. After a time we sent him a message, that we wished to be his friend, but that if he gave us any further disturbance as we passed to and from the Gaboon, we would have to report him to the first American man-of-war that appeared on the coast, and have the "palaver set" in American fashion. We have since had the pleasure to learn, that his wrath is cooled, and we have reason to believe that he is ashamed of his conduct, and will give us no further trouble. We may, after a time, put up a bamboo church in his town, and preach there as often as we have opportunity. How delightful it would be to have an American Brother located there. We could then join hands all the way to the Gaboon! Another at Batanga, north of us, would enable us to join hands with our Scotch brethren at Calibar, and with our English brethren at Fernandopo.

Encouraging prospects.—Yet the difficulties not concealed.

The encouragements to missionary labour here are many. There is a great desire, in the young particularly, to learn. Some boys come to me from the opposite side of the island, walking six or eight miles every day, to learn to read. For want of primers, I have made the alphabet with my pen, and have used pieces of newspaper to teach them to read from. The people never heard of the Sabbath till they were told by us, and many are already beginning in some degree to respect the day. We have large hopes that the gospel will do great things for this people; hopes grounded not upon any favourableness of their present disposition, desire to have missionaries, &c., but because it is the gospel of God, and ordained by him as the great means of salvation. Notwithstanding the outward respect and attention the missionary and his work receive, we have no wish to conceal the fact, that the Africans are heathen, dark and degraded to a degree which we can never fathom. Without the gospel they must perish. There is no excuse for them; God himself tells us plainly, "they are without excuse." (Rom. i. 20.) Neither do we wish to represent the life of the missionary here as easy, and free from trouble. It has its trials, its privations, and its discouragements, but it has also its reward and its crown of rejoicing, and its glory.

An obstacle to African Missions; how disposed of.

One great obstacle in the way of men devoting themselves to the work of the gospel in Africa is, the opinion that heathenism here is more odious and repulsive than in other parts of the world, because the people are black. Whenever this notion is entertained so as to make a man reluctant to teach the Gospel to Africans, it is most certain that he would not enjoy the life of a missionary in any part of the world. When heathen are compared with heathen, colour is but a small item. Darkness of skin can add nothing to the degradation of men who have not been raised under the light of the gospel. The fact is, brethren, "that in order to become all things to all men, we must have our own minds deeply convinced, that in the sight of God, and compared with eternity, the difference between the most polished and the most civilized people as to manners and customs, in which truth and duty are not immediately concerned, is a matter of very little consequence. This, and this only, will enable the missionary, unaffectedly and cordially, and without restraint, to associate with the African, so as to gain his respect, acquire his confidence, and win his heart."

The Africans have no confidence in their own Religion.—Their minds open to the Truth.—The prospects of Romanism among the Africans.

There is one respect in which God has prepared this country for the gospel, which is very observable. Although the religious principle is remarkably strong in the African mind, yet their confidence in their own religion is almost entirely obliterated. There is not a native here who will not laugh at his own Fetish, when you tell him that it cannot keep itself, much less keep him. Hence their minds are as it were vacated, and open to the reception of the truth.

Not only so, but they are also prepared against the efforts of Romanism. Catholic missions have had no success here in modern times. The priests have, indeed, hung up their crosses and pictures in the houses of the people, and upon the necks of their children; but to the African these trinkets have only taken the place of the Fetish, and he regards them in the same light. It is certain, too, that he conceives but little respect for the man who imitates his religion.

A wide door open before the Church.—An earnest plea for help.

Thus has God opened a wide door for the Church, to do good to the sons of Africa. The African's regard for the white man—his great desire to obtain his knowledge and his religion, his kind and friendly disposition toward the missionary, his growing disregard for his own worthless Fetishism—all unite in urging us speedily to give him the light of the gospel. And who can tell how rapidly this gospel may spread? At present it is but the handful of corn upon the tops of the mountains, but the time is approaching when the fruit of it shall shake like Lebanon, and the numbers of the city of God in Africa shall be as the grass of the field.

Brethren in Christ, the work is too great for us. Our's is but a drop to the vast ocean of influence which ought to be exerted in giving the gospel to Africa.

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF THE REV. A. RUDOLPH.

General sickness in the Upper Provinces.

Writing on the 6th of December, after his recovery from severe illness, Mr. Rudolph makes the following statements and reflections.

It has pleased the Lord in his all-wise providence to stretch out his hand over these provinces, and particularly this place, and to visit us with sickness, that has prevailed to a remarkable extent, and has swept away many a poor idolatrous heathen or bigotted Mohammedan, who had not made his peace with God. The fever that raged with unabated rigour during the months of October and November, was not of a malignant nature, and yet for want of sufficient care and proper medical treatment, it has proved fatal in many a case among the natives. For a time the mortality was very great among them, amounting sometimes to a hundred and upwards in a day. It prevailed most severely among the aged and infirm.

If we reflect that among these many must have been acquainted more or less with the gospel, and that perhaps to a vast number it has proved a savour of death unto death, this visitation of Divine providence appears awful in the extreme; it is a most thrilling appeal to the servants of the Lord, to discharge their duties with more fidelity than ever before, and to be diligent in season and out of season, in the delivery of the gospel message among their poor perishing fellow men. But while we mourn over the present condition of those that have been taken away in Divine wrath, may not we hope, that perhaps a few, though unknown to us, have had faith, saving faith though hidden, in the Redeemer, and have entered into glory? No case has come to my knowledge that would justify this belief, and yet I cannot but hope, that in a place like this, where the gospel trumpet has been sounded for upwards of sixteen years, the Lord may have his hidden ones, known only to his all-searching eye, who have left off bowing before Baal, and have endeavoured to serve the Lord according to the measure of light they possessed.

If we inquire what has been the result of this visitation with regard to the spiritual condition of the people, we must, alas! confess, that God is not acknowledged in these things. Absurd stories are invented by the blinded heathen, to account for what has occurred. One of these is, that a missionary, probably some one of our number, having caught a kite, tied a piece of flesh to its foot and then let it fly. When the flesh began to putrefy, it vitiated the air, and spread contagion all over this part of the country. Such is one of the idle tales invented by those, that ought to lie low in the dust before their Lord, and to confess their guilt and unbelief. Alas! they are ready to believe any thing, however absurd, but the truth.

While the natives thus have been chastised for their unbelief, the European population has not been spared, though mortality among them has been much less. On our mission premises I know of not one, that has not been attacked by it. Every member of the mission families, and of those of the native Christians, the orphan girls and our servants have had their turns of sickness, and many have had it at several different times. I myself have had three attacks, which have kept me feeble during the last two months, so that except attending to the sick, missionary work with me has almost been a blank. The sick on the mission premises have taken a good deal of my time, there being sometimes above twenty patients here at once. From the city we have had upwards of four hundred and fifty cases during the last two months, and would have had many more, had I not been laid up for so long a time myself. Our schools have been all but empty during this time, and even now in the English school from among eighty boys, there are only thirty-five present, who almost all of them are still in feeble health, and subject to slight attacks now and then. The same is the case with the Persian and Hindi Schools. . .

Examination of the School at Jalandar.

Toward the close of September it was my turn to visit the Jalandar station, and I had the pleasure during my stay there to witness the public examination of the school. It was quite an interesting sight to find so many intelligent-looking boys present to be examined on the things they had learned. There were about sixty in the English, and as many in the Persian department present; almost all of them passed an examination creditable both to themselves and teachers. In both departments they exhibited an amount of Scriptural knowledge that would have done credit to boys in schools at home. It was pleasing to see the promptness and correctness with which they answered when questioned about Scripture history. If we contemplate the fearful darkness that covers the people here, and their utter ignorance about spiritual things and Divine truth, we have abundant reason to be thankful for such an opportunity of disseminating Divine light through our schools. Expense and labour bestowed on such an object can never be lost. There were some eight or ten officers present on the occasion, who expressed themselves gratified at the acquirements of the boys. A number of articles of clothing were distributed as prizes, a friend having given a sum of money for this object. The most deserving received also prizes of books, with which they seemed to be much pleased. The books were those of the Board of Publication.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER OF THE REV. J. S. WOODSIDE.

Sickness of the Mission Families.

In connection with Mr. Rudolph's account of the epidemic in the upper provinces, we insert a part of Mr. Woodside's letter, dated at Saharunpur, December 6. Our readers will sympathize tenderly with these brethren in their afflictions, and will unite with them in praying that they may work out for them "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

I cannot now enter into details as to the history of the past three months. It is a melancholy history. It has been a season of affliction among us, at this station. Other places in these provinces have suffered much from sickness this season, but our city and district have been the chief sufferers from the epidemic, and we, among the rest, have come in for a share of the sufferings. On the 29th of August I was seized of a violent fever. I may here mention that almost every European at this station had been obliged to fly previously to this, but owing to the openness of our premises, we were last of being attacked. The first attack was soon subdued, but it was speedily followed by a relapse, and that by another, and another, up to the present time. Mrs. Woodside, after waiting upon me for several weeks, took ill also, and with her the infant of six months' old, which she was nursing. Mrs. Woodside has never as yet completely rallied. She and I are at present nearly in the same condition.

Our dear little boy has ceased to suffer. His disease became gradually more complicated till it went beyond the reach of remedies. The Lord was pleased to release him from his sufferings on the 15th of November, and he now sleeps in the little grave-yard here, with many others, who in like manner have been early taken from a world of sin and suffering. The circumstances of his death were very painful to our natural feelings. To save my life, the Doctor had ordered us to the hills in the end of September. This we thought would have speedily restored us all, but so inveterate is this disease, a bad type of low remittent fever, terminating in an obstinate ague, that some who are till now on the hills, amidst frost and snow, are not cured. . . . . About the 8th of November we had a visit from our own station Doctor, a warm-hearted, Christian man. He at once saw the danger of the child and adopted what measures were in his power, still hoping to save his life. As he could not remain on the hills, he advised us to come home that the child might be near him. We accordingly started from Landour and hoped to reach Saharanpur in safety, but we had just entered the "pass," of the Sawalic range of hills, when the child expired. He was in his mother's arms, in the Palky, and I was riding on a pony by her side when it happened. The body had necessarily to remain in the Palky till we reached Saharanpur about nine hours. This was a peculiar trial to Mrs. Woodside.

Thus you see the hand of the Lord has been laid heavily upon us, but we dare not utter a single syllable of complaint. He dealt mercifully, very mercifully, with us. No doubt we required this afflictive dispensation. Hitherto, all has been prosperity, and it may be, we were beginning to fancy ourselves better than we were. Oh, that grace may be given us to draw us closer to God. Our affections must not be given to another. Every thing else must be subdued to make way for the Highest when he wishes to enter into his temples. I doubt not you will hear from Brother Campbell about the sufferings of his family, and from Lodiana and Lahor, about the sickness in those places.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. J. H. MORRISON.

Journey from Ambala to Rupar; its object, the recovery of a convert's wife and son.

November 13th, 1850, Banúr—Started this morning for Rupar with Saudágar and Isái Dás, the Kuniyar Pandit whom I was permitted to baptize some months ago. The object of this journey at this time, is to bring home the wife and son of the latter. She once came and remained with him some days, and left for the professed object of bringing her children and household furniture, promising to meet him at the Manamajara Mela and return with him. This promise she never performed; whether from her own disinclination, or from the restraint or wheedling of others, I never could ascertain. But she and others have tried various expedients to get him away in vain. Now they say that if the Pandit will come to the delivery of his daughter to her husband, to whom she has been betrothed some years, she and her son will return with him. From all we have ascertained of the disposition of his acquaintances and others towards him, we deemed it unsafe to let him go alone, and having no native Christian whose prudence and judgment we could trust in such an emergency, it was deemed best that I should accompany him.

Notices of the Pandit's Character and History.

Here it may be interesting to give something more of his history and character than I have yet been able to give. He is very modest and unobtrusive, and has very little knowledge of the world, or skill in discussion. But he is a great book-worm—says little, and reads much; nor is he contented until he understands what he reads. He is not satisfied with merely understanding different passages, but he is constantly making close comparisons of different passages of Scripture, and of different translations, with each other, and of the books and tracts with the Scriptures, and never rests satisfied until their harmony is established. Such a mind you may readily suppose, was before prepared to receive the engrafted word with meekness and fear. He says that before he ever heard of the gospel, he had become dissatisfied with the Hindú religion, and lived in the neglect of many of its requisitions. In this state of mind, he met with Natha, one of our native Christians at Kalka, and received some instructions from him, and at once violated caste, by eating with him. He read some in the New Testament while with Natha, but not being able to get a copy for himself, he copied out the Lord's prayer, took it home, committed it to memory, and taught it to his wife and children, and taught them to repeat it morning and night. Some time after this, he entered the service of the Kuniyár Rána who, having a New Testament that he cared nothing about, gave it to him. Here also he had to suffer all sorts of taunts and jeers, on account of his neglect of Hinduism, and reading our books. The people used to tell the Rána, that he had destroyed himself, and would destroy his sons if allowed to teach them. One of the people said to me that the Pandit was a true and sincere Christian, and that he intended to leave the Rána and go to me, and then what shall we do when you take our Guru? To this I replied, you all become Christians too, and then I will send him back to be your Guru still, and not now as before to instruct you in soul-destroying error, but in the truth that leads to eternal life.

Conversation with Mohammedans and Hindus at Banur.—Men responsible for their sins.—Preaching in Bazar.

In the afternoon, I had some conversation with a number of persons who came to my tent—first with some Musalmáns. Having a Koran with me, from which I quoted chapter and verse for every thing I said, and showed it to them both in the original and in their own tongue, I very soon succeeded in putting them to silence. Then came a Hindú, who was very noisy and thought all our charges of sin against men were answered by the admitted fact that God created us. To this I replied, that if God created us to lie, and steal, &c., then we were answering the end of our existence in committing such sins. Then it was in fact no sin to lie and steal, because it was in accordance with the will and law of God as written upon the nature he gave us. This conclusion from the premises he could not deny; but to admit this doctrine would be to destroy his own religion, or even to deny the necessity of any religion, and to make all sorts of iniquity lawful. He was thus driven to the other conclusion, that man had acted contrary to the will of God, and the end for which he was created; and therefore the fact that God had created him was no excuse or palliation, but rather an aggravation of his sins. When driven from his stronghold he had so little besides to say, that he thought it best to take his departure. I then took Saudágar and went to the bazár, leaving the Pandit to attend to those at the tent. In the bazár I had a good audience, and a good opportunity of setting forth the gospel plan of salvation and also of showing that their systems of religion contained no plan of salvation for sinners. Distributed but very few books, as readers were few; and those disposed to examine the foundation on which they were building fewer still.

Discouraging labours at Karr.—Interesting meeting with a Sikh.—The fear of man a great obstacle.

14th. Karr. In the cool of the afternoon I went with Saudagar and Pandit to the bazár, and continued preaching and discussing with the people until near dark. Met with but little besides the most determined opposition and decided manifestations of the most awful hardness of heart, and blindness of mind. . . We are made daily to realize how utterly futile are all our toils, labours, and sufferings without the our-pouring of the Holy Ghost

15th. Bhaktekè Ihaliyán. This is the place where the Pandit's wife and son are with her brother. It is off the road, and I had to travel several miles through the fields; but providentially, just before reaching the proper place to turn off the road, I inquired the way of a Sikh who was coming to a neighbouring village almost in sight of this. So I rode along with him, and found the place without any trouble. He recognised me, having met me at the Manamájara Mela last spring, where he said he asked me for books, but I had none left to give him. He asked me to instruct him as we were going on together which I cheerfully did, and with more hope and encouragement than I often meet with in large crowds. He appeared anxious to know the truth, and professed his readiness to practice it. I took pains to make the gospel plan of salvation plain to him; and to be sure that he understood me, requested him to repeat what I had said, which he did much to my satisfaction. Having ascertained that he understood what I had said, I endeavoured to impress him with the solemnity of his position, as having heard God's message to his soul, and that now if he continued to walk contrary to it, his condemnation would be so much the more awful in proportion to the light received. He promised, as we parted, to come this afternoon and get books, but did not fulfil his promise; so I fear he was either deceiving me, or, what is more probable, has been detained by the fear of man. It is almost impossible for those who have not mingled with this people, to conceive of the extent and strength of this influence in restraining them from good, and driving them into all evil. The Pandit says he once commenced learning Persian, when his fellow Brahmans compelled him to give it up. At another time he wanted to study Panjábí, but was compelled to desist in the same way. So far as in their power, they prevent each other from looking into any science or religion but their own. Now and then, one either breaks off these bonds by a high-minded resolution, and determined effort, regardless of consequences, or, as in the case of the Pandit, slips out of the sphere of their influence, where he can act with some degree of independence.

Conversation with a Brahman.—Preaching all day.—The Pandit listened to with respect.—His Daughter sent away.

Further on the way overtook and entered into conversation with a Brahman of this village. He assented to the truth and excellence of the doctrines I taught. I asked him what he would call a man who heard wise counsels and rejected them? A fool, he replied. And what would you call a man who heard good instructions, and acted contrary to them? A wicked man, said he. And what would you call a man who heard what he admitted, and knew to be true, and yet rejected it and did contrary to it? A liar, he answered. Well now, said I, you have called yourself a fool, a knave, and a liar, for you have acknowledged all this of my instructions, and not only act contrary to them, but persecute those who embrace and practice the truth. He laughed when he saw how he was caught, and asked what could he do—everybody else did so!

Great curiosity to see the Pandit was manifested by the people from the time they heard he was coming. To take advantage of this state of feeling, after breakfast I sent word into the village that I wanted to see all the people, and their Brahmans and Pandits. Soon a congregation gathered, and I preached to them until I was fairly tired speaking. The Pandit then came up to my relief, and I was surprised to see with what respect and attention they listened to him. Here we continued reading and instructing the people by turns until night. Our audiences changed somewhat during so many hours of preaching; but while the Pandit was speaking, I twice counted the congregation, and both times there were over sixty present and listening attentively, very seldom uttering a word, except of approbation. I two or three times asked if any one present could read, but always received a negative reply from high and low Brahmans, and not one of all that crowd could read.

From some indications among the Brahmans and the Pandit's relatives, I fear they will give us trouble before they will let his wife and son go. His daughter had been sent off a little before I arrived. Her uncle went to call her back to see her father, but they would neither turn back with her nor let her return.

Notices of the Pandit's Wife and Son—Unsuccessful opposition to restoring them.

16th. After a great deal of trouble and annoyance, we succeeded in getting the Pandit's wife and son, and such were the demonstrations of his relatives that I thought it prudent, instead of proceeding to Rupar, to make one march back towards Ambala. Accordingly I proceeded as far as Kalál, where I expected to spend the Sabbath. The Brahmans had so thoroughly frightened the wife and son of the Pandit, that they were as ready in calling him a heretic as any Roman Catholic. They adopted every expedient and practised every deception they could to thwart me. They tried to deceive me by tricks and promises, and swore to all their lies by the Ganges water and by the incense of their gods, but all to no purpose. Finding all of no avail, they at last yielded and delivered them up. Even after giving up his wife, they renewed all their tricks and lies to keep the boy; but at last they brought him out also, and gave him into his father's arms. He roared and repeated all the abuse he had been taught until he got tired, and then after he was out of sight of his village he became quiet, and but for his mother would have been contented. She at first refused to move, but when they put her son on the cart and started she followed of her own accord.

Two professed believers in Christ.—Solemn thoughts from the lips of a Heathen.—Further notices of the Pandit's family.

17th, Sabbath.—Had a pretty good audience about the tent door this morning, to whom I preached from the first half of the third chapter of the gospel by John. After service I had a long conversation with some who remained, and others who kept dropping in. One of the audience said he and one other person in this city were on our side, i. e. of Christ, and all the rest against them—that he had for some years been convinced, and maintained that Christ was a true prophet. He had confounded the account of John the Baptist in the first chapter of Luke with that of Christ. I read and explained both, and set him right. Still the truth does not appear to have made any serious impression on his mind. A Brahman was with him, but refused to take any books. However, he returned in the evening with some others, and took some.

After the exercises of the morning, I went with the Pandit to the Bazár, where we had a large audience, and a good opportunity of preaching the gospel to them. One said we have heard and understood you, and approve of what you say, but to-morrow you will be gone, leaving no one to instruct us, or keep us in mind of what we have heard, and all will soon be forgotten. Would that this solemn thought, from the lips of a heathen, whose mind has just got a first glimpse of the truth, might sink deep into the hearts of God's people, and excite them to send more missionaries, and pray more for them. Much of our labour is in a great measure lost for want of the means of securing what is once gained. When we returned to the tent, Saudagar went to the Bazár. While I was at dinner the Pandit was engaged with people about the tent, and after dinner I had others to talk and distribute books to. The Pandit's wife has been constantly annoying us, trying all sorts of tricks to annoy and get the boy away. I was obliged to interfere and threaten to leave her on the road, and not allow her to go with us if she did not desist. I expect to have trouble all the way home, and but little opportunity to do any thing but attend to them.

18th, Karr.—On account of the watchfulness necessary to take care of the wife and son of the Pandit, I did not go to the Bazár to preach, but sent Saudagar, and remained at the tent with the Pandit, and had an opportunity of delivering our message to a few who assembled there.

The Pandit's manner of teaching his countrymen.—Efforts made to draw him back to Heathenism.—Again at Banur.

I have been better pleased with the Pandit's preaching, or rather his didactic comments, than I expected to be. He avoids as far as possible all controversy, and generally succeeds pretty well in shutting it out, and holding forth the pure word of life. This he does in the way common with Pandits when instructing the people in their own religion, by selecting portions of Scripture, reading and commenting on them. To-day on the march he told me of some of the abominations of the heathen, which I cannot detail here. He also told me of an effort made some time ago to bribe him. A young man several times encountered him in the Bazár in his preaching, and made himself very troublesome. At length he ceased his annoyance, and appeared to listen with interest. One day he said he wished to speak with him privately, to which the Pandit assented, and when they were alone, he told him he had been sent by a wealthy and influential Hindú to say that if he would give up his present work, and return to them, he would secure his restoration to his caste, and give him twenty rupees a month, just twice the amount he receives from the Mission. In fact I believe no scheme they could devise has been left untried to get him back, by violence, fraud, or offer of worldly gain and threats. Yet, so far as I have been able to discover, he remains untainted, and appears to be growing in grace and knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Indeed I often long for the sweet and heavenly unction he frequently breathes in his prayers. Yet he seems to feel that his prayers are so defective, that they are unworthy of notice.

19th, Banur.—Had an opportunity of preaching to a few this morning at the tent, after our arrival. In the evening I had a large crowd also at the tent, and a very good opportunity to set forth the plan of salvation. But afterwards some of the baser sort became very noisy and insolent. The educated were respectful and attentive. The Pandit was engaged in the same work several times during the day, and Saudagar went to the Bazár in the evening.

MISSION IN SIAM.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF THE REV. S. MATTOON.

Mission premises in Bangkok, not to be obtained.

The missionaries of our Church have occupied the mission premises formerly belonging to the American Board in Bangkok. These have been transferred by that Board to the American Missionary Association. Repeated efforts have been made by our brethren to procure suitable quarters elsewhere, which we regret to find have all proved unsuccessful. The result seems to be, that our mission will have to be withdrawn from that field of labour.

As this is a very serious measure in every point of view, and one deeply to be lamented, we insert the greater part of Mr. Mattoon's letter concerning it. It is dated at Bangkok, on the 5th of December. Some of its details are minute, but they are all requisite to show fully the state of the case. Some of the lesser incidents evince the feelings of influential personages towards the missionaries.

We have from time to time acquainted you with the difficulties in the way of our procuring a suitable location for a permanent residence here. Some of our attempts and failures you are already familiar with. But it may be well to bring before you again and at one view, some of the things which seem now to be settled from our experience and that of others.

Native residences, if they could be rented, are not suitable for Europeans or Americans; and they could not be obtained, even if they could be occupied. The common people would not be permitted either to erect suitable houses and rent them to us, nor to rent to us land and let us build for ourselves. This we and others have tried to our satisfaction. We fully believe that under the reign of the present policy, we could obtain a place which we should be permitted to retain only directly from the King or the Praklang, the minister of European affairs. To the King we have access only through the Praklang. He can take our petitions to him, or refuse at pleasure. So at last we are left at his mercy.

How the Stations of the Baptist and the American Boards were obtained.

It may be asked, how have the stations now occupied been obtained? Many years ago, a treaty was made with the Portuguese, when they were permitted to have a consul here, and several acres of land were made over to them as a consular residence. This act the Siamese have always regretted, and in their subsequent treaties with European nations, have refused the privilege of a consul, or to give them the possession of land, not even sufficient to bury their dead. When Mr. Jones [of the Baptist Mission,] arrived in the country, he procured a place of the Portuguese consul, adjoining the consular residence; and there the Baptist Mission still remains. They have made at different times, many other unsuccessful attempts to procure other premises. Mr. Jones tells me that in five different cases they supposed that they had nearly completed their arrangements, but failed to obtain any one of them.

Some years before the arrival of the missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, the Government had erected buildings, and rented them to the British merchants; the missionaries, after much effort, procured the place occupied by them, immediately adjoining the British factory, of the Praklang. As their numbers increased, they attempted to procure other places, and succeeded in getting one, erected a house and went into it. But they were soon ordered off, and were obliged to take down and remove their house at considerable expense.

Mr. Buell of our Board, when here, had a house built for him by a Portuguese, joining the Baptist mission premises. If that could be procured there would not be room for our dwellings. . . . In this field we all feel that it would be specially important that each mission should have a separate station, which may be to the people so many centres of Christian influence. But if it was desirable, a place of a suitable size for our mission could not be obtained, joining either of the other stations.

Efforts suspended and again made.—Unsuitable premises offered.

After our failure of last year, we felt that nothing could be successfully done till the return of the Praklang, who was absent about eighteen months in a distant part of the kingdom. He did not return till the 1st of April, of this year, a few days after the arrival of the first British steamer, and the United States sloop-of-war. Then followed envoys, and their unsuccessful efforts to amend treaties, till the last of September. As soon as the excitement had somewhat subsided, and the king had finished his annual visitation of the Wats, we waited upon the Praklang, and explained to him our wishes. He offered to put up dwellings and rent them to us on either of two places. One of them we were all decided in the opinion, that we ought not to think of, so long at least as there were others more favourably situated, who would preach the gospel to the Siamese. The other is some four miles below our present residence, some two miles from market, and about the same distance from any thickly inhabited portion of the city. The few inhabitants in the vicinity were Chinese and Malays, the latter slaves in charge of the Praklang's gardens. We stated to him our objection to both of the places, and inquired if we should find some other place that could be obtained, if he could not arrange to let us have it. He replied, that he could not. And here let me say that we could easily find twenty places to our minds, if the government would give consent to our renting them. We then asked him if he would present the case to the king in our behalf, and ask him for the privilege of our renting a place for our residence; but this he also refused. Thus we were shut up to his one proposition, and we asked time for consideration.

Farther Negotiations unsuccessful.

We finally decided, notwithstanding all its disadvantages as a mission station, that we would take it, and make an effort to collect a boarding-school, &c., turning our attention to such labours as might be done in such a situation. We waited upon the Praklang again to give him our decision, when we found, upon further conversation, that we had mistaken the lot; and I thought that he appeared disappointed that we had decided to accept his offer. He ordered one of his servants to show us the place which he proposed to let us have. We found it in the midst of docks for building ships, ponds for keeping logs, and canals for the conveyance of logs, connecting these. And with these disadvantages, there is barely land enough to accommodate our mission as it at present exists, without reference to increase, or chapel, school-rooms, printing-offices, or other designs which we have in our mind. We pointed out the objections to the lot, and sent word to the Praklang, that we were not pleased with it, and requested that we might have the one which we first had in view, which was lying near, unoccupied, except by a lime-kiln, and a plantain garden. This was reported to the Praklang in the presence of one of our members, when he said he was sure there was abundance of room for our purpose, and appointed the next day to go with us in person to examine the lot.

We waited upon him at the hour appointed, but did not find him ready to fulfil his appointment; we found, however, during a conversation with him, that he proposed to have the houses built over the places which had been dug out for docks, and for ships, which would be always wet, and at high tide covered with water. This would not be pleasant, but could be endured, if it did not injuriously affect our health, and on that subject we have no experience in this country. He made another appointment to go with us to see the premises. We called at the hour mentioned, waited a full hour for his appearance, and then were merely recognised and dismissed without explanation, and without the appointment of any other time to transact the business. This we consider nearly equivalent to a refusal to do any thing further in the business, as the Siamese never say no, if they can refuse you without. We might possibly succeed in getting the place, if we should press the subject. But it has so little to recommend it in itself, and from its location, that we have thought it best to refer the whole subject to you. Another thing which we have learned is, that he must build himself, and that probably the rent would be extremely high for this country.

Other things of a discouraging kind.

The account of the arrest and examination of the teachers, you have already heard. There has been no official decision in the case, but the old teachers do not feel at liberty to return. We have succeeded in obtaining a few inferior men, who come to us by stealth, but we do not know how long we shall be able to keep them. The Siamese are still engaged on their defences, in anticipation of a war with the English. What the latter will do we know not. One party of the merchants at Singapore have sent home a petition to the government, asking them to enforce their demands; another company have sent a counter petition. We are assured by the Siamese, that there will be no change of policy in reference to Europeans, at least during the reign of the present king. Who will succeed him, or what will then be the policy of the government, it is now impossible to tell.

How the case stands.—Relations to other Missionaries.

I believe I have now laid before you pretty fully what we can and what we cannot do here. We can probably (not certainly) secure premises sufficient for present necessity, but not in a place favourable for the carrying forward our work; or those of us now in the field can live on as we have done, on the premises of other missions, but in that case we could not be reinforced, and probably soon would have to be separated as a mission. To this there are objections which I have not fully stated, and will do so here. The difference of views and practice between ourselves and the other missions here, while it has not, and probably would not, hinder us from living on terms of the most intimate friendship, is still sufficient to make it undesirable to be so intimately associated in our mission work, as we must be if living on the same premises. But what is still more important, we seem to be in each other's way, as we are now located; and that certainly should not be while the harvest is so great. I continue the daily service with our servants, and the Sabbath services in the chapel, but Dr. Bradley could do this without interfering with his other labours. Dr. House continues the dispensary, but there are now two other physicians at this station, and one of them would be glad to practice if Dr. House was not in the place. Both of the brethren who came on with Dr. Bradley will very soon be able to take an active part in tract distribution and market preaching. In reference to room, our friends, in order to accommodate us, live in crowded quarters, two families in one house. And we hear that their Society have already another man under appointment. If he should come on, one of our families must seek a new home. Previous to the arrival of Dr. Bradley and his associates, it was different. From the time I could command the language so as to be useful, I was filling a place which there was no one on the ground to fill, and there was no other physician in the field than Dr. House. And so far as usefulness is concerned, it would be essentially the same now, if we could occupy an independent station a little removed from this. But now it is a little like two clergymen preaching in the same pulpit, and labouring for the same congregation. But still if continued here, we trust we shall not be idle nor wholly useless.

What shall be done?—The feelings of the Missionaries concerning this field of labour.

And now, dear brother, what shall we do? I have tried as far as I was able to let you see our circumstances as we see them. As to our views of the importance of this field, you have access to what we have before written, and I am not prepared to recall a single word I have written on that point. And although, there has hitherto been no success among the Siamese, I do not think that a reason for withdrawing the mission. And I now think, as I have heretofore done, that in many respects the field is open to missionary labour. The common people would, I have no doubt, welcome us as residents in any part of the city or even the kingdom, were it not for the fear inspired by the opposition of their rulers. This jealous, narrow-minded and tyrannical government, presents the great obstacle, I will not say to the success, but to the efforts of missions. We should probably find a sufficient obstacle to success, in the dark and corrupt hearts of the heathen. I should never hope to find, all things considered, a more pleasant field of labour than Siam. I love the Siamese with all their faults, and could not hope to find any other heathen people with fewer faults than they. Besides, I have so far mastered their language, as to feel very much at home in the use of it, though I have much still to learn.

The views of the Missionaries as to another field.

You may ask what we would wish to do, provided this field is abandoned. On this point I will only speak for myself, leaving the other brethren to express their own wishes. And let me begin by saying, that I am perfectly willing to remain here with all our disadvantages, if such is the wish of the Board. If by our leaving, the Siamese were to be left entirely without the gospel, or if any change should occur which would open a favourable station to us, I could scarcely consent to our abandoning the field. But if it should be decided to withdraw the mission from this field, I am willing to go to any of the existing stations of the Board. . . .

We have thought that you might be willing to establish a new mission, if you withdrew from Siam, and in this connexion we have thought of Province Wellesly, opposite to Penang. You have probably access to more information in relation to the country than we have here. Its principal recommendation to us, is its relative position to our present field, and the fact that it has a small Siamese population. Queda, from which it was taken, belongs to Siam, and has Siamese inhabitants, but the majority are Malays. If the time should come when Siam should be fully open, we might from a station there easily reach portions of Siam on the west side of the gulf, which are not reached from this city. So far as we can ascertain, there are no Protestant missionaries in the whole of the peninsula and the adjacent islands, from Burmah to Singapore. The Malay language is easy of acquisition, and the Malays are certainly not a hopeless people. The country is under English protection, and thus we should not have a heathen government to oppose our operations. We should probably be able to have schools, and might be able to educate some Siamese youth to preach the gospel to their countrymen. It must be confessed that the principal inducement which this Province presents to my mind over other parts of the Straits and the adjoining islands, is that we should still be within reach of Siam and the Siamese.

We have received letters from each of the other brethren, relating to this painful subject. They concur with Mr. Mattoon in his views of the state of things in Siam, and also speak of the Province Wellesly, and some other fields, as deserving the consideration of the Board. We trust the Lord will grant to his servants wisdom and grace, in this time of need.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN FEBRUARY, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Albany First ch for sup of Rev Joseph Warren, Allahabad 700, four children who love their pastor 10, a little girl 1, a little boy, C M 50 cts, a little girl for India 50 cts, a little boy for China 50 cts; Albany 3d ch 14 20	726 70

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Sparta 2d ch	10 00
Pby of Ogdensburg.—Oswegatchie 2d ch 14 20; Hammond ch 14	28 20
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 3d ch 73, Mrs S G Alling 2	80 00
Pby of Michigan.—Brandon, Mich Rev J A Clayton 75 cts; Bellmont, Mich Rev S J Reid 4	4 75

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Scotchtown ch ann contbu 82, mo con coll's and Sab Sch to ed Methuselah Baldwin in Northern India 34	116 00
Pby of North River.—Marlboro' ch mo con 2 80, individuals 8 50; Newburg 1st ch four ladies to ed Mary Johnston in India 20; Monroe, Orange Co N Y 4	35 30
Pby of Bedford.—Bedford ch Lady's Miss Soc 20, Sab Sch 13 50; South Salem ch ann contbu 107 55, Lady's Benev Assoc 30, Dorcas Soc 13 88; Rye ch 10	194 93
Pby of Long Island.—East Hampton ch mo con coll's 48 11; Southampton ch ann and mo con coll's 49 50; Smithtown ch mo con 11 86	109 47
Pby of Connecticut.—Thompsonville ch	47 35
Pby of New York.—New York 1st ch ann coll addl 5, mo con 104 60, Young ladies to ed Richard W Dickinson 18 75, to ed Josephine Tuttle 25; Madison Avenue ch mo con 2 18; Williamsburg ch mo con 16 65; University Place ch mo con 45 88; Duane St ch mo con 3 48, Edmund Penfold 50; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 12 29; Forty-second St ch mo con 15 15; Jersey City ch ann coll 129 25; Chelsea ch mo con 13; Brooklyn 2d ch ann coll in part 170 12	611 35
2d Pby of New York.—Canal St ch mo con 5, "A member" 30; Peekskill ch in part 45	80 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Plainfield 1st ch Sab Sch Miss sewing soc 1, Sab Sch for Bond scholarship at Allahabad 6; New Providence ch 33; Chatham Village ch Rev J M Ogden and family 20; Liberty Corner ch 50 — 110 00

NOTE.—In last month's Record, in this Pby 17 87 was acknowledged as from Springfield ch, it should have been "Springfield ch 27 25; Elizabethport ch 17 87."

Pby of New Brunswick.—New Brunswick 1st ch mo con 26 52, Rev J Cogswell D D 50, P C 10; Squan ch 8; Cranberry 2d ch 80 — 174 52

Pby of West Jersey.—Bridgeton ch 6 mos con coll's 138, pupils of a daily school 11, children of a family 5 — 154 00

Pby of Newton.—Greenwich ch 57; German Valley ch to con HENRY J HOFFMAN 1 m 50; Newton ch 85 06; Stewartsville ch 34 50; Stroudsburg ch 10; Middle Smithfield ch 16 62; Upper Mount Bethel ch 5 75; Catasaqua ch 12 15; Allentown ship ch 37 35 — 308 43

Pby of Raritan.—Solebury ch — 14 00

Pby of Susquehanna.—Silver Lake ch 60; Wyalusing ch 10; Orwell ch 9 50; Troy ch 8 — 87 50

Pby of Luzerne.—Lackawanna ch 10; Wilkesbarre ch 25 — 35 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Phila North ch "A member" 10; Sixth ch mo con 25 50; Ninth ch Sab Sch 12; Scots ch ann and mo con coll's 314, Juv Miss soc 32; Second ch "A member" 50; Tenth ch ann coll 278 81, A friend 25, Thos H Hoge 10, A friend 100, Moses Johnson 25 in all from Tenth ch 438 81, less 30 for "Foreign Missionary" — 852 31

Pby of New Castle.—New London ch "A Lady" for African Mission — 12 00

Pby of Donegal.—Churchville, Md Jas M Parnell — 2 00

Pby of Baltimore.—Franklin St ch Balt 100; Balt Md A family to ed Eliza Jane Cross, Martha Young Cross, Hellen Miller Cross, and John Cross Webster at Ningpo 100; Bridge St ch Georgetown, D C 5 66, a friend 10; Havre De Grace ch 10; Balt Md "a deceased boy" 2 84 — 228 50

Pby of Huntingdon.—Hollidaysburg ch Fem Miss soc for Allahabad College 40, for Fem School 50, four small boys for Orphan school 8 32 — 98 32

Pby of Northumberland.—Shamokin and Elysburg chs 10; Warrior Run ch 50 — 60 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Unity ch 91; New Alexandria ch 21 50; Indiana ch in part 14 50 — 127 00

Pby of Redstone.—Somerset ch 11; Stoystown ch 2; Long Run ch 22 20; McKeesport ch 15 — 50 20

Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburgh 1st ch Young Ladies Miss soc to con MRS ELIZA ROBINSON 1 m 32; Pittsburgh 2d ch addl 10 25, "A member" 2; Canonsburg ch to con their Pastor REV A B BROWN D D and MRS ELIZABETH BROWN 1 m's 60; Manchester ch 79 32; East Liberty ch in part 50 — 233 57

Pby of Allegheny.—Plain Grove ch 49 50; Concord ch 14 — 63 50

Pby of Beaver.—Bethlehem ch addl — 20 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 2d ch Sab Sch to ed Delia M Dickson, Cyrus Dickson, Edgar Woods and James M McKelly at Canton 25; Wheeling Va three little children of A Caldwell 1 90; Lower Ten Mile ch 23; West Liberty ch 4 42 — 54 32

Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 2d ch Youth's Miss Soc for Scholarship at Allahabad 12; Harrisburg ch addl 3; Waynesburg ch addl 1 — 16 00

Pby of St Clairsville.—Rock Hill ch bal to con their Pastor REV B MITCHELL 1 d 59; Mount Pleasant ch 81 53; Crab Apple ch 59; Cadiz ch addl 49 — 248 53

Pby of New Lisbon.—Deerfield ch 32; Newton ch Jas Russell 5, Mrs Anne Russell 5; Clarkson ch fem miss soc 8 40; Canfield ch, of which 10 from J H and M Holcomb in part to con E R HOLCOMB 1 m 57 54 — 107 94

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Zanesville.—Zanesville O. Robert Winter 50; Salt Creek ch in part to con their Pastor REV JOHN P CALDWELL 1 d 32; Blue Rock ch to con MRS C CALDWELL 1 m 31; Deerfield ch bal to con their Pastor REV W FURGUSON 1 m 14 50; Uniontown ch 9 — 136 50

Pby of Richland.—Waterford ch children's coll's for 4 mos, of which 3 from three children for memorizing Catechism 3 43; Frederick ch addl of which 2 from A T Bell 2 57 — 6 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Chillicothe.—Cynthiann ch 8; Hillsborough ch John Heron to con MISS ELIZABETH ERWIN 1 m 30; Rocky Spring ch bal 7 — 45 00

Pby of Miami.—Dayton 1st ch Sab Sch to ed William C Anderson and Jane Mary Anderson in China 50, Mrs S Greene's infant Sab Sch 6 mos coll's 8; Dick's Creek ch 11 85 — 69 85

Pby of Cincinnati.—Cincinnati Central ch Alexander McKenzie to ed boy in Allahabad Mission College 25; Seventh ch mo con 22 50; Cincinnati Welsh ch ann coll 40 75 — 88 25

Pby of Oxford.—Riley ch in part 13 75; Oxford ch 68 11, Mr Wolfe 2; Eaton ch 16 50; North Providence ch 2 50; Venice ch 10; Harrison ch 35 77, less 2 for "Foreign Missionary," children 2 48; Providence ch 8 25, less 2 for "Foreign Missionary" — 155 36

Pby of Sidney.—Stoney Creek ch 15; Logansville ch 1 75 — 16 75

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—Livonia ch 18; Corydon ch Mrs H L Fabrique 2 50; Utica ch 4 85 — 25 35

Pby of Madison.—Hanover ch Mrs Scovell 5; Jefferson ch 4 — 9 00

Pby of Indianapolis.—Shiloh ch 2 50; Franklin ch JOHN BANTA in part to con himself 1 m 20; Hopewell ch 19 20 — 41 70

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Lake.—Sumption's Prairie ch 13 80; South Bend ch 14 34, Fem Miss Soc in part to con REV A Y MOORE 1 d 20 54 — 48 74

Pby of Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne ch — 75 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Farmington Ills John Simpson — 5 00

Pby of Schuyler.—Macomb ch 10, Mrs Hoagland for China 6 — 16 00

Pby of Wisconsin.—Wyocena ch 8; Grafton ch 2; Winebago Rapids ch 10; Oakland ch 2 — 22 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of St Louis.—St Louis 2d ch Sab Sch's for sup of Rev Henry V Rankin in China — 300 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Louisville.—Louisville 1st ch ann coll addl 22, mo con 17 75; Louisville 2d ch ann coll in part 210 30; Shelbyville Ky Mrs Eliz. M Morton and family to con REV J W CANFIELD 1 m 30 — 280 05

Pby of Muhlenburg.—Christian Co. Ky Maria H Evans — 10 00

Pby of Ebenezer.—Newport ch 4 90; Flemingsburg ch 10 — 14 90

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

"———" Mrs Mary E Kelly — 10 00

Pby of Lexington.—New Providence ch 31; Staunton ch 51 20; Waynesboro' ch 17; Tinkling Spring ch 70 80; Bethel ch 40 — 210 00

Pby of West Hanover.—Midland Va Master Isaac R Carrington — 00 50

Pby of East Hanover.—Petersburg ch addl 6; Nottoway ch 60; Richmond 2d ch mo con 56 58, Sab Sch for Colportage in France 11 50 — 134 08

Pby of Montgomery.—Christiansburg, Va Thomas Inglis — 5 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Orange.—Chapel Hill ch 20; Raleigh ch 102 50; Bethlehem ch 17 50; Newbern ch 43; Greensboro' ch 48 96; Spring Hill ch 12 87; Red House ch 7 30; Cross Roads ch 3 75; Spring Garden ch 31 38 — 287 26

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Chickasaw.—Holly Springs ch Sab Sch to ed Sarah B Thompson — 30 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Synodical collection in Upper Long Cane ch — 200 00

Pby of South Carolina.—Willington ch mo con coll's 40; Rock ch 25 87, Dr John H Logan 1; Warrior's Creek ch 4 50; New Harmony ch 5 05; Friendship ch 10; Rocky Spring ch 10; Spartanburg ch 16 87; Greeneville ch 36 95 — 150 24

Pby of Bethel.—Coates Tavern S C female school 2, ann. family thank offering of W P McFadden 10; Bethesda ch for press in Northern India 60; Pleasant Grove ch ann coll 30 — 102 00

Pby of Harmony.—Beaver Creek ch family of Rev S Donnelly 28, a free coloured man for African Mission 7; Aimwell ch 3; Horeb ch 10 — 48 00

Pby of Charleston.—Charleston 2d ch mo con Decr and Jany 47 90, Juv miss soc in part to ed five children at Ningpo, and five among the Otoe and Omaha Indians 78 98; Glebe St ch mo con coll's 34 96; Columbia 1st ch ann coll 179 75 — 341 59

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of South Alabama.—Airmount Ala John Hope and family — 10 00

Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Mesopotamia ch — 100 00

Pby of East Alabama.—Montgomery ch Sab Sch for Scholarship at Allahabad — 12 50

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Natchez ch mo con coll's 150 95, ann coll 722 70, Sab Sch 22 80, coloured members for sup of Rev H W Ellis 17 90, in all 918 35, less 16 66 for "Foreign Missionary" — 901 69

Pby of Louisiana.—Woodville ch 45 90; New Orleans 4th ch 40; Jackson ch 10; Comite ch 7; Bethany ch 5; New Orleans 3d ch 20; New Orleans Lafayette Square ch Sab Sch miss soc to ed William Gardiner, Andrew Brown, George H Shephard, Joanna Lloyd, Eliza Smith and Cynthia Bunce Perlee at Canton 150 — 277 90

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIA.

Pby of Lodiana.—Lodiana ch mo con coll's 37 20; Jallandar ch mo con coll's 4 65 — 41 85

Total from churches — $9,329 75

LEGACIES.

Union Co Pa Legacy of Andw McLenaghan — 68 33

Henderson Ky Bequest of Miss M H Hopkins, child of Col Hopkins, (her dying gift to the heathen) — 2 00

York S C Estate of John Blair, Dividend on Bank Shares — 80 00 — 150 33

MISCELLANEOUS.

Parma and Greece Pbn ch N Y — 9 00

Sing Sing N Y Rev Jacob Greene — 10 00

New York R L and A Stuart — 1000 00

Two friends of Missions — 2000 00

Phila Pa J N D — 200 00

A friend from West Chester Co N Y — 20 00

A. M. for article left for sale at Mission House Sept 18, — 36 00

Acknowledged last month — 18 00 — 18 00

Newburg N Y Rev B R Hall D D — 5 00

Phila Pa E F Backus of which 50 for Papal Europe — 150 00

Harrisburg Pa Mrs Martha Simonton — 2 00

"———" Flor. Anna, Virginia, Sarah and Robert Manattee 1 each — 4 00

Phila Pa Ladies Jewish Miss Soc — 25 00

"———" Mrs Cath Kinsey — 5 00

Pickens Co Ala A lady — 10 00

Lowndesboro' Ala "———" for China — 5 00

"———" "A friend of Missions" — 10 00 — 3,473 00

Total receipts in February — $12,953 08

WM. RANKIN, JR., Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Lady's Sewing Soc of Scotchtown ch N Y one barrel clothing — 35 12

Harrodsburg Ky two boxes of clothing Mrs Mary Rose to ed Charles Rose and Mary Rose at Tallahassee among the Creek Indians

Ladies of Mount Pleasant ch Erie Pby one box clothing — 41 05

NOTICES.

LETTERS relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to WALTER LOWRIE, Esq., or the Rev. JOHN C. LOWRIE, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

LETTERS relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to WILLIAM RANKIN, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

PAYMENTS OF MONEYS for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

BOXES OF CLOTHING, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts.
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents each.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "FOREIGN MISSIONARY, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,
No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D. D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M. D. Treasurer.

PLEDGES OF PRESBYTERIES UNREDEEMED.

In several instances colporteurs have been recommended officially by Presbyteries for appointment by the Board of Publication, as labourers within their bounds, with the pledge on the part of such Presbyteries that they would raise the sum necessary for the colporteur's support. In several, if not all, of such cases, the Presbyteries named a larger salary than we are accustomed to give, and it was agreed to expressly on the ground of their offer to raise the money themselves. After the lapse of at least two years since some of these pledges were made, we regret to say that not in one single instance, so far as we can ascertain, have they been fulfilled. In some cases a part of what was promised has been paid; in none of them has the whole been paid; and from most of them we have received nothing. This result is doubtless owing to unintentional neglect, and to the fact that what seemed to be everybody's business was nobody's; but still, good Christian people ought not to do so.

THE COLPORTAGE CAUSE.

We are gratified to learn that the Rev. A. L. Hogshead, agent of the Synod of Virginia, is labouring with encouraging success in the bounds of Winchester Presbytery.

As yet, the Christian public have very inadequate conceptions of the importance of these enterprises. When it is considered that there are between forty and fifty pious men constantly visiting from house to house, and distributing by sale and gift, approved works embodying the great truths of the everlasting gospel, there is reason to anticipate much fruit from the seed thus sown. In this way the gospel is preached to thousands who would not otherwise hear it. Thousands who have but a partial knowledge of the plan of salvation are thus furnished with the best means of instruction, and thousands who are perishing for lack of knowledge are thus brought to an intimate acquaintance with the way of life. The colportage enterprise, moreover, is not without its effect in the promotion of Education—in the establishment of Sunday-schools, in reforming the intemperate, and in many other respects elevating the moral tone of every community upon which it operates. And hence, whether it appeal to the philanthropist, the patriot, or the Christian, it is richly entitled to a more liberal support.—Watchman and Observer.

THE COLPORTEUR CHEERED ON HIS WAY.

Students of theology have of necessity so much of the life of the cloister, that we are always happy to find them learning something of life in the field. Most of the students who have laboured for this Board have done a good work both for it and for themselves, as well as amongst the people with whom their time and toils were spent. The following is from one of two students who as co-labourers passed a three months' vacation in a field where they found many encouragements mingled with their difficulties:

"It was not without some feelings of regret that we discontinued our labours, for we were pleased with the work, and were providentially labouring among a people whose kindness to ourselves, and well wishes for the success of our undertaking, contributed much to sweeten our labours. We, of course, found many indifferent to their own spiritual welfare, who took no interest in the circulation of Bibles or good books for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom. It was our aim, by conversation, to enlighten such persons as to their duty of serving God, and to persuade them to seek an interest in the Saviour, and also to urge them to a careful perusal of the books we left them. We nowhere met with opposition. Not unfrequently we failed to dispose of books, but many whose circumstances forbade or limited their purchases, bade us 'God speed,' and were glad to see us labouring in so good a cause. Their prayers we doubt not followed us.

"How cheering it is for the colporteur to meet God's people, and receive from them a sympathetic word! How often did we enter a humble dwelling with no expectation of selling a book, and find the inmates humble and devoted followers of Christ, ready to give the last earnings for a book, regretting that they could do so little to encourage us! The influence of such a visit remained with us to cheer us on our way.

"We cannot refrain from recording with the deepest gratitude, our indebtedness to the several Pastors whom we visited, for the hearty welcome and warm co-operation they gave us in our work. They took us into their houses, and treated us with a kindness we never anticipated. In looking back over our labours, we must record as among the most pleasant seasons of our pleasant time, those spent in these family circles. There is a large extent of country between our field and that passed over by Mr. ——, that ought to be visited, much of it is quite destitute."

A FIELD FOR BOOKS.

The subjoined appeal is from a young clerical brother in the capital of one of the newer States. His field is one of vast importance, and the need of distinctive doctrinal works very great.

"Rev. and Dear Sir—Some few months ago it was my honour and privilege to organize a Presbyterian church in this the capital of ——. The place is a most important one, and is growing with great rapidity, having been declared only last August the seat of government by vote of the people. As a field of labour, it is as broad and as fertile as I could wish: but there is one assistance which I greatly need in my labour—an assistance which I so greatly need, that I must venture to apply to you for it, even although I have to stand before you in the attitude of a beggar. I need, exceedingly need, some of the standard books of our Board for circulation. Many even of my own church have been so long in this new country, that they have almost forgotten the distinctive doctrines of our Church. I am grieved and discouraged at the almost universal apathy, for instance, in regard to infant baptism among even Presbyterians. Now, I might preach sermons on this doctrine in order to instruct, but such a course would be followed by such a storm of controversy, that it would be infinitely more expedient for me to place some standard work on the subject in the hands of those who need instruction on this point. And so of all the distinctive doctrines of our Church. I am satisfied that, just at this critical point in the history of the Church here, this is the best way to ground the members in their most holy faith.

EXTRAORDINARY POPULARITY OF THE SABBATH-SCHOOL VISITOR.

No religious paper of any description has probably ever obtained so large a subscription list in the same length of time as has the Presbyterian Sabbath-School Visitor. By the time this reaches the eye of the reader, the number of subscribers bids fair considerably to exceed fifteen thousand, and this when it has been in existence but three months, and is as yet hardly known to the churches. The demand is still unabated. As a friend said to us the other day, "The Visitor is a decided hit." Testimonials as to its popularity, come in upon us from every quarter. The following, from the pastor of one of our most prominent churches, may serve as a specimen.

"The Sabbath-School Visitor goes like wildfire among the children. I have just been obliged to send for an additional number. It is just the thing. It suits all ages, and my teachers seem to be as eager for it as the children. Indeed I am child enough myself to read it through with more relish than almost any other paper that comes into my hands."

WORKS ON SOUND THEOLOGY APPRECIATED.

Among the many tokens of encouragement with which this Board is greeted, there are none which are more grateful to us than those which come from brethren who are separated from us by ecclesiastical connection, or views of Church policy. To our brethren of the Dutch Reformed, and Associate Reformed Churches generally, to many of our Congregational brethren, and to a very large number of brethren in that connection which was once an integral part of our own ecclesiastical organization, we feel deeply indebted;—to pastors for their kindness in receiving and recommending our colporteurs and publications, and to the people for the favour with which they have welcomed the former and purchased the latter. The following extract from a communication from a colporteur, will serve as a specimen of much intelligence of a similar nature which reaches us.

"I rejoice that one member of our church has given to the Board liberally, considering his ability, and hope his example may yet provoke others. I trust a greater sympathy is being awaked in behalf of the operations of the Board, as the Christian community become acquainted with the excellent publications they send out. One instance I will relate. A gentleman connected with the New-school, who, I was told, would have nothing to do with me or my books, when I visited him received me very cordially, and after examining my books, exclaimed, Oh these are from the Old-school Board. Yes, I replied, they are. After a moment's pause he rejoined—Well after all that has been said and done, these are the men to whom we must look and depend upon for sound theology; and then entertained me very hospitably, and bought several of my largest books. I feel sure that as the Presbyterian churches in this section become acquainted with the books and the operations of the Board, a strong sympathy will be awakened."

JUVENILE LITERATURE.

We transfer to our columns the subjoined remarks from the Presbyterian of the West, both because we are willing to let the churches see that our work meets the approbation of so important a journal, and because of our acquiescence in the judicious views the editor has expressed on the general subject of Juvenile Literature.

"We are glad to see the Board of Publication beginning to give more attention to the department of juvenile literature. Their books for Sunday-schools are excellent and attractive. We have long thought that books for children are more important than those designed for persons of riper years. They seem to mould the mind when its faculties are being developed; and the impressions they leave upon the feelings are reproduced in adult life. How many quarrels have been prevented by the little hymn, 'Let dogs delight,' &c. How many young people have been taught to value the Sabbath and its privileges by that divine song, 'This is the day that Christ arose,' &c. These words we are now writing will be read, we presume, by ten thousand persons, in the families of over three thousand subscribers. How many of all that number do not know and love Watts' Divine Songs for Children? Great as that holy man and excellent writer was, we think it may be fairly questioned whether he did not do more good by planning that tiny volume of juvenile hymns, than he achieved by all his theological and philosophical works. The 'songs' are found in every cottage, and are loved and repeated by millions in every quarter of the globe, who know no other line that Dr. Watts ever wrote. It would be well, if parents paid more attention to the books with which their children amuse themselves. Silly, perhaps immoral, tales or novels, cannot be perused without injury. The sentiment of Wordsworth is valuable:

'The child is father of the man;
And I would wish his days to be Bound each to each by natural piety.'

If we wish our little ones to become religious as well as intelligent, let us be careful that their minds shall not be poisoned with trash. We think that the imprimatur of our Board will be a sufficient guarantee for the character of their publications."

COLPORTAGE IN MEMPHIS PRESBYTERY.

The Colporteur of the Presbytery of Memphis lately sold one hundred and thirty dollars' worth of the books of the Board of Publication within the bounds of the single congregation of Hopewell, in a very few days. He had not completed the supply, but was compelled to desist for the want of books. The pastor informs us that they are producing a very happy impression upon his congregation. This is not a large church, and we see no reason why two-thirds of our churches might not do as well as it has done. They at least have equal ability if they had equal willingness.—Presbyterian Herald.

DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE.

A correspondent of the Gateshead Observer, in reference to a paragraph stating the fact that the booksellers of Newcastle had observed that most of the standard mathematical works were purchased by pitmen, gives an anecdote in point. He says: "Some years since, a gentleman on his passage from Newcastle to Shields in a steamboat, went into the engine-room, and found one of the books mentioned, namely, Emerson's Fluxions, lying on the table, rather black and smutty, evidently much read. He asked the young engine-man, who read the book. He answered "that he did, when he had time." Rather surprised at the fact, they entered freely into conversation; and from that time the stranger used all his influence to bring the studious engine-man into notice. That engine-man is now a distinguished mathematician, and the author of many of the very works alluded to. He had, a short time previous to the interview, "risen from a bank-trapper to a breaksman" in a Newcastle coal-pit, as stated in evidence before the Lords' Committee last session; and is now Professor Hann of King's College!

THOMAS CARLYLE.

An English correspondent of the New York Recorder speaks of Thomas Carlyle as follows:

This writer is perhaps the most dangerous of the new school of infidels in England; and he is so, because his works are so widely read and so deeply studied. Yet what his religious creed may be, it is difficult to say, but what it is not, may be readily told. He is not a Christian. Ask him if Christ's mission was divine? "We have all a divine mission," he will answer. But he was the Son of God? "Yes," is his reply; I know it—we are all sons of God, when we do his will." There is a heaven? "Surely." And for all? "I hope so." Is there a future retribution? "Humph!" he answers, and closes the colloquy.

BOOK-MAKING IN LONDON.

A London journal states that during the year 1850 four thousand and four hundred new publications were issued in London alone. Of these about five hundred were works of fiction—at the rate of almost one and a half daily! The rest were upon every imaginable subject which it is possible to write a book upon. When the tax is taken off paper, there will be no clog to the imagination and no cessation to the printing-press.

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

MORIAH, or Sketches of the Sacred Rites of Ancient Israel. By the Rev. Robert Frazer, M. A. 12mo. 309 pages. Price, muslin gilt, 60 cts.

The disparagement practically put upon the Old Testament both in and out of the pulpit, is in our estimation one of the most prevalent sins against the Scriptures, among professing Christians. The fact is doubtless owing chiefly to the want of such familiarity with biblical geography, archæology, and the sacred rites of the Levitical economy generally, as to render Old Testament reading or preaching in all cases either easy, edifying, or intelligible. For this reason we announce with much satisfaction the appearance of this volume which,—although not for students—more than any thing in the same compass with which we are acquainted, is adapted to impart information and excite interest in the Old Testament teachings. It is written in a sprightly, popular style, and so graphically are some of the Jewish festivals portrayed, that the reader may almost feel for some time, after laying down the volume, as if he had been present at one of the great festivals at Jerusalem. The clear, beautiful pages, the two wood-cuts in the first modern style of the art, and the entire mechanical execution of the volume, should not be overlooked whilst speaking of its more important attractions.

THE LIFE OF DR ASHBEL GREEN, V. D. M. Begun to be written by himself in his eighty-second year, and continued to his eighty-fourth. Prepared for the press at the author's request by Joseph H. Jones, D. D. 8vo. 626 pages, with a portrait. Price in full sheep or cloth $1.35.

As Dr. Green's life has already been before the public, but little introduction is now needed. It is one of the most interesting autobiographical works published within the present century. Its details of religious experience, and records of passing events of a most eventful period, render it equally acceptable to the Christian and the American patriot.

When the reader sees this large and beautiful octavo, now offered at the low price of $1.35, and to clergymen of all denominations at $1.08, we think he will agree with us, that he has rarely seen such a book for so little money.

THE THREE LAST THINGS; or Death, Judgment, and Eternity. By the Rev. John Hambleton, M. A. 18mo. 72 pages. Price, muslin gilt, 25 cents; half roan, 19 cents.

These three last things are themes which should excite deep interest in every bosom, for with these things we must all sooner or later have to do. Strive as we may against it, we can but know at last for ourselves, as Jeremy Taylor says "by an experiment," what death, judgment and eternity mean; and the more we try to learn of them in advance, the better it shall be for us when they come. The manner in which these solemn themes are handled in this little volume, is calculated to make a deep and permanent impression.

LIGHT AND SUPPORT FOR THE DARK VALLEY. 18mo. 72 pages. Price 15 cents. Written for the Board.

For that long journey we must take so soon, we need all the provision in advance which we can get; and here is another little lantern radiant with light divine to illumine the darkness of the way. There are in these pages solemn and touching thoughts befitting the high theme, showing our need of help in passing through the shadows of the last night, and the only true source from which that help can come. Whoever will attentively and prayerfully read these considerations, together with "How to Die Happy," which is included in the same volume, we would fain hope would be better prepared for the summons which shall call him to arise and depart hence for ever.

TRACTS.

SOLILOQUY OF AN INJURED CHRISTIAN.

A WORD OF COUNSEL TO PROFESSORS, ON MORAL HONESTY.

UNION WITH CHRIST.

HOW SINNERS ARE ACCEPTED.

These are all four-page tracts, of a practical character, admirably adapted for their several ends.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY.

Presbytery of Albany.

Galway ch, per Rev Wm J McCord	4 65

Presbytery of North River.

Matteawan ch, A Friend	1 00

Presbytery of New York.

Rutger's street ch 210 61; "A Friend" per Rev Dr Boardman 1000	1210 61

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Titusville ch to const their pastor Rev G Vanartsdalen hon mem	30 00

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

North ch 96 21; 2d ch A friend 50; Central ch (in part) F N Buck 50, M Newkirk to const Mrs Newkirk hon mem 30, W W Fleming 15, James Field 10, J V Cowell 10, J S 10, S Lewis 5, Mrs S R Caldwell 5, Miss Jane Garnett's school for sab sch Library for Beechwoods Pa 10, Infant sch to aid in procuring a Pastor's library 10, sundry persons 5 50; Sab Sch for Library for Sab Sch of Penn ch 12 50; Cash collection 48 16	367 37

Presbytery of Susquehanna.

Silver Lake ch per Rev F D Ladd 10; Towanda ch per Rev J Foster 2 80	12 80

Presbytery of Baltimore.

Bridge street ch Georgetown "A friend" per E Myers	5 00

Presbytery of West Hanover.

First ch Lynchburg	23 14

Presbytery of Orange.

New Hope ch 4 52; Raleigh 70 50; Cross Roads 3 75; Hillsboro' 20; Chapel Hill 17; Greensboro' 70 50, all per Rev Jno A Gretter	186 27½

Presbytery of Harmony.

Cheraw ch per J F Mathison	19 90

Presbytery of Nashville.

Gallatin and Shiloh chs per Rev J W Ogden 5; Hermitage ch per do 10	15 00

Presbytery of Findlay.

Findlay ch per Rev S Brown	51 50

Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Pleasant Ridge ch per Rev S Brown	19 95

Presbytery of Sidney.

Buck Creek ch per Rev S Brown	36 40

Presbytery of Zanesville.

Zanesville ch Robt Winters to const self hon mem	50 00

Presbytery of Wisconsin.

Oakland ch per Rev W Cargen	1 00

Indian Presbytery.

Wheelock Mission ch Choctaw Nation per Rev A Wright	10 00
Total	$2044 59½

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

The Rev. John T. Rockwell was installed by the Presbytery of New York, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, New York, on the 13th of February.

On the 15th of January, by the Presbytery of Beaver, Mr. John Brown was ordained to the gospel ministry and installed for one half of his time in the church of Freedom. On the following day he was installed for the other half of his time in the church of Concord.

On the 19th of February, the Rev. Samuel D. Alexander was installed pastor of the village church of Freehold, New Jersey.

On the 1st of January, the Rev. Joseph Rogers was ordained by the Presbytery of Iowa, and installed pastor of the Round Prairie church. His address is Yellow Springs, Desmoines county, Iowa.

On the 19th of February, by the Presbytery of New Brunswick, the Rev. James C. Watson, D. D., was installed pastor of the church of Kingston, New Jersey.

On the 16th of November last, Mr. E. Thompson Baird, President of Washington College, Tennessee, was ordained by the Presbytery of Holston, and installed pastor of the Salem church.

At the same time and by the same Presbytery, Professor J. D. Tadlack was ordained as an evangelist.

On the 26th of January, Mr. Moses W. Staples received from the Baptist church, was ordained by the Presbytery of Brazos, Texas. He has received a call from the church of Marshall, Texas.

On the 18th of February, the Rev. S. S. Potter was installed pastor of the church of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, by the Presbytery of White Water.

The Rev. Darwin Cook has been installed pastor of the church of Rome, by the Presbytery of Susquehanna.

On the 13th of February, the Presbytery of Muncie ordained Mr. James C. Fletcher as an evangelist. He expects to labour in Rio de Janeiro, under the direction of the American and Foreign Christian Union.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. L. Merrill Miller and the 1st church of Bath has been dissolved.

CALLS.

The Rev. William W. Backus of New York has received a call to the churches of Camden and Edwards, near Rock Island city, Illinois.

The Rev. Ebenezer Erskine has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church, Columbia, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander T. McGill of Allegheny city, Pennsylvania, and Professor in the Seminary at that place, has accepted a call from the Seventh Presbyterian church, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Rev. L. Merrill Miller has accepted a call to the church in Ogdensburg, New York.

The Rev. S. C. McCune has accepted a call from the church of Fairville, Iowa.

LICENSURE.

Mr. Halleck Armstrong was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Susquehanna on the 7th of February.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Rev. Edward R. Geary, for thirteen years the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Fredericksburg, Ohio, took passage with his wife and two children in the Empire City on Thursday the 13th of February, for Chagres, on the way to Oregon. Mr. Geary goes as a missionary under the care of the Presbyterian Board of Domestic Missions, and the good wishes and prayers of the Church will follow him and his to their wide and important field.

The post-office address of the Rev. John M. Dinsmore will hereafter be Utica, Licking county, Ohio.

The post-office address of the Rev. Joseph Pratt is Rossville, Clinton county, Iowa. He is stated supply of the churches of Rossville and Dayton, Iowa.

The post-office address of the Rev. Daniel Baker, D. D. is now Huntsville, Texas.

The Rev. J. N. Saunders, resigning the charge as stated supply of the church of Evansville, Indiana, may be addressed Louisville, Kentucky.

The post-office address of the Rev. E. Hines is changed from Brownsville to Lyneville, Granville county, North Carolina.

The post-office address of the Rev. Louis L. Conrad is Murrysville, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania.

The post-office address of the Rev. Joshua Moore is now Reedsville, Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, instead of Lewistown.

DEATHS.

The Rev. William McWhir, D.D., supposed to be the oldest Presbyterian divine in the United States, died in Liberty county, Georgia, on the 31st ult., in the ninety-second year of his age. He was a native of Ireland, and formerly resided at Alexandria, Virginia. He was often the inmate of General Washington's house at Mount Vernon, and was also the instructor of two of the General's nephews.

The Rev. Francis S. Hart departed this life in Concordia parish, Louisiana, on the 9th of November 1850. He was enrolled as a member of the Presbytery of California, but was prevented from reaching the field of labour by ill health.

Varieties.

EMIGRATION TO TEXAS.—The Galveston Civilian says: The immigration pouring into our State continues unabated. There has been nothing like it, in extent of numbers and wealth, in the history of the State.

A GREAT CATHEDRAL is projected by the Roman Catholics in Washington city. It is estimated to cost $1,000,000, and is to be paid for by contributions from all the Romanists in the Union and by donations from Europe. A lot of ground 300 feet square has been secured for it.

POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES.—The following are the aggregates:

	Free.	Slave.
Free States,	13,574,797
Slave States,	6,294,938	3,067,234
District and Territories,	197,985	3500
	20,067,720	3,070,734

Total population, free and bond, 23,138,454.

PROTESTANT BAPTISM IN ROME.—The Rev. M. W. Jacobus, of Brooklyn, New York, recently visiting Rome, baptized, while there, an infant child of Rev. Mr. Hastings, the chaplain. He says of the event, "I count it a chief pleasure of my journey to perform this sacred rite in Papal Rome, according to the simplicity there is in Christ Jesus."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES IN LONDON.—The Puritan Recorder states that during the last year, eight new Congregational chapels were erected in London, affording accomodations for 6500 sittings. The entire number of new Congregational chapels in London, built, building, or projected, during the last three years, amounts at least to twenty, the united cost of which cannot be estimated at a much smaller amount than $500,000.

SUSPICIOUS COMPLIMENT.—It is stated that Dr. Bushnell's Book, "God in Christ," has been re-published in London, by a skeptical book-establishment, together with Theodore Parker's writings.

PUBLICATIONS ON POPERY IN ENGLAND.—According to a late number of the London Publisher's Circular, there appears to have been published within one month, no less than ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY books, pamphlets, and sermons on the Papal Question.

EMIGRANTS.—The number of foreign emigrants arrived at New York, so far, this year, is 22,886, an excess of 6526 over last year.

THE NEW POSTAGE LAW goes into effect the first of July. The rate on letters not exceeding half an ounce is three cents prepaid, or five cents if not prepaid, for all distances under three thousand miles. Over three thousand miles, double those rates.

NEWSPAPERS PER QUARTER.

	Monthly.	Semi-Monthly.	Weekly.	Semi-Weekly.	Tri-Weekly.	Oftener than Tri-Weekly.
In county where published,	—	—	Free	—	—	—
Not exceeding 50 miles,	1¼	2½	5	10	15	25
From 50 to 300,	2½	5	10	20	30	50
" 300 to 1000,	3¾	7½	15	30	45	75
" 1000 to 2000,	5	10	20	40	60	100
" 2000 to 4000,	6¼	12½	25	50	75	125
Exceeding 4000,	7½	15	30	60	90	150

Other newspapers, and each circular not sealed, handbill, engraving, periodical, magazine, not exceeding one ounce, the following rates:

500 miles,	1 cent.	2500 to 3500,	4 cents.
500 to 1500,	2 "	Exceeding 3500,	5 "
1500 to 2500,	3 "

Each additional ounce, double those rates.

Subscribers to all periodicals shall be required to pay one quarter's postage in advance, and in all such cases the act says the postage shall be one-half the foregoing rates.

CHURCHES DESTROYED BY FIRE.—The Fifth Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, under the pastoral care of the Rev. N. West, has been destroyed by fire. A similar calamity has also befallen St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Broadway, New York.

THE COINAGE at the Philadelphia mint for February, was $5,113,358. The amount of gold bullion deposited during the same period was $3,000,000, the principal portion of which was from California.

PRECIOUS STONES IN THE MISSISSIPPI.—Agates, cornelians, and madrepores have been found profusely scattered among the coarser pebbles in the southern portion of Mississippi. The same formation has been observed as far west as Guadaloupe river, in Texas.

CALIFORNIA TRAVEL.—During the months of January and February there arrived at the port of New York, from California, 2702 persons. During the same period last year, there were but 838 arrivals.

INCREASE OF IMMIGRANTS.—The following statistics are derived from the most reliable sources of information, and are designed to show the average number of immigrants per annum during each decennial period since 1790, when the first census of the United States was taken:

From 1790 to 1800, average number, 5000 per annum.
" 1800 " 1810, " " 7000 "
" 1810 " 1820, " " 14,000 "
" 1820 " 1830, " " 20,000 "
" 1830 " 1840, " " 47,000 "
" 1840 " 1850, " " 250,000 "

WANTED,

The post-office address of

J. T. Bowden, Alex. Von Vleck,
Dr. F. Major, Wm. Giffin.
Rev. J. M. Hair,

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid. Postmasters are authorized to remit moneys, and we hope our friends will avail themselves of this channel to send on their subscriptions.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—State of the Treasury, p. 50. Notice to Churches and Presbyteries, p. 50. Notice to Missionaries of the Board, p. 50. Summary for December and January, p. 50. Progress of the Board, p. 50. Boundaries of Synods and Presbyteries, p. 51. Missionaries to Oregon—Gone, p. 51. The Religious Instruction of the Coloured People, p. 51. Church Extension, p. 51. Speedy Sympathy, and a Little more still Needed, p. 51. Receipts, p. 52.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—I. Ministerial Education: The Throne and the Lambs, p. 53. Our Work in the West, p. 53. The Synod of New Jersey, p. 53. An Important Document, p. 53. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 53. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies, and Colleges, p. 53. Board of Education and the Voluntary Societies, p. 53. Religious Education of Children, p. 54. Revival in Hanover College, Indiana, p. 54. Elder's Ridge Presbyterial Academy, p. 54. La Fayette College, Easton, p. 54. Receipts, p. 55.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—Recent Intelligence, p. 56. Africa: Mission near the Equator. Journal of the Rev. G. W. Simpson, p. 56. India: Lodiana Mission. Extracts from Letters of the Rev. A. Rudolph, and Rev. J. S. Woodside, p. 57. Journal of the Rev. J. H. Morrison, p. 58. Mission in Siam—Extracts from a Letter of the Rev. S. Mattoon, p. 59. Receipts, p. 60. Notices, p. 61.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.—Pledges of Presbyteries Unredeemed, p. 62. The Colportage Cause, p. 62. The Colporteur Cheered on his way, p. 62. A Field for Books, p. 62. Extraordinary Popularity of the Presbyterian Sabbath-School Visitor, p. 62. Works on Sound Theology Appreciated, p. 62. Juvenile Literature, p. 62. Colportage in Memphis Presbytery, p. 63. Diffusion of Knowledge, p. 63. Thomas Carlyle, p. 63. Bookmaking in London, p. 63. Notices of New Books, p. 63. Receipts, p. 63.

MISCELLANEOUS.—All things for Christ's Kingdom, p. 49. Nearer to Thee, p. 49. The Church in the House, p. 49. Peasant on the Welsh Mountains, p. 49. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 64. Varieties, p. 64.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 5. | PHILADELPHIA, MAY, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

AN EXAMPLE OF CHURCH-EXTENSION.

The destitutions in our constantly increasing new States, and the long unoccupied portions of the older ones, seem to some extent to have diverted the attention of Christians in the cities and larger towns from the great wants which lie at their own doors. One of the most efficient methods of extending our Zion throughout the country, is to build up an adequate supply of churches in the towns and cities. From these central sources fertilizing streams can then be sent out to water the waste places of the land. We cannot refrain from holding up an example to stimulate and encourage to this department of benevolent enterprise.

One of the most successful instances of church-extension which has been witnessed within the bounds of our denomination for several years is that of the Third Presbyterian Church of Trenton, New Jersey. It was organized during the summer of 1849, and the infant colony consisted of only seventeen members. Their separation from the "First Church" took place under circumstances of the utmost cordiality and kindness; and the popular pastor of the parent church (Rev. Dr. Hall) extended to the new enterprise his warmest sympathy.

Within three weeks after their first meeting, the new church gave a unanimous call to the Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler of Burlington, to become their pastor. The call was immediately accepted, although in doing so he turned away from the pulpit of an old and well-established church which was open to him.

In November 1849, the new church edifice was commenced, and completed in one year. The building is one of great architectural beauty, and is unsurpassed by any other specimen of the Norman style in New Jersey. It is of brown freestone, with a spire one hundred and forty feet in height, and is completed with commodious lecture and Sabbath-school rooms under the same roof.

Within a fortnight after the dedication of the edifice, every pew in it was sold or rented, with the exception of a few free seats reserved for strangers. The cost of the building was $17,000, and the debt remaining on the house alone (excepting the lot) is only $400, and arrangements have been made for liquidating this in the month of July. The membership already amounts to one hundred and forty, of whom sixteen were received at the last communion. Since the inception of the enterprise not the slightest feud or difficulty has arisen; the popular and energetic pastor has been preaching to full houses, his hands have been upheld by a united and affectionate people, who seem to have gained new strength and encouragement from what has been achieved; the old mother church is as well filled as ever, by a people as much as ever devoted to their excellent pastor, and already there are thoughts of still another enterprise of the same sort.

Sure are we that none can fail to approve and admire the enlarged spirit of the brethren who have done this good work. Why should not others do likewise?

ONE OF GOD'S AGED MINISTERS IN POVERTY AND WANT.

But little has as yet been done towards carrying out the action of the General Assembly with reference to a fund for the relief of disabled and superannuated ministers. As facts are often the most effective arguments for exciting to Christian duty, we are willing to risk the censure of sticklers for the dignity of religious periodicals, by letting a father in Israel, who has gone through a long life of hard missionary service, tell his own story as to the temporal circumstances of his afflicted companion and himself. The letter from which the subjoined extract is made, was written without the remotest idea of its publication, to a clerical brother who had inquired into the circumstances of this venerable pioneer missionary. Can it be possible that a Church, whose members all over the land are generally in wealth and comfort, will allow ministers whose lives have been worn out in her service, to lack the common necessaries for subsistence in their declining years? The cheerful tone of the venerable writer is almost as remarkable as the details of his condition.

"I assure you that I never thought of soliciting aid; I have asked it of God; but never expected it of the Church; and of God, as undeserved mercy. I have an old log house, leaky, one frame room a little better, ten or twelve acres of land, with two hundred dollars mortgage on it, to lie till I am dead, with fourteen dollars interest yearly; then Mrs. ——, who does out-door work, &c., for me, and takes good care of me for fear I will get cold and never be warm again, will be liable to be turned out of house and home. We have one cow, and one heifer one year old—cash two cents only. I have married eight couples in six months, and received eight or nine dollars fees. Mrs. —— told me to-day that she could get a new-year's breakfast and no more till I got the purse recruited. We have no meat or sauce; but a few parsnips and beets in the ground and hole. We have flour for three loaves. My land is not fenced, or cleared for pasture for one cow and calf. I have ten or twelve bushels of apples, so we can have apple-pie if we can get flour and shortening. The young people would make me a donation visit if we had room for them. We are tolerably comfortable for clothing—none to spare this cold weather. Mrs. —— is in a feeble state of health, has been a great sufferer from a rattle-snake bite—fourteen months confined to her great chair, not able to walk a step; yet she did much work in her chair and bed, as we were not able to hire help. Her afflicted state and my age and infirmities are the reason of our embarrassments. We are much affected by the contents of your kind and friendly letter, and should be very much gratified if you would express your sympathetic feelings in answer to this. I would try to attend Presbytery if it was not so cold—I have no conveyance. We live by faith and hope—too little patience. If I live to 27th April next, I shall be seventy-eight years old. We suffer some inconveniences often for trifles; but we have never starved, and never shall, I trust."

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"WHERE ARE THE NINE?"

I observed an amiable wife come to the Lord's table. It was the first time she had ever been there, but her equally amiable husband sat under the gallery alone, with a look of solitude and anxiety. He had always come in and sat with her in the house of God at other times, but in this instance he left her to go alone in the way of duty.

She had lingered long for him, and tried each fond endearment to win him to the church, and to Christ. She succeeded in the former—he accompanied her to the house of prayer, but not to Christ. He loved her as his nobler life; but his love to her could not overcome his aversion to repentance, faith, and duty. With her he had enjoyed great and equal privileges; with her he had stood amid the same afflicting providences, and listened to the same expostulations from an affectionate and faithful pastor: yet he lingered behind, and left her, his weak and timid partner, to go alone to Christ. Was it discourtesy or coolness to her? No! but it was such, and more than this to Jesus.

I saw parents at that table also, whose children were left behind—children, whose parents and friends, whose companions were left behind. I saw many of those who were very closely united by ties of blood and affection; persons who had been always intimate elsewhere, separate on this occasion. It was a sad sight to look upon; and as I mused, I imagined I saw re-enacted the ingratitude of the nine lepers. I could hear the Saviour renew the inquiry—"Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" Did I not give to that husband all the privileges I gave to his wife? The wife is here to give me glory, but where is her husband? Did I not surround all the other parties with the same blessings, but while the parents are here, where are the children? While the children are here, where are the parents? While the friend is here, where is his companion? The pastor looked sad as he cast his eye upon the delinquents. Ministering spirits seemed to me to bend over them in tender solicitude, and Jesus also to cast upon them a kind, upbraiding glance, but still they relented not.

Let us now pass to another scene. Ages have rolled away—the heavens have waxed old and disappeared, and God's abode with its judgment throne and mighty arches and bowing principalities becomes visible. The long-neglected Jesus himself descends. The dead in Christ arise, and here, among the happy immortals, is the pious wife, but where is her husband? Here is the parent, but where is the child? The child is here, but where is the parent? The friend is here, but where is his companion? Those that were not found in the walks of piety on earth, are not found among the blessed on this joyous morning that dawns at last on the long night of death. "Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?"

A PASTOR.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

NOTICE.

An impression has been made that the Board of Missions is prepared to give "a Pastor's Library" to all missionaries connected with it. This is a mistake. We have no books to give; we wish we had. Some time since the Board of Publication presented to the Board a number of volumes for the use of Missionaries who might need them. They are now all gone. The last went to Oregon. By distributing these volumes, we suppose the impression was made. The Board of Publication hereafter—and very properly—will retain all its charities in this way, in its own hands. And that noble Board is liberal to the utmost extent of its means.

DOCTRINAL PREACHING.

We notice with unfeigned pleasure and gratitude the attention which is paid by many of the Missionaries of our Church to the great and all-important duty in their ministry of preaching the pure and fundamental doctrines of the Cross, and so building up the people of their charge, both old and young, in the truth as it is in Jesus. This is according to the example of the Redeemer himself, who is over all God blessed for ever: it is according to the command of God's word, and according to the practice of His prophets, apostles and ministers in all ages of the world. It is that sort of instructive and impressive preaching which is the bread and wine of the children of God: their staff of life, and their refreshment and comfort on their way to glory. By doctrinal preaching is not intended a dry, didactic, metaphysical presentation of the great truths of Revelation: but a connection of the things to be believed, with the things to be done: a setting forth of the truth—what it is—how it is so;—and being so, what feelings, what actions does it call for in us: in a word, doctrine with its application and practice. This sort of preaching not only builds up the Church and establishes it, but it builds up and establishes the Ministry. It requires ministers to be prayerful, conscientious, laborious and godly students. Their profiting will appear in all things: they will approve themselves workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. They will be men of armour and men of might. It is not sufficient that we testify to the truth and for the truth in times when error has crept in and threatens the Church with ruin. We are bound to live in the discharge of this solemn duty.

Times are now passing over us, that call for reflection. In some parts of the Church, the people are "having itching ears," and "will not endure sound doctrine;" and our ministers, instead of obeying the inspired injunction—"Preach the word: be instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine"—the only proper and divinely appointed method of meeting and staying the fearful declension—are actually yielding their ground, and are framing their pulpit exercises and arrangements so as to catch the popular feeling, and fill their churches with admiring congregations. We have a series of special efforts designed to counteract the impressions made by opposing denominations; we have scientific discourses, historical lectures, occasional efforts on important topics of the day, either literary, political, moral, or even commercial, of which due notice is given of subject, preacher, time and place, that the public may know what entertainment to expect; then we have imaginative and fanciful essays, and startling productions; smooth sayings prophesied to the people; and sometimes "honest John Bunyan" set upon the desk and lectured out of in God's own time, and in the place of God's own word. Verily, if that Preacher of Bedford could rise from the dead, and see "Pilgrim" in the place of his Master, in the honest indignation of his soul he would cast Pilgrim into the flames! The idea is, "we must keep up with the progress of things, or we lose the people, especially the young people." It is a progress in the wrong direction. The whole proceeding is wrong, radically wrong! The brethren, and especially the young brethren, who have resisted the many influences brought to bear upon them, and have steadily adhered to their appropriate work of "preaching the word," have done nobly; and some of them have been blessed of God: yea, let them stand fast, and they will be blessed of God.

We subjoin a few extracts of letters on this subject, from the West.

"The growing importance of our slandered Church led to another mode of supplanting us. A sound man must be obtained to draw the steady and consistent Christians into their church. He over-did the matter. He out-Calvined Calvin, and well nigh exploded the whole concern. Another has succeeded him; he draws the 'itching ears,' as any new man would: he is able also to please those who go to church to be amused. My own audiences are but slightly affected."

This brother holds on his way, laying the foundations of a Church sound in doctrine and discipline. His growth, though apparently slow, is sure.

"Some years ago there was a public discussion of some of the distinctive doctrines of our Church, since which time these higher topics of theology had been carefully avoided, I am told, and the discipline of the Church had become very lax. These two evils I have been endeavouring to correct. I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God, though I have been cautioned again and again of the danger of offending some who do not belong to the Church, and yet assist in supporting the gospel. I have warned them faithfully of the danger of departing from the old land-marks; and of the folly of pretending to believe doctrines which they are unwilling to hear preached; and notwithstanding the many hints I have had, that I would be likely by such a course to destroy my influence, I have uniformly replied, that 'If I yet pleased men I should not be the servant of Christ.' Moreover, we have had several cases of discipline. Upon the whole, we hope we are gradually getting into a better position to receive the divine blessing.—W. M. S."

From the South-West.—"The cause of Presbyterianism, and of sound doctrine and order, has been steadily advancing in favour with the people. We have cultivated love to all around us, and yet have not kept back nor softened down the great Calvinistic doctrines of sovereign and unmerited grace. In a word, it has been our constant practice to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified, in strict accordance with our standards. I sadly fear there is great lack of doctrinal preaching in missionary fields; lack of moral courage to teach God's holy truth, and consequently, lack of the divine blessing.—J. H. D."

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Church Dedicated with encouraging Prospects.

Wisconsin, March 1851.

"We have reason to thank God that our church building is completed. It was dedicated to the service of God the 9th of February. In the afternoon we had our communion season; and it was indeed a communion of Christians; for we had around the Lord's table brethren and sisters belonging to the Presbyterian, Congregational, Wesleyan Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal and Lutheran churches. It was an impressive hour, and there were many tears shed, mostly by those who communed, but some by those who stayed away.

"Our church will seat about 225 persons, and is divided into 42 pews. On the day the seats were to be rented, many more came forward than we expected, and all were disposed of but six, part of which have since been taken. The building has cost about $900. The Church Extension Committee gave $200, and without this aid we would have been compelled either to defer building, or to build a house much too small. We do not expect our present house to last us more than two or three years, when we hope to be able to build one much larger. We received also $100 aid from a few Christian friends in Alexandria City, Va., without which we must have run in debt. We feel very thankful to these friends, and to those who enabled the Church Extension Committee to aid us. Could these donors but come and spend a Sabbath with us, I am sure they would feel themselves amply repaid for their donations. If we had no church building, we could not exert one quarter the influence we now do; and as this place is just springing into existence, we have a great work before us.—W. W. McN."

FRUITS.

We continue in our present number, extracts from the Reports of Missionaries, for the encouragement of the churches, and in order that they may be quickened in efforts and prayers for the prosperity of the work in which we are engaged.

The Elder's Son, or the Promise Sure.—Indiana.

"Four persons were admitted to the communion of the Lord's Supper, for the first time. Three of them are sons of deceased elders of the church. The conversion of one of these persons affords a striking testimony in favour of early religious instruction. His father and mother were devotedly pious, and he received a thorough religious training. He grew up, however, a careless young man. When he came of age, like the Prodigal Son, he requested his father to give him his portion of the estate. He did so, and, soon after, the son took his departure for Texas, when he served as a volunteer in the war with Mexico. After the war, he became connected with the stage. In a short time he squandered his property and seriously impaired his health by dissipation. He returned home a most desolate man. But he was the child of many prayers, and he never forgot the example, the instructions, and the prayers of his parents. He now delights in the society of God's people, and attributes his conversion (instrumentally) in no small degree to the influence of his early training.—H. L. McG."

Revival Progress of Home Missions.—Indiana.

"Twenty-five persons united with the church. Twenty-one of that number were received on a profession of their faith, and four on certificate from other churches. There are others whose minds were impressed, and concerning whom we hope that they will soon be numbered with the people of God. Several of those who united with the church are heads of families, and men of high standing and influence in the community.

"I have been in this field about eighteen months; and when we contrast our condition and prospects now, with what they were one year ago, we have reason to 'thank God and take courage, and to say the Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad.' Then we had but about half a dozen members in the town, and they almost ready to despond. Our congregations were small and irregular. Then we worshipped in an uncomfortable and inconvenient school-house. Then we had no Sabbath-school. No Bible class, and no prayer meeting. Now we have more than twenty members in the town, and there is not only an increase in members, but also in energy and zeal. Our congregations are now respectable and increasing. We have a subscription of one thousand dollars for building a house of worship. The building is nearly enclosed, and we expect to have it finished early in the spring. And in the meantime our Methodist brethren have kindly given us the use of their house until our own is ready for use. We have now a flourishing Sabbath-school. And also a Bible class and prayer meeting—both well attended.—D. D. McK."

Refreshing Seasons.—Indiana.

"This quarter has been one of more evidence of the presence of the Lord with us than I have seen for some months previously. On yesterday at our quarterly communion, eight were added, five on examination, the rest by certificate. We expected four others. They will possibly come forward at the next communion. I administered the Lord's Supper at our out-post nine miles south of the village, in the neighbourhood of which, we have three or four members. The Spirit of the Lord was evidently with us. Some eight expressed anxious concern, and six cherish a hope in Christ. On next Sabbath, I administer the Supper there again, and expect four or five of these to unite with us. The way is, I think, opening for the organization of a church.—J. C. B."

Work well done.—Illinois.

"Cheering evidence of progress. Such has been the increase in numbers and efficiency, that if another preacher can be obtained, there is reason to believe that the people will come nearer supporting the two, than they did last year to support one. There seems to be an increasing spirit of liberality among the people.

I know you will rejoice with me, and bless God for such tokens of his favour. During the past twenty-six years of my ministerial labours, it has been my privilege to organize fourteen churches. The present seems to be the most favourable time for promoting the interests of our church here that I have seen for ten years. The country is more rapidly filling up and improving: and the doctrines and government of our church are becoming better understood. If the Lord will send us another minister who is suited to this field, and willing to 'endure hardness,' and will continue his smiles, and pour out his Holy Spirit, 'the wilderness will rejoice,' and 'the desert will blossom as the rose.'—B. F. S."

Remarkable Success.—Importance of Home Missions. Tennessee.

"The congregations for which I labour have presented a regular call for my services, have pledged me a salary of $600, and have also provided a parsonage at Hickory Withe, to which I will remove very shortly. I have retained their call until the next meeting of the Memphis Presbytery, which will take place at Hickory Withe, on Thursday before the fourth Sabbath of April. As they do not ask any further assistance from the Board, this is my last quarterly report; and, in taking leave of the Board of Missions, on behalf of the dear people for whom I labour, I must thank them, as the organ of our beloved Zion, for that assistance which has been heretofore extended to them. And it is gratifying to be able to add that this assistance has not been abused by this people. Their case furnishes one of the clearest illustrations of the unspeakable importance and wonderful efficiency of our Domestic Missionary system. Two years ago, these people constituted only one congregation of eighty-four members; and, though they were unanimous in requesting me to labour among them, it was with with great difficulty that they raised a subscription of $400. Well, the Board appropriated to them $100 for the first year, and $75 for the second; and, during the two years, they have paid back into the treasury of the Board, $60; so that the assistance actually received amounts only to $115.

"Now for the results. During these two years, twelve persons have been added to their number by certificate, and forty-seven by examination; they are now divided into two congregations; each of these congregations has pledged me $300 for half my time; one of them, with the help of two elders in the other, has prepared a parsonage; and they have jointly called me to be their pastor. Take into view also their own growth in grace, and the incidental benefits resulting to sister churches, and to society in general, from the regular dispensation of gospel ordinances in this region; and certainly it may be safely asserted, that this little sum of $115 has been well expended. When will our whole Church awake to the importance of our Domestic Missionary work? In the present state of our country, why should it be held second even to the work of Foreign Missions? There are hundreds of places where a minister could be sustained with the aid of a small sum from the missionary fund, and where his labours would be blessed to the establishment of self-sustaining churches. Ought not the Domestic Board to have more room in the "Record?" and ought not the actual results of the labours of their missionaries to be reported in its columns?—R. McC."

Large accessions.—Tennessee.

"I have received into the several churches fifty-seven on examination, and eleven on certificate. Baptized sixteen adults and seven infants. About eighty have made a profession of faith in Christ, so far as I have learned; and a number of them have and will unite with our branch of the church, as I believe, during the present winter and the ensuing spring.—J. W. O."

Small beginnings Blest.—North Carolina.

"When I came here last January, there were five Presbyterians in the whole county. They all belonged to churches out of the county. In May, a church was organized at Ashboro with thirteen members, including only two of the five Presbyterians mentioned above. Our roll now numbers twenty. It is matter for gratitude that we are enabled to make such a beginning. It is well worth a year's preaching and praying, to be the means of bringing twenty sinners into the Church of Christ. I must not and will not despair, since the Lord has granted me some success. Our prospects are encouraging. We expect eight or ten new members at our spring communion. There is a wide field of usefulness here, and an open door. The county has been neglected by all denominations hitherto, and to their shame be it spoken, by Presbyterians more than any other. I have three or four missionary stations in the county, and the people generally attend well on the services of the gospel.—G. McN."

A minister revived and at work.—North Carolina.

"I have never known in my own experience such freeness of mind and fulness of soul in preaching the glorious truths of the blessed gospel—Christ and him crucified, our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption; his fulness of grace; the doctrine of the Holy Spirit; the only convincer of sin and of righteousness; the free, unlimited, invitations of the gospel, with its solemn warnings; these have been the themes of the pulpit, before congregations of Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists, with our own people. I believe the truth has been its own powerful witness to the hearts and consciences of those who heard; and we are greatly encouraged to persevere, in the hope that God will let none of our words fall to the ground. One young lady expects to join the church at our coming communion. Others are seeking the Saviour: perhaps this expression is too strong—The Saviour is seeking them. Their hearts are troubled, they have no rest, the Spirit is striving with them, and we have good hope for them, that God will put his Spirit within them, and that they 'may walk in his statutes, and keep his judgments and do them.'—J. H. McN."

We close for the present, with the following letter from Georgia. Brethren in the ministry, read this letter to your people. Christian parents, continue your prayers and efforts for your dear children. "I will be a God unto thee, and unto thy seed after thee." That promise is sure. Soon God may say, to your unspeakable joy—"Come thou and all thy house into the ark."

"At our last communion season at New Hope, the Church received an addition of eleven members; all by profession except one. All the members received at that time were the children of the Church, and some of them were but mere children in years. All of them, with one exception, were members of the two Bible-classes taught by my wife and myself. Two of them were the last of their families, consisting of eight each, the fathers and mothers making ten of each family. From another family we received the sixth and seventh children, the father and mother likewise being members. From another family we received the sixth and seventh, the father and mother making nine of the family in the church. I mention these facts to show how God blesses parental instruction and hears parental prayer; and as a further illustration, I will say that there is a mother who has eight of her own sons and daughters with her in this same church, and her oldest son is the one who at present occupies the pulpit. We trust the Spirit has not left us yet. Some are still inquiring for the new and living way.—G. H. C."

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF THE COLOURED POPULATION.

We trust that the custom which prevails in many portions of our Southern Zion among our settled ministry, of devoting one-half of the Sabbath-day to the religious instruction of this class of our population, will become universally prevalent, at least in all situations where such an arrangement would be both practicable and profitable. Some of the missionaries of the Board have, with the cordial approbation of the churches to which they minister, adopted the plan. We subjoin some pleasing extracts.

Virginia.

"I have preached to them at all the points in my field of labour, though I have but two stated appointments for them. I devote two Sabbath afternoons every month to this class of our population. At one of my regular preaching points, I feel more encouraged in my labours among the coloured people than the opposite class. In this neighbourhood, the masters of the servants have taken the subject in hand, and use every laudable effort to get them to attend church. The attendance is good, and the attention which they give to preaching is decidedly encouraging. They deport themselves with all proper reverence and respect while in the house of God, and appear to rejoice in the privilege which is afforded for religious instruction. The singing during service is conducted entirely by them, and that too with a great degree of propriety. I consider this now an established congregation. The other congregation is not so well organized; it is but recently since they have enjoyed stated, regular preaching. The minister is amply compensated for his labours among this people by the gratitude which they express and manifest to him. As yet I have not engaged in their catechetical instruction, though some of my people have done so.—J. E. H."

Virginia.

"Three from their number have joined the church since my last report, and another is expected to join on next Sabbath. There have been amongst them of late some eight or ten conversions within the bounds of the congregation. I still preach to them twice a month on Sabbath evenings. They manifest evident symptoms of concern; and I fain hope there approaches a time of general awakening among them. I do love to preach to them, and intend, by the grace of God, to redouble the energy and frequency of my efforts amongst them as soon as the spring shall open.—E. L. C."

Tennessee.

"Some weeks ago I obtained the consent of Macon congregation to a change of plan, which is to go into effect next Sabbath. Hereafter, at this place, I will preach in Macon two discourses, with an interval of one hour between, commencing service at 10 o'clock, A. M., and then go out and preach to the coloured people, and catechise them, in the centre of the neighbourhood in which the main body of them reside. I also intend to urge the elders, who all reside in that neighbourhood, to meet with them and catechise them on the alternate Sabbaths when I am absent.—R. McC."

North Carolina.

"I may say, by way of adding a spark of cheering information, that although our white congregations have apparently made no advance in the Christian life in numbers or in grace, yet my congregation of blacks have been visited by convicting grace, if not in many instances by converting grace. During this last fall, upon several successive Sabbaths, many were in tears. How many have been brought from death to life, I know not as yet.—E. G. W."

North Carolina.

"On Thursday evening of every week I have preached to the coloured people separately; their attendance has been very good, and the attention they give is fully as good as that of the whites. As a class, they appear to take a deep interest in my labours, and seem greatly pleased at the privilege of enjoying the ministrations of the gospel. The result thus far is, as far as I have been able to judge, that some half dozen have entertained a hope of their acceptance with God. The meetings have been very orderly, still and solemn; and I have used constant care to prevent the occurrence of animal excitement, and that has been done without difficulty.—M. T. A."

Georgia.

"I still keep up the practice of preaching to the Negroes on Sabbath, immediately after preaching to the white congregation, and they seem to be highly pleased, and give me good attention. They look upon me as their pastor, and recently they are falling into the practice of employing me to preach at the funerals of their deceased relatives, and also to solemnize their nuptials. Two weeks ago I married a couple; and it was truly gratifying to witness the order, neatness and propriety of their arrangements and their conduct. Their owners had provided them with materials for an excellent 'marriage feast.'—G. H. C."

Georgia.

"Here I devote the afternoon of the Sabbath to the blacks; and this is a part of my field where the prospect is very encouraging. For months these services have been attended with striking marks of interest, and for the last two or three services some fifteen or twenty have manifested a desire to find the Saviour. There are somewhere near twenty blacks members of the Presbyterian Church here, and on the Sabbath evenings when I am absent at my other appointments, they have a prayer-meeting among themselves. O that the Lord would bless me in all my labours, and especially in this part of my field! I need scarcely add, 'pray for me,' for I know that although you have been called to another important field, yet your heart is, in a measure, still with us; and you will not, nay, cannot forget to pray for those of us who are endeavouring to build upon the foundation which you have laid for us.—A. S."

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of March, 1851.

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Bath 1st ch 33; Bath Pres Sab Sch Miss Soc 6	$39 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—White Lake church	13 00
Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 8 90; North Salem ch 7; Bedford ch 18 50	34 40
Pby of Long Island.—West Hampton church	8 00
Pby of New York.—First ch N Y 1455 58; Wallabout ch 20 45; University Place ch 469 87; Duane st ch addl to ann coll from C Beers 25; Jamaica ch (of which $50 to const. Mrs Nancy Oakey an hon mem) 83 50; Astoria ch, Rev F G Clark pastor 25	2079 40

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Connecticut Farms ch	30 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—Princeton 1st ch 41 97, and addl 2 making 43 97; Dutch Neck ch 8; Nottingham ch 12; Kingston ch Sab Sch at Mapleton 6	69 97
Pby of West Jersey.—Pittsgrove ch in part 59 25; Deerfield ch 55 19, and Centre Sab Sch of Deerfield church 2 31	116 75

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—10th Pres ch, a friend for 1850 through the pastor 100; Central ch from Jas Field, Esq 100; 9th Pres ch Miss Soc 48 15; Arch st ch in part 79 47; 2d Pres ch, on cards as follows:—W R Thompson 10, Wm Nassau 5, W Nassau Jr 2, Mrs S Porter 2, Mrs Andw. Brown 5, Mrs C Field 4, Dan'l Haddock Jr 5, A C Barclay 5, Mary Anderson 5, making 43 addl from 2d ch; 1st African ch 5	375 62
Pby of Philadelphia 2d.—Frankford church	30 00
Pby of Donegal.—Wrightsville ch additional	5 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Cumberland church	19 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Pine Grove church	59 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Danville ch to const the pastor Rev J W Yeomans D D an hon mem	50 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St Clairsville.—Pipe Creek church	10 50

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Mansfield ch 6; Frederick ch addl 3 30	9 30

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Lake.—La Porte ch bal to const A Blackburn an hon mem	10 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Rock River.—Galena South church	18 02
Pby of Wisconsin.—Lynn and Hebron chs 4; Burnette and Horicon chs 5	9 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Orange.—Clarksville church per Rev I H Gretter, Treasurer of Presbytery	50 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Georgia.—Savannah 1st ch 40 and addl 10 making	50 00

LEGACIES.

Legacy of Mrs J. Kirkpatrick, late of New Brunswick, N J, per Littleton Kirkpatrick Esq 100; Legacy of Mrs Isabella Love, late a member of Carlisle Pres ch per Robert Irwin Esq, Treasurer of said ch 12	112 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev P E Bishop and Mrs Bishop of Guthriesville S C for Texas 20; Mr E F Backus, Philadelphia 100; Capt J K Stribbling, Annapolis, Md 25; Mrs E H., Lebanon Pa 5; A Friend 2 50; "C L F" of Castleton Vt 3; Mr Jas Bayard, Philadelphia 20; Two Ladies of Wilkesboro N C 2 87; Rev B L Beall, Taylorsville N C 2 13; "W and S" 84 29; "———" N Y for pastor's Library 20, and for pastor's study 20	304 79
Total	$3502 75

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CLOTHING RECEIVED IN MARCH.

A Box of clothing from the Sewing Society of the Franklin st Pres ch Baltimore valued at	200 00
16 yds of Lustre from Barcroft, Beaver & Co of Philadelphia, valued at 10 for a missionary's wife in Oregon	10 00
A coat and pants from Mrs L Munroe N Y valued at	15 00
	$225 92

CHURCH EXTENSION FUND.

Receipts into the Treasury during the month of March, 1851.

University Place church, New York	400 00
Williamstown ch per Rev C E Ford	2 00
James N Dickson Esq Phila. part for special object	200 00
A Friend in Louisiana per Thos Henderson	1 00
First ch New York	806 75
	1409 75

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of March, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburgh 1st ch addl 30; Pittsburgh 5th ch 18; Mt Pisgah ch 11 19; Monongahela City ch addl 7; Canonsburg ch in part to const Mrs Martha Bracken h m (Sab sch 2) 44 06; Millers Run ch addl 25; Centre ch 57 70; Chartiers ch addl 1	193 95
Pby of Redstone.—Rehoboth ch addl 32 64; Spring Hill ch 5; McKeesport ch 29	66 64
Pby of Beaver.—Westfield church	21 00
Pby of Blairsville.—Kittaning church	32 32
Pby of Allegheny.—Slate Lick ch 25 11; Tarentum ch in part 25	50 11

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—East Buffalo ch 10; West Alexandria ch 29 50; Mt Prospect ch 19 82	59 32
Pby of New Lisbon.—Niles ch 8; Glasgow ch 5 25	13 25
Pby of Steubenville.—Ridge ch 5 08; Island Creek church 14 50	19 58

LEGACIES.

Joseph Gray decd. late of Canonsburg, bal of bequest 8; Mrs Mary P Smith decd. late of Cross Creek Village ch. legacy to const Wm Cowan Esq an h m per Rev Jno Stockton 50	58 00
Total	$514 17

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

CLOTHING.

Ladies of Washington ch a box valued at	47 50
Do Lower Bull Creek ch a box not valued.
Do Wellsville ch a box valued at	20 00
Do Salem ch a box valued at	32 00
Total	$99 50

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of March, 1851.

Salem church Ohio per J D Thorpe	6 00
Troy do do do do	4 00
A Friend of Missions Ohio per do	1 00
Central ch Cin coll do do	117 53
Richmond ch Ky do	3 30
Sand Creek ch Ind (in part) per do	9 75
Venice ch Ohio do do	24 45
South Charlestown ch Ohio do do	9 00
Sinking Creek do do do	31 00
Piqua ch Ohio per Rev. C Leavenworth	52 25
Troy do (in part) per do do	32 90
Legacy from Thos Adams Piqua Ohio Pd by his executor Wm Elliott, per Rev C Leavenworth	200 00
Salem ch Ohio (in part) do do	1 60
Dicks Creek Ohio do do	36 10
Hamilton and Rossville do do	100 00
Franklin ch do do	11 50
New Jersey ch Ohio do do	40 75
Middletown do present coll per do	16 50
do do back coll do do	12 65
do do Ladies Sew Soc per Rev C Leavenworth	5 00
Glasgow Ky per Wm B Kilgore	2 00
Richmond ch Ky bal per Jos Turner	38 50
Bloomingsburgh ch Ohio per Rev W W Hill	8 00
Louisville 1st ch (in part) per Wm Garvin	200 00
Peoria Presby ch per A Coffey	74 40
Frankfort Ind Ladies Sew Soc in part to const an hon mem to be filled hereafter, per Rev C Leavenworth	25 00
Waveland Ind to const D Damere hon mem per Rev C Leavenworth	50 00
Same to complete hon membership of Jno Milligan per Rev C Leavenworth	8 00
Same additional	2 00
Louisville 1st ch in part per T D Crawford	5 00
Donation of Mary B Duke Georgetown Ky	5 00
Ebenezer ch Ky per Rev W W Hill	28 85
Langollen Ky per M L	2 00
Cloverport ch Ky per Wm McAffee	9 00
Chestnut st ch Louisville Ky per Wm Milton	343 90
Silver Creek ch Kirksville Ky per Thos Brown	24 60
Farmington Mos per A A Rogers	13 00
Louisville 1st ch in part per Rev W L Breckenridge	25 00
From a friend to Missions, Somerset La	10 00
Emaus Tenn per Rev. D L Gray	105 90
Somerville Tenn do do	77 00
Mt Bethany ch Tenn per Rev D L Gray	45 00
Alex Allen Rauleigh do do	5 00
Philo ch Miss do do	37 00
Louisville 2d Presby ch per I A Taylor	26 00
Mrs E R Weatherby per Rev D L Gray	5 00
Holly Springs do do	10 00
Memphis 1st ch Tenn do do	150 00
Edmonson (in part) to const Rev A W Young life member per Rev D L Gray	37 15
Error in charge to Rev D L Gray on January 31st	80 30
Amt reserved for Rev A C Allen per Thos Henderson	100 00
Collection in Natchez ch Miss per Rev Benj Chase	900 88
Donation from F Beaumont per Thos Henderson	5 00
do A Friend La do do	2 00
Versailles ch per I W Wallace	17 00
3d ch Springfield Ill per Rev W W Hill	40 00
Donation of the late T Wallace Mayslick Mason county Ky	603 00
Paid by Wm Hodge trustee of S Wallace decd
Tuscaloosa ch Ala Presbytery per Jno Graham	68 40
Williamsburgh Ohio per L A S	8 00
Union ch Sangamon Pby per Thos Spilman	6 00
Bethel congregation Ky per J C Caldwell	10 00
Zion ch Synod of Nashville per Jos B Friesson	52 00
Fort Des Moines Iowa per Rev W W Hill	2 00
Oscaloosa	4 00
Fort Madison	4 00
Fairfield	10 00
Popes River ch Ill	6 00
Rock Island Ill	37 50
Bloomington Ill	15 00
Union Ill	17 31½
White Hall Ill	87½
Palace Hill Ohio	3 00
Donation of Rev J Huston	4 50
Collection from sundry persons per Thos May	20 20
Donation from Thos May	4 80
Louisville 1st ch in part per Mrs P H Pope	5 00
Do do do	2 00
Do do do	5 00
Do do do	20 00
	4141 33
Proceeds of Note discounted in bank per Rev W W Hill	984 33
Total	$5125 68

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

The Anniversary Meeting of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church will be held at St. Louis, on Friday night, May 15th, at 7½ o'clock, in the 2d Presbyterian church.

Statements and addresses relating to the work of education will be made on that occasion.

DR. GREEN'S OPINION OF MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

The efforts of Dr. Green to supply the Church with able ministers were earnest, intelligent and persevering. The first action of the General Assembly in providing means for the education of indigent candidates grew out of the overture which he himself drafted in 1805; and the Theological Seminary at Princeton was established in a great measure through his untiring efficiency. The following is Dr. Green's opinion of the importance of ministerial training, as he looked back upon his life, at the verge of fourscore years.

"I consider the agency I have had in providing ministers of the gospel for the Church, and in securing the means of their adequate instruction, and for an attention to their personal piety, as the most important service I have ever rendered to the Church of Christ."

In the light of this strong testimony, we are emboldened to solicit the continued co-operation of our ministerial brethren in advancing this good cause. We rejoice that they are so generally engaged in furthering the objects in view, and that education for the ministry continues to occupy a large share of the Christian energy of our Zion. No one, on reviewing life, will be likely to regret that he was the instrument, in the hand of God, of assisting pious and intelligent young men in responding to the call of the Spirit in their preparations for the sacred office. Few methods of serving the kingdom of Christ are more influential than the one in question. Dr. Green, by his efforts to increase the ministry in the Presbyterian Church, accomplished good which cheered him at the close of life, and which will follow in endless influences and results into the world of glory. Happy for the Church at large, if we could all labour with the same zeal, fidelity and success!

AGENCY FOR THE WEST.

The Board of Education has secured the services, as agent in the West, of a ministerial brother, whose character and qualifications will commend him to the churches. The Rev. William Speer, of Pittsburgh, has consented to labour, at least for a season, in promoting the objects embraced by the plans of the Board of Education; and his special field of labour will be within the limits of the Synods of Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Ohio, and Cincinnati. Brother Speer's health is still feeble; but it is hoped that, whilst it is sufficient for him to commence this work, it will gradually increase with the opportunities, often favourable to health, presented by the kind of labour required. May the Lord grant that his servant may find a wide and an effectual door opened for the advancement of his kingdom.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

"What doest thou here, Elijah?"—How often do ministers fall from the courage and activity which become their office, into a state which calls for the rebuke administered in these words! If the offence of the cross might cease, and the servant might be so much greater than his Lord as to escape the hatred and persecution which are the reward of fidelity; or if the preaching of the gospel might cease to be a work of faith, and we could labour without doubt, fear, or vexation, then the office of the ambassador of Christ were easily endured.

But the hinderance to the truth, and the frequent offences which must needs come, and many too from professed disciples, do accumulate themselves at times into an oppressive burden under which the minister will sink in discouragement, unless his faith be strong.

When conscience expostulates with him for his want of faith and courage, he pleads the number and aggravation of his trials, and magnifies the obstacle in his way, until he is disposed to quit the field and seek a less laborious vineyard. He says, "what farther hope is there? I am forsaken even by the hosts of Israel. I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts; because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down their altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword, and I, even I only am left, and they seek my life." Who can stem such a torrent of wickedness as is setting itself against the truth?

When a minister, under the influence of such reflections, faints, and lets go, instead of girding on the armour of God and renewing his strength, he is wandering from duty, quite as much as if he went a day's journey into the wilderness, and sat down under a juniper tree to die. When he fears to rebuke a prevailing sin, when he shrinks from saying, "Thou art the man" to some influential parishioner, when he abandons the helm because adverse winds assail him, when he despairs of seeing the truth fulfil its high commission: when, in whatever way, he fails and yields to discouragement, he is wandering with Elijah away from the field of his labours, and has need to return immediately "to the wilderness of Damascus," again to encounter sin, and to combat in the strength of Jehovah with all who are its slaves and apologists. Faint hearted pastor, "What doest thou here, Elijah?"—New York Evangelist.

Indians Judging Ministers.—Some years ago, three American ministers went to preach to the Cherokee Indians. One preached very deliberately and coolly; and the chiefs held a council to know whether the Great Spirit spoke to them through that man, and they declared he did not, because he was not so much engaged as their head men were in their national concerns. Another spoke to them in a most vehement manner; and they again determined in council that the Great Spirit did not speak to them through that man, because he was mad. The third preached to them in an earnest and fervent manner; and they agreed that the Great Spirit might speak to them through that man, because he was both earnest and affectionate. The last was ever after kindly received.

Improvement of Time.—Charles Butler, a distinguished English lawyer and a fine scholar, ascribes his saving of time to these rules:—Very early rising; a systematic division of his time; absence from all company and from all diversions not likely to amuse him highly; from reading, writing, or even thinking on modern party politics; and above all, never permitting a bit or scrap of time to be unemployed—have supplied him with an abundance of literary hours.

Cecil and the Bible.—During a severe illness, the excellent Cecil said to a friend who expressed sympathy for him in his affliction, "It is all Christ. I keep death in view. If God does not please to raise me up, he intends me better. I find every thing but religion only vanity. To recollect a promise of the Bible—this is substance! Nothing will do but the Bible. If I read authors, and learn different opinions, I cannot say, this is the truth! I cannot grasp it as substance; but the Bible gives me something to hold. I have learned more within these curtains from this blessed book than from all the other books I ever read."

ON REQUIRING A "PLEDGE" FROM CANDIDATES.

The following remarks against the policy of exacting a "pledge" from candidates in the early part of their education, are extracted from the Biblical Repertory and Princeton Review for 1850.

At present, assistance is rendered only on condition that the recipient pledge himself to enter the ministry, or to refund the money expended on his education. It is proposed to do away with this pledge. It is urged that it is manifestly improper to exact of a boy just entering an academy the pledge, that after some eight or ten years he will become a minister. He is too young to know his own mind intelligently; he can have no adequate apprehension of his gifts for the sacred office; we cannot tell whether he can conscientiously, after such a term of years, regard himself as called of God to take on himself the work of a minister. He is placed in a false position in being required to decide this momentous question at the very commencement of his literary course. When the time comes for him really to ponder it, he finds it already decided; and he cannot reverse that decision without a loss of character and a heavy pecuniary penalty. This is undoubtedly wrong. The Church has no right to place her children under such temptations to enter the sacred office, uncalled of God. Another objection to the pledge is, that it commits the Church as well as the candidate. The Church assumes that the youth who applies for assistance on entering the academy, is a proper subject to be regarded as a candidate for the ministry. She so considers him. He is recorded as such in the minutes of the Presbytery or of the Board. He is so reported to the General Assembly. How manifestly unwise is it thus to determine this question before his talents, his disposition, his piety have been or can be subjected to any adequate test. This premature judgment has often to be revoked. "Almost all the failures of the Board of Education have occurred in the academical and collegiate courses." The Church is either pained and her organs brought into disrepute by the failure of those prominently held up as suitable candidates for the ministry; or she is constrained, contrary to her better judgment, to introduce into the sacred office unsuitable men simply because she has committed herself, and has had them so many years under training. It is evident that we should have much greater security by rejecting all such premature engagements on either side. Let it not be decided that a man is to be a candidate for the ministry, until he is prepared to enter on his professional studies. Then he may know himself, and be known to the church.

These and other considerations of equal weight are urged by the Secretary of the Board with great force for the abolition of the pledge. We fully concur in this view of the subject. We have for years regarded this feature of our educational operations with growing disapprobation, and we greatly rejoice that from the right quarter a movement has been made to get rid of this unsightly and galling chain.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

EDUCATION IN SCOTLAND.

Before the division of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland into various branches, the parochial schools were, at least in theory, national. But owing to the inert spirit of Moderatism, and the opposition of the land proprietors to an increase of taxes, the schools were not increased in number in proportion to the wants of the population. Hence, when the Free Church seceded from the establishment and organized schools of its own, it was found that there was not only ample room for the new set of schools, but that the old parochial, the Free Church, and the numerous private schools combined did not at all meet the real wants of Scotland. Accordingly many of the most intelligent and pious minds have been considering for some time past what can be done to enlarge and harmonize the plans of education in order to adapt them to the present state of the country.

If the three great Presbyterian bodies, the Established, the Free, and the United Presbyterian Churches, which, in regard to numerical strength stand nearly in the proportion of 11, 8 and 5, were united, all that would be necessary would be to aim at the enlargement of the existing parochial system. But at present the Established Church has the entire management of that system, and no person who is not a member of that Church can be teacher in any of the parochial schools. Of course, the Free and the United Presbyterian churches are opposed to the enlargement, and even to the continuance of that system under present circumstances.

It must also be remarked that the three great Presbyterian bodies are cordially agreed as to the indispensable necessity of combining religious with secular training. To establish common schools on the generally loose and irreligious basis, so prevalent in this country, is not entertained at all in Scotland. The Presbyterians are thoroughly united in regarding religion as an essential element of sound education.

The problem, therefore, is, how can these three bodies be brought to act in concert on the subject of Christian education?

Every scheme, hitherto proposed, has failed to conciliate the friends of denominational education in the Established and Free churches. A meeting of a few friends of the Free Church was lately called in Edinburgh, and the following scheme has been presented to the public under the authority of the names of Dr. Cunningham, of Dr. Candlish, (the Convener of the Free Church Education Committee) and others. The new plan takes the parochial schools as the basis of a national system, and the Free Church and other schools as the means of extending it for the supply of the whole country.

1. First as to the present PAROCHIAL schools. These are to be removed from the exclusive control of the Established Church, and placed under the control of the heritors and school-rate payers within the parish or district. The teachers, who are to be thus elected, are required to pass an examination before a Board of Government Inspectors. "The religious instruction in the schools to be given exclusively from the authorized version of the Holy Scriptures and the Shorter Catechism compiled by the Assembly of Divines at Westminster, now, and for a long series of years, in general use among all the elementary schools of Scotland."

2. The EXTENSION of the system. Schools now receiving aid from the Government [as the Free Church schools] are to be admitted upon the parochial system, and placed upon the same footing with the parish schools, upon application made to a General Board within six months, unless objections are made by three heritors or rate-payers. In that case the Board shall decide. And on the same principles new schools may be set up at any time in districts which seem to require them.

3. The MAINTENANCE of the schools and teachers. The salaries of teachers are to be defrayed out of the present tax on land, so far as it will go, and the balance to be made up in equal parts out of the annual sum to be voted by parliament, and out of a local assessment within the district to be imposed by the General Board. New school-houses, &c. to be provided for in the same general way.

4. Normal schools, or SCHOOLS FOR TEACHERS, are to be left on their present basis, of receiving aid from Parliament. This allows each Church to continue its existing Normal schools, and provides for a wholesome rivalry between the different Presbyterian bodies, or other associations, in training up teachers for the schools.

The following remarks from the circular of Drs. Cunningham, Candlish, and others, set forth their new scheme in its true aims and principles.

"We are deeply impressed with the conviction, that a comprehensive system of national education for Scotland, based upon sound principles of religion, is both practicable and highly desirable. . . . But the very point of our proposal is, that we take Scotland as it is, and legislate for it, not on abstract principles, but on practical considerations. Thus, in the first place, we recognize the present school establishment as a great fact, and make it the centre of our whole scheme. We wish, accordingly, to interfere as little as we can with the practical working of that school establishment, and we propose no deviation whatever from the method of giving instruction hitherto in use. Then, again, we regard Scotland as still essentially a Presbyterian country, and fully entitled to be treated as such; and therefore we would have the different Presbyterian bodies still interested in the oversight of schools, but without excluding any class of the community, of any denomination, from the benefit of whatever branches of learning they may choose at their own discretion to apply for. Farther, we proceed upon what is also a great fact in Scotland; namely, the entire unanimity with which in all elementary schools—(subject to a very few exceptions indeed)—religious instruction is conducted. The Scriptures are universally read; and the same Catechism—one which touches upon none of the questions of Church government which divide parties in Scotland, but only treats of matters of doctrine and duty upon which all agree—is also universally used. And finally, we take in account the actual existence of a large number of excellent schools beyond the pale of the present school establishment, which it is most desirable to embrace in any comprehensive measure, and which there would be little or no hope of embracing, without some such security for the religious element as our plan indicates. For we think something is due to the conscientious convictions of those who have been planting many schools in the land, and who attach much importance to the sort of guarantee they may have for the education of the people being based on sound religious principle. It would be unreasonable to expect that they should hand over their schools to form part of a national establishment—surrendering their own exclusive control over them, and consenting to their being placed under other management—unless the measure that contemplated such a result contained some adequate provision for what they have so much at heart being still effectually secured."

This plan is considered the best practicable education scheme for Scotland, as it now is. If we may express an opinion, we should insist upon the three Presbyterian bodies having the right to appoint the General Board, or at least a majority in it. We also attach importance to the suggestion that "a right of periodical inspection and of lodging complaints before the General Board might be recognized in the Presbyteries of the Established Church, or in the Presbyteries of all the Presbyterian bodies." The great recommendation of this new plan as a whole, is "that it aims at making the least possible change upon the constitution and practical working of the parish schools, consistent with the altered state of Presbyterianism in Scotland, and the altered circumstances of the times."

Whether, or not, this new plan will prevail, we have no means of judging. We suppose that it will meet with some opposition in each of the three Presbyterian bodies; but the probability is that it will be adopted by the Government with perhaps some modifications.

TRUE VIEWS OF EDUCATION.

The fact that religion forms an important and necessary part of education is becoming a settled conviction in the minds of Presbyterians. That this fact should have been lost sight of, even for a time, in the Church of Christ in any part of the world, seems truly astonishing. The general testimony of the Church to the necessity of introducing religion into the systems of public education is admirably set forth by Dr. ROBERT J. BRECKINRIDGE in an address delivered before the American Bible Society in 1839, a part of which is as follows:

RELIGION AND EDUCATION GO TOGETHER.

Perhaps the most striking aspect of my duty is, that its performance should ever have been needful—but especially in this country, and at the present moment. From the beginning of time, till a period very near to us, and amongst the entire race of man, except only Reformed Christians of these latter days, the general principle remotely occupying the base of this subject, has been cordially and universally received and acted on, as of paramount importance. Every people, without exception, has thought it necessary to teach its religion to its children, as the very basis of all other knowledge; and every nation that has been sufficiently advanced to have a written religion and places for the regular instruction of youth in knowledge, has made the national religion a national study in childhood. The sacred books of all heathen nations have been known of all, who knew any thing whatever. The pages of the Koran, in every age and country, have been the first study of every follower of the false prophet. The very highest literature of all antiquity is thoroughly impregnated with the popular religion; so that every Greek and Roman youth was made a scholar and a pagan, by the self same process. The Hebrew parent, by the most express command of God, made his child, from its very birth, by every outward mark and every inward accomplishment, at home, by the way-side, in the school, in the sanctuary, in the halls of justice, on the field of battle, and upon the throne itself, thoroughly and intensely a Hebrew. The early Christian Church was in no degree less assiduous in the same devotedness to the exact and universal religious instruction of the young. Every corrupt and apostate sect which has forsaken or renounced our divine Redeemer—and most conspicuously those who have most thoroughly and openly rejected the Bible—has instilled each its own peculiar heresies, by every means, not excluding their schools, into the minds of their children. The leaders of the glorious Reformation of the sixteenth century, and for two centuries and more, all their true followers, received as from God the solemn duty of the public as well as private instruction of the young in the word of life. The illustrious spirit of Luther, as he drew near his rest, in a review of his literary labours, rejoiced the most in this, that he had written his book De Servo Arbitrio against Erasmus, and had prepared his Small Catechism; a performance which, like the similar one of his immortal fellow labourer, John Calvin, remains, each, after the lapse of three hundred years, respectively the symbol of churches, states, and races. Nay, until a period so little remote that many who hear me, can recall it, the school house and the church stood side by side throughout our country; and the Bible and the Catechism constituted in both, the basis of perpetual instruction.

Happy will it be for the Church when the union between religion and education shall be re-established in our land.

KINGSTON PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

This school, located in Kingston, Decatur county, Indiana, is established under the particular supervision of the session of the church of Sand Creek. The writer was present at its first public examination on the 25th of last month, which was attended by many of the friends of this infant institution, and he expresses the opinion of many, that the examinations were highly creditable to the pupils, and gave evidence not only of the competency of their instructors, but of their faithfulness and diligence.

The classes were examined on the different branches of an English education, not excepting the higher, such as English grammar, philosophy, chemistry, geometry, &c., according to their age and progress. This will suggest the fact, that this school is strictly a high school, in which it is intended to furnish the parts of a classical course of study. It is expected to organize a class in Latin at the commencement of its next term, (1st of May next.) Persons from a distance, wishing to locate their children in a suitable retired place, distinguished for good morals, and with a view of having them thoroughly taught, and under good religious influence, would do well for themselves and a good cause, by patronizing this institution. Boarding could be had in reputable, religious families.—Presbyterian of the West.

McDONOUGH COLLEGE, ILLINOIS.

The following communication from the "Presbyterian Herald," of Louisville, gives an interesting account of McDonough College, Illinois, which is commencing its career under favourable auspices.

I am here on a transient visit, and have spent a part of New Year's day in visiting McDonough College, and listening to recitations. McDonough College has recently been established in Macomb, McDonough Co., Illinois, by the Presbytery of Schuyler, (O. S.,) and is under the superintendance of Rev. R. Harris, A. M. There are in attendance at present seventy-five students, though this is but its third session.

Two competent assistants have been employed, who, for the present, are able to do ample justice to the students committed to their care.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, a permanent Professor was elected, and provision made for his support; but we are sorry to learn that his engagements would not permit him to accept. I learn, however, that the Board are determined, at an early period, to supply the Institution with a sufficient number of Professors, and make such additions to the Faculty, from time to time, as the interests of the College may demand.

As it is under the care of Presbytery, it will be, and is, strictly a Presbyterian Institution, but open to all the youth of every name and denomination, who may resort to it, and no religious test is required of any. The Bible is daily read in the school, and the Westminster Shorter Catechism taught to all, except those whose parents or guardians object.

The location is most favourable for health and good moral influence. Macomb is a quiet, retired village, of a population of about one thousand, and is rapidly improving. The location is as healthy as any in the West, and is in the centre of the garden of Illinois, which I think may justly be regarded as the garden of the world, (not speaking disparagingly of your beautiful State, and of that part of it, which has so high claims to be the garden of the world.) Macomb is situated about midway between the two great rivers, Mississippi and Illinois, some thirty miles distant from each; and it is contemplated that a plank road will soon be constructed to some point on the Illinois river. At present there is a tri-weekly stage from this place to Beardstown, on the Illinois river. This whole country and the adjoining counties, as is generally known, is land of the first quality, and town and country are rapidly filling up with an industrious, moral, and enterprising community, and a community which seems determined to build up the great cause of education. We have not only their word for this, but their past acts show it. There is already erected a college edifice, of 60 by 40 feet, two stories high, built of brick, with good stone foundation, divided off into suitable rooms for College purposes. The building is now completed or nearly so, and is entirely out of debt—nearly all accomplished by the energy of the inhabitants of this place. And now that there are seventy-five students within its walls, under the care of a sufficient number of faithful and competent instructors, we say, is tangible evidence that this community will sustain an Institution of learning.

I had the privilege of hearing part of the examination, at the close of the last session, as well as listening to some recitations to-day, and am happy to bear testimony to the fidelity and success of the teachers, and the accuracy and promptness of students in those branches which they had studied, as well as the general order and decorum of the school. Parents, who may wish to emigrate to the West, where they may find the most delightful country and climate, and privileges for education and religious instruction, made ready to their hand, to a degree not to be expected in so new a country, will receive a hearty welcome in Macomb or vicinity.

A TRAVELLER'S NOTES.

AUSTIN COLLEGE, TEXAS.

Dr. Baker, in writing from Texas, thus refers to Austin College:

My reception in the Northern and Eastern States was kind and cordial; and my success as agent for Austin College, was better than I had anticipated. I had to operate under many peculiar discouragements—had "wind and tide" against me; and yet, I obtained in money, books, maps, globes, and good subscriptions, about FOUR THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS. Besides this, I had encouragement to believe, that I should receive, in due time, something handsome from certain generous-hearted individuals, who chose rather not to subscribe any definite amount. On reaching home, I found that the Board of Trustees had been acting very efficiently, and yet, very prudently. The MAIN EDIFICE, which is to cost about twelve thousand dollars, has been contracted for; and, I am free to say, our prospects of ultimate and triumphant success are highly encouraging. If I mistake not, we shall, here, in the beautiful and flourishing town of Huntsville, have a College which will be a credit to Texas, and an honour to the Presbyterian name; and, all this too, mark, at no distant period. Our worthy President, the Rev. Samuel McKinney, is the very man for this enterprise. He is both a gentleman and a scholar; not only so, he is a first-rate disciplinarian; and with all is a man of indomitable energy—the very kind of man we need in this great frontier State. I am happy to find that my communications, (some of which were published in your excellent and widely extended paper), have been read with interest by many of our communion, in several of the blessed old States, and that a goodly number, both of the ministry and laity, are coming to Texas. Now is the time to plant churches, and foster literary institutions in this—destined to be the great Empire State of the South—and right glad am I, that AUSTIN COLLEGE has been chartered, and that it is now, as I trust, winning golden opinions every day! Heaven speed the enterprise, and crown it with great and glorious success!

SCOTCH LIBERALITY.

Henry Miller, Esq., a native of Scotland, and a retired London merchant, has presented the munificent donation of £4000 ($20,000) to the New College of the Free Church, to be kept for ever as a fund for scholarships. There are to be four scholarships, which will be of the yearly value of about £40 ($200) each, and will be held for four years. They are to be decided by a competition which is open to all students attending the New College, without regard to the profession they mean to follow. The money is to be laid out in land; and the management and application of it are vested in the Lord Provost of Edinburgh for the time being, and the Principal and Professors of the New College.

THE DUTY OF SINGING.

Singing is an ordinance of Divine worship, in which we express our joy in God, and gratitude for his mercies. It was practised by the people of God before the giving of the law of Moses, (Exod. xv.;) and afterwards, also, under the Old Testament dispensation, formed an important part of public and private devotion. And hymns, or songs of praise, form a considerable portion of the sacred Scriptures. It was practised by Christ and his Apostles, Matt. xxv. 30.

Under the gospel dispensation it is particularly enjoined, Col. iii. 16; Eph. v. 19.

That eminently great and good Christian minister, President Edwards, said, that, "as it is the command of God that all should sing, so all should make conscience of learning to sing; as it is a thing that cannot be decently performed at all without learning. Those therefore, (where there is no natural inability) who neglect to learn to sing, live in sin, as they neglect what is necessary in order to their attending one of the ordinances of God's worship."
—N. Y. Observer.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

All that the Board deem it important to furnish is their CORPORATE NAME, viz. "The Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." Any person, disposed to leave a legacy to the Board of Education, is requested to insert the right CORPORATE NAME. The State laws differ so much that no one Form will answer in all the States.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, MARCH, 1851.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Albany.
2d ch Albany 163 90, 3d ch Albany 14 51	178 41
Presbytery of Saratoga.
Mayfield 1st ch	15 00
Presbytery of Buffalo City.
3d ch Rochester	41 00
Presbytery of Hudson.
Bethel ch, Rev. W. J. Blain	3 00
Presbytery of Bedford.
South Greenburg ch	6 25
Presbytery of New York.
Duane st ch addl, C Beers 20, Williamsburgh ch 1, Brooklyn 1st ch addl 1	22 00
Presbytery of Long Island.
West Hampton ch	6 00
Presbytery of Elizabethtown.
Basking Ridge ch 15, Connecticut Farms ch 8 27	23 27
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
Dutch Neck ch 8, Nottingham Square ch 10	18 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
2d ch Philadelphia in part 271, W Nassau, Sr. 5—276; 7th ch collection 113 35, Hon G Sharswood 10—123 35; 10th ch addl W Chapin 3, Central ch addl James Field Esq 75, Spring Garden ch addl, W J. McCullough 1	478 35
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Franklin st ch Baltimore 94 50 addl, F st church Washington 7	101 50
Presbytery of Carlisle.
St Thomas ch	20 00
Presbytery of Huntingdon.
Shaver's Creek ch 30 94, E Kishacoquillas ch Mrs E Johnson 5, Mrs Jane Long 5, Cash 12 30, in all 22 30, Perryville ch 35	88 24
Presbytery of Northumberland.
Buffalo ch	16 50
Presbytery of Clarion.
Callensburg ch	7 50
Presbytery of Washington.
Washington ch to con REV J J BROWNSON an hon mem	63 50
Presbytery of Steubenville.
New Hagerstown ch	5 28
Presbytery of New Lisbon.
Rehoboth ch 1, Brookfield ch 1, Salem ch 15, Middle Sandy ch 35	52 00
Presbytery of Richland.
Frederick ch	9 20
Presbytery of Whitewater.
Sand Creek ch	16 90
Presbytery of Lake.
Laporte ch	10 00
Presbytery of Kaskaskia.
Edwardsville ch	2 00
Presbytery of East Hanover.
Petersburg ch Lad ed soc (thro' Farmers Bank)	130 00
Presbytery of West Hanover.
Trinity ch 15, South Plains ch a female member (through Farmers Bank) 2	17 00
Presbytery of Orange.
Louisburg ch (through Farmers Bank)	9 25
Presbytery of Mississippi.
Natchez ch 485 04, Pine Ridge ch to const REV B H WILLIAMS an hon mem 51	536 04
LEGACIES.
Legacy of Mrs Mary P Smith per Rev Dr John Stockton to con SAMUEL COWEN an hon mem	50 00
MISCELLANEOUS.
Two friends 1000, Rev L L Conrad, Murrysville Pa 3 50, Rev H C Read, Westport Ky 1, Owen Sheldon Moscow N Y 1, Capt. C K Stribling, U. S. N. Annapolis Md 44, Dr Geo Fitzgerald (through Farmers Bank Va) 5	1054 50
Total	$2980 69

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c.

Through the sexton of University Place ch New York, from sundry individuals	120 00

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD.

The Annual Meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions will be held at the Mission House, New York, on Monday, May 5th, at two o'clock, P. M. The sessions of the Board will be continued during the meeting of the General Assembly at St. Louis, Missouri.

The Rev. William C. Anderson, D. D., is appointed to preach the annual sermon before the Assembly. The Rev. William A. Scott, D. D., is the alternate preacher.

A sermon will be preached for the Board by the Rev. George Potts, D. D., and a statement of the affairs of the Missions made, on Sabbath evening, May 4th, in the First Presbyterian Church (the Rev. Dr. Phillips'), Fifth Avenue. Service to commence at half-past seven o'clock.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Compiled from letters received at the Mission House, to the 14th of April, 1851.

India Missions.—Letters have come to hand dated at Lodiana, February 7; Amballa, January 30; Saharunpur, February 6; Futtehgurh, February 6; Allahabad, February 7; Calcutta, January 25. We learn by these advices that the Rev. Messrs. Hay and Shaw had reached Allahabad, and the Rev. Messrs. Fullerton and Campbell had arrived at Furrukhabad; they were most cordially welcomed by the brethren of these missions. The Rev. Mr. Orbison had left Allahabad on his way to Lodiana. The Rev. Mr. Wilson and family had reached Calcutta, and expected to embark on the 27th of January. Four persons had been admitted as members of the church at Agra within the preceding two months. At Saharunpur the church-session had received one person to membership, who would be baptized on the next Sabbath. Mr. Campbell speaks of an interesting visit to Pahasu, a village ten miles from Saharunpur. The people "heard the gospel gladly, and gave us ground to build a school-house and a house for a catechist, and promised to assist in the labour of these buildings. The difficulty is to spare a man to reside among them; but we hope to send one shortly. They have renounced idolatry, and wish Christian instruction." At Futtehgurh the missionaries write of their work in encouraging terms. Mr. Seeley says, "I have never had so many calls for the Scriptures as during the last month. Almost daily intelligent Hindus and Musalmáns have been at my bungalow for them. We desire you to pray for us, and ask the churches to pray that God's blessing may rest upon us, and make fruitful the seed sown." The High-school in Furrukhabad had been re-opened after vacation, with a larger attendance than ever. An interesting school has been established in the cantonments at Futtehgurh under the care of the Rev. Gopeenath Nundy. The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-western Presidency, and other gentlemen, had recently visited these schools, and expressed themselves as highly pleased with their condition and prospects. The Governor afterwards sent a handsome donation for their support, saying, in a kind note, "I am rejoiced to see your active exertions in the cause of education, and trust that your labours may meet with abundant reward." The attendance at the annual fair at Allahabad this year was much smaller than usual, to the great discouragement of the Brahmans. The people are spoken of as "becoming more and more convinced of the folly of seeking the forgiveness of sin and the purification of the heart in the way prescribed by these priests."

China Missions.—Letters have been received from Ningpo, January 6; Shanghai, January 17; and Canton, January 28. We do not observe any thing of special interest in the missionary work. There had been an increased amount of preaching in chapels at Canton by missionaries of different societies, and in general the usual departments of labour were steadily carried forward. But as one writes, "It is now the seed time, not the time of gathering in the harvest." All the letters of the brethren express earnest desire that the prayers of the churches should be enlisted on behalf of their work and themselves.

Africa—Corisco Mission.—A letter from the Gaboon, of December 26, speaks of our friends at Corisco as being all well and engaged in their usual work a few days previous to that date.

Choctaw Mission.—We learn with much regret the death, by consumption, of Mrs. Morrison, late Miss Dutcher, on the 4th of February. Her health had suffered severely several months ago, but she seemed to have become much better. Her last illness, which occurred a few weeks after her marriage, was but of a few hours' duration. She was an admirable teacher and a devoted missionary. Called suddenly, she was not unprepared, but has entered into the joy of her Lord. See a notice of her departure, from the pen of the Rev. A. Reid, in another column.

FIRE AT SPENCER ACADEMY.

We find the following notice in the "Choctaw Intelligencer," of March 19th. No other information of this severe loss has yet reached the Mission House.

We are sorry to be compelled to announce the destruction by fire of the entire stables and granaries attached to Spencer Academy, in this district. The fire was discovered at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening, 16th instant, in the lower part of the building, where there was about ten or twelve tons of hay, stored, and everything being dry, the whole building was in an instant enveloped in flames, rendering it impossible to save anything except the horses.

There was about 1200 or 1400 bushels of corn in the granaries, which was all destroyed, together with the hay, tools, harness, &c.

The mill belonging to the school, which was separated from the stables by a road, also took fire, but, through the exertions of the teachers and students, was suppressed without doing any very considerable damage. Loss, between $3500 and $4000.

The fire, we learn, was the work of an incendiary.

The corn which was consumed was all that they had to depend upon for subsistence until their next crop is made, with the exception of about 10 bushels, which was in the mill at the time of the fire.

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE STATION AT LAHOR.

Appearance of the City.—Situation.—Inhabitants.

The Rev. Messrs. Newton and Forman reached Lahor on the 21st of November, 1849, to occupy that city as a station for missionary labour. Writing on the 30th of last September, Mr. Forman gives the following narrative of their residence, labour, plans and prospects in this new and important sphere of duty.

On approaching the city from the East, the first thing that presents itself to view, is a compact mass of buildings at a distance of about four miles, with here and there a naked and dilapidated tomb or mosque, a little cluster of houses of varied appearance, and a few scattered trees, occupying the intervening space. Besides these, there are prostrate ruins lining the main road most of the way, and stretching away to the left as far as the eye can reach. The city itself, which is said once to have been contained within a circumference of twelve Kos, or about twenty miles, (which however, is probably an exaggeration,) is now confined to one corner of its original site, is surrounded by a strong brick rampart, and is entered by twelve enormous gates.

The streets are generally narrow and crooked; the houses, which are all built of burnt bricks, but display none of the beauties of architecture, are crowded in the most uncomfortable manner. Many of them rise to a great height, being four, five, and even six stories high. With the exception of some parts on the side next the river, where the citadel stands, and where a portion of the troops of the Sikh Government were quartered, Lahor is the most crowded city of which we have any knowledge. The streets, till lately, were intolerably bad, and most of them filthy beyond endurance. They are now undergoing, with respect both to pavement and drainage, as thorough a repair as the case well admits of, which must, of course, add much to the comfort and healthiness of the place. The general shape of the city is that of an oblong parallelogram, the length being something like two miles, and the breadth about half as much. A census taken by a European officer some three years ago, made the population to be only about 75,000, but when it is considered that the natives of India, through fear of taxation or some other evil, are always disposed to conceal a portion of the truth on subjects connected with the numbering of their heads, we need not hesitate to rate the capital of the Panjáb at 100,000 inhabitants, apart from those who reside in the cantonment bazars. As nearly as can be estimated, the population is about half Hindu and half Mohammedan. The number of Sikhs is almost nothing. The language in vogue, as in other Panjáb cities, is Panjábi for the masses, and Urdu, though not pure, for the more polite, and for such as have migrated from Hindustan, (for so the people here call the eastern and southern provinces, as far down as Bengal.) The wall of the city on the northern side is washed by an arm of the river Ráví, the main stream flowing from the north round to the west, at a distance of one or two miles. The cultivated fields lying between these streams, and an immense tract of country beyond, to a distance of several miles, were covered in the course of the recent rains by an overflowing deluge from the channels of the river. But ordinarily the Ráví is a small stream, being navigable only for country boats.

On the southern side of the city and almost adjoining it lie the cantonments, called Anárkalí and a military bazar, which together contain a native population of several thousand. The new cantonments, now in course of erection, which were intended to supercede the old ones, are at a place called Mían Mir, five or six miles from the city in a south-eastern direction, without the range of the ruins above mentioned. The officers of the civil Government now located in Anárkalí are likely to continue there.

Such is the place at which we were appointed to commence missionary operations.

Objects of the Mission made known.—Liberal donations received.—A site for the Mission premises sought for.

As the enterprise was dependent in part on the patronage of the Christian community here, we lost no time in issuing a statement announcing the circumstances under which we had come, setting forth our plan of operations, and soliciting contributions from such as felt an interest in the work. While this document was in circulation, the Governor-General happened to be at the Station, and it being shown to him by the President of the Board of Administration, the whole plan is said to have had his approbation. Many contributed, and some with a liberal hand. The whole amount received and promised, including what was given by a few individuals at other stations, amounts to rupees 4238, [or nearly $2100.]

The next step was to provide ourselves a temporary home, and to look for a suitable site for mission premises. In furtherance of both these objects the most prompt assistance was rendered by different members of the Government. It was through the kindness of one of these that we obtained the temporary use, at a nominal rent, of one of the most comfortable houses in the city. Another, in reply to a note addressed him on the subject of a building site in the suburbs, not only promised to do every thing in his power in procuring for us the site required, but remarked that he thought it his duty, as a Magistrate, to aid in whatever had a tendency to promote the cause of Christian morality;—language the more cheering, because so different from the tone too often held by men, who, from their official station, are afraid to show that they consider Christianity in any respect preferable to Hinduism.

To find an eligible spot, however, proved to be far more difficult than was anticipated. All the ground near the city except what was already occupied, or that which constituted the debris of the old town, is obviously too little elevated above the level of the river to make buildings erected on it either safe from the encroachments of high water, or desirable in point of salubrity. On the whole, therefore, it seemed advisable to wait till the troops should be removed from Anárkalí to the new cantonments, and then take the opportunity of purchasing one of their abandoned quarters. This is our present hope. It is a hope, however, which may have to be deferred another whole year; and if so, it will involve the necessity of our spending another hot season in this crowded, and for several months, burning city, to our great discomfort, certainly, if not to the detriment of our health.

English School opened.—Statistics of Scholars.—Vernacular department.

In accordance with the plan published after our arrival, an English school was commenced in our own house in the city on the 19th day of December. It began with three pupils—all Hindú Kashmírís, two of them having formerly been in the Mission school at Lodiana. The number gradually increased till it became necessary to find more capacious apartments. Happily the Soldier's Chapel, built by a pious gentleman at his own expense, had been placed at our disposal, and this being then well adapted to our purpose, the school was removed to it. This was in the month of February. There has ever since been a steady growth in the number of students: and now at the close of the year, we are able to count, in actual attendance, not less than 80. Of these, 55 are Hindus, 22 Musalmáns, and 3 Sikhs. Most of them are inhabitants of Lahor, though some have come from abroad, on purpose to be educated. Of the 80 above mentioned, 38 are Panjábís, 3 Káshmírís, 7 Bengalís, 28 Hindustanís, 3 Afgáns, and one a Belochí. The youngest pupil is six years old, and the eldest about forty. The average age is thirteen and a-half. The school is at present divided into six classes. A number of the more advanced pupils had some knowledge of English when they entered. The second class, consisting of a dozen boys, is studying Grammar; the first, having eight members, adds Arithmetic to Grammar; while both, in common with the classes below them, make translation their principal business.

It was announced to the public that a vernacular as well as an English school was to constitute a branch of our operations. Further reflection has convinced us that a better plan will be to have a vernacular department in the English school, so as to have the whole under our constant superintendance, with as little expenditure of missionary time as possible. Hitherto the Persian has had such a place in the education of the natives, that it may not be expedient altogether to disregard it in any course of instruction we may adopt: but Urdú being the language which the Government now requires to be used in the courts of justice, this without doubt is destined to occupy a much more prominent place in the desires and aims of the people than Persian. On this account, as well as for other reasons, we shall think it our duty to encourage among our pupils the study of it rather than of the other languages current. It is therefore our intention, as soon as possible to engage a teacher of Urdú, with the view of carrying out this part of our scheme. The only reason why this has not already been done, is that the school-house on which we have had to depend, is not constructed in such a way as to afford accommodation to any additional classes. In the mean time, three of the English classes have begun to read Urdú in the Roman character, in order, among other reasons, to be able the more easily to use the only Dictionaries which are available.

Manner of Conducting the School.

The hours of study, as in other schools, in this part of India have varied with the seasons. The school is conducted in the strictest sense on Christian principles, agreeably to the prospectus put forth, when we came to the station. Pains have been taken to procure class-books, which not only recognize the divine authority of the Christian religion, but which studiously inculcate its doctrines, as truths which it behoves all men to be acquainted with. Besides these, one of the daily studies of the higher classes is the New Testament. Part of them read it English, and part in Roman Urdú. The portions on which they have been chiefly occupied are the first nine chapters of Matthew, and the first chapter of Mark. From the first the school was opened with prayer; and though the pupils have been distinctly told, that they are not required to be present at this exercise, we are not aware that a single individual has ever designedly absented himself from it—a thing which any one who was disposed to shun our worship, might easily do without prejudice to his credit as a regular attendant, since the roll is never called till the prayer is over. This is a fact to which we advert with the more interest, because it contributes to dispel the illusion which still possesses the minds of many in regard to the feeling with which the natives view our religion and our schemes of education. Whatever may be thought of the need there is elsewhere of the establishment of Government schools, from which the principle of neutrality excludes Christianity in order to meet the prejudices of Hindus and Mohammedans, it can hardly be pretended in the face of the foregoing facts, that such a necessity exists at Lahor.

We both take part in the work of instruction, but the superintendence is in the hands of Mr. Forman. A young Bengálí, named Sámá Charan, has been engaged as an assistant teacher. He was educated principally in the Scottish Free Church Institution in Calcutta. He is a Hindú by profession, but a man of liberal views.

Before leaving this subject it should be mentioned that early in the year, an application was made to Government for the grant of a lot in the city, at present occupied by dilapidated buildings, with the view of erecting on it a house sufficiently large to accomodate the school in both the English and vernacular departments, and so situated in reference to the native population as to be convenient to a majority of the pupils. As the application went up with a recommendation from the local authorities, strong hopes were entertained of its being given to us at once. But the answer just received from the Secretary to Government informs us that the subject has been referred to the Court of Directors. . . .

Preaching in the streets and distribution of books.—A church needed.—Preaching in English and Urdu.

For some time after our arrival at Lahor, the country was thought by many to be still in an unsettled state, and new insurrections were looked for. We were therefore advised by the highest civil authorities to desist, for the present, from what is called street preaching, lest evil-minded persons should make it an occasion, on religious grounds, of exciting opposition to the Government. As the members of the Government were perhaps without exception friendly to our general object, we could not suppose that in this advice there was the most remote design to thwart us in our work; and therefore, whatever might be our own opinion about the danger to be apprehended from Bazar preaching, we deemed it our duty to comply with their advice. This we did the more cheerfully, because we hoped at an early date to get a chapel opened somewhere in the city, where we might preach regularly on our premises, and within doors—a plan in itself much to be preferred to the other, and one to which none of our friends made the least objection. This hope, however, has not to this day been realized; and as it did not well comport with our views of duty to keep our mouths closed so long, especially when the country was confessedly growing more and more quiet, and the term for which we were advised to be reserved, was left to our own discretion, we ventured about the middle of May, to speak and distribute books in the more private parts of the city to such as chose to consort with us. More recently we have stood in the broadest ways and before the gates, and addressed ourselves to the multitudes, who assembled about us there. The demeanour of our hearers has in general been calm and highly respectful, and in no place have we felt that we could labour with greater hope. The number of books distributed to eager applicants has been very considerable, but no account of them has been kept.

Should our application for a lot in the city meet with a favourable response, one of our first objects will be to erect a chapel on an eligible corner of it, and thenceforth make it a principal place of preaching and book distribution. Soon after our arrival it was intimated that we were expected to preach in English in the Soldier's Chapel already mentioned, and accordingly we have held a service there on the evening of every Sabbath since the 25th of November last. The congregation has consisted of soldiers, office-writers, and others, with their families. The number of hearers has seldom or never risen so high as forty. To the services of the Sabbath, a Missionary evening lecture has recently been added. In the early part of the year a farther effort was made to benefit the European soldiers, by preaching once a week in one of the hospitals. This was done at the suggestion of the Surgeon, and with the consent of the Chaplain, who, on account of his numerous duties, was able to give no attention to this part of his charge.

Preaching in Urdú to a few native Christians, so called, has been a part of the duty of every Sabbath, the service being held at our own house. On these occasions a few of the heathen about us have likewise attended, and some of them not without an apparent interest. One indeed has declared his wish to be a Christian, but evidence of a heartfelt conviction is wanting.

Lahor Subscription School.—Poor Relief Fund.—General view of Lahor, and the Panjab as a field for Missions.

Two other things may be mentioned incidently as having a bearing on the missionary work, though not under the control of the Mission. The first is a school for the benefit chiefly, not exclusively, of the Christian community, both European and East Indian, which has been established at the station, under the name of the Lahor Subscription School. Mr. Forman, having been appointed Secretary of the Managing Committee, is ex-officio the principal manager of the school. The duties of this office call for no more of his time than he seems fully justified in giving, by the amount of good which it may be hoped will result from the operation of such an institution.

The other is a Station Poor Relief Fund, managed under a Committee, by Mr. Newton. The monthly receipts are about 400 rupees. This furnishes a support wholly or in part for something like two hundred people. Of these the number of in-door paupers at present is between thirty and forty. The rest preferring to live in their own houses, receive a monthly allowance, and are required to wear an inseparable badge to prevent them from imposing upon the public by vagrant begging. A further sum of 200 rupees a month is placed at Mr. Newton's disposal for a similar purpose, being a contribution of the young Mahárájá. This supports above a hundred more objects of charity, who, like most of the former, live in their own houses. Latterly these poor people have been invited to come every Sabbath to hear the Scriptures read, and a considerable number have begun to attend. This is a sphere of usefulness which is not to be despised. Not only are the hungry fed, but the poor, as in the days of the Saviour, have the gospel preached to them.

So far as our judgment could be influenced by the experience of the last year, it has been in favour of the policy which added Lahor to the stations of the Board. The field is obviously a good one, nor does the occupation of it seem to have been premature. And we are persuaded that new positions ought to be taken up in this part of the country just as soon as missionaries, and the means necessary for their support, can be obtained. The most eligible post after Lahor is Amritsar. Indeed, the latter is, in some respects, the more desirable station of the two. The English Church Missionary Society contemplate the early establishment of a Mission somewhere in the Panjáb, but at what point they will commence operations is not yet known. The field however is so large, and the harvest so great, that all the labourers who are likely to be sent out, either from America or from England, for years to come will not be sufficient.

INDIA: FURRUKHABAD MISSION.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

I have been nearly twelve years in Hindustán. What are twelve years? A large item indeed in the estimate of human life, but very little in the history of the world as it has been, and probably as it is to be. God counts time by an arithmetic different from ours. The wheel of providence rolls round with great revolutions, and slowly evolves the purposes of grace. A day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day. Man looks on with a degree of impatience, and cries out, "O Lord, how long?" but God knows best.

To any one deeply considering the condition of Hindustán, the influences which are at work, and the progress which is every year being made, it must be evident that Christianity is in the process of making conquests over the hearts of men, and that it will finally triumph and prevail. The work seems to be slow, and no doubt if it were done with more faith, wisdom, and zeal in the instruments, it would go on much more rapidly; but any one may see that it is going on, and that there is every prospect of an accelerated increase from year to year.

We do not, as yet, see a very large accession to the Church. Few come out and join us. The work is still, and probably will be for some time, mainly preparatory. In this point of view it is discouraging, and we ought to labour and pray that God would grant us more souls for our hire. But let it be distinctly understood, that in the work of missions, apparent increase is not the measure of success; and let us not be discouraged if we do not see multitudes coming to us.

I have been led into these reflections by looking at the Reports for this year of some of the missions in this country. It is the custom of most of the missions here, to publish reports every year for the satisfaction of friends in India who contribute to the cause. Looking at these, we see from year to year the varying shades of light and darkness in which the subject presents itself to the minds of the missionaries. Of course there is great variety in their opinions, according to the fields which they occupy, and the aspect in which they view the subject; but it strikes my mind strongly, that this year there is a more hopeful tone in the reports, and so far as I am acquainted with the feelings of the missionary body, I am sure that they are more encouraged than formerly. This I do not suppose is a universal feeling, but I think I can safely say that it is true of the main body; and I am sure that it is so of myself. Two or three years ago I felt discouraged. Everything looked dark and unpromising. I do not feel so now. A new light has broken in upon my soul, faint, indeed, yet cheering; and I could wish to impart my feelings to all the disappointed and discouraged in America. But let me say again, that if you are looking for large accessions to the churches, you are taking a wrong view of the subject, and you will be disappointed. We are not yet able to report thousands of converts. We are sorry for it, but the hearts of men are in the hands of the Lord. And yet even in this light, the success is not to be despised. The nucleus of Christianity which has been formed at Futtehgurh, for instance, where there is a church of between sixty and seventy native communicants, numbering, with the children, (who are not yet communicants, but who are, on Presbyterian principles, members of the Church,) not less than one hundred and fifty, is surely a matter for some encouragement. These, settled permanently, and receiving regular instruction in the doctrines and duties of Christianity, will undoubtedly exert a powerful and increasing influence upon the mass of heathenism around, and our Christian village will be as "a city set upon a hill which cannot be hid."

But I look more to the silent and less observable influence which is gradually spreading like leaven through the mass of native society. Who can doubt that such an influence is at work? The tracts and Bibles that have been distributed, and the preaching of the gospel in the villages and towns and by the way-side have not been without effect. In many cases superstitions have been broken down, prejudices have been removed, and a ray of light has beamed upon the darkened understanding and heart. This influence is now beginning to show itself. Almost everywhere we meet with people who will tell us, "Yes: your religion is true, and we know that it will prevail. We are not Christians ourselves, but our children will be." I am fully convinced that this idea is prevailing more and more, and this of itself is a part of the victory, for, if they look upon it first as possible, and then as certain to happen, they will not be very far from the actual accomplishment of it.

The reports before me give a number of such cases. One man, a leader of a sect, with his disciples around him, came up to the missionary, and said, "I have been hearing the gospel preached for four years, and I am now convinced that Ram's incarnation is a made up story, that the idols and gods are nothing, that Jesus Christ is the only true incarnation, and that through him alone salvation is to be obtained." Many of the bystanders called him mad; but others, and that not a few, both of his followers and of the people, assented to the truth of what he said. On another occasion, a man said before a crowd of people, "I confess that Jesus Christ is the true incarnation, and that through him alone salvation is to be obtained. On him I place all my dependence, though I cannot yet come out openly for fear of the Hindus. But if once a great many embrace Christianity, then there will be no difficulty, and I am convinced that in a short time this will be the case." Another man came up while the missionary was preaching in the bazár, and requested permission to speak a few words. He then said, "Oh brethren, believe me, the nine avatárs are not divine incarnations. If they were, those who believe in them, and call on their names, would have become free from the power and pollution of their sins. If there were any power in the idols, or in the Ganges, or in pilgrimages, then not one of the Hindus would remain a sinner, and our land would never have fallen into the power of the English. The real avatár is Jesus Christ, and in him is that divine power which makes the believer holy and fit for heaven." He was here interrupted by one of the people, who gave him a slap on the face, and in the confusion which ensued he disappeared, and has never since made himself known. I could mention many other cases similar to these. Not long ago I was conversing with an intelligent Musalmán, and lamenting before him that so few of them had embraced the gospel, and that it had produced so little apparent effect. He replied, "The effect is not visible, but I know it. When you missionaries first came to Futtehgurh, we wondered what kind of people you were, and we were afraid of you. We had heard of the New Testament, but we did not know anything about it. Now we have it. Every man who can read, has read something of it. We see that it is a good book, and that you are good people. It is a good religion, and if you go on in this way, I have no doubt that it will in time prevail."

These are "encouraging signs of the times." We have every reason to believe that the work is going on, and let every Christian pray, "O Lord, hasten it, —but in thine own appointed time."

And let every man do his duty.

J. L. Scott.

Agra, Feb. 8th, 1851.

IOWA AND SAC MISSION.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE REV. S. M. IRVIN.

Two Blind Men.

"How many miles, whiskey?" was the inquiry of the first Ioway Indian the writer ever saw. It was on our first visit to the Ioway village in 1837. When within about six miles of the Ioway village we were met by a company of five of the natives, three men and two women. The party halted, and while one reclined on the grass and another rested on his spear, the oldest man, throwing his blanket from his shoulder, and extending his long naked arm and finger in the direction we had come, said, "How many miles, whiskey?" This was his best and about all his English, for we asked him many questions, but he seemed to understand them all as having some relation to whiskey only.

This old man appeared to be about sixty years old at that time, but he still lives, though entirely blind. He with another blind man visited the mission a few days ago, and the sight was interesting and instructive. They had obtained the services of a little girl, with good eyes, of about eight years old, who, with a weed or stick about two feet long led the old whiskey-man. He is now full half bent and exceedingly lame, able only to walk with the help of a staff, which must be set every time the lame foot is lifted. The other old man, equally blind but not so lame, followed by keeping his long staff against the loose blanket of the one before him. Should he fall behind and loose the touch of the blanket, he would mend his pace and swing his stick from side to side until he found the object of his guide. We had not before so literally seen the "blind lead the blind," and there was evidently danger of both falling into the ditch. To feel the loose blanket of an old blind Indian with a long stick is a simple thing, but here it was the anchor of this man's hope. By it he hoped to reach the mission, and did so. The Christian's hope is within the vail, and if he gets behind, he should mend his step, and refer to the word of God as his guide.

By their little guide they were brought to the kitchen, where, seated by a comfortable fire, they made alternately about the following statement: "My son, we have come. It is with great difficulty we reached this. We have no eyes. We have no wives. We have no houses of our own, but are like dogs driven and led from house to house. We have none to get wood for us and keep good fires. Our breasts are purple and spotted sitting over a little fire. We have no meat. We are very cold and hungry. Pity us. We want clothes and food; pity us. Look at us, our blankets are tattered: our bodies thin of flesh; pity us—pity us. We will soon die, pity us." Being objects of charity we could not send them away empty.

We have several times through the winter visited the abode of these men. It is made simply of rods and flags. Eight or ten withe-like rods as large as ox-gads set in an oblong circle of about eight by six feet, with one end in the ground and the tops drawn together. Over these are thrown a few frail mats made of flags from the swamps. This is the habitation. A little fire is put in the centre, and each one, with an old buffalo skin for bed, a pillow of deer's hair, and two old blankets for cover, occupies an end. Here they sit and lie from day to day, depending for food on the cold charities of an Indian family, who live a short distance off. Excepting what they get from the Mission, their best supply of food for the winter is not more than a bowl full of boiled corn or pumpkins each day. And though it is winter, some days they get a little fire, and some days none at all. It may be that, like Barzillai, they cannot taste what they eat, or what they drink,—their senses being so impaired with age, but even this renders their situation more dreary. Not a spoonful of warm coffee, not a mouthful of wheat bread, nor scarcely a bite of animal food, all so necessary to the comfort of old people, do they possess. Nor are these old men alone in this state—hundreds and thousands of old people among the Indians are as badly off. Their minds too are perhaps more destitute and miserable than the body. This old whiskey-man, as we have called him, is one of the proudest Pharisees to be found. His name is "Washatratanna," or "great-man." He boasts of his name, and claims it by right. He feels that he is one of the greatest men, intellectually and mythologically in the world. He seems to think that his nation and the world are under obligations to his wisdom. He thinks he has no sin to be pardoned. He is much more ready to believe he could expiate the sins of others, than that he has any of his own to be atoned for.

Should this fall under the eye of any who have been blessed with the good things of this life, and a good hope for the life to come, let them reflect seriously over these inquiries. Why were you made to differ from these old men? What agency had you in appointing the place of your birth, and the advantages attending your early education? Why were you born an heir to wealth, intelligence and Christianity, and not to the lot of these sufferers? Vain philosophy may seek for a polished answer, but the humble Christian will thankfully say, "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."

OBITUARY.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE LIFE AND CHARACTER OF MIRIAM, A MEMBER OF THE CHURCH AT LODIANA, BY THE REV. JOHN NEWTON.

Died at Lahor, May 29th, 1850, Miriam, wife of Haldhar. This poor woman was by birth a Cashmerian, and, like others of her race, of a light complexion. Her features were good, and her dark eye expressive of intelligence. Her height was about that of the average of women. At one time she became quite fleshy; but soon after losing her health, she was reduced in flesh; and for years previous to her death, she was comparatively thin and feeble.

At an early age, she was either sold by her parents, as multitudes of young girls are in Cashmere (or Kashmír) and the Hill States, or kidnapped by some monster of a man, and devoted to the most base and cruel kind of slavery. With this view, she was conveyed to Lodiana; but by the good providence of God, her case came under the cognisance of the British magistrate, who, according to British law, at once set her at liberty. But merely to liberate a slave is not always enough. She was helpless, without a home, and without a protector; and the kind-hearted magistrate sought for her an asylum in our Mission. The girl was then some sixteen years of age; and being a Mohammedan, she little relished the idea of living in a Christian family, and among a strange people. The Mohammedans of India, as well as the Hindús, consider themselves defiled by eating food which has been cooked or touched by one of an inferior caste; and such the Christian is esteemed to be, by both Mohammedans and Hindús. Kalo, therefore, (for that was her original name,) refused to eat the food that was offered her; and at the same time she declined cooking for herself, on the ground that she had not been accustomed to such work. The case seemed to be one of little promise. We almost regretted that we had consented to take charge of any one at so advanced an age; as the obstacles to be contended with, arising from early habits and religious prejudice, were likely to prove insurmountable. But we judged too hastily. Hunger soon taught our young lady the art of cooking; and indolence, before long, made her content to receive food which had been prepared in the kitchen of the Christians. The Rubicon was now passed, and there was no more difficulty on the score of caste.

The process of education was entered upon, and the art of reading was soon acquired. The moral training, however, was not so easy. Kalo had a temper which made her a troublesome pupil. Divine truth, instilled into her mind, produced no immediate effect. Yet the Lord was preparing the way for a work of his Spirit. After about three years she began to manifest a deep concern for her soul. Her conviction of sin seemed much stronger than is often witnessed in the case of converts in India. But before long she rejoiced in hope through a crucified Saviour. Christ was now her song and her delight. She exhorted the other girls in the Orphan School, and prayed with them daily. Many a time have I heard her, in the girls' apartment, which was not far from my study, pouring out her heart, apparently with great earnestness, in supplication for herself and for the girls who were kneeling around her.

At length she was baptized in the presence of a congregation of Christians and heathen—many of the latter being her kinsmen according to the flesh. At her own request her name was now changed to Miriam. She was subsequently married to a native Christian named Haldhar, who was originally a Bengálí Hindú. Some time after the birth of her first child, she became so ill that her life was despaired of. She now exhibited a state of mind which it was delightful to contemplate. She was supposed to be dying; and Mrs. Newton and myself were called up in the night to see her. She spoke in the most glowing manner of her hope in Christ, and her readiness to depart. While we were standing near her bed, she commenced praying with an audible voice; and prayed fervently, yet deliberately, not only for herself, but for her husband, for her child, and for the church. She also sent messages to certain friends, and particularly to a suspended member of the church, all intended for their spiritual improvement. Eternal things then seemed very near. But contrary to our expectations, the Lord spared her life, and she continued to live about seven years. During most of this time she was an invalid, though not a constant sufferer. I wish I could say that her growth in grace was in proportion to her affliction. That she grew in knowledge cannot be doubted; and her Christian character was certainly fairer than that of some others; yet it cannot be concealed, that she had her faults; not indeed faults which called for the censure of the church, yet such as the pastor was obliged sometimes to direct her special attention to—particularly a want of economy in the management of her domestic affairs, and a disposition to judge and speak harshly of the faults of her fellow Christians. She was also too lax in the government of her children. Yet to her praise it must be said, that the pastoral admonitions that were given her on these subjects, so far as my knowledge of the case extends, were always received with a proper spirit.

Her husband came to Lahor to seek employment about the time our Mission was established here; and she soon followed him with the children—well pleased, I have no doubt, (as Haldhar often said, though she herself said but little), to be still near the missionaries to whom she had for years looked up with a filial feeling. In the early part of the month, her health began to decline rapidly, and by the doctor's advice, she was taken out of the city for a change. By a good providence, one of the Sikh chiefs allowed the family the use of a house in one of the most delightful gardens near Lahor. She lingered but a little while, and then gave up the ghost. I saw her as often as I could after she left the city, and she was three times visited by Mrs. Newton. She saw the approach of death, and calmly expressed her confidence in Christ; but there was none of that fervor which she had before exhibited. Her views were clear, and she believed herself to be accepted in the Beloved; but we looked in vain for that joy in the prospect of being soon with the Saviour, which one desires to see in a dying Christian. Still I trust her spirit is among the redeemed, and that her joy is now full. If she left not the world in a triumphal car, the reason of it may possibly be found in the fact, that her race was not so swift a one as it might have been; that she continued not to improve in faith and godliness as might have been expected from the grace first vouchsafed to her. Yet if the case be thus, may not many of us who survive be warned to throw aside every weight, and to quicken our steps in the heavenly course? The body of Miriam rests in the European burying-ground, with no monument to mark its place: but the Saviour knows his own.

—

A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF CHARLES BARNETT, A MEMBER OF THE CHURCH AT KOWETAH, CREEK NATION, BY THE REV. J. ROSS RAMSAY.

Died of consumption, on Friday, February 4th, 1851, Charles Barnett, a pupil of the Kowetah Mission school, aged nearly twenty years.

[This young man was for several years connected with the Kowetah station, first as a scholar, and after his health declined, as a neighbour. He was remarkable for his strict regard for truth, and his general excellence of moral character, while his amiable disposition won the love of his companions. Possessed of more than ordinary talent, and always diligent in his studies, his progress in knowledge was very satisfactory to his teachers. But it was as a Christian they regarded him with the deepest interest. Mr. Ramsay continues:]

About a year before his death, he was much concerned for his soul, and one evening called me to his bedside (for he had been sick) and desired to talk with me. He had been reading that excellent book, Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, and was very forcibly struck with the manner in which that author describes the long-suffering and striving of the Holy Spirit with impenitent sinners; speaking of the miserable state of the ungodly, where he asks the question, If there can be anything more dreadful to the sinner than immediate death and immediate damnation? and then replies, Yes, there may be one thing more dreadful than this: it is that the Spirit of God, who has been so long striving with the heart of a sinner, and been all along resisted, may at last determine to take his everlasting flight, and leave the wretch a miserable object of everlasting despair. Charles said all this was very applicable to himself, for he had often resisted the Spirit when he was waiting to be gracious. But he still felt there was hope, though he was afraid that if he resisted another time, that that holy Messenger might take his everlasting flight. He wished my advice what to do; I directed him to yield himself immediately to the call and invitation of the Holy Spirit, to lose no time in giving himself up to Jesus, and thus to seek in earnest the salvation of his soul. He said he would try, and I think that God enabled him, by his grace, to try effectually. He was in earnest, praying night and day, until it pleased God to visit him and grant him an answer of peace. He told me a few days afterwards, that he thought God had heard and answered his prayers. He had given himself away to Christ, and now depended entirely on him for salvation. Some time after he was baptized at his own request, and continued to live a consistent and growing member of the church until his death.

[He was an humble Christian; and though he could not but be aware of the high esteem cherished for him by his friends, he was not thereby filled with conceit, but was modest and retiring in his deportment. On one occasion he was affected to tears by the expressed opinion of a friend, that he was about to pass from the earth to a higher service for God. He replied that his friends thought too highly of him; he did not deserve such respect.

It was his fixed and strong desire to preach the gospel to his own nation; but this was not the will of the Lord. Disease overtook him, and confined him for a long period to the chamber of suffering. He was patient under affliction, though he greatly regretted that he could not go to the house of God on the Sabbath.] To the last, he made the reading of the Bible a part of each day's business, and found great comfort and profit from it. He was rejoiced when any Christian friend would go and read portions of the Scripture to him. When in health he was fond of singing hymns and psalms, but disease hushed his voice, and he would say that he wished "again to hear some of the sweet songs which we used to sing together."

When conversing with him in regard to the near approach of death, he said that he was not afraid to die; for he knew that if he belonged to Jesus Christ, death could not hurt him. Although he said he had not assurance, yet he had a comfortable hope that he was going to be with Jesus. He said that his whole dependence for salvation was on Jesus Christ, and it was the love which he felt that Christ had to his soul, that gave him peace. I saw him the day on which he died—read, talked, sung and prayed with him, and he took great delight in it. One of his last requests was, that his school-mates might become Christians. He had his reason to the last, and just before he died, a few moments, he said, "I am ready," calmly folded his arms and sweetly breathed out his life, falling asleep in Jesus. Thus died a pupil of this mission school, in the blessed hope of the gospel; no doubt called away to a higher sphere of action in his Master's service.

—

OBITUARY NOTICE OF MRS. SUSAN MORRISON, BY THE REV. A. REID, SUPERINTENDENT OF SPENCER ACADEMY, CHOCTAW NATION.

Died at the house of the Rev. Cyrus Kingsbury, on Tuesday night, February 4, 1851, Mrs. Susan Dutcher, wife of Samuel Morrison of Spencer Academy.

It is with deep sorrow we record the death of our beloved sister and faithful fellow-labourer in the work of the Lord. She was an intelligent, humble, and devoted Christian; a laborious and successful teacher, and one eminently fitted for the training of youth. Her death we regard as a calamity of no ordinary character. . . .

This very sudden and unexpected event affords a striking illustration of the words of our blessed Lord: "In an hour when ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." Part of the day on which she died, she spent in the school-room. Early in the afternoon she and her husband left Spencer for Doaksville, partly for the purpose of obtaining medical advice, and partly for the sake of the benefit which she confidently hoped to derive from the ride. When about half-way to Doaksville, her pony became somewhat unmanageable. From the excitement and alarm occasioned by this circumstance, she suffered for a little while very much. For a short time she experienced great difficulty in breathing. In the course of half an hour she became much better, and started again for Doaksville. Before proceeding far, she began to suffer from coughing, and soon again from the difficulty of breathing. Anxious if possible to reach either Pine Ridge or Doaksville, notwithstanding she was so ill, she urged her husband to ride on as fast as he could.

Meanwhile her sufferings continued to increase, until when within two miles of Pine Ridge, they became so intense and intolerable that she could ride no farther. Having left her pony, she was seated on the ground by the road side. The night was cold and dark. In this distressing situation she remained seated on the ground supported by her husband, (for she was not able to lie down on account of the extreme pain it caused her to do so), from six o'clock in the evening until nine. Three long hours of anguish to the surviving husband and of agony to the dying wife! Between nine and ten o'clock she was conveyed by kind friends to the house of the Rev. Cyrus Kingsbury, Pine Ridge. In about ten minutes after she was carried into the house, she was released from her sufferings, and, as we confidently believe, fell asleep in Jesus. On the following day her remains were conveyed from Pine Ridge to Spencer, and on Thursday the 6th inst., they were followed by weeping friends to the burial ground of the Academy, and laid by the side of those of her dearly beloved friend, the late Mrs. Ramsey, and there, to rest until the morning of the resurrection,

"Securely shall their ashes lie
Waiting the summons from on high."

A few months since had our dear sister been called away from us we would not have been altogether unprepared for her departure. But the Lord's ways are not as our ways. Infinitely wiser and better than our ways are the ways of the Lord. It pleased the Lord to raise her up from a bed of sickness, and from what we feared was the bed of death. In his kind providence he permitted her to resume her delightful labours, with bright prospects of greatly augmented usefulness. Though a frequent sufferer from the disease which so unexpectedly terminated her life, she continued at her work with but little interruption until the Lord, whom she loved and revered, called her to receive her reward.

Though we sorrow deeply for the departed, we do not sorrow as others who have no hope. We hear a voice from heaven saying, "Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

MISCELLANY.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH AT SHANGHAI, CHINA.

The new church at Shanghai, we find graphically described by the Rev. Mr. Syle, in the "Spirit of Missions." This edifice was erected, we have understood, at a cost of about $5000, the liberal gift of a gentleman in Boston. His example is worthy of consideration by those who have been entrusted with many talents of their Lord's money. There are some, we may believe, in our own communion who could easily, if their hearts were turned to this object, rear a temple for the worship of God at Lahor, or Furrukhabad, or Shanghai, or some other station,—a church which should be a memorial of their love to Christ, and which the true God would honour with his presence.

Let me now endeavour to give you some idea of the building itself, and of the situation in which it stands, so that you may, if possible, get some impression of the great good that has been accomplished by the building of this church, both in the way of a testimony that we put great honour upon the worship of our God, and that we intend to take possession of the land in His name; and also in having given us a suitable place wherein large congregations can be gathered together to hear the message of salvation, and to be taught how they should behave themselves in the house which is to be called a "house of prayer for all nations."

At the risk of seeming somewhat tedious, I will attempt to make you acquainted with that portion of the city, through which we most frequently pass in making our way to the church, in order that you may better appreciate the feelings which the sight of it seldom fails to awaken in the hearts whose "toils and cares have been given" to its erection.

The ferry-boats which ply from the village near our school-house across to the city, land us at the stone quay in front of the Queen of Heaven's Temple; from which place, a few minutes' walk, through dirty, narrow, busy streets, brings one to the South East Gate—the Fish and Water Gate of the city of Shanghai. The gateway is so low that sedan-bearers are obliged to crouch as they pass under the heavy arch of masonry. Here it is often necessary to fight one's way through the crowd of water-carriers, burden-bearers, hucksters and passers-through of all ranks. Once escaped from the press, and left at liberty to choose one of three ways that open before one—right, and left, and straight on—a visitor would be almost sure to take the street before him, because of the more animated appearance of the shops that stretch along on either side, so as to make the line of street look more like the avenue of a bazár than the thoroughfare of a busy, maritime city; after a while, you pass a Mandarin's dwelling and office—all open courts and side-apartments, straggling and dilapidated; then into the narrow busy street again for a little distance, and then a turn to the left takes you through the place where furs and china-ware are sold; to the right again, and you pass another and much larger Mandarin's residence—this is the head-quarters of the district magistrate, sometimes called the 'Mayor of Shanghai.' Straight on yet a little farther, and then, turning to the left, i. e. to the southward, the line of the main street is covered by an elevation of very peculiar appearance. On a nearer approach, this is discovered to be a bridge, over which a heavy shed-roof is thrown, supported on the one side by the walls of a little "joss-house," and on the other, by a stage used for musical or dramatic exhibitions intended for the hideous little idols' amusement; for such is the professed object of all public stage-playing here.

To stand upon this bridge, which you cannot do without being so near to the huge chafing-dish where incense or fragrant wood is burnt that your face is scorched by the heat, to look up to the stage where the grimaces of a most unnatural stage-playing, or the squealings and clangor of a most detestable music are going on almost incessantly, certainly for four days out of seven; to see the constant stream of votaries, coming with cash and incense, candles and tinsel-money, bowing, kneeling, casting lots which are to answer questions concerning the recovery of the sick, the welfare of the absent, the success of speculations, or the event of lawsuits; to stand and witness all this, and to realize how the incense and candle makers in the neighbouring streets depend on this shrine in their business, and the apothecaries' shops are all waiting to make up the prescriptions drawn by chance from this demon-lottery, and the actors and musicians calculate upon frequent engagements at this favourite resort for rich and poor—thus making the interests of many trades to be concerned in the maintenance of a worship which offers at the same time a promise of relief to the sick in body and the anxious in mind; all this put together, works up in the mind of a Christian observer such a feeling of horror at what he sees, and of hopelessness as to what he may look forward to, that he is almost sure to turn away and go down the southern slope of the bridge, saying to himself, over and over again, "Where Satan's seat is, where Satan's seat is!"

After thus proceeding a few steps, if he should raise his eyes, he would notice a low brick wall, built more neatly than any other to be seen in the neighbourhood, for the houses hereabout are all of the poorer sort. Another glance, and what does he see? Some thirty feet back from this low wall, and there stands a church—a Christian church! Its solid walls and pointed windows, and tapering pinnacles; its buttresses and parapet; its windows, with their diamond-shaped panes, and doorways with their receding mouldings—all combine to pour in upon his mind that flood of associations, the force of which is made overwhelming by reason of the strong contrast which the building exhibits when compared with every surrounding object. There it stands, in the very middle of this heathen city, at once a monument to the honour of the True God, and a place wherein to hear His Gospel preached.

The interior is easily described. A moderate-sized chancel, at the south end, gives distinctiveness to the whole building, and its large window affords light and air in abundance—both matters of much importance in a climate where winter days are lowering, and the summers intensely hot. On either side of the chancel are doors, both above and below—of those below, one leads into the vestry where the minister can spend his quiet hours of prayer and preparation; and the other, into a tract depository and reception-room for inquirers and catechists with whom personal interviews must very frequently be held. Full-sized galleries extend round the three sides—east, north, and west; and here is the place allotted to females, old and young, who attend in good numbers. Simple, substantial benches are arranged throughout the church, affording room for kneeling when the time shall come that the poor ignorant idolaters shall have learned to worship Him "to whom every knee shall bow." The pulpit, with a reading desk below and in front, stands in the middle of the space before the chancel, and from it the preacher's eye and voice can reach without difficulty the remotest of his auditors. The ceiling, which is in Chinese style, exhibits height enough to suit the other proportions of the building, eighty feet by forty, while it is not so lofty as to waste the preacher's voice.

Two staircases in the vestibule, which is walled off at the north end, afford access to the galleries, while the body of the church is entered chiefly by a large door in the middle of the eastern side; though there are smaller side-doors through which it may be entered from the vestibule.

The wood-work is all varnished of a dark brown colour, except the pulpit and chancel-rails, which are made of Indian teak. The walls are washed stone-colour, which makes the pure white of the chancel arch stand out with more conspicuous brilliancy.

Only one other feature of the interior remains to be mentioned, and that is, the little door at the south end of each gallery, opening into two small apartments which stand over the vestry and tract-room respectively. These apartments are private studies—one for the Bishop, and the other for the Missionary who may be his assistant for the time being in carrying on the services of this—the Cathedral—the Mother Church, the visible and most valuable rallying-point of our present and future missionary operations.

Passing out of the north door, and taking as many steps off from the building as the narrowness of the street will allow, one may obtain the only point of view which brings two sides of the church before the eye at once, and then the strain to look up is painful. The best view would be from the bridge before-mentioned; but a little two-story house, six rooms in all, shuts out from sight everything but some of the pinnacles. Mr. West, the artist who was here some time ago, in taking his sketch, has acted, I believe, on the supposition that these buildings would be removed, and has made his drawing accordingly. I, for one, should be very glad to see this supposition realized; and that not merely because it would render the church more prominently visible, but also because the danger of fire would be greatly lessened by the removal of these tenements.

CHRISTIAN LIBERALITY IN HUMBLE LIFE.

In the course of the late autumn, the Rev. Mr. Nesbit of Bombay arrived unexpectedly at ———, on a Saturday evening, intending to preach next day, and to ask a collection in aid of the funds for erecting mission premises at Bombay. All that could be done, in the circumstances, was to intimate at the close of the forenoon's diet of worship, that Mr. Nesbit would preach in the afternoon and evening, and that the collection would go to the object of his visit. At an early hour on Monday forenoon the minister was waited upon by ———, a servant man, and unmarried, who expressed an anxious desire to see Mr. Nesbit. On finding that Mr. Nesbit had gone out, he explained to the minister the special purpose he had in view. He said that he had been taken by surprise the day before, and had nothing but a trifle in his pocket, which he thought was too little for him to give. He was quite satisfied that the Lord required the buildings which were proposed; they were evidently indispensable to the success of the missionary work; and therefore it was the duty of the Lord's people to provide the necessary funds. He then put into his minister's hand a sum of money as his contribution to be given to Mr. Nesbit. The sum was ten shillings. The minister expressed his surprise that he should give so largely to one object, however excellent. "No, sir," was the reply. "The Lord enables me; it is my own wish as a Christian man to give so much." Some conversation ensued, in the course of which this humble but exemplary disciple said, that he had never been allowed to want for money to give to the Lord's cause. He put half-a-crown into the plate for every one of the schemes; he considered it his duty, and felt it his privilege to do so; and had never been the poorer for any thing he had devoted to Christian objects. Not long before he had been out of place; and, while so unfavourably situated, there came round the day of the collection for one of the Assembly's schemes. He resolved to give his usual contribution—his half-crown—and did so. "And very remarkable it was," he said. "The Lord returned it to me in the course of two or three days in a way totally unexpected. The same thing has happened to me oftener than once. The Lord has never allowed me to want for money to give to him, and I believe he never will. It vexes me," he added, "to see how unwilling professing Christians are to support the cause of Christ, and how very little is actually given." Were the spirit of this servant-man more generally diffused, our missions abroad would be more prosperous—our Church at home more influential and blessed—our ministers more efficient in the work of saving souls—our people richer far, both in the perishable wealth of this world, and in the unsearchable treasures of the kingdom of heaven.—Record of the Scotch Free Church, Nov. 1850.

SLOW RETURN OF MISSIONARY FRUIT.

One of the difficulties we have to contend with is, the Church is impatient for the fruits of missionary labour among the heathen. As soon as a missionary is in his field we demand visible fruits—the conversion of souls. We forget that the language of the people is to be acquired; their confidence in their own religion is to be destroyed; and then their conviction of the truth of the religion we offer them must be accomplished; and after all this, they are only in the condition of the masses of people in our own country; nay, not in so good a condition: the bonds which bind them to their old customs and friends must be broken upon their awaking to a sense of sin, and becoming converted. Yet all this is being accomplished; slowly, it is true, but surely. The following paragraph will illustrate this, and teach the Church and her missionaries to labour and to wait:

"Dr. Judson was at his station six years before he baptized a single convert. After three of these years had elapsed, he was asked, in view of the little apparent progress, what evidence he had of ultimate success. 'As much,' he replied, 'as there is a God who will fulfil all his promises.' This faith had not grasped a shadow. Thirty-one years had elapsed since his first baptism, and now seventy churches, averaging one hundred members each, were exhibited.—Missionary Advocate.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN MARCH, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Northampton ch 17; West Milton ch, fem miss soc 11 — 28 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Bath First ch — 67 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Hamptonburg ch ann coll 34 83, mo con coll's 9 17; Goshen ch, young people's miss soc to con NATHANIEL WEBB l m 30; Hempstead ch 3 — 77 00

Pby of North River.—Wappinger's Falls ch mo con 7, Sab sch 3 50 — 10 50

Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 4 25; North Salem ch 4 50; Bedford ch 26 75 — 35 50

Pby of New York.—New York 1st ch mo con 130 56, less 10 for "Foreign Missionary," a female member for building church at Shanghai 100; Madison Avenue ch mo con 30, less 7 25 for "Foreign Missionary;" Williamsburg ch mo con 18 25; Forty-second street ch mo con 17 50; Chelsea ch mo con 23 65; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 24 68, less 10 for "Foreign Missionary;" Duane st ch mo con 19 88, ann coll addl C Beers 25; Rutgers st ch mo con coll's 48 54, Mrs Noah Smith 5 — 415 81

2d Pby of New York.—Peekskill ch Sab Sch miss soc 20 25; Canal st ch mo con 5 — 25 25

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Woodbridge 1st ch Henrietta and Anna Maria Hart (their earnings) 2; Westfield ch mo con 2 50; Baskinridge ch 50 — 54 50

Pby of New Brunswick.—Princeton 1st ch 91 50, Infant Sab Sch 1 66; Middletown point ch 25 01; Bound Brook ch 86; New Brunswick 1st ch Ladies' miss soc 50; Dutch Neck ch 8; Nottingham ch 12 — 274 17

Pby of Newton.—Easton 1st ch Sab Sch to ed Joseph Burke, Jesse M Howell and Cathrine Innes in India — 50 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Philadelphia 2d ch Sab Sch to ed James Nassau, William Dulty, Mary Rice and Maria Wood in Northern India, and also to con their Pastor Rev C W SHEILDS l d 100; Philadelphia 6th ch mo con 25 25; Philadelphia 10th ch Mrs and Miss Tate 10, a Friend 2 — 137 25

Pby of New Castle.—Ladies of Oakland Female Institute to ed James Grier Ralston — 27 00

Pby of Donegal.—Chestnut Level and Little Britain chs — 40 00

Pby of Baltimore.—New Windsor ch 25; Balt 2d ch 50; Monokin ch 32; Buckingham ch 15; Balt. Md. A Lady 5 — 127 00

Pby of Carlisle.—Carlisle ch ann contbn 99 50, mo con coll's 23 61, Andrew Blair to con his grandson ANDREW BLAIR l m, and for Jewish Mission 30, bequest of Mrs Isabella Love dec'd 12; Cumberland ch 18; Green Castle ch 85 — 268 11

Pby of Northumberland.—Williamsport ch — 10 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Pine Run ch bal to con Rev T S LEASON l m 13 50; New Salem ch 18; Saltsburg ch 1; Congruity ch 22 60; Plum Creek ch 25 38, Rev S M McClung 4, Mrs Nancy McClung 4, Robert Martin 1, Rebecca G McClung 1, Masters John C McClung 1, Samuel A McClung 1 and John G McClung 50 cts; Parnassus ch 10 75; Murrysville ch 18; Beulah ch 80 56 — 202 29

Pby of Redstone.—Greensburg ch in part — 53 00

Pby of Ohio.—Alleghany City 2d ch 20 05, Mr Hanfield 1; Lawrenceville ch Sab Sch 35; Raccoon ch in part to con their Pastor Rev C V McKAIG l d 89 17; Sharon ch in part 14 05, Children of Rev S C Jennings (their savings) 1 19; Sewickley ch of which 60 to con Rev JAMES ALLISON and Rev D E NEVIN l m's, and 30 from Ladies of Edgeworth Seminary to con Mrs MARGARET NEVIN l m 90 — 250 46

Pby of Alleghany.—North Butler ch 12; Scrubgrass ch 20; New Salem ch 1; Butler ch addl 27; Amity ch to con their Pastor Rev M SATTERFIELD l m 30; Tarentum ch 5 — 95 00

Pby of Beaver.—New Castle ch — 50 00

Pby of Clarion.—Callensburg ch fem miss soc — 15 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling Va. Miss Frances Wilson to ed Henry Martyn at Ningpo 25; Claysville ch 32; Pigeon Creek ch in part 11 — 68 00

Pby of St. Clairsville.—Crab Apple ch addl 44; Wheeling Valley ch 8; Martinsville ch 3 — 55 00

Pby of Steubenville.—Richmond ch in part 11; East Springfield ch in part to ed C C Riggs at Ningpo 11; Carrolton ch in part 17 94; New Hagerstown ch in part 34; Corinth ch in part to con Rev Mr BROUGH l m 24 72; Island Creek ch in part 6 85, Master John Cunningham 15 cents; Two Ridges ch in part 20 07, Master Frank Eaton 50 cts, Miss Fanny Eaton 50 cts; Cross Creek ch 9 50, Master John Marsh 10 cts; Ridge ch 5 58; Centre Unity ch 7 — 148 91

Pby of New Lisbon.—Glasgow ch — 10 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Waterford ch bal of sub. 3 12, Children's coll for March 2 13; Mansfield ch addl 5; Chesterville ch 4 51, Rev F A Shearer and Mrs Shearer 5; Frederick ch bal 6 99; Lexington ch Rev Luke Dorland 3 32 — 30 07

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Chillicothe.—Chillicothe 1st ch 117, Young Ladies miss soc 7, Sab Sch 9, Inft Sab Sch 1; South Salem ch 233 64 in all for support of Rev Robert Fullerton, Futtehgurh, Northern India — 367 64

Pby of Miami.—Yellow Spring ch — 20 00

Pby of Cincinnati.—Cincinnati 7th ch 62 18, mo con 6 05 — 68 23

Pby of Oxford.—Seven Mile ch 24 20; Salem ch 20 — 44 20

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Crawfordsville.—Coal Creek ch 5, Children 1 50, Mrs Smock 50 cents — 7 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—Springfield 3d ch 30, Sab sch to ed Richard V Dodge at Canton 30; Providence ch Rev Thos Galt 10; Hillsborough ch 14 55; North Sangamon ch 15 67; Union ch 23 31; White Hall ch 88 cents — 124 41

Pby of Schuyler.—Popes River ch — 10 00

Pby of Rock River.—Galena South ch mo con colls 19 03, juv miss soc to ed Hempstead Ripley 25 — 44 03

Pby of Wisconsin.—Waukesha 1st ch — 18 50

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of Missouri.—Booneville ch to con Rev W G BELL l m 44, Rev W G Bell 10; Auxvasse ch 13 92; Fulton ch 50; Columbia ch 25; Rocheport ch James H Parker 10, Mrs Keiser 1, Miss M J Mulholland 50 cts, Dr. A H Robertson 5, Mrs Hayes 1 — 160 42

Pby of St. Louis.—St Louis 2d ch 219 15; St Charles 1st ch bal for sup of Rev E McKinney 36, a member for Jewish Mission 10; St Louis Central ch 76 15, Rev Dr N H Hall 5; St Louis Westminster ch 21 50; Dardenne ch in part to const Rev THOS WATSON l m 9 05 — 376 85

Pby of Potosi.—Farmington ch — 13 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Langollen Ky — 2 00

Pby of Louisville.—Louisville 1st ch ann coll addl 111 50, mo con 12 50; Louisville 2d ch mo con 20; Louisville Chesnut street ch addl 21 85; Shelbyville ch 10; Mulberry ch 2 35 — 178 20

Pby Muhlenburgh.—Princeton ch 7; Paducah ch in part 10 90 — 17 90

Pby of Transylvania.—Richmond ch mo con 9 30, Sab sch 6; Glasgow ch 2; Harmony ch Mrs J C Barnes 5 — 22 30

Pby of West Lexington.—Georgetown ch Mary B Duke 5; Frankfort ch mo con 4 50; Mt Sterling ch 6 50; Bethel ch in part to const Rev J H DINSMORE l d 15 — 31 00

Pby of Ebenezer.—Flemingsburg ch 16 20; Carlisle ch 10; Millersburgh ch 12, in all 38 20 for sup of Rev Charles W Forman Lahor Nor Ind — 38 20

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Lexington.—Fairfield ch A R Cummins 5; Staunton ch addl 3 25; Mt Carmel ch 12 — 20 25

Pby of Winchester.—Pattersons Creek ch 10; Moorefield ch 16 50 — 26 50

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Fayetteville ch for female Christian education in Northern India 60 20; Wilmington church of which 8 62 for African Mission 39 — 99 20

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Maury.—Zion church — 65 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Harmony.—Bethesda ch 140, less 15 50 for "Foreign Missionary," Youths miss soc to ed Samuel Davis 30 — 154 50

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Hopewell.—Columbus ch Sab sch to ed C B King at Furrukhabad 30; Macon ch 171 25 — 201 25

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Mesopotamia ch addl 4, Sab sch for scholarship at Futtehgurh 6; Greensboro ch juv miss soc to ed William Stedman Peck 10; Tuscaloosa ch 40 — 60 00

Pby of East Alabama.—Bethel ch N McLeod — 1 00

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Pine Ridge ch in part 45, less 2 75 for "Foreign Missionary;" Bethel ch in part 40 65, Mrs P Daniell to const Mrs CATHARINE S DANIELL l d 100, Mrs Murdock 20, Miss Edwards 10, Mrs Watson 20 — 232 90

Pby of Louisiana.—New Orleans Soc of Inquiry on Missions 30; Prytanea st ch mo con 22 85; Natchez Mi Rev Thomas A Ogden 30; Plaquemine ch 42 17, less 3 for "Foreign Missionary;" Lafayette City 1st ch in part 7 35; New Orleans 2d ch of which 15 55 from Sab sch to ed John Steele 80 — 209 37

5238 67

Less from Cincinnati Pby.—Amt from Juv Miss Soc of Cinna 1st ch acknowledged twice in error — 104 51

Total from churches — $5134 16

LEGACIES.

Gerardstown Pa. Legacy of Miss Rebecca Rippey	1000 00
Tarentum Pa. Bequest of Margaret Jane Smith	30 00
Cross Creek Village Pa. Legacy of Mrs Mary P Smith to const Gen JAMES LEE l m	50 00
		1080 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bellmont Pa. Welsh Cong'l ch	10 00
New York, A Friend	1000 00
Do Children of W McJ Bensel	5 00
A Friend	1 00
'A Sojourner' in aid of schools among American Indians	2 50
A few individuals for Indian churches	600 00
Do for chapels in Africa	180 00
Phila Pa. Ladies Jewish Missionary Soc	34 25
Lebanon Pa. Mrs E H	5 00
A Friend	2 50
Castleton Vt. C S F	3 00
A Lady	15 00
Citizens of New Derry Pa	25 00	1883 25

Total receipts in March — $8097 41

WM. RANKIN, JR., Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Ladies of First ch New York 1 Box clothing.	108 75
Classs of Young Ladies First ch N Y 36 garments for Seminole Mission	19 25
Infant Sab Sch First ch N Y one quilt for Aaron B Belknap at Spencer Academy, and 14 Testaments for school at do
New York two Ladies 124 garments, 17 pair shoes	96 25
Ladies of Mount Pleasant ch. St Clairsville Pby. one box clothing	67 87

NOTICES.

LETTERS relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to WALTER LOWRIE, Esq., or the Rev. JOHN C. LOWRIE, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

LETTERS relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to WILLIAM RANKIN, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

PAYMENTS OF MONEYS for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

BOXES OF CLOTHING, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents each.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "FOREIGN MISSIONARY, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. John Leyburn, D. D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. Joseph P. Engles, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. Engles, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. Mitchell, M. D. Treasurer.

KINDLY AID.

By reference to the acknowledgments of donations in this paper, our readers will be gratified to see that our zealous and successful agent Mr. Mahon has been very kindly admitted to the pulpits of churches in connection with the other General Assembly, and that he has received from them liberal donations for aiding the Board in carrying on its plans. But few of our publications would be unwelcome in any branch of the Presbyterian family, and it is with great pleasure that we acknowledge such fraternal aid as this, in extending their circulation and usefulness.

POPULARITY OF THE "VISITOR."

The Sabbath School Visitor is still pursuing its career of prosperity under the increasing smiles of favour with which it is everywhere greeted. The subscription list has almost reached twenty thousand, and the increase averages about one hundred daily! It can be furnished in quantities from the commencement, or from any other month.

Subscribers for single copies must begin with the January number.

SYNODICAL COLPORTEUR ENTERPRISE.

We are happy to learn from those who are intimately acquainted with the progress of this work, that from present prospects they hope to accomplish twice, if not three times, as much this year as they did last. This result is, in part, inferred from the increased demand for the books of the Board—of which three times as many have been distributed, by sale or gift, as in the corresponding months of last year. Of course funds are needed to furnish the supply, and to sustain the colporteurs.—Watchman and Observer.

A COLPORTEUR WHO CANNOT PASS BY THE DESTITUTE.

Quite sure are we, that our readers will say that the humble but excellent writer of the following letter should have every facility for carrying out his heart's desire in the good work in which he is engaged. His field is in the Great West, where he sees and mourns over the painful destitutions by which he is surrounded. When will our churches open their hearts and their hands to this important cause, so that the Board may supply liberally all such calls as this? Who can doubt that one breathing the spirit of piety with which these paragraphs are pervaded, must be an instrument of much good, when engaged in the work of colportage?

"In most places where I have been, I was kindly received, and, on the whole, my work has been a pleasant one, although attended with much toil and exposure in unfavourable weather, and worse roads than any one who does not travel in a backwoods country could well conceive of; but so that God's name is glorified, and his cause is advanced, I will rejoice and give him the glory. My instructions were, to call on all the churches in the Presbytery, so far as practicable, and my visits in general have been to Presbyterian families; but in one small town I went to every house, and every shop and office, where I could find either rich or poor, saint or sinner—where there were five different religious denominations, and ours one of the least; and the result was, the largest day's sales I made during my service, although there had been a colporteur of the Tract Society there, a respectable man, with a good stock of books, for two or three years. This gives me reason to believe that our books may be sold to all classes of men, without distinction, with a few exceptions.

One of my largest sales to one family, was to a member of the United Brethren's Church. His cabin was small, and prospects appeared unfavourable, and I thought of passing by, but on reflecting a moment, I went in. It proved to be a pleasant visit, and I hope it may be a profitable one, both to the family and to myself, as an encouragement and reproof, never to pass the most obscure and lowly abode, lest I might pass the Saviour's dearest friends, unawares to myself. I went away with my spirit refreshed, believing and praying for the blessing of God on my visit, and the seed sown. But from many a splendid mansion have I turned away, with disappointed feelings, without being able to persuade them to purchase one page of your valuable works. One of the most painful parts of my services is to be compelled to pass so many fellow-travellers to eternity, and not be allowed to leave one line to warn them that now is the day of salvation, and this the important time for escape from the city of destruction. As the supply of tracts that came to my hands was small, they soon ran out.

I would say, that if I am continued in the service, my request is, to be liberally furnished with tracts and cheap volumes for gratuitous distribution: and should this meet the eye of some benevolent individual whose heart the Lord has opened, I would say to him, that if I am continued on the field of labour, I will take the toil of sowing, if they will furnish the seed, and, at the harvest, I hope we shall have the pleasure of together seeing the fruits brought home to glory. It would take a soul composed of more unmovable feeling than mine, to pass by the widow, the orphan, and the afflicted, because they have no means to pay for a book to cheer or direct them. It was careless sinners that moved the compassion of the Saviour to make the greatest of all sacrifices. He wept over sinners, and shall we not shed a tear for those souls when we see them stand careless on the brink of a fearful gulf? Although they may have their pockets full of money, I do not feel willing to pass by without pouring in the oil and wine, to heal their malady: and I would say that very much depends on this subject, whether I give my consent to serve as a colporteur. I feel it to be no small sacrifice (were I paid ever so well,) to leave my companion and children alone, in my straitened circumstances, without my aid to take care of, and cheer and comfort them in the hour of need; but as I hope my soul's desire is to advance the Saviour's cause, and especially that branch of his church to which I stand connected, I wish not to be deprived of the means of accomplishing the desirable object. Near as my friends are to me, I remember the Saviour says, that if we love our friends more than him, we are not worthy of him; and a precious promise he gives to those who have left all for his sake. And I think, if I am not mistaken, that for some years past I have felt willing, if Providence would open a door of usefulness in which I was capable of serving him, and be furnished with means to support my family, I was willing to do all, in my imperfect manner, that I was capable of doing.

So far as I have had opportunity of knowing, the clergy of other denominations welcome us to sell all we can to their people; and as vast numbers have no preferences, to them both our doctrinal and practical books would be acceptable and important, and many in this way would be supplied with our books, who do not attend any place of religious worship, or at least only on extraordinary occasions.

You will please to accept of the grateful thanks, through your colporteur, of many whose hearts have been made glad by the benevolence of your Board and its supporters.

A COLPORTEUR'S GRAY HAIRS PLEADING.

The following simple narrative of a colporteur, who in his old age is devoting himself to this work of difficulty and self-denial, will speak for itself. We think our readers will agree that good may be hoped for from the seed sown by such a labourer. Benevolent friends have sometimes asked that a particular colporteur should be designated that they might pay his salary. We doubt whether a better selection than this one could be made for such a purpose.

"It should be remembered that all the back part of the counties assigned me are inhabited by a wild uncultivated people. I do not consider that that colporteur always does the most good who sells most books. There is a great temptation to pass by the poor and go to the rich. I have spent more than five weeks along the Ohio river, and sold two hundred and twenty-six volumes, and distributed about two thousand pages of tracts. About four dollars were given me on board steamboats on my passage from point to point. One of the captains told me to come on board his boat whenever I chose, it should cost me nothing. I have now before me an uncultivated field, where there are from fifteen to twenty furnaces, each of which has one hundred hands, besides about fifty families in the greatest spiritual want. I am ready to exclaim, Who is sufficient for these things! May the Lord in infinite mercy go with and strengthen me.

"The colporteur is like a physician who has a great number of patients, and every one must be treated a little differently, notwithstanding they all have the same disease—all are dead in trespasses and sins. I have endeavoured to fill my place and station as far as my limited abilities would permit. I engaged in this work with a trembling heart, but the Lord has been with me. He has lightened my path. I never saw the hand of God so plain before. I never saw so many plain providences paving the way, and lining my path at every step. I sometimes anticipated difficulty and trouble at a place I was going to, but when I arrived there, the walls had all fallen down, and I had nothing to do but to go straight up into the city, for there was nothing to oppose me. Sometimes I had nothing to do but to stand still and see the salvation of God. At other times when I could not plead the Lord's cause on account of weariness or want of faith, the Lord would make use of my gray hairs to plead his own cause, and this not once or twice. Oh how humble I should be! There have been revivals in several places where I have been, but more especially in the church to which I belong. It has more than doubled the number it had four months ago.

"It is but just to say that I have been well received in all places where I have been. I have met with many pressing invitations to return, and certainly I should be very glad to see them again. I see no way in which hundreds and thousands of families can be reached but this. For such a work, it requires more than a common degree of grace in the heart—therefore I am deficient. I have reason to pray daily, Lord, increase my faith and hold up my goings, that my footsteps slip not."

THE FIRST PRINTED BOOK.

It is a remarkable and most interesting fact, that the very first use to which the discovery of printing was applied was the production of the Holy Bible. This was accomplished at Mentz between the years 1450 and 1455. Guttenburg was the inventor of the art, and Faust, a goldsmith, furnished the necessary funds. Had it been a single page, or even an entire sheet, which was then produced, there might have been less occasion to have noticed it: but there was something in the whole character of the affair, which if not unprecedented, rendered it singular in the usual current of human events. This Bible was in two folio volumes, which have been justly praised for the strength and beauty of the paper, the exactness of the register, and the lustre of the ink. The work contained twelve hundred and eighty-two pages, and being the first ever printed, of course involved a long period of time, and an immense amount of mental, manual, and mechanical labour; and yet, for a long time after it had been finished, and offered for sale, not a single human being, save the artists themselves, knew how it had been accomplished.

Of the first printed Bible, eighteen copies are now known to be in existence, four of which are printed on vellum. Two of these are in England, one being in the Grenville collection. One is in the Royal Library of Berlin, and one in the Royal Library of Paris. Of the fourteen remaining copies, ten are in England—there being a copy in the libraries of Oxford, Edinburgh, and London, and seven in the collections of different noblemen. The vellum copy has been sold as high as $1300.

Thus, as if to mark the noblest purpose to which the art would ever be applied, the first book printed with movable metal types was the Bible.

BAD BOOKS.

Bad books are like ardent spirits; they furnish neither "aliment" nor "medicine:" they are "poison." Both intoxicate—one the mind, the other the body; the thirst for each increases by being fed, and is never satisfied; both ruin—one the intellect, the other the health, and together the soul. The makers and venders of each are equally guilty, and equally corrupters of the community; and the safeguard against each is the same—total abstinence from all that intoxicates mind or body.

THREE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Three hundred years ago, no artificer, apprentice, journeyman, husbandman, or labourer, might read the Bible to themselves, or to any other—privately or openly, on pain of one month's imprisonment; nor any women, except noblewomen and gentlewomen, nor any manner of person, within any of the king's dominions, unless appointed thereunto by the king or the king's officer! Such was the law in England when Henry the VIII. was upon the throne! Bless the Lord that we live in an age and land of Bibles.—Congregationalist.

VALUE OF A SINGLE TRACT.

In attempting to cross a river in America, Dr. Coke missed the ford, and got into deep water; but by catching hold of a bough, reached dry land in safety. After drying his clothes in the sun, he met a man who directed him to the nearest village, telling him to inquire for a good lady's house, where he received all the kindness and attention she could show him. The next morning, the Doctor took leave of his kind hostess, and proceeded on his journey. After a lapse of five years, he happened to be in America again. As he was on his way to one of the provincial conferences, in company with about thirty other persons, a young man requested the favour of being allowed to converse with him; and on asking him if he recollected being in such a part of America about five years ago, he replied in the affirmative. "And do you recollect, sir, in attempting to cross the river, being nearly drowned?" "I remember it quite well." "And do you remember going to the house of a widow lady at such a village?" "I remember it well, and shall never forget the kindness which she showed me." "And do you remember when you left, leaving a tract at that lady's house?" "I do not recollect that," said the Doctor, "but it is very possible I might do so." "Yes, sir," said the young man, "you did leave a tract, which the lady read, and the Lord blessed the reading of it to the conversion of her soul; it was also the means of the conversion of several of her children and neighbours, and there is now in that village a little flourishing society."

The tears of the good doctor showed something of the feelings of his heart. The young man resumed, "I have not, sir, quite told you all. I am one of that lady's children, and owe my conversion to God, to the gracious influence with which he accompanied the reading of that tract to my mind; and I am now, Dr. Coke, on my way to conference as a travelling preacher."—Report of London Rel. Tract Society.

NOTICES OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Bible Dictionary, for the use of Bible Classes, Schools and Families. Prepared for the Presbyterian Board of Publication. 12mo. 476 pages. Price 60 cents, without discount.

We announce with much pleasure the appearance of the long expected and much desired Bible Dictionary. It has been prepared with great labour and care by the editor of the Board, who has availed himself of the numerous and valuable works by writers who have preceded him. It is brought up to the present stage of geographical and archaeological discoveries, and recognizes distinctly the system of truth held by the Presbyterian Church. The matter is well chosen, and expressed with clearness and brevity—all extraneous or irrelevant matter being omitted. Instead of unseemly wood-cuts, this dictionary is enriched with a set of maps, with coloured tracings, from steel plates executed in the best style of the art. The type is larger than in most similar works, and the page has a wide, generous margin. Altogether we have seen nothing of the kind which so nearly meets our views of what such a book should be, and we think the best thing each of our Sabbath-school superintendents and teachers could do, would be to furnish themselves with a copy, with as little delay as possible.

TRACTS.

The Application of Redemption, or What is Effectual Calling? Extracted from Dr. Green's Lectures on the Shorter Catechism.

This chapter from Dr. Green's Lectures on the Shorter Catechism has been published in tract form, at the suggestion of a Professor in a military institution, who is also an elder in a Presbyterian church. It is hoped that many others may regard it with the same high estimation, and find it has been as useful, as did the gentleman who has been the means of its appearance in this form.

It is I, or the Voice of Jesus in the Storm, by Newman Hall, B. A.

Come to Jesus! by the same author.

These are two evangelical and admirable tracts, deserving a wide circulation.

How to use the Bible, by the Rev. Wm. S. Plumer, D. D.

One of the best things we have seen from the pen of the author. It gives most valuable practical hints for profitable Bible reading.

Love not the World.

Sympathy with an Afflicted Christian.

These are both well calculated to prove a word in season to the very different classes for whom they are designed.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF MARCH.

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

First ch Trenton (in part) W Wurts 10, Gov Vroom 5, J Fisk 5, G Green 5, Sundry persons 47 50, (addl) Stacy G Potts Esq to const his son Gardner Lloyd Potts hon mem 30 — 102 50

Presbytery of Burlington.

Burlington ch "C V R" — 50 00

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

First ch Elizabethtown per Rev N Murray, D D 52 86; Westfield ch per Rev G B Edgar 28; First ch Elizabethtown (addl) per Rev Dr Murray 10 — 90 86

Presbytery of New York.

Brick ch New York City (in part) — 173 56

Presbytery of Long Island.

East Hampton ch — 13 09

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

Scots ch per Jos P Engles 136; 6th ch per John McClure 240; 10th ch (in part) per Dr A W Mitchell 187 30; Central ch Mr Price 50 cts (addl) — 563 80

Presbytery of Susquehanna.

Towanda ch per Rev J Foster — 00 64

Presbytery of Baltimore.

Monokin ch per Rev J Vallandigham 10 50; First ch Baltimore per Rev J C Backus, D D 200; First ch Washington City per D F Rittenhouse 15 26 — 225 76

Presbytery of Orange.

Danville ch "A friend" per Rev J N Lewis to const Miss Eliza J Currie hon mem 30; Wilmington ch per Rev J O Stedman 22; Lexington ch Mrs Mary A Payne to const C Montgomery Payne hon mem (in part) 5, Henry R Dusenbury 10, A Hargrave, Andrew Hunt each 5, J W S Crowson, A C Wege each 2 50; Greensboro ch Jesse H Lindsay to const self hon mem 30, Jesse H Lindsay, W S Rankin, Jas Sloan, Robt Sloan, Dr D P Wier, Mrs Gilmer, A P Eckel, Jno Sloan to const Rev Jno A Gretter hon mem 37 50, Joshua Butler to const Joshua H Butler hon mem (in part) 15, Miss Olinthia S Hart to const Norman H Bragge hon mem 30, Miss Olinthia S Hart 10; Hillsboro ch Sundry persons 3; Yanceyville ch Dr Nath M Roan to const self hon mem 30, Thomas D Johnston to const self hon mem 30, Geo Williamson do 30, Rev A D Montgomery to const Jas A Montgomery hon mem (in part) 5, Rev Jno S Grasty, Jas Mebane, Mrs M Mebane to const Jno Watt Montgomery hon mem 30, Collection in congregation 54 60; Grier's ch to const Rev Jno S Grasty hon mem (in part) 27 50; Red House ch Richd J Smith to const Jno Baptist Smith hon mem 30; Milton ch N M Lewis, J Wilson, Samuel Watkins to const Rev Jacob Doll hon mem 30, Sundry persons to const Mrs Susan J Doll hon mem 32, all per Rev Jos Mahon — 506 60

Presbytery of Holston.

Leesburg ch Mrs Martha A Strain to const her son William S Strain hon mem 30, Maj Thomas C McAdams to const his wife Mrs Cynthia S McAdams hon mem 30, John Devault to const his daughter Miss Mary Jane Devault hon mem 30, J. C Mitchell to const Mrs Emily H Mitchell hon mem 30, Robt A Thompson 5, Mrs Sally Cowan 5, Sundry persons 6 50—total 136 50; Mount Bethel ch James W Galbraith to const Mrs Jane Galbraith hon mem (in part) 5, John Robinson (in part for do) 10, Capt Wm B Robinson, Wm M Lowrey, each 5, towards const'g Rev Saml Doak D D hon mem, Sundry persons 21 75; Salem ch Rev A A Doak 10, Sundry persons 2 50; New Providence ch Jas R Forgey to const his daughter Miss Ellen Forgey hon mem 30, Jesse Lyons to const Miss Sarah Lucy Lyons hon mem (in part) 15, Wesley A Phipps to const Miss Sarah Jane Phipps hon mem (in part) 15, Wm Lyons to const Miss Matilda A Lyons hon mem 30, Miss Mary A Sprole for hon mem (in part) 10, James Waterson, John Young, George M Lyons and David Lyons each 5, Cash 2 50; Kinkead's ch C Waterson 1; Rogersville ch S R Neill to const Saml R Neill hon mem (in part) 5, Mrs Nancy Dalzell to const self hon mem 30, Mr Hale to const Mrs Clementina Hale hon mem (in part) 5, Mr D Alexander to const Miss Hephzibah Alexander hon mem 30, Geo R Powell, Dr Hugh Walker each 5, Mrs Eliz Simpson, Richd Grantham each 3, Sundry persons 4 95, Mrs Sarah Doak 5, all per Rev Jos Mahon — 415 20

Presbytery of Montgomery.

Collection at Green Spring Va, per Rev Joseph Mahon — 2 85

Presbytery of Concord.

Salisbury ch J G Cairns, Dr Ward James each 10, S L Cowan, Rev A Baker, Prof Morgan, Michael Brown, Mrs Mary Murphy each 5, Sundry persons 26, per Rev Jos Mahon — 71 00

Presbytery of Nashville.

Hermitage ch from "A member" per Rev J W Ogden — 5 00

Presbytery of East Hanover.

First ch Richmond Mary Simpson per Rev T V Moore — 2 00

Presbytery of Sangamon.

Petersburg ch per Rev G McKinley — 20 00

Presbytery of Vincennes.

Princeton ch per S M Archer — 4 55

Presbytery of Lake Indiana.

La Porte ch by Rev John Steele — 3 00

Presbytery of Mississippi.

Natchez ch by Thos Henderson to const Rev J B Stratton hon mem 30, for general purposes 70 — 100 00

Presbytery of Sidney.

West Liberty ch addl per Rev S Brown — 5 00

Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Fifth ch Cincinnati 10; High St ch 2; Reading ch 13 31, Pleasant Ridge (addl) 4 50, per Rev S Brown — 29 81

MISCELLANEOUS.

"A Lady" 2, C K Stribling Esq. U. S. N. per W H Mitchell 25, "C L F" Castleton Vermont 4, Legacy of Mrs P Smith to const Wm Lee hon mem per Rev J Stockton 40; Jonesboro ch (New-school) sundry contributions to const Rev Rufus P Wells hon mem 31, Mrs Ann D Cunningham to const Miss Sarah J Foster hon mem 30; Elizabethtown ch (New-school) David Carter to const Mrs E J Carter hon mem (in part) 15, Sundry persons 7 95; Walnut Grove ch Dr R F Preston to const Mrs Sarah M Preston hon mem 30, Mrs Sophia A Feeter to const Miss Ellen Virginia Feeter hon mem 30, Jno P Buchanan to const Philip Claudius Buchanan hon mem 30, Col Jas L Davis to const Mrs Evelina J Davis hon mem 30, Miss Elizabeth Preston 10, Col John Preston, Capt Jno Gibson, James T Preston each 5, Isaac Kreger 1; Abingdon (New-school) ch Jno M Preston to const Miss Eliz Ellen Preston hon mem 30, Robt R Preston, James R Gibson each 10, Dr Preston, Mr Lynch, Rev Mr McChain each 5, Sundry persons 14 25; Cold Spring (New-school) ch to const Jno R King and Leander G Dryden hon mems 60, Rev Jas King 5, David Farnworth, Buncomb Co. N. C. 5, Col Saml Chunn Buncomb Co. N. C. 10; Fairfield ch Sundry persons 10 — 470 20

Total — $2855 42

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 12th of January last, the Presbytery of Eastern Texas ordained Mr. J. D. Sharp as an evangelist.

On the 12th of February, Mr. Mead Satterfield was ordained by the Presbytery of Alleghany, and installed pastor of the churches of Harrisville and Amity.

Mr. David A. Wilson, who expects to take charge of the Alexander High School, in Liberia, was ordained to the office of the ministry by the Presbytery of Carlisle at their late meeting.

On the 2d of April, the Presbytery of Louisville ordained Mr. William McAfee as an evangelist.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

The pastoral relation which has existed for nearly fifty years between the Rev. A. A. McGinley, D. D. and the churches of Upper and Lower Path Valley, has been dissolved by the Presbytery of Carlisle, at the mutual request of the parties.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. M. G. Wallace and the 1st church of Terre Haute, Indiana, has been dissolved on account of the advanced age and infirmities of the pastor.

CALLS.

Mr. James M. Crowell has accepted a call from the Presbyterian church of Upper Octorara, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. James Coulter has accepted a call to the churches of Conneautville, Ebensburg and Harmonsburg. His post-office address is Harmonsburg, Crawford county, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. D. X. Junkin, D. D., has received a call from the Presbyterian church, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania.

Mr. David Stevenson, licentiate, has received a call to the Presbyterian church in Knightstown, Indiana.

The Rev. William H. Ruffner, of Virginia, has accepted a call from the 7th Presbyterian church, Philadelphia.

The Rev. C. B. Smyth, late of Newry, Ireland, has received a call to the Presbyterian church of Delhi, New York.

The Rev. John D. Matthews has received a call from the church in Henderson, Kentucky.

The Rev. F. A. Shearer has accepted a call to Long Run church.

The Rev. William M. Robinson has received a call to the church at Fredericksburg, Ohio.

The Rev. A. C. Allen, of Mississippi, has received a call to the 1st church of Terre Haute, Indiana.

The Rev. Levi Hughes has accepted a call to the church n Logansport, Indiana.

COLLEGES.

The Rev. Robinson P. Dunn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Camden, New Jersey, has accepted a professorship in Brown University, and will enter upon its duties in May next.

LICENSURES.

At the meeting of the Presbytery of Philadelphia, held on the 9th inst., Messrs. Augustus T. Dobson, J. Price Safford, Washington D. McKinley, and Robert Watts were licensed to preach the gospel as probationers.

Mr. William Noble and Mr. John Squire have been licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of New Castle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The post-office address of the Rev. Reuben Frame is Wappinger's Falls, Duchess county, New York.

The Rev. James C. Carson has removed from East Bethlehem, Washington county, Pennsylvania, to Salem Cross Roads, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Correspondents will please address accordingly.

The post-office address of the Rev. Thomas Aitken is now (by a change of post-offices) North Sparta, New York.

The post-office address of the Rev. Lewis McNeely is Carolina post-office, Haywood county, Tennessee.

The Rev. Robert J. Breckinridge, D. D., has been nominated by the people of Fayette county, Kentucky, for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction in that State. He is the present incumbent, and has exhibited such superior qualifications for the place, that there is little doubt of his election.

The Rev. E. F. Rockwell's post-office address is changed from Statesville to Davidson College, Mecklenburg county, North Carolina.

The post-office address of the Rev. James Weatherby is changed from Holly Springs, Mississippi, to Charleston, Tallahatchie county, Mississippi.

The post-office address of the Rev. Joseph Smith, D. D. is changed to Elizabeth, Allegheny county, Pennsylvania.

The post-office address of the Rev. John Cross is Middletown, Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

The post-office address of the Rev. N. G. Parke has been changed from Lackawana to Pittston, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania.

At the semi-annual stated meeting of the Presbytery of Cincinnati, held on the 7th inst., the Rev. Willis Lord, D. D., presented a letter of dismission from the Presbytery of Philadelphia, and was received, and his name enrolled as a member of that Presbytery.

Varieties.

BIBLES ON THE EARTH.—It is estimated that within the last fifty years 32,000,000 of Bibles have been distributed over the earth, translated into two hundred dialects.

INTERMARRIAGE.—The Superintendent of the hospital for the insane at Indianapolis, in a late report upon the condition of the institution, expresses the opinion, from his own observation, that the intermarrying of relatives is a cause of degeneracy of mind and body, and tends directly to insanity. His opinion is generally held by all who have investigated the subject.

HARDSHIPS OF THE POOR.—In London there are 20,000 journeymen tailors, of whom 14,000 earn a miserable existence by working 14 hours a day, including Sunday. There are also in the same city 32,000 sewing women, who, on an average, make only 4½*d.* or 9 cents a day, by working 15 hours—not quite ¾ of a cent per hour.

AN IMPORTANT MEASURE.—The British government has originated a plan, to obtain, in connection with the census, an account of all places of worship in the kingdom, and the number of worshippers present on a given Sabbath, and has requested the concurrence of the different Dissenting bodies in facilitating this computation. The dissenting bodies have entered into the work with all zeal.

GERMANS IN WISCONSIN.—Of the two hundred thousand souls in Wisconsin, more than one hundred thousand are said to be Germans. This race of men are settling the country on the sources of the Mississippi very rapidly, and in that region, if in any part of the Union, the German character and customs seem likely to impress themselves on the population.

AMERICANS IN GERMANY.—A letter from Berlin, of a recent date, to the Boston Traveller, mentions in evidence of the popularity of Americans in Germany, that an American student, on leaving the University of Gottingen, lately, was honoured with a triumphal procession of the students, in presence of a great concourse of spectators. The American flag was borne aloft in the parade.

RENTED PEWS.—The principal Methodist church in Memphis, Tennessee, rents its pews. A writer in the Southern Christian Advocate says: Some of the "Old Fashioned Methodists grumbled for a time at the innovation; but are now quiet, if not reconciled."

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.—Among the acts recently introduced into the New York Legislature, is one "to establish the Agricultural College of the State of New York, to which there shall be attached an experimental farm."

INFLUENCE OF RELIGION ON PROPERTY IN THE SOIL.—In every part of the world the value of property in the soil is greatly increased by the prevalence of real Christianity. A plantation at Maui, (one of the Sandwich Islands,) which cost less than $5000, has recently been sold for $30,000; and a small store lot in Honolulu has just been sold for $10,000.

SALARIES OF CLERGYMEN.—The following is the average rate of salaries per annum of the clergy in different countries, as collected from an article in the Independent, and from other sources: Hungary, $250; Sweden, $300; United States, $375; English Dissenting Churches, $325; English Established Church, $700; Holland, $500; Norway, $1200; Austria, $1200.

DRUNKENNESS IN THE BRITISH NAVY.—The number of punishments for drunkenness in the English navy during the three years 1846, 1847, 1848, was 1449—equal to about 34,000 lashes.

NO LOTTERIES are to be drawn in California hereafter.

GOLD FROM CALIFORNIA.—In about two and a half years—the time since the discovery of the gold mines in California—it is estimated that $95,000,000 have been taken out; or at the rate of $38,000,000 per annum.

REFUGEES.—The unfortunate refugees from religious persecution in Madeira, who were were sent out to Illinois, are prospering in their affairs, being pleasantly located and advantageously employed.

BIBLE IN CHINA.—It is said, that owing to the extremely low cost of labour and materials in China, a translation of the Bible is sold at Hong Kong for three pence sterling, or about six cents of our money.

THE SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH BETWEEN ENGLAND AND FRANCE.—We have now positive information that this wonderful triumph of man's ingenuity will be in operation on the first of May 1851, when it is expected that Prince Albert and the Duke of Wellington shall open the communication on one side of the channel, and the President of the French Republic on the other. The cables will consist of four wires; there will be three cables, each twenty miles long and three miles apart, the whole weighing four hundred tons; and when chained down to the bottom of the sea, they will be of sufficient strength to resist the anchor of a one hundred and twenty gun ship. The cables will cost £200,000.

TORTOISE SHELL.—The following is the inhuman process of removing the shell from the back of the tortoise. When one is caught by the Eastern Islanders, it is suspended over a fire kindled for the purpose, until heated to such a degree that its shell can be removed with the greatest ease. They are then set at liberty. They are often captured again the following season, and subjected to the same ordeal, but not yielding so much profit, as their shell is much thinner.

NOTICE.

Several applications having been made for copies of the Home and Foreign Record for 1850, we are induced to give the general notice that we have not a single copy for sale, but there are several odd numbers left, which may be had by any subscriber who wishes one to complete his set.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid. Postmasters are authorized to remit moneys, and we hope our friends will avail themselves of this channel to send on their subscriptions.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—Notice, p. 66. Doctrinal Preaching, p. 66. Church Extension, p. 66. Fruits, p. 66. Religious Instruction of the Coloured Population, p. 68. Receipts, p. 68.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—I. Ministerial Education. Dr. Green's opinion of Ministerial Education, p. 69. Agency for the West, p. 69. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 69. On Requiring a Pledge from Candidates, p. 69. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies and Colleges: Education in Scotland, p. 69. True Views of Education, p. 70. Kingston Parochial School, p. 70. McDonough College, Illinois, p. 71. Austin College, Texas, p. 71. Scotch Liberality, p. 71. The Duty of Singing, p. 71. Receipts, p. 71.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—Annual Meeting of the Board, p. 72. Recent Intelligence, p. 72. Fire at Spencer Academy, p. 72. India: Lodiana Mission, p. 72. Furrukhabad Mission. Encouraging Signs of the Times, p. 73. Iowa and Sac Mission. Two Blind Men, p. 74. Obituary: Life and Character of Miriam, a Member of the Church at Lodiana, by the Rev. John Newton, p. 74. A brief account of Charles Barnet, a member of the Church at Kowetah, Creek Nation, by the Rev. J. Ross Ramsay, p. 75. Notice of Mrs. Susan Morrison, by the Rev. A. Reid, Superintendent of Spencer Academy, Choctaw Nation, p. 75. Miscellany: Episcopal Church at Shanghai, in China, p. 76. Christian Liberality in Humble Life, p. 76. Slow Return of Missionary Fruit, p. 76. Receipts, p. 77.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.—Kindly Aid, p. 78. Popularity of the "Visitor," p. 78. Synodical Colporteur Enterprise, p. 78. A Colporteur who cannot pass by the Destitute, p. 78. A Colporteur's gray hairs pleading, p. 78. The First Printed Book, p. 78. Bad Books, p. 79. Three Hundred Years Ago, p. 79. Vulue of a Single Tract, p. 79. Notices of New Publications, p. 79. Receipts, p. 79.

MISCELLANEOUS.—An Example of Church Extension, p. 65. One of God's Aged Ministers in Poverty and Want, p. 65. "Where are the Nine?" p. 65. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 80. Varieties, p. 80.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 6. | PHILADELPHIA, JUNE, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

THE BEST IS LEFT.

"I am fallen," cried Jeremy Taylor, "into the hands of publicans and sequestrators, and they have taken all from me. What now? Let me look about me! They have left me sun and moon, fire and water, a loving wife, and many friends to pity me, and some to relieve me; and I can still discourse; and, unless I list, they have not taken away my merry countenance, and my cheerful spirits, and a good conscience; they have still left me the providence of God, and all the promises of the gospel, and my religion, and my hopes of heaven, and my charity to them too. And still I sleep, and digest, and eat, and drink; I read and meditate; I can walk in my neighbour's pleasant fields, and see the varieties of natural beauties, and delight in all that in which God delights, that is, in virtue and wisdom, in the whole creation, and in God himself."

DREADFUL MISTAKE.

It would be nothing strange, should it be found in the great day of trial, that this age was distinguished as an age of self-deception; and if we take not great heed to ourselves, we shall glide on with the same general current. And it is the saddest, most dreadful mistake that ever man fell into, to dream on of heaven, only to awake and find himself in hell. We had better do anything most hard, be pressed with the greatest evils, encompassed with the most painful difficulties, endure all labours, undergo all suffering, practise every self-denial of the good soldier of Jesus Christ, than remain in such danger. What is it not worth to be unalterably safe in Christ, to have constant experience of his preciousness, to be making constant additions to our knowledge of him, to be nourished daily by his grace, and to be animated constantly by his love? O, if we had anything in this world of a value in the least to be compared with the blessedness of a well-grounded hope in Christ, we would not leave it for a single day in such risk as we do our hope of heaven, by living at such a distance from our Saviour.

What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue! Absorbed with vanities! A vision made for eternity, blinded by the shadows of time! A soul made for God and the boundless realities of everlasting ages, absorbed with earth and the poor worthless trifles of transitory years! Is this the manner in which Christ would have his pupil live? Or is the prize of heaven's eternal inheritance of so little concern? Ah, no! the crown of righteousness is not so little worth.—Dr. Cheever.

THE GRACE OF GIVING.

A cent a week. This is a small sum; but it amounts to fifty-two cents in a year—more than many church members are in the habit of annually giving for the spread of the gospel, at home and abroad.

Five cents a week. Who, with a little economy, could not save this trifling sum; but five cents a week amounts to $2 60 a year—which is considerably above the average contributions for benevolent objects.

Twenty-five cents a week. Very few are so poor that they cannot, by practising a little self-denial, give twenty-five cents a week. But twenty-five cents a week amounts to $12 50 a year.

The Apostolic rule seems to imply that a weekly collection should be made for benevolent objects. And if the "grace of giving" is a grace which deserves to be cultivated, it must needs be often brought into exercise. Nothing is said of the amount. This is to be regulated by the measure of prosperity which has been enjoyed under the good providence of God. But something is said of the spirit in which the gift is bestowed. To render it acceptable it must be given freely—not grudgingly. —Watchman and Observer.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"WE SHALL REAP IF WE FAINT NOT."

BY J. J. MORRIS.

Thou who toilest, think of this!
Labour for thy brothers' sake;
Doubtings from thy heart dismiss;
Fear's dark bondage break.

Bind the broken-hearted up,
Cool the fevered, heal the sore,
Bear the life-imparting cup,
Labour more and more.

At thy gate thy duty lies,
Penury confronts thy brow;
In thy neighbourhood there dies
Many a pauper now.

Give what Jesus freely gave—
Life, and energy, and will;
Every form of insult brave
If it is His will.

Carry, on thy strengthened arm,
Burdens which thy kindred bend;
Every stalwart foe disarm,
Changed by love to friend.

Then in God's appointed time,
From thy services set free,
Then, on yonder hills sublime
Shall thy spirit be.

Stars shall fade and disappear,
Planets from their paths be hurled.
Dreadful, ghastly, quivering fear
Shake a falling world.

Thee, the loftiest honour waits,
Angels compass thee around;
Lo! the burning sapphire gates,
Close the bright profound.

Faint not! faint not, win the prize,
Blood of Jesus marked the way;
Pass to glory in the skies
Thou frail child of clay.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Cook had not then navigated the South Seas; Polynesia and Australia were names unknown to geography; no Humboldt had then climbed the Andes; the Valley of the Mississippi had not then been explored; no European traveller had ascended the Nile beyond the first cataract; the Niger was wholly veiled in mystery; and the Brahmapootra was unknown, even by name, among the rivers of India. The language and dialects of the Eastern world were as little known as the physical aspect and phenomena of the countries. No Sir William Jones had arisen to set the example of Oriental scholarship as a polite accomplishment; the Sanscrit had as yet attracted no attention from Western philologists; the Holy Scriptures had been translated into few vernacular dialects except those of Western Europe; no Carey or Morrison, no Martyn or Judson, had girded themselves to the task of mastering those languages which had hitherto defied, like an impenetrable rampart, all attempts to gain access to the mind of India and China. A hundred years ago, there were neither Protestant Missionary Societies nor Protestant missions, save only those which had been formed for the propagation of the Gospel in the American Colonies, the Danish missions in Southern India, and the Moravian missions in Greenland and South Africa. In fact, the obstacles to success, in almost every part of the world, arising from the ascendency and intolerance of the Papal, Mohammedan, and Pagan powers, added to the deficiency of our knowledge and the poverty of our resources, would have proved little short of insurmountable.—London Patriot.

READERS.

Readers may be divided into four classes. The first may be compared to an hour-glass, their reading being as the sand; it runs in, and it runs out, and leaves not a vestige behind. A second class resembles a sponge, which imbibes everything, and returns it nearly in the same state, only a little dirtier. A third class is like a jelly-bag, which allows all that is pure to pass away, and retains only the refuse and the dregs. The fourth class may be compared to the slave in the diamond mines in Golconda, who casting aside all that is worthless preserves only the pure gem.—Coleridge.

READING.

Few have been sufficiently sensible of the importance of that economy in reading which selects almost exclusively the very first order of books. Why should a man, except for some special reason, read a very inferior book, at the very time he might be reading one of the highest order?—Foster.

How marvellous the infatuation, to delay the inquiry, why I was made to live, till about to die! To neglect inquiring why I came into the world, till about to leave the world! Alas! alas! Many never live till they die!

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

INTERESTING MATTER DEFERRED.

Owing to the large amount of space occupied in the acknowledgment of the receipts of last month, we are compelled to omit much interesting matter in this number of the Record. We have received from Presbyteries in England several interesting accounts from our missionaries of religious awakenings, and more than ordinary attention to the subject of religion, which we intended more fully to notice. The Annual Report will exhibit a large increase to our missionary churches upon a profession of their faith. These are the seals of the power of God's grace, and the glory of the missionary work. To His name be all praise.

We have received $10 from a "Member of the First Church, Baltimore," for the aged minister in want, noticed in the last Record, and have given it the proper direction, by which it will go to the end for which it was given.

PAINFUL RUMOUR.

Before this number of the Record will have reached them, many of our readers will have heard the painful rumour of the probable death by violence of the Rev. Edward R. Geary and his family, on their way to Oregon. Mr. Geary was sent out to that distant field under the care and direction of the Board of Missions. He sailed from New York for Chagres with his wife and three children, on board the Empire City, on the 13th of February last. We have had no intelligence directly from him since. And although there are circumstances connected with this painful rumour which are calculated to fill us with fearful apprehensions of its truth, still we would indulge the hope that there may, in all this, be some mistake, and that his name has been confounded with some of those of his fellow passengers, who unfortunately fell into the hands of cruel murderers as they passed up the Chagres river on the 25th of February last,—an account of which our readers have doubtless seen. No sooner did we hear the name of Mr. Geary connected with these unfortunate victims than we took immediate measures to obtain definite information of the facts in the case. Among others, we addressed a letter to the Department of State at Washington city, and have just received, with a promptness and fullness worthy of all praise, all the information in possession of our Government relative to these murders. We have before us extracts of the despatches of the American consuls at Chagres and Panama, of the dates of March 3d and 10th. In these they make mention of the murder of a party of eight men, two females, and one child, by the four boatmen who rowed them up the river. They also allude to reports of the graves of females and children on the banks of the river, other than those mentioned above. The names of four of those then known to have fallen by these merciless assassins are given, viz. John W. Steel, of Waterloo, Indiana; Joseph Brooks, New York city; Catherine Cameron, and a Mr. Moody. Those of the remaining number had not been ascertained; leaving the matter of this painful rumour still uncertain. We will, however, have such information in a few days as will enable us to decide, almost with certainty, of its truth, and will give it in the next number of the Record. We shall therefore wait with intense anxiety; and should it prove to be true, it will not only be startling and painful intelligence to many hearts, but also another of those dark and inscrutable providences which cannot be understood this side eternity. Our consolation is, that God reigneth, and that all his purposes toward his Church and people shall be accomplished, and in such manner as shall be for his glory and their good.

CHANGES EFFECTED IN CHURCHES BY EMIGRATION.

A pastor, settled in Ohio, once considered the "Far West," says:—"I am discouraged with the unsettled character of many of the members of our church here. So many remove West, that we seem to gain very little strength from year to year. In 1840, when I came here, there were 59 members in the church, and though upwards of 70 have been added since, yet at present we number but 76 in all."

From the restless and migratory character of our people the same complaint is made, and the same difficulty experienced in all parts of our country. Our brethren must therefore remember that the affliction is common to all, and not give way to discouragement, but do the best with the people while they remain with them, and send them forward when they leave, better prepared to form and support new churches wherever they may go.

DONATION VISITS.

A PLEASANT AND EASY WAY TO DO A GOOD THING.

"Ohio, Feb. 1851.—The people of my charge, sensible that my salary was too small for the support of my family, arranged what they termed a 'Donation Visit.' Although the day was unfavourable, yet we had a large and interesting, and I trust a profitable meeting. Besides refreshments for the occasion, they brought some eighty dollars' worth of well selected articles for the comfort of the family, and about the same amount in cash; and seemed to carry away an increase of interest in, and affection for the common cause of religion, and for each other as Christians united in common bonds."

R. C. McC.

Another missionary, W. P., writes that his people had treated him in the same manner, and the amount of their visit was nearly eighty dollars.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORT OF THE REV. C. STURDEVANT.

"In descending to particulars in my report, I would desire first to recognise, and gratefully to record the distinguishing goodness of God, which, amid all my wanderings, has been abundantly manifested unto me. Though required to pass through a great variety of climate, to brave burning suns and withering storms, to meet with demic and epidemic diseases, with the danger and trials of an ever changing and transient life, God has been my protection, confidence, and strength.

"The Western Executive Committee has under their supervision more than one-half the territory in the United States. During the last year I have been the only agent constantly employed in this vast field. Two other brethren in the ministry have been temporarily employed, and have laboured, as will be seen from the report of our Committee, efficiently for our Board. But exclusive of what they have raised, I have been enabled to report more funds by near three thousand dollars than have been reported in any former year. To effect this, it is perhaps unnecessary to say that I have travelled extensively, and maintained a very large correspondence. In various ways, by personal application or otherwise, I have brought the claims of our Board before all the important churches open to us in the bounds committed to our control.

"In regard to the prospects of our Board, I would say, while it is painfully true that many, even of those who have means, are doing nothing for that organization which has more of hope and promise connected with its operations than perhaps any other interest of the Church, yet we have abundant evidence that our Board is rapidly growing in the confidence and favour of the people. In the West and South-West, though there have been many causes operating prejudicial to the general interests of the Board, yet an increase of about thirty per cent., in all the departments of the Board's operations in this great field, has been realized. In securing this result, it has been found a matter of no small importance that the Committee which directs these interests is located so favourably for exercising a prompt and accurate supervision of this great section of our common country.

"Allow me to suggest in conclusion, that there is one great field of labour, most interesting and important in its character, comparatively unoccupied by the ministers of our Church—I refer to the work of preaching the gospel to the blacks in our Southern States. In a recent southern tour, I found a rapidly growing feeling favourable to this great work. Had we a man appointed specially to superintend this interest, hundreds of points might be found where our men would be not only favourably received, but entirely supported. Something ought speedily to be done to meet this pressing necessity."

FRUITS.

An Interesting Work of Grace.—From a Missionary in Western New York.

In the month of December there was some more interest in our regular prayer meetings, and a "more earnest heed" to the word preached on the Sabbath than usual. During the week of preparatory services to the communion season, which was the first Sabbath in January, there were evident tokens of the presence of the Holy Spirit in our congregation. The spiritual strength of Christians was increased, and some impenitent persons were serious and thoughtful. Our communion season was one of unusual tenderness and solemnity. It was very manifest now that the Lord was reviving his work in our midst. From week to week there were instances of deep and pungent conviction for sin, and of conversion to God. We have received into the Church fourteen persons on examination, and four by letter. There is now much seriousness in our midst, and we are not without hope that many more will be "turned from the power of Satan unto God." This work, we trust, is of God; and to him we would ascribe all the glory. The means of grace which have been blessed were the preaching of the pastor on the Sabbath, with two lectures, and two or more prayer-meetings weekly, visiting from house to house, and conversing and praying with individuals.—G. W. L.

Another Refreshing Season—Mississippi.

The churches to which God in his providence has called me to preach, have laboured under many disadvantages; yet the Lord has graciously smiled upon them. We held a communion season in Unity Church (Caledonia) early in the Spring, during which time there was an interesting state of things. Christians were awakened to a sense of their duties, and their hearts were refreshed from the presence of the Lord. A prayer meeting was established, and has since been well attended. In July we held a series of meetings, which continued for some time. The good work first commenced among those who had attended the prayer meeting. God heard and answered their prayers. Twenty-three or twenty-four have professed a hope in Christ. The work has spread into the neighbouring churches of different denominations, until the whole surrounding country has been moistened with the dew of Heaven. Taking Unity church as a centre, with a radius of 7 or 8 miles, we would embrace about 200 souls, who have professed to have a hope in Christ. "The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we desire to be glad." In our Church everything has been silent and still. The work seems to be deep, and I hope permanent. There is still an interesting state of things; some fourteen have already been added to the church on a profession of their faith; a number more are expected to join at the next communion. Quite a number of children have been baptised—one interesting family group I will here mention. Mr. ——, a member of our church, has a wife and nine children, all of whom were in the gall of bitterness. His wife and eldest daughter were baptized on a profession of their faith. All the rest—down to the infant, were also baptized. It was truly a household baptism. To God is all the glory.

I also preach to an interesting little community some ten miles distant from any organized Presbyterian church. There are here some three or four pious families which I hope will be a neucleus at no distant day, of another Presbyterian Church.

Talebenela church is the most important point in my field of labour; and although it has not been so signally blessed, yet much has also been accomplished here by the grace of God. Twelve or fifteen have united with this church; a majority of these, however, by letter. Still, there is a deeply interesting state of things without any excitement. The people of God have been praying and looking for a revival. It will, perhaps, not come as they expect. They look for larger drops and a heavy shower, and do not heed enough the gentle dew now descending. This I hope will continue to descend. There is deep seriousness in many cases, and thoughtful attention in others. Several are rejoicing in hope, who have not as yet united with the church. The Sabbath-school, the prayer meetings, and the means of grace of various kinds, are all observed. The field is large and important. Will you not remember us all at a Throne of Grace?

—

From a Missionary in Wisconsin—Increase of Population in the West.

I am acting as the stated supply of the church at Winnebago Rapids. This village, at which most of our members reside, is about three years' old. Four years ago it was on the extreme frontier, with only about a dozen white inhabitants in the town. Now, the frontier is away nearly one hundred miles beyond us, and we have an incorporated village of some seven or eight hundred inhabitants. Our church was organized two years ago last month. We had then eighteen members; now we have more than fifty. I preach here twice on the Sabbath to a congregation averaging from one hundred and fifty to two hundred persons. We sustain a Sabbath school, two weekly prayer meetings, monthly concerts, &c. As a Church we have been steadily growing in numbers and strength, though we have not enjoyed those evidences of God's presence in the conviction and conversion of sinners which is so desirable. For the last few weeks, however, there has been a marked difference in the attention of the people. Our meetings have been remarkably solemn, and we cannot but hope that God will bless the seed sown, and that we may yet see its fruits.

Besides this place, I preach every other Sabbath evening at Menasha, a new village nearly as large as this, two miles distant, on the other outlet on Fort Winnebago. My congregations there have steadily increased. It is difficult to tell what may grow out of this. We have some Presbyterians there.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of April, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Londonderry.—Newburyport 1st ch 100; 2d ch Newburyport 32 — 132 00

Pby of Troy.—Malta ch (in part) to con Rev P S Talmage hon mem — 20 00

Pby of Albany.—Tribes Hill ch 30; Princeton ch 36 04; Albany 2d ch 95 60; Schenectady ch 80 — 341 64

Pby of Saratoga.—Johnstown ch 34 50; Sab Sch of same ch 2 35 — 36 85

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Vienna 1st ch — 21 25

Pby of Wyoming.—Oakland ch 5; Moscow ch 9; Duncan McPherson of Caledonia ch 12 50 — 26 50

Pby of Buffalo City.—Alden ch 15; Aurora 1st ch 8 72; Rev J Dubuar, East Aurora 1 50; Second Ward ch Buffalo City 14 43 — 39 65

Pby of Michigan—Bennington 1st ch — 7 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Goshen ch 42 32; Monticello ch 53 75; Coshocton ch 4 — 100 07

Pby of Bedford.—South Greensburg ch 9 26; Yorktown ch 17; South Salem ch 59 70, and a Friend same ch 25 — 110 96

Pby of New York.—Rutgers St ch 223 02, and from Jos Skidmore same ch 10; Tariffville ch 15; Brooklyn 1st ch (100 of which from G B Lamar Esq) 206 15; Wallabout ch 3 77; Central ch Brooklyn 57 32; 2d ch Brooklyn cash collection 155 25, J D McKenzie 25, Thos Bayless 20—in all 200 25; Jamaica ch L I 22 16; Williamsburg ch 11 63; Brick ch New York City (addl) 5; Youths' Miss Soc of Rutgers St ch 177 45; Forty-second St ch N Y 49 25; University Place ch Ladies' Soc 147; Fifteenth St ch 189 25 — 1317 25

Pby of New York 2d.—Scotch ch cash collection 243, John Johnson 150, R Carter 50, Richard Irvine 50, Wm Post 62 50, James Morrison 10, in all 545 50; Mount Washington Valley ch 42 42; Mount Pleasant ch Sing Sing 16; 2d ch West Farms 15 — 638 93

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Mt Freedom ch (in part) to con the Rev Jos McMurray an hon mem 15; New Vernon ch 16 31; Mt Olive ch 10; 1st ch Woodbridge to con Mrs Eliza Bartoul h. m. 62 — 103 31

Pby of New Brunswick.—Titusville ch 12; People of Holmanville 2; Trenton 2d ch 13; Millstone 1st ch 10 — 37 00

Pby of Burlington.—Burlington ch — 100 00

Pby of West Jersey.—Cedarville ch 50; Blackwoodtown ch towards support of Rev E Eels 10 50; Pittsgrove ch (addl) 25 50 — 86 00

Pby of Newton.—Easton 1st ch — 150 00

Pby of Raritan.—Lambertsville ch 25; Pleasant Grove ch 4; Lower Valley ch 2; Milford ch 17 53 — 48 53

Pby of Susquehanna.—Wysox ch — 5 00

Pby of Luzerne.—Newton ch 7; Conyngham ch 12 19; Tunkhannock ch 13 45; Wilkesbarre ch 25; Kingston ch 6 50 — 64 14

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Richmond ch 8; 9th Presb ch Phila to con Rev W Blackwood hon mem 50; Central ch Female Tract Soc for tracts for the missionaries to distribute 49; Sixth ch Phila ann coll 187; North ch Sab Sch, Infant Sch, and Young Men's Bible Class to con Rev Thos L Janeway D D an hon mem 50; Arch St ch, bal of collection on card as follows:—B A Fahnestock 10, J W Fahnestock 5, Thos Earp 25, W Worrell 20, F V Krug 20, W H Safford 5, Edwin Coolidge 10, J F Baker 5, R Johnson 10, Mr Woatman 2, H Sloan 10, W Southworth 1, E M Boughton 2, Cards no name 2, W Taber 2 50, F W Baker 5, C Stoddart 10, J R A 5, J Mason 5, Howell Evans 9, W H Anderson 50 cts, Gold ring sold 1—in all 165, less 2 for collecting, or 163—(previously acknowledged, 79 47, making 242 47) — 507 00

Pby of Philadelphia 2d.—Norristown ch 6 07; Conshohocken ch 3 — 9 07

Pby of New Castle.—New Castle ch as follows:—Mrs Gray 5 50, Mrs Smith 5, Misses Smith 75 cts, Mrs Jefferson 2, Miss Scofield 5, Mrs Potts 1, Dr Couper 30; Mr Johns 5, Mrs Black 3, Miss L Janvier 10, Mrs Gemmill 5, Miss Johns 2, Miss Moody 1, Miss Booth 6, Mrs Niven 1, William Couper 50, Samuel Couper 5, John Janvier 5, G W Turner 1 — 143 25

Pby of Donegal.—Chanceford ch — 25 00

Pby of Baltimore.—F. St ch Youth's Miss Soc 28 51; 3d ch Baltimore 150; Annapolis ch 30; Taneytown ch 55; 1st ch Baltimore 500; Madison St ch 1 17; Govane Chapel 10; Bridge St ch D C 21 — 795 68

Pby of Eastern Shore.—Churches under care of Rev E Trown 21; Monokin ch 32 — 53 00

Pby of Carlisle.—Millerstown ch 25 50; Williamsport ch 15 23 — 40 73

Pby of Huntingdon.—Huntingdon ch to con Rev L P Hawes and Mrs Mary Allison hon mems 100 95; Middle Tuscarora ch to con Rev A Jardin hon mem 50; through the Treasurer of Huntingdon Presb from the following churches: Hollidaysburg ch 25 82; 1st ch Spruce Creek Sewing Circle 33; 2d ch Spruce Creek 13; Clearfield ch 7; Fem Miss Soc of Alexandria 45, and Sab School of do 5 to con Mr John Porter an hon mem; Strode's Run Lewistown cong 3; Shirleysburgh ch 4 60; Lick Run ch 22 32; Mt Pleasant ch 3; Fruit Hill ch 5; One-half Presb coll at Bellefonte 27 50, less 2 counterfeit returned, making 192 24—and Presb coll addl 50 cts — 343 69

Pby of Northumberland.—Northumberland ch 15; Sunbury ch 9; New Berlin 1st ch 37 75; Brier Creek ch 3 10 — 64 85

SYNOD OF PITTSBURG.

Pby of Blairsville.—Harmony ch, a Friend, 13 50, 10 of which to aid the missionary in Va. who lost his horse — 13 50

Pby of Redstone.—Jenner ch — 3 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St. Clairsville—Woodsfield ch — 5 00

Pby of New Lisbon.—Deerfield ch for religious instruction of coloured population — 26 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Marion.—Churches under care of Rev H Hess 7; Milford ch 6 34; Union ch 1 68 — 15 02

Pby of Richland.—Utica ch 13 82; Olivesburg ch 1; Haysville ch 12 04 — 26 86

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Lake.—Sumption's Prairie ch 2; Valparaiso ch 13; Salem ch 1 50 — 16 50

Pby of Fort Wayne.—Flat Rock congregation — 2 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Wisconsin.—Burnette and Horicon chs — 5 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of West Lexington.—Winchester ch from Mrs Florida Vanmeter — 25 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Winchester.—Received from Jno N Bell, Treas'r of the Presb'y, from sundry churches — 166 39

Pby of East Hanover.—1st ch Richmond from Miss Mary Simpson — 2 00

Pby of Montgomery.—Churches under care of Rev J M Wilson — 3 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Thro' the Treas'r of Presb'y from the following churches: Tirza ch 12 15; Presb coll at Ashpole ch 33 55; Mt Horeb ch from Mrs L G M and three sons 1; Sardis ch, H Elliott Esq 10; China Grove ch, J Elliott Esq 15 50; Brown Marsh ch, E W Barge Esq 7 60, Mr Sellers 6 40, E W Barge 1 40; Bluff ch, Rev E McNair 17 26; Wilmington ch, Rev J O Stedman 62; Fayetteville ch, H Leete Esq 40 60; Laurel Hill ch, Rev F K Nush 18; Centre ch, Rev F K Nush 22 40; Bluff ch, Alex McAllister Esq 11 67; McPherson ch, Rev D Johnson 4 50; Philadelphus ch, M C McNeill Esq 4 50; Galatia ch, A McGill Esq 4 95; Antioch ch, Rev H McLean 7 12, less 1 34 paid for draft, in all 279 26; Wilmington ch 10 — 289 26

Pby of Concord.—Charlotte ch to con Rev Cyrus Johnston and Mary Johnston hon mems — 104 75

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Waxhaw ch 4; Lancaster ch 2; Six Mile Creek ch 2; Purity ch 20; Salem ch 9; Shiloh ch 3 — 40 00

Pby of Harmony.—Camden ch — 116 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Hopewell.—Macon ch 108 73; Athens ch 123 33 — 232 06

MISCELLANEOUS.

Chandler Ward, Franklindale Pa 87 cts; Rev A Gardner, Big Hollow N Y 2 50; Rev Luther Dodd, Shelby Ohio 50 cts; H S C Hamptonburg 10; John Bruster Esq, Shirleysburg Pa 50; Treasurer of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Bible, Tract, Missionary and Education

Society 76 82; Miss Soc of Houston Presb ch, draft on Treas 25 00; John Haswell Esq, West Troy N Y 10 bal to con Margaret Haswell an hon mem, and 10 in part to con Margaret Jane Haswell—20; Presb Sab School, Montgomery Ala 10; S Cummings, Hampton Va 5; Ladies' Miss Soc of Columbus Ga, to con Mr James S Norman an hon mem 50; Rev D V McLean D D, Easton 25; A member of the Presb cong Harrisburg Pa 10; Pro rata dividend of Interest account from the General Assembly per Treasurer G H Van Gelder 389 38; Rev J J Janeway D D, New Brunswick 300; S S Myrick, Peekskill N Y 5; A Friend 2; A Friend, Fishkill Landing 200; Five-sixteenths of Missionary Chronicle receipts for 1850—51, 11 92 — 1193 99

Total — $7653 67

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

Special Donations to the Board of Missions in view of the loss sustained through the late Treasurer, Wm. D. Snyder.

Moses Johnson 100; James Field 100; Capt E Donaldson 100; Rev R Happersett 100; Rev William Chester D D 100; Rev T L Janeway D D 100; Rev C C Jones D D 100; James Murphy 100; "Friends" 10th ch 100; Scotts' ch 185; Rev H A Boardman 65; R S Clark 50; J B Ross 20; W R Abbey 15; Member of 10th ch 10; Rev W Neill D D 10; Dr W Harris 10; J Ogden 10; John Harris 10; Rev F D Ladd 20; Rev J McDowell D D 10; J S McMullin 50; John M Harper 50; John McClure 50; Wm H Hart 20; T E Harper 20; W S Boyd 20; Charles Abbey 20; H C Blair 20; J W Gibbs & Son 20; Latimer 20; L C Edmunds 10; P J Patton 10; W A Solomon 5; Rev J H Jones D D 10; Benjamin Esler 5; A Friend, Central ch 50; Rev Joseph Stevens 20; Rev John Miller 10 — $1725 00

CLOTHING RECEIVED IN APRIL.

A Box from the Sewing Circle of the Presb ch of Allentown N J, valued at 50 00
Two Quilts from Sab Sch of same ch, val'd 8 00—58 00
Two Boxes from the Potter's Mills Sewing Circle of Sinking Creek ch Penn's Valley, Centre Co Pa, valued at 115 41
A Box from the Sewing Circle of the Matteawan ch N Y, valued at 50 00
Nine Boxes from the Ladies of the 10th Presb ch Phila, valued at 438 74
A Box from the Sewing Circle of the Franklin St ch Baltimore, valued at 175 00
A Box of Clothing from the Ladies of Abington ch Pa, valued at 100 00

Total $937 15

CHURCH EXTENSION FUND.

Receipts into the Treasury during the month of April, 1851.

Miss Mary Simpson, 1st ch Richmond Va 1 00
Church under care of Rev Henry Hess, Ohio 0 62
Mrs Rev W B Brown, Hillsboro N C 2 00
Annapolis ch Md 5 00
First Presb ch Baltimore 300 00
Rev James Dubuar, East Aurora N Y 1 00
"W R B" Va, per Mr W S Martien 2 50
A member of Waynesburgh ch Pa 10 00
Steel Creek ch Georgia 2 00
J Dickson, Great Conewago ch Pa 10 00
Scotch Presb ch N Y, cash collection 215 00
John Johnson 200 00
Robert Carter 50 00
William Post 62 50—527 50
Thro' Mission House N Y for church at Brownsville Texas 200 00
Mrs J W 10, Mrs M W 10, C A D 10, S R D 10 for do 40 00—240 00

Total $1101 62

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of April, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburgh 1st ch, No 1 Sab School, for Sab schools in the West 25 05; Pittsburgh 4th ch 30 18; Pittsburgh 5th ch addl 81 cts; Lawrenceville ch 25 75; Pine Creek ch 12; Temperanceville ch 5; East Liberty ch 26; Canonsburgh ch, bal to con Mrs Martha Bracken an hon mem 10; Manchester ch 20 85 — 155 64

Pby of Erie.—Concord ch — 3 00

Pby of Beaver.—Neshanock ch 16; Beaver Falls ch, in part 35; New Castle ch 17 50; Pulaski and Hopewell chs, (of which from Ladies' Missionary Society 12) 24 — 92 50

Pby of Clarion.—Callensburg ch, addl 2 50; Bethesda ch 8; Richland ch 5 37 — 15 87

Pby of Allegheny.—Scrub Grass ch — 8 50

Pby of Redstone.—Fairmount ch, bal to con Rev Wm P Harshe an hon mem — 20 00

Pby of Blairsville.—Rural Valley ch monthly collections 5; Fairfield and Union ch 10 — 15 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Steubenville.—Two Ridges ch 16 85; Bethelem ch 6 25; Still Fork ch 2; Fairmount ch 6 31; Steubenville 1st ch, of which 12 50 from Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin—a thank offering, 62 50 — 93 91

Pby of Washington.—Wellsburg ch 15 50; Holliday's Cove ch 5; Forks of Wheeling ch 18 37; Cross Roads ch 18 75; Mill Creek ch (of which 30 from Mathew Glass, Esq) to con him an hon mem 50 — 107 62

Pby of St. Clairsville.—Cadiz ch 44; Wheeling Valley ch 15; Martinsville ch 10; Woodsfield ch 1 50; Malaga ch 1 — 71 50

Pby of New Lisbon.—New Lisbon ch in part 27; Hanover ch 11 87; Bethesda ch 9 73; Madison ch 9 15; Bethel ch 15 06 — 72 81

MISCELLANEOUS.

Patterson Estate — 45 00

Total, $701 35

MISSIONARY CLOTHING.

Ladies of New Providence ch, a box valued at 37 00
Do Georges Creek and Tent ch, a box valued 42 00
Do New Lisbon ch, a box valued at 53 00
Do Richland ch, a box valued at 32 30
Do Lower Bull Creek, to con Rev Abraham Boyd an hon mem 63 00

☞ The last box was imperfectly acknowledged last month, the valuation not being known.

Total, $227 30

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Clarion ch — 10 00

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of April, 1851.

Haning Fork ch Ky, coll per John A Bogle 33 00
Louisville 1st ch Ky (in part) 30 00
Cloverport ch Ky per Rev Wm McAffee 2 00
Shelbyville ch Ky 87 10
Vicksburgh ch Miss per D B Downing 51 00
Goshen ch Ky (in part) per F Snowden 78 00
Mulberry ch Ky (in part) 12 00
Middletown ch Ky 7 50
Elizabethtown ch Ky per John Athen 7 85
Mrs E Graves, Springfield Ky per R F Caldwell 5 00
O P Sidney, Ohio per J D Thorpe 3 00
Winchester ch Ohio per do 8 00
High Street ch Cin Ohio, Mon Con per do 2 25
Ladies' Sew Soc of Central Pres ch Cin Ohio per do 100 00
Frankfort annl coll in part per Rev S Robinson 205 78
Donation of Rev W W Hill Ky 50 00
Cherry Spring ch West Lex Pby Ky per F G Strahan 26 00
Vincennes ch Ind per J W Maddox 35 36
Washington ch Ebenezer Pby Ky per Jno A Condit 36 00
Murphysville ch do do do 27 00
Louisville 1st Pres ch 1 00
North Sangamon Ill per Rev W W Hill 28 77
Louisville 1st ch per S B Richardson 20 00
1st Pres ch Oxford Ohio per S R Mollyneaux 16 00
Flemingsburgh ch per J T Lopsley 32 00
Gallatin Tenn Pres ch per S G Gray, Clerk of Sess 24 00
Carlisle ch Ky per James Mathews 6 00
J Barbour, Danville Ky per Rev W W Hill 20 00
Jackson Miss in part, per D B Downing 52 00
Hopkinsville Presb ch Ky per Richard Shackelford 22 00
Hopewell ch Synod of Nashville Tenn per Rev A A Mathes 10 50
Jeffersonville ch Ind per J H McCampbell 25 00
A Thank-offering from Rev R B and L A McMullen, per Rev W W Hill 50 00
Boonville Mo per Rev W G Bell 20 00
Owensboro Ky per Rev H H Hopkins 45 00
Monmouth Ill per Rev W F Ferguson 11 00
Greenville Ohio per Rev J A Meeks 12 00
Dry Point Ill per Rev J D Young 2 75
Rattans Prairie Ill per do 3 00
Edwardsville Ill per do 9 00
Hanibal Mo per Rev J H Lorance 2 50
Charlestown Iowa per Rev O J King 3 00
New Lexington Ind per Rev John Mitchel 11 85
D A Wallace, Union Ind per Rev D A Wallace 5 00
Bloomington Ind per Rev Levi Hughes 9 00
Muskatine Iowa per Rev T I Umsted 12 80
Montrose Miss per Rev J B Adams 11 45
Mt Moriah do do do 11 65
Paulding do do do 5 00
Bethany Ind per Rev D V Smock 13 00
Cranfordsville Ind do do 8 65
Rockville (bal) do do do 5 00
Coal Creek do do do 27 50
Warren do do do 34 00
Chester Ill per Rev John Kennedy 6 00
Shiloh Tenn per Rev E O Campbell 10 60
Do Coloured people Tenn per do 1 05
Concord Tenn per do 17 70
Liberty Ill per Rev B L Spillman 5 00
Sparta do do do 5 00
Gallum do do do 5 00
Carrelton Ind per Rev G F Whitworth 8 00
Albany Ill per Rev O J Park 10 00
Brookville Ind per Rev L D Potter 13 00
West Liberty Ohio per Rev J H Gill 30 00
Lexington Ind per Rev J M Candy 13 00
Rev J L Bellville Ohio per Rev W W Hill 4 00
Mrs Angeline Berryville Ohio per do 1 00
Jackson, Tennessee per Rev D L Gray 136 00
Brownsville do do do 115 00
Union do do do 36 05
Denmark do do do 118 05
Trenton do do do 3 00
Zion do do do 4 00
Shiloh do do do 11 65
Concord do do do 17 70
Mr Coltart do do do 1 00
2d ch Memphis do (bal) do do 39 40
Edmonton ch (bal) per Rev Samuel B Cheek 7 00
Harrodsburgh ch (balance in full) per Rev S R McMurtrie 47 50
Bethel ch West Lex Presb per Rev J H Dinsmore 52 00
Salem Miss per Rev D L Gray 40 00
Germantown Tenn per do 43 25
Oxford Miss per do 65 35
College Hill Miss per do 24 60
Rev J H Miller, Miss per do 16 55
Water Valley Miss per do 15 55
Springfield Ill per Rev Geo McKinley 40 00
Zion ch Miss per Rev J Richon 9 00
Canton ch Miss per do 25 00
Ebenezer ch Miss per do 16 75
Paint Lick ch Ky (in part) per Rev R J Johnstone 15 00
Thomas Wallace deceased, Mayslick Ky per Wm Hodge, Trustee 301 50
Pleasant Ridge ch Ohio per J D Thorpe 19 50
Bethel ch Ohio Cin Pby per do 12 40
Ladies' Soc 7th ch Ohio Cin per do 120 00
Urbana Pby Ohio, R M Wood's don per do 5 00
Hillsboro Ohio to constitute their pastor Rev Dr S Steele an hon mem per do 72 35
A Lady Presby of Marion per do 20 00
Monroe ch Cin Pby Ohio per do 9 50
Eaton ch Oxford Pby Ohio per do 5 00
Camden ch do do per do 7 00
Venice ch do do per do 13 00
Hopewell ch Cin do per do 20 77
Springfield Miami Pby Ohio to con their pastor Rev N C Bart hon mem R D M 95 00
Reading ch Cin Pby per J D Thorpe 16 00
Bethel Miss Pby Mrs Jno Murdock $50, others per Rev C Sturdevant $56 05 106 05
Port Gibson Miss Pby per do 90 50
1st ch Lafayette La per do 10 85
Valley Creek South Ala Pby per do 109 50
Selma do per do 52 50
Greensboro Tuscaloosa Ala Pby to con Rev J C Mitchel an hon mem per do 57 00
Columbus Miss per do 54 85
Aberdeen do per do 34 00
Courtland Ala 33 00
Florence Ala 32 45
Tuscumbia Ala 87 50
1st ch Nashville Tenn 150 55
2d ch do do 100 00
Harpeth per Rev J W Ogden 75 00
Don Rev J W Ogden 3 50
Gallatin Tenn 15 00
Clarksville Tenn (addl) 175 75
Sales Miss Depot 119 99
Amt overdrawn paid by Rev C Sturdevant 32 51

Total $4463 83

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Receipts into the Treasury at Columbus, Ohio, from October 18, 1850, to 28th April, 1851.

Pby of Columbus.—Columbus ch, per J Cherry 9 50; Scioto ch 4 51; Mt Pleasant ch 3 50; Stoney Creek ch 5; McArthurstown ch 5; Blendon cong 2; Kingston ch 64; Hamilton ch 6 85; Columbus 1st Presb ch 68 71; Do Ladies' Miss Soc 50; Worthington ch 14 75; Tarleton and Amada chs 4; Truro Fem Miss Soc 14 35 — 252 17

Pby of Coshocton.—West Carlisle ch 6 75; Clark ch 7 87; Berlin ch 15; Unity ch 17; West Eaton ch 11; Berlin ch 2 40 — 60 02

Pby of Hocking.—Athens ch 60; Gallipolis ch 6 — 66 00

Pby of Marion.—Waynsburgh ch 1; Kingston ch 2; Bucyrus ch 13; Upper Sandusky ch 3; York ch 3 98; Liberty ch collection 5 25 — 28 23

Pby of Wooster.—Northfield ch 10 30; Wooster ch 32; Sugar Creek ch 29 30; Congress ch 4 85 — 76 45

Pby of Zanesville.—Newark Sab Sch 33; Pleasant Hill ch 4 50; Buffalo ch 38; Hopewell ch Sew Soc 17 — 92 50

$575 37

THOS. MOODIE, Treasurer Synod of Ohio.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

THE EDUCATION AND SUPPLY OF MINISTERS.

Our educational operations exert a powerful influence on the SUPPLY AND EDUCATION OF MINISTERS. The Board of Education had its origin in the obligations of the Church to use all scriptural means to increase the number of effective preachers of the gospel. As far back as the days of Makemie, when our ministers numbered less than the Apostles, our Church acted upon the two great principles which now govern the Board of Education, viz. that the increase of the ministry is connected with the use of means, and that both piety and learning are essential qualifications for the office. In order to obtain more ministers, the Presbyterian fathers assisted pious and indigent young men in their preparatory studies; and encouraged others of suitable character and promise to enter upon a course of education with the hope that God would call them into the ministry. The academies of the Tennents, Allisons, Blairs, Finleys, Smiths, were the preparatory seminaries of the Church—schools of learning and religion established by a hard-working generation to the glory of God, whose providence blesses such men, and did bless these in the training of many faithful witnesses of His truth. The principle of aiding indigent students in their course of studies dates back to the origin of Presbyterianism in this country, and was contemporaneous with the policy of sending missionaries to the destitute settlements. At that time, if ever, the Church would have been justified in lowering the standard of literary requirement; but even in a day of the greatest straits for men and means, it was determined to send forth only those who were thoroughly furnished for their work. The adoption of the Westminster Confession of Faith rendered education a necessary qualification for the ministry. The standards of ancient times give the watchword to the present generation; and the Church is labouring for the increase of well-qualified ministers, in the strength o efforts hallowed by an unbroken succession in history, and enlarged to meet its present circumstances of progress and benevolence. Hundreds now engaged in preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ, have been assisted in their preparation for this service through the timely co-operation of the Board of Education. Among the number are some of the most distinguished and useful servants of the Redeemer in this or any other age. The memorials of the education operations of the Presbyterian Church are co-extensive with the boundaries of its territory and its glory. If the treasures of the Church are in the worth of her consecrated sons, her well-trained ministers are among the richest jewels in her crown of conquest. "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, 'Thy God reigneth!'

DIVERSE GIFTS IN THE MINISTRY.

Ministers differ in their intellectual powers and accomplishments. Here there is an Edwards or a Butler, trained to the most profound and discriminating research; there is a Hall or a Mason, the grandeur of whose conceptions throws the thoughts of common minds into the shade; and yonder, standing alone—I had almost said in the world's entire history—is a Whitefield, who is familiar with avenues to the heart which others have not explored; who can raise a tempest in the bosom when he will, and as quietly speak it into a calm; while a great multitude shine with inferior but different degrees of lustre. There is a difference in their moral constitutions. The unshrinking boldness of Paul, the headstrong impetuosity of Peter, the winning gentleness of John, the docile spirit of Nathaniel, and every other variety of natural disposition, is continually exemplified in the Christian ministry. There is a difference in the amount of piety which they possess; some keeping the world under their feet, and having their conversation habitually in heaven, while others seem scarcely to rise to the ordinary level of Christian attainment. They are favoured also with different degrees of usefulness; and their usefulness flows in different channels. One exerts an influence in advancing the kingdom of Christ which is felt far and wide; while another, with feebler powers and less zeal and perseverance, would seem to labour to comparatively little purpose. One is directly instrumental of turning many to righteousness, and there are hundreds and even thousands who expect to heap blessings upon him in heaven as the instrument of their salvation; while another exerts a more silent but scarcely less important influence, in vindicating the claims of Christianity, in moulding the character of the young, in guarding the general interests of the Church. And to crown all, they differ in their ultimate reward. They that have been faithful in a few things will not lose their reward; but they that have turned many to righteousness, will shine as the brightness of the firmament.

Such is the variety which the great Head of the Church permits—I may say, has ordained, in the Christian ministry. And the wisdom of this appointment, especially in regard to the different intellectual and moral constitutions of ministers, is as manifest as its existence; for the ministry has to perform its work upon every variety of character, and the influence which might be entirely lost upon one indvidual, might operate with mighty power on another. Hence I cannot think it desirable that all ministers should try to force themselves into a conformity to any particular standard; indeed that seems to me to be doing violence to the divine constitution. God requires indeed that all his ministers should preach the same great principle, but he has not required that they should all be of the temperament of Peter, or of John, or of Paul; he chooses to have his sons of thunder and his sons of consolation; and no one may say with the greater degree of favour. I have sometimes heard even ministers complain of their brethren as likely to accomplish little or no good by their preaching, because, though they preached the truth of the gospel plainly, they preached them with less energy, or less apparent fervor than could be desired. But I would say in all such cases, you have no right to require the brick where God has not given the straw; and besides, the very mode of preaching which you desire, would doubtless be far less acceptable and far less useful to many individuals, than that to which you object. Let a minister keep himself within those bounds of decorum which God's word and the dignity of his own office prescribe, and the more closely he follows the bent of his own mind, the better; he may not be a Paul or Apollos, a Chalmers or a Dwight; but he will be an evangelical and efficient minister.—Selected.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Whitefield.—It was a remark of the great and good Mr. Whitefield, (and there is no man's lips whom it would have better fitted) "that the more a man does for God the more he may." Gracious dispositions strengthen and increase by exercise. The chariot in full motion surmounts hills of difficulty with much less effort than at its first outset.—A. Fuller.

Themes for the Pulpit.—We find in an exchange paper the following just and valuable suggestions, from John Foster:

In the department of Christian morality, I think many of those who are distinguished as evangelical preachers greatly and culpably deficient. They rarely, if ever, take some one topic of moral duty, as honesty, veracity, impartiality, Christian temper, forgiveness of injuries, temperance—in any of its branches—and investigate specifically its principles, rules, discriminations, adaptations. There is none of the casuistry found in many of the old divines. Such discussion would have cost far more labour of thought than dwelling and expatiating on the general evangelical doctrines, but would have been eminently useful, and is very necessary, in order to set the people's judgment and consciences to rights. It is partly in consequence of this neglect (very generally I believe) that many religious, kind people, have unfixed and ill-fated apprehensions of moral discriminations. Hall told Anderson that in former years he had often insisted on subjects of this order.

REDEMPTION.

"Redemption is the science and the song
Of all eternity. Archangels, day
And night, into its glories look. The Saints
And Elders round the Throne, old in the years
Of heaven, examine it perpetually;
And every hour get clearer, ampler views,
Of right and wrong; see virtue's beauty more;
See vice more utterly depraved and vile:
And this with a more perfect hatred hate;
That, daily love, with a more perfect love."

Ministerial Hints.—1. Don't cough or clear the throat while preaching. This is sometimes done to fill up a gap. It is said that on one occasion, the venerable Dr. Green, while preaching, having suddenly lost the train of his thoughts, stood erect and silent, looking the congregation in the face for the space of half a minute—then continued with his usual ease and tranquillity. After the discourse, a brother remarked, "the sermon was very impressive, particularly that awful pause." "Brethren, we had better make a few 'awful pauses' than mar the delivery of our discourse by unpleasant sounds."

2. Don't pull down the pulpit nor beat the Bible to pieces. Any rough usage of the word of God is offensive to refined feelings. We have heard of one preacher, of whom one of his elders said, that he "knocked the guts out of six Bibles in one year, and kicked down five pulpits." A writer in the Presbyterian of the West, says: "I have known brethren, at the close of a discourse, to shut the Bible with so much violence as to be heard over the whole house. The action that thus violently closes the word of God, to my mind, is very significant—generally suggesting about this language—'There, friends, I have just finished a discourse quite satisfactory to myself, and instructive to you, and now, with tremendous emphasis, I intend to enforce it.'"

3. Don't display yourself, but your subject, and let your subject be Christ and him crucified.

4. Don't look at your watch while preaching, especially if you are reading your sermon verbatim et literatim from a manuscript.

5. Don't get angry at these hints, for if you do, you are no doubt guilty of such, or of worse habits. —N. O. Presbyterian.

Preparation for the Pulpit.—Make your preparation for the pulpit a leading and engrossing object during the whole week. How can a minister consistently preach in the pulpit on the sin of procrastination, while he himself has put off all needful study till the dread approach of the holy Sabbath drives him to scramble for a few hurried thoughts with which he appears in the sanctuary, not clothed in the calm and sacred dignity of an ambassador of Christ, but in mental and bodily trepidation arising from an unfurnished mind, and the consequent accusations of a guilty conscience? — Ordination Charge, by Rev. Josias Wilson.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

OUR DENOMINATIONAL INFLUENCE.

The influence of the Presbyterian Church upon OTHER DENOMINATIONS OF CHRISTIANS AND UPON THE WORLD is connected with her educational efforts. A work of great value is incidentally performed, in the providence of God, by the influence which each denomination of Christians exerts upon others. An ignorant church surely cannot accomplish the greatest amount of good in the competition of effective example. On the contrary, the one that trains up her children in knowledge and piety is the body of might. "Mark ye well her bulwarks; consider her palaces." An able ministry carries an immense influence where intelligent piety prevails; and the church that best educates its members and its ministers, according to the laws of Christ, must bear the banner in the sacramental host of God's elect. The Lord has condescended to employ the Presbyterian Church in doing good to other bodies of Christians; and one of the chief elements of this adaptation has been our immemorial opinions and practices in regard to education. Ignorance neither cultivates devotion nor fosters influence.

Even the political economy of schools and colleges presents statistics of gain in a community. Property will rise in their neighbourhood; a new impulse will be imparted to the various branches of human industry: villages and towns will thrive under their genial sway. Their moral economy is attended still more actively with high and pervading results. The Presbyterian Church has been distinguished among the churches of the land by its relations to education. This pre-eminence has indeed been forfeited to some extent during the last few years, in consequence of a relaxation of our ancient policy at the very time when that policy was being successfully imitated and pursued by other Christian denominations. Whilst our Church rejoices in the increasing appreciation of the advantages of education exhibited by other churches, it becomes us not to intermit, but to renew our zeal in the great cause of intellectual advancement. The Assembly of 1847 wisely adopted a system of measures which promises to re-invigorate our educational energies. By no surer means could the Presbyterian Church retain a high position among the churches of the land, and be among the foremost in stimulating to every good word and work. Next to piety, intelligence is the most active principle in advancing, in an influential manner, the Redeemer's cause throughout the world.

WHY THEY FAILED.

M. Guizot, presiding on a recent occasion at a Bible Society meeting in Paris, thus summed up: "We Frenchmen have seen the fruitlessness of a century's philosophical speculation, and of merely political constitutions, in rectifying our social state. We have exhausted our wit, and expended mighty energies, to fit man for the duties and enjoyments of time, and we have miserably failed. And why? Because man was made for eternity, and we have sought for nothing more than to fit him for the brief space he occupies in time. Let us, then, by disseminating the Bible, from the first begin to train man for eternity, and that of itself will adapt man to the duties and enjoyments of his earthly state."

From the Presbyterian.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

It may be interesting to those who regard the duty of religious instruction in common schools as of paramount importance, to know the plan upon which at least one Presbyterian parochial school is conducted.

1. It is always opened and closed by reading the Scriptures and prayer, and upon these exercises all the pupils are required to attend with gravity.

2. The morning lessons are then recited, including a large class, (some of whom cannot read) who repeat one question in the Catechism for Young Children, in connexion with the morning prayer, beginning, "Now I awake and see the light," &c., and the Lord's prayer. In this exercise the little children take a deep interest, and in about two months they have learned more than fifty questions.

In the evening this class repeats all the questions previously learned, and also the evening prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," &c., and also the Lord's prayer.

3. The New Testament is read by the larger children, on which they are carefully examined, and a constant effort is made to impress the truth upon their minds. This exercise affords a good opportunity for making close practical remarks.

4. All the pupils not included in the little catechism class are required to repeat the Shorter Catechism every Friday evening, at which time the questions are familiarly explained.

And in all the branches of knowledge taught, including the languages, every favourable opportunity for inculcating religious truth is promptly embraced.

Now it must be apparent that a school thus conducted must be a blessing to the community, as well as the Church; and may we be allowed to ask, might not every Presbyterian congregation in the land have at least one school conducted upon this plan?

If any shall be induced by these remarks to go and do likewise, the writer will feel that this humble effort has not been in vain. TEACHER.

ACADEMY OF LEXINGTON PRESBYTERY, VIRGINIA.

The following is the action of the Presbytery of Lexington, in reference to their High School, at their late sessions.

PRESBYTERIAL HIGH SCHOOL.

A report was received from the Principal, Rev. William W. Trimble, from which it appeared that this school has had in its connexion the present year forty-eight pupils, about forty of whom are engaged in classical studies. The deportment and diligence of the students generally, is highly commended, and the school appears to be in a flourishing condition. The following resolutions were adopted.

1. That Presbytery confides fully in the wisdom and fidelity of the teachers to whom the Presbyterial High School is at present committed, and approves of the management of the Institution.

2. That the Contingent Fund of Presbytery not permitting the expense of a catalogue at present, the Principal be requested to invite the students of the High School to publish a Catalogue for the current year, and commit the superintendence to a committee to be chosen by them out of their own number.

3. That the Treasurer of the Commissioners' and Contingent Fund, be directed to pay out of the latter fund, $14 to Rev. Mr. Trimble for the use of the maps procured by the latter for the High School.

4. That it be recommended to the Principal, in future, to permit no convivial entertainments to be given by his pupils.

A memorial was presented from the stockholders of this School, asking the agency of the Presbytery in endowing it with a library, and also a Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus. After full deliberation, the Presbytery adopted with great unanimity, the following paper:

"The object of Presbytery in establishing a Presbyterial High School, was to establish a classical school of a High grade, for the education of our sons, the course of study in which should be arranged with especial reference to the preparation of young men for the gospel ministry. Keeping this object in view, their wish is that the thorough instruction of the pupils of said school in that portion of a classical and mathematical course, which will fit young men for the ordinary college course, shall not be sacrificed to any popular demand for superficial instruction in other departments of learning, such as they believe must inevitably be the consequence if the wide course indicated in the memorial be pursued."

A Committee consisting of W. Brown, Baily, and Trimble, was appointed to procure a Library, Globes and maps.

Committee to attend the Annual Examination of said School are Messrs. P. Calhoun, Paine, Dabney, and Morrison.

NORMAL SCHOOLS.

The following is a condensed historical sketch of Normal Schools. It was prepared by the Editor of the Dedham Gazette, who is Chairman of the Joint Committee of the Legislature of Massachusetts, on Education.

Normal schools, or schools for the instruction and preparation of teachers of youth, although new to us, are not new in the history of the world. In several of the States of Europe, particularly in Prussia, schools of this character were found in operation more than a century ago. At a meeting of the friends of education, held at Halifax, in the county of Plymouth, in 1838, John Quincy Adams used the following language: "We see monarchs expending vast sums establishing Normal Schools throughout their realms, and shall we be outdone by kings?" In 1748 a private school was established for teachers, at Berlin, by Rev. John Julius Hecker, which in 1754 was raised to the rank of a royal school, under the patronage of the State. By the provisions of a royal ordinance of the year 1819, Normal Schools are established in each of the ten provinces of the kingdom of Prussia, as a part of the school system. Saxony, Bavaria, Wirtemberg, Baden and other German States have followed the example of Prussia. France, also, early adopted the plan, and at a later date, Holland and England. There are at present 264 Normal Schools in Europe, of which 97 are in France, 51 in Prussia and 23 in England.

The attention of the people of Massachusetts was first directed to the subject chiefly by the writings of the late James G. Carter, of Lancaster, who published several essays upon the subject as early as the years 1824—5. In 1830, a teacher's seminary was established in Andover, as a department of Phillips' Academy. Owing to a want of funds for its support, it was abandoned in 1842, but not until the State had made provision for other schools of a similar character. The name of Samuel Farrar is honourably connected with this project.

Rev. Charles Brooks, of Hingham, took an active part in the labours which resulted in the establishment of the Board of Education and the Normal Schools. He commenced his efforts as early as 1835, and was unwearied in his exertions, until his objects were accomplished. The Board of Education was established in 1837, and in its first annual report it called the attention of the Legislature to the subject of Normal Schools. During the session of 1838, a donation of $10,000 was offered by Edmund Dwight, to be appropriated for the qualification of teachers, on condition that the State would provide an equal sum. The proposition was accepted, and Normal Schools were established at Barre, Lexington and Bridgewater; the two first in 1839, and the latter in 1840.

The Lexington school was transferred to West Newton in 1844, a building for the accommodation of the same having been given by Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr., of Boston. The school established at Barre has been removed to Westfield. The sum of $5000, obtained by private subscription, was offered in 1845, on condition of a grant by the State of an equal sum, for the purpose of erecting more commodious houses for the accommodation of the schools at Westfield and Bridgewater. The proposition was accepted, and the houses built.

The sum of $7000 per annum is now allowed from the treasury for the support of these schools. Pupils of both sexes are taught at Westfield and Bridgewater, but the school at West Newton is designed for females.

Massachusetts was the first State in the Union to adopt the plan of Normal Schools. New York followed, and in 1844, a State Normal School was established at Albany, and $10,000 annually appropriated for its support. A spacious and handsome building for its use was erected in 1848, at an expense of $25,000. Previous to the establishment of the Normal School for the education of teachers, New York had appropriated large sums to her academies for the same purpose, but without success.

In Pennsylvania there is a Normal School for female teachers, established in 1848, in Philadelphia, and supported at the expense of that city.

By an act approved June, 1849, provision was made for the establishment of a Normal School in Connecticut, and for its support. The public spirit of the inhabitants of New Britain, in order to secure the location of the institution in that town, raised about $18,000 for its benefit, on a guaranty of its continuance for a period of only four years. The Principal of the school is Hon. Henry Barnard, for many years an active and devoted servant of the cause of popular Education, and recently Commissioner of common schools for the State of Rhode Island. The subject of Normal Schools was early agitated in Connecticut by Thomas H. Gallaudett, formerly Principal of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum. His efforts, in conjunction with those of Mr. Barnard, have at length been crowned with success, and we trust that the institution at New Britain will prove worthy of the long continued efforts that have been made for its establishment.

The youthful State of Michigan has entered the field in competition with her elder sisters. In 1849, an act was passed to establish a State Normal School, and public lands appropriated as a fund for its support. In this school provision is made for instruction in the mechanic arts and agricultural chemistry. It is located at Ypsilanti, whose citizens contributed an eligable lot of land, and a subscription of $13,500 towards a suitable building, besides paying the salary of the instructor of the model school.

We have enumerated above, all the model schools now in operation in the United States.

In the British Provinces on this continent—at Toronto, in Upper Canada, and at St. Johns in New Brunswick, Normal Schools have been established on a scale of great liberality. That at Toronto was established in 1846, and last year the Provincial Legislature appropriated $60,000 for procuring a site and erecting buildings. A beautiful site, containing eight acres, has been procured in the heart of the city, which will afford facilities for a botanical garden, and experiments in agriculture. Great progress has been made in the cause of education in Upper Canada within the past ten years.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, APRIL, 1851.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Troy.

Cambridge ch, 1st United Presb ch, of which 13 refunded in behalf of a former candidate 28 00

Presbytery of Steuben.

Vienna 1st ch 4 59

Presbytery of Hudson.

Goshen ch 20 11; Liberty ch 4 24 11

Presbytery of Long Island.

Sag Harbour ch, Ladies' Ed Soc 75; Young Ladies' Praying Circle 15 90 00

Presbytery of New York.

Presbyterial Fund 400; 15th St ch 63 45; Williamsburg ch 1 36 464 81

Presbytery of New York 2d.

Scotch ch, John Johnston 100; R Irvin 50; Wm Post 62 50; J Morrison 5; Collection 253 470 50

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

Mount Freedom ch 27; Elizabethport ch 9 36 00

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Kingston ch 26 74; Princeton ch Ladies' Ed Soc 56 40; Trenton 1st ch 46 45; Shrewsbury ch 5; Allentown ch 25; Millstone ch 7; Cranberry 2d ch 27; Freehold Village ch 13 206 59

Presbytery of Raritan.

1st ch Amwell 15; United 1st and 2d chs Amwell 43; Kingwood ch 1 25 59 25

Presbytery of Luzerne.

Lackawanna ch 7; Wyoming ch 35 42 00

Presbytery of Susquehanna.

Wyalusing ch 10; Towanda ch 7 17 00

Presbytery of West Jersey.

Pittsgrove ch 33; Mayslanding ch 5; Williamstown ch 2; Bridgeton ch Ladies' Ed Soc 54 56; Ch collection 95 44, in all 150 190 00

Presbytery of Burlington.

Burlington ch 100, of which 44 56 for a particular candidate; Columbus ch 3 77 103 77

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

7th ch (addl) J Sharswood 1; 10th ch (addl) a Friend, through the pastor 100; North ch 119 50; 9th ch for a candidate 25; Spring Garden ch (addl) 2 247 50

Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.

Doylestown ch 8; Bridesburgh ch 20 28 00

Presbytery of Donegal.

Waynesburgh ch 15; Pequea ch 5 20 00

Presbytery of Baltimore.

Baltimore 1st ch (addl) 600 00

Presbytery of Carlisle.

Paxton ch 7; Falling Spring ch 62 50; Williamsport ch 25 94 50

Presbytery of Huntingdon.

West Kishacoquillas ch 24 50; Shirleysburgh ch, John Brewster 30; Little Valley ch 19; Williamsburg ch 46 23; 1st ch Spruce Creek 65; Hollidaysburg ch 25; Clearfield ch 3; Alexandria ch 37 50; Perryville ch 5; L. Tuscarora ch in part 50 305 23

Presbytery of Northumberland.

New Berlin ch 5 50; White Deer Valley ch 34; Bethel ch 5 44 50

Presbytery of Blairsville.

Harmony ch 3 50

Presbytery of Redstone.

Petersburg ch 5 36

Presbytery of Washington.

Wheeling 1st ch 170; do 2d ch 88 32 258 32

Presbytery of Marion.

Miscellaneous 5 00

Presbytery of Richland.

Savannah ch 4 69; Haysville ch 15 60 20 29

Presbytery of Miami.

Harmony ch 8 90; Springfield ch 19 70 28 60

Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Cheviot ch, W W Rice Esq 25; Pleasant Ridge ch 6 60 31 60

Presbytery of Oxford.

Seven Mile ch 9 08; Harrison ch 50 cts 9 58

Presbytery of Lake.

Valparaiso ch 20; Salem ch 1 50 21 50

Presbytery of St. Louis.

Paid to Candidates 200 00

Presbytery of Lexington.

Sundry churches, thro' Rev B M Smith 9 76

Presbytery of Winchester.

Paid to Candidates 300 00

Presbytery of East Hanover.

First ch Richmond 2 00

Presbytery of Montgomery.

Missionary Stations, per Rev J M Wilson 2 00

Presbytery of Orange.

Paid to Candidates 558 19

Presbytery of Concord.

Paid to Candidates 130 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Amount expended during the year 3,450 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Amount expended during the year 445 42

Presbytery of South Alabama.

Paid to Candidates 175 00

Presbytery of Tuscaloosa.

Paid to Candidates 200 00

Presbytery of Mississippi.

Providence and Pecan Grove chs, to con Rev T H CLELAND an hon mem 112 44

MISCELLANEOUS.

"H C S" 5; Bible, Tract and Education Soc of Princeton Seminary 52 10; Rev J Dubuar, N Y 1; Rev J J Janeway D D, New Brunswick N J 150; A Friend 3; Rev D V McLean D D 25; L A Donne, Va 2; A member of Harrisburg ch Pa, per Rev Dr De Witt 10; A Thank-offering 2 250 10

Total $9,295 01

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c.

Easton 1st ch Pa 150; Interest on the Education Fund of Newton Presbytery 35 28—in all 185 28 for Lafayette College; A Friend in Philad 500. Transferred from "Fund for Candidates" by consent of the donors 500 $1,185 28

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH IN MARCH AND APRIL, 1851.

Presbytery of Blairsville.

Elder's Ridge ch 15; Currie's Run ch 6 30; Fairfield and Union chs 5 26 30

Presbytery of Redstone.

New Providence ch 25; Brownsville ch 11 27 36 27

Presbytery of Ohio.

Mingo ch 28; Centre ch 24; Montours ch 14; Valley ch 15 75; Sharpsburgh ch 15; Bethel ch 28; Pine Creek ch 5; 1st ch Pittsburgh 105 24; East Liberty ch 57; Manchester ch 22; Lawrenceburg ch 24 337 99

Presbytery of Beaver.

New Castle ch 20 00

Presbytery of Clarion.

Clarion ch 15; Callensburgh ch 2 50 17 50

Presbytery of Steubenville.

Steubenville 2d ch 24; Harlem ch 2 05; Amsterdam ch 1 40; Ridge ch 4 43 31 88

Presbytery of New Lisbon.

New Lisbon ch 18 00

LEGACIES.

Estate of T Patterson (addl) 45 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev James Black 3; Church unknown 2 25; Refunded by W S D 10 15 25

Total $548 19

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & Co., Treasurers.

RECEIPTS AT LOUISVILLE FROM NOVEMBER 1, 1850, TO MAY 1, 1851.

Presbytery of New Albany.

New Albany 1st ch (of which 18 75 paid to a candidate) 117 00

Presbytery of Vincennes.

Washington ch, Rev H L McGuire 2 50

Presbytery of Whitewater.

Brookville ch 1 50

Presbytery of Palestine.

Wabash ch 3; Palestine ch, Rev Jos Platt 8 11 00

Presbytery of Louisville.

Louisville 1st ch Fem Ed Soc 50; Cash 27 60—in all 77 60; Pisgah ch 25 85; Newcastle ch 20 123 45

Presbytery of Muhlenberg.

Henderson ch 4; Mt Pleasant ch 4 50; Greenville ch 18 26 50

Presbytery of Transylvania.

Danville 1st ch 304; Glasgow ch 1 305 00

Presbytery of West Lexington.

Cherry Spring ch 15 50

Presbytery of Maury.

Hopewell ch 8 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev Jno Mitchell 3 15; Langollen ch 1; Rev D L Gray, Memphis Tenn 9 15

Total $619 60

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT COLUMBUS, OHIO, FROM OCTOBER 18, 1850, TO MAY 1, 1851.

Presbytery of Columbus.

Columbus ch 49 50; Ladies Miss'y Soc of do 50; Mifflin ch 4 69 104 19

Presbytery of Coshocton.

Berlin ch 17 40; West Eaton ch 11 28 40

Presbytery of Hocking.

Gallipolis ch 1 00

Presbytery of Marion.

Eden church 1 00

Presbytery of Wooster.

Congress ch 6 60

Presbytery of Zanesville.

Pleasant Hill ch 3 00

Total $144 19

THOMAS MOODIE, Treas'r Synod of Ohio.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

All that the Board deem it important to furnish is their CORPORATE NAME, viz. "The Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." Any person, disposed to leave a legacy to the Board of Education, is requested to insert the right CORPORATE NAME. The State laws differ so much that no one Form will answer in all the States.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,

No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

END OF THE FINANCIAL YEAR.

The pecuniary affairs of the Board are closed on the first of May in each year. It is with sincere gratitude that we are able to report not only a healthful condition of these matters, but a real progress in them. The total amount of moneys received by the Board, in the year ending on the 1st of May last, was $139,084 33, being an increase of about $13,000 over the total receipts in the year preceding. The aggregate amount is made up of several classes of contributions, as specified in the Treasurer's Report. Of these, the most important, as to amount, and as an index of the general interest in this work, is the sum received from the churches. In this portion of the receipts, there has also been a considerable advance, amounting to nearly $7000 over the donations of the churches in the previous or any former year. At the same time, the Board is able to report the gratifying fact of being still unembarrassed by any debt. For these things, our readers will unite with us in giving thanks unto God. They are tokens of his favour towards this great work.

The prospect before us is encouraging. Nearly all the Missions afford opportunities for greatly enlarged labours. God's blessing manifestly rests upon these Missions. Through them, by the blessing of God, we hope to see multitudes, now perishing for lack of vision, brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. For this, we would go on, giving, praying, hoping, until we hear our Lord's gracious words, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

RECENT INTELLGENCE.

Compiled from letters received at the Mission House, to the 13th of May, 1851.

Africa: Corisco Mission.—Letters have been received from the Rev. Messrs. Simpson and Mackey, dated to the 12th of February. They were making progress in the study of the native language, preaching through an interpreter, and teaching some of the children. Mr. Mackey mentions some interesting cases of medical practice, tending to destroy the faith of the natives in their superstitious observances. They were about to build a house at a cluster of towns, two miles distant from the station first occupied; and were exceedingly desirous that more missionaries should join them, with a view of occupying new stations, and particularly of taking immediate possession of a station on the neighbouring island of Ilavi. The health of Mrs. Simpson was delicate; that of Messrs. Mackey and Simpson continued to be good. These letters will furnish extracts for publication hereafter.

Siam: Mission at Bangkok.—A letter of the Rev. S. Mattoon, February 5th, has come to hand, which speaks of the general prospects of the mission as nearly the same as reported in previous letters. The King of Siam was said to be dangerously ill. His removal by death might lead to a considerable change in the policy of the government towards foreigners—a change, however, which might prove unfriendly to missionary efforts. Mrs. Mattoon was making a journey to Singapore, in company with a mission family of another Society, for the benefit of her health. The Baptist mission had met with a severe loss in the destruction of their houses, printing establishment, &c., by fire, on the 4th of January.

China: Canton Mission.—A letter has come to hand from the Rev. A. P. Happer, of February 25th. The missionaries were engaged with their usual duties.

India Missions.—Letters have reached us from Lahor, March 5; Lodiáná, March 6; Amballa, Feb. 27; Futtehgurh, March 7; Agra, March 6; Allahabad, March 6. The general tenor of these letters is gratifying; most of the brethren are in the enjoyment of usual health, and are steadily prosecuting their various duties. We take a single sentence from a letter of the Rev. J. Porter, who was out on a preaching tour in the Panjab, dating his letter at Shahdhara, a large village a few miles north of Lahor. "I expect to go on as far as to Wazirabad, about fifty miles from Lahor, on the Chanab. Were it not so late in the season, I would wish to go farther. As I proceed, the cities spread out in such numbers, to say nothing of the countless villages, that I might spend many months instead of a few days in visiting a portion of them. These perishing millions, when will the church send to them the bread of life! Shall we plead year after year for the Panjáb, and yet receive no help? For five years has this part of India been open to missionary effort, and yet we have only two brethren at Lahor and one native brother at Jalandar. What are these among so many?"

Mission to the Jews.—Some months ago the Rev. J. Neander had the pleasure of baptizing in this city a young man, of the Jewish race; and within a few weeks another professed convert was baptized in Philadelphia, who had been for some time under the instructions of the Rev. B. Steinthal. We trust they will receive grace to walk worthy of their Christian profession.

Creek Mission.—The Rev. J. R. Ramsey, writing from the station at Tallahassee on the 26th of April, gives the following pleasing intelligence: "We have reason to believe that there has been a revival of religion in our school for some months past. The majority of the scholars have given marked evidence of seriousness and anxious concern about their souls, and have attended the inquiry meetings. At our communion season here last Sabbath, four of the pupils professed their faith in Christ by uniting with the church." In addition to these, a Creek woman, the mother of one of the four, was admitted to the communion of the church. Some others desired to become members of the church, but were advised to wait until their religious views and feelings were more fully tested.

The Rev. W. H. McAuley and his family embarked at Calcutta on the Concordia, for Boston. This vessel encountered a severe storm in lat. 36° N., and long. 67°, in which she was dismasted, and in great peril of being lost. We have received a short note from Mr. McAuley, dated April—[date illegible], which was probably forwarded by a vessel that afterwards spoke the Concordia. He says they were all well, and the captain was endeavouring to make the Bermudas, with sails on the lower part of the foremast, which remained, and on a jury-mast. Mr. McAuley closes by saying, "Tell our friends not to be alarmed. The Lord reigns."

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY.

This newspaper has reached the end of the ninth volume, with a larger circulation than ever—21,000 copies monthly. The heavy postage which has been charged on it heretofore, has seriously restricted its circulation. Under the new law on postage this difficulty will be removed. The Executive Committee have agreed to publish the newspaper edition, at the low price of One Dollar for Ten Copies, or Fifty Cents for Five Copies, and at the same rate for any number of copies; postage after July 1st paid by the Publishers. Less than five copies to the address of one person cannot be sent. On these terms, the Foreign Missionary will be placed in the hands of its friends all over the land, at the lowest price, and with the least possible inconvenience to them—merely that of taking their packages out of the Post Office.

No change will be made in the general character of the work—it being designed both for adults and for children, but especially for children, to whom we have learned, with great pleasure, it has long been a welcome visitor. Its contents will be increasing in value and interest every year. Some of the choicest articles in recent numbers are from new pens; and the older missionaries feel more than ever the importance of writing for its columns. It ought to be, and we are sure it will be, worthy of a cordial welcome in every family connected with our Church.

The Committee regard the Foreign Missionary as one of the most important agencies of the Board, to promote among the churches an interest in the missionary work. And they would respectfully solicit the co-operation of ministers, elders, parents, and other influential persons, in securing for it a general circulation in their congregations, Sabbath-schools and families.

Terms. Newspaper edition:—Ten Copies for One Dollar, or, when desired, Five Copies for Fifty Cents. Postage paid by the Publishers. Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

Pamphlet edition:—Twenty-five Cents a year. Copies of the Pamphlet edition, when desired, are sent free of charge to Donors of Five Dollars and upwards, and to ministers whose churches contribute to the funds of the Board.

Letters relating to this newspaper should be addressed to—"The Foreign Missionary," Mission House, 23 Centre-street, New York.

INDIA: ALLAHABAD MISSION.

COMMUNICATION OF THE REV. ROBERT M. MUNNIS.

Account of the Allahabad Mela of 1851, and other matters connected therewith.

You have in all probability heard that the Hindús call the city of Allahabad, Prayág, which means the sacred confluence of two or more rivers. Allahabád is called Prayág, or junction, in common with four other junctions in the Province of Gharwál, in the Himaláya mountains, where the Allakananda is joined by other streams, and are named respectively Devá, Rudr, Karna, and Nanda Prayág. As I visited all these junctions in 1848, it may be interesting, to some at least, if I tell something of what I know concerning them;—the names of the rivers which form these junctions, and their distances from Srínagar, the ancient capital of the province, and the residence of the old Garwál Rájás, whose palace stands in the centre of the ruins. Srínagar (the city of plenty) is thirty-eight miles E. N. E. from Hardwár, lat. 30° 11′ N., lon. 78° 44′ E.

1. Dewá Prayág (the union of the gods) is twelve miles west from Srinagar, and is formed by the streams of the Bhágarathí, or true Ganges, and Alakananda rivers. The last-mentioned river is much the larger, being about forty-eight yards wide, while the former is only about thirty-eight, at the place of junction. The union of these two rivers forms the Ganges, the breadth of which immediately below the junction is at least eighty yards. Indeed, at the city of Srínagar, it is a magnificent stream.

2. Rudr Prayág (Rudr, a name of Shiv or Mahadeo), is nineteen miles N. E. from Srínagar; lat. 30° 18′ N., lon. 78° 59′ E. This Prayág is formed by the junction of the Alakananda and the Káliunga, a large stream that rises in the snowy mountains near Kidár, a very famous place of pilgrimage, which I also visited. At Kidár the object of worship is a mis-shapen mass of black rock, supposed to resemble the hind quarters of a buffalo, concerning which a most absurd legend is narrated by the officiating priests, called Aghora Panths. Aghora is a name of Mahadeo, hence the name given to his priests of this shrine, who are mendicants, suspected of many strange practices, and amongst others, of cannibalism.

3. Karna Prayág is thirty miles east by north from Srinagar, lat. 30° 16′ N., lon. 79° 12′ E., and is formed by the confluence of the Alakananda and Pindar rivers. Here is a shrine containing the image of Rájá Karna—hence the name of the Prayág.

4. Nanda Prayág is thirty-eight miles E.N.E. from Srinagar, lat. 30° 20′ N., lon. 79° 18 E., and is the most northerly of all the Prayágs on the Ganges. It is formed by the junction of the Alakananda with the Nandakiní, a small stream flowing from the south east.

All these Prayágs are places of pilgrimage, and thousands of persons may be seen, at all favourable seasons of the year, making the "grand tour;" but they are considered much less sacred than Allahabad. It is pre-eminently called Prayág, or Prayág-ráj, because it is said that here the Ganges, Jumna, and Saraswati all unite. "There is no such river as the last-mentioned river to be seen in the neighbourhood; but the Hindús assert that it joins the other two under ground, and that, consequently, the same religious merit is obtained as if the penitent had bathed in the whole three rivers separately. When the pilgrim arrives here, he first sits down on the bank of the river, and has his head and body shaved so that each hair may fall into the water, the sacred writings promising him one million of years' residence in heaven for every hair thus deposited. After shaving he bathes, and the same day, or the next, performs the obsequies of his ancestors." The pilgrim performs the obsequies of his ancestors by making a small ball of barley meal, moistened with the water of the Ganges, and then throwing it into the river. This ball, he believes, will arrive in due course at its destination, and satisfy the hunger of the deceased!

The Allahabad Mela lasts for a month, but to prevent tediousness, I purpose only to take notice of the most important days.

12th January, 1851. This day the Mela commenced. It is called the Sankránt (the sun's entering a new sign); or, Khicherwár, because on this day the Hindús make Khichrí (a dish composed of rice, pulse, and clarified butter), and after presenting some of it to their idols and Brahmans, eat the remainder of it in their own homes. This is one of the great bathing days during the Mela, but the day was wet and cold, and many were detained at home on that account. The following extract from Phillips's "Missionary's Vade Mecum" will show the importance attached to bathing on this day by the Hindús. "Whoever bathes and performs Varta during the whole of mójh at sunrise at Prayág, will have much merit; those who cannot bathe a month let them bathe during three days, and those who cannot bathe three days, let them bathe to-day. Those who cannot go to Prayág, let them bathe in any other river, and, feeding the Brahmans, make them gifts, and thus obtain much merit." On this day I went down to the Tribení (the very point, according to the Prágwáls, where the Ganges, Jumna, and Saraswati unite) to see the proceedings. Men and women, old and young, sick and healthy, rich and poor, were all in the sacred stream, having their sins washed away! I stood for a time near the brink of the river, and, as occasion offered, spoke to the people. I was unable to collect a crowd on account of the rain and cold; so I walked around and talked to the pilgrims as they were going or returning. Some of them pretended to be insensible to the cold, and insisted that the day was warm and pleasant to all those who were engaged in such holy and meritorious work, but their shivering limbs and blue lips belied their words. Both going and returning I was importuned by the religious mendicants, who are to be met with to any amount on all the Mela ground. The old and decrepit beggars sit, and in the name of their guardian deities call lustily for alms, the giving of which to so deserving objects, they assure the pilgrims, will be a most meritorious action. But the beggars, of both sexes, who can use their legs, run after the pilgrims, and teaze and worry them until the poor people are glad to give them anything they have, to get rid of such troublesome customers. So that, between the Prágwáls and these audacious beggars, the wretched pilgrims are pretty thoroughly fleeced before they leave the bathing-ground. One young vagabond was lying on his back in the water, with only his head and hands exposed. This was evidently a good speculation, if one may judge from the immense pile of Khichrí which lay near his head on the brink of the river, which the passers-by had given him, in regard for such self-devotion. The Prágwáls (Allahabad Brahmans who are supported by the offerings of the pilgrims who visit this place) were assembled in great force, and the different houses had their flags planted along the bank of the river, near the Tribení. The faqírs of different kinds in all their beastly hideousness lined the way from the Tribení up to the bázár. On my return through the bázár, I saw a number of native huntsmen, who had each a Níl Kanth (Blue Jay) in his hand. As the pilgrims gave them money, they let the birds escape from their hands. The Hindús consider the taking away of life a very great sin, and the saving of it a very good action. Therefore, when they give money to the sportsmen who have captured these birds, that they may spare their lives, they think they have done a very meritorious thing, and expect a special blessing from heaven for it. And the deed is particularly meritorious if the bird be a Blue Jay; because this is deemed a sacred bird by the Hindús. The name of this bird in the Hindúí language is one of the epithets of Mahadeo. "He is called by this name because his throat was stained blue by swallowing the poison produced by over-churning the ocean with the mountain Mandora, by the Súrs and Assúrs, to procure the Amril, the ambrosia of the gods." But of this interesting operation, more anon.

16th. At 9 P.M. the moon was partially eclipsed, and consequently it was a very important bathing season among the Hindús, who regard this phenomenon with great awe. I walked down to the Tribení, to see how they behaved on such an occasion. Many people were bathing at the junction of the three rivers, and others were crowding down to it. On the way down I explained to several crowds the true account of the eclipse of the moon, and many of them listened with great attention, and appeared to get a pretty clear idea of the matter. I had an opportunity at the same time of correcting the erroneous opinion the Hindús hold regarding the shape of the earth. The earth, I said, must be spherical from the shadow that it casts on the moon, &c.

There are two opinions among the Hindús regarding eclipses, which I may mention in this place. The first (the philosophical one) is confined to the learned and enlightened among them. This attributes the obscuration of the moon to its true cause—the intervention of a third body between the sun and the moon. Indeed, the Hindús have amongst them a considerable amount of astronomical knowledge, as their works on this subject go to prove. But the chief and almost sole object of the Hindú astronomy is the calculation of eclipses, which operation they perform with very considerable accuracy. This is accomplished by a tedious process, the rationale of which is not understood by any of the modern Hindú astronomers; who have, therefore, with justice been styled "machines for calculating eclipses." Hindú astronomers of the present day do not appear to be so well versed in this science as their forefathers. Almanac makers and astrologers use the rules for the calculating of eclipses, and the construction of horoscopes, as a parrot pronounces the words it has been taught, without knowing their meaning; or rather as the steam-engine performs its functions, in blind obedience to the propelling power. Hindú treatises on astronomy contain, it is true, rules for calculating eclipses by which a considerable degree of accuracy is attained, but these are empirical, and the numbers used for making the calculations are arbitrary. These astronomers use rules without knowing the reason why, and are therefore unable to discover in what respects these rules are defective and erroneous, and introduce the necessary improvements and corrections. Besides, Hindú treatises only take account of eclipses visible at the place for which they are composed; while European and American astronomers first ascertain whether an eclipse will occur, and then whether it will be visible at a given place, or, to speak more generally, over what portion of the earth's surface it will be visible. Again, the Hindú method will not give a result that can be confidently depended on. There may be a small eclipse, where this method will indicate none; or there may be none, when this method will indicate a small one; and in every instance the eclipse may be greater or less than indicated. But still, when we take into account the paucity and rudeness of the Hindu astronomical instruments, we must say the patience and ingenuity of Hindú astronomers are worthy of all praise. There is a work now lying on my table, which contains thirty-three rules for calculating eclipses of the sun and moon, which I at first intended to insert in this article; but on second thoughts I refrain. Probably they would not interest the general reader.

This philosophical view of eclipses, as above remarked, is confined to the better educated Hindús, and has no effect whatever on the great mass of the people, who believe the following childish tale:

Popular Idea of the Moon's Eclipse.

The Hindús believe that at some early period the sun and moon were very extravagant and dissipated; that in consequence they became debtors to two monsters Ráhú and Ketú, who are domes, the lowest caste among the Hindús. These come at certain periods to demand their money, and, in order to intimidate them seize them in their mouths; this causes a partial eclipse. When the sun and moon deny that they are debtors to these two monsters, they swallow them outright—this causes a total eclipse. On this the high caste Hindús come out of their houses, and make as great a noise as possible, to drive away the monsters. They also give presents of food, clothes, money, &c. to the domes. This pleases Rohú and Ketú, and they release their victims by disgorging them. By presenting gifts to these low caste people, the Brahmans &c. have contracted ceremonial uncleanness. They therefore must needs bathe, in the Ganges if it be near, if not, in another river; and if a river be not at a convenient distance, they draw water from a well, and bathe with that. They then return and wash their houses, also become unclean, with a mixture of mud and cow-dung; and if any earthen vessels be in their houses, they throw them out and buy new ones. They then cook food and eat very heartily, as they have fasted all the day preceding the eclipse. If a total eclipse of the sun or moon happen, the people think that famine or pestilence is about to fall upon them. Benares is considered a much holier place than Allahabad, because it is, according to the Shastras, nearer heaven. Many therefore of the pilgrims went to Benares to bathe in the Ganges during this eclipse.

This absurd fable of these two monsters seizing the sun and moon, seems to be founded on a story told in the Vishnú Púrán; the substance of which is as follows:—Durvásas, an incarnation of a portion of Shiv, was wandering over the earth, when he beheld a nymph of air, in whose hand was a garland culled from the trees of heaven. The sage, seeing the garland, asked it from the nymph, who, bowing gracefully, gave it to him. He placed the garland on his brow, and, thus decorated, resumed his journey. On the way he met Indra, the ruler of the three worlds, seated on his infuriated elephant Airávota, and attended by the other gods. Durvásas gave the chaplet to Indra, who suspended it on the brow of the elephant. The elephant being drunk, seized the garland, and cast it on the earth. At this the sage was very much incensed, and pronounced a curse upon Indra. In consequence of this curse, Indra and the three worlds lost their vigour, and all vegetable productions withered and died, and men became wicked and abandoned to every vice. In this state of things, the sons of Dánú and of Dití, the enemies of the gods, agitated by ambition, put forth their strength against the gods, who had become feeble and unfortunate. Indra and the other gods being overcome by these demons in battle, fled for refuge to Brahma, the father of the gods. He advised them to apply to the god of high and low, the immortal, unconquerable Vishnú. Having thus spoken, he went with them to the northern shore of the sea of milk and laid the matter before Vishnú, and asked his aid. The creator of the universe being thus entreated by the prostrate divinities, smiled, and thus spoke: "With renovated vigour, O gods, I will restore your strength. Do you act as I enjoin. Let all the gods, associated with the Asúrs, cast all sorts of medicinal herbs into the sea of milk; and then taking the mountain Mandara for the churn-staff, the serpent Vásukí for the rope, churn the ocean together for ambrosia; depending on my aid. To secure the assistance of the Daityas, demons, you must be at peace with them, and engage to give them an equal portion of the fruit of your associated toil, promising them, that by drinking the Amril that shall be produced from the agitated ocean, they shall become mighty and immortal. I will take care that these demons, the enemies of the gods, shall not partake of the precious draught; but that they shall share in the labour alone." (You see from this that Hindú gods can tell lies and deceive.) Being thus advised by Vishnú, the gods entered into alliance with the demons, and they undertook jointly the acquirement of the beverage of immortality. They collected various kinds of medicinal herbs and cast them into the sea of milk. They then took the mountain Mandara for the churn-staff, the serpent Vásukí for the cord, and commenced to churn the ocean for the Amril. The assembled gods were stationed by Vishnú at the tail of the serpent, the demons at its head and neck. Scorched by the flames emitted from his inflated hood, the demons were shorn of their glory: whilst the clouds, driven towards his tail by the breath of his mouth, refreshed the gods with revivifying showers. In the midst of the milky way, Vishnú himself, in the form of a tortoise, served as a pivot for the mountain, as it was whirled around. Vishnú in various other forms was present, and infused vigour into the gods. From the ocean thus churned by the gods and demons first uprose the cow Surabhí, the fountain of curds and milk; then Váruní, the goddess of wine; then the cool-rayed moon, who was seized by Mahadeo; and then poison was engendered from the sea, of which the Nógos (snake gods) took possession; then Dhanwantrí, robed in white, and bearing in her hand the cup of Amril, came forth. The powerful demons, filled with envy, seized the cup that was in the hands of Dhanwantrí, but Vishnú, assuming a female form, fascinated and deluded them, and receiving the nectar from them, handed it to the gods. The gods then quaffed the ambrosia, which infused new vigour into them; so that when the demons attacked them they were quickly routed, and obliged to take shelter in Pâtâl, (hell). The gods thereat rejoiced greatly, did homage to Vishnú, and resumed their reign in heaven. The sun shone forth with renovated splendour, and again discharged his appointed task; and the stars again circled in their respective orbits. Fire once more blazed forth, and the minds of men were animated with devotion. The three worlds were rendered happy and prosperous, and Indra, the chief of the gods, was restored to power. But the gods (although omniscient) were not able to prevent all the demons from tasting the ambrosia; one of them, by name Róhú, (mentioned above) insinuated himself among the gods, and obtained a portion of the nectar before he was perceived. On this Vishnú drew his sword and beheaded him; but the head was immortal in consequence of the Amrit having reached his throat, and it was transferred to the skies, where it became a constellation, and an object of worship among the Hindús. It seems the sun and moon detected his presence among the gods, and for this Róhú pursues them with implacable hatred; and his efforts to seize them in his mouth are the causes of eclipses! Other Puráns add that the body also is immortal, and exists under the name Ketú, another constellation, and that he is the cause of meteoric phenomena. They also state that Róhú and Ketú are brothers, sons of Linika, and that Róhú is drawn in a dusky chariot by eight black horses, while Ketú is drawn in a chariot by as many dusky red ones; and that at the time of an eclipse he takes up the circular shadow of the earth. The reason the Hindú astronomers assign for fewer eclipses of the sun happening than of the moon is, that these monsters cannot so well endure the splendour of the sun, and that consequently they go seldomer toward it. These monsters, Róhú and Ketú typify what are known in our astronomical treatises as the ascending and descending nodes.

Some who read this, may ask, is it possible for human beings to believe such silly, childish stories as this? Alas! for poor human nature, it is. The ignorant and superstitious Hindú believes this story, and a great many more still more incredible. In fact he is perfectly willing to believe any thing and every thing his spiritual guides tell him; and the more marvellous and improbable the story, the more likely is he to believe it. To such a man as this, the annunciation of "the simple story of the cross," of a meek and lowly Saviour, crucified for sinners, has little charms. But, blessed be God, Messiah's kingdom shall be so firmly established even in this citadel of Satan, that the gates of hell can never prevail against it. Even here Messiah shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

(To be concluded.)

CHINA: NINGPO MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. HENRY V. RANKIN.

Missionary Incidents and Reflections.

October 27th, 1850.—The past few days have given us much occasion for thankfulness and sorrow. Two of our dear sisters who had been brought to the very verge of the grave, and with whom we had parted, as we feared, for the last time upon this earth, have been restored to us in infinite mercy; and God has given us, in answering our many prayers for their recovery, further encouragement to implore the descent of the Holy Spirit in the midst of us. At the same time, we have been, however, sorely pained at the defection of Ayin, who was the first Ningpo man who professed Christianity, and who has for four or five years been under Miss Aldersey's faithful training. Though it appears that his heart was not right in the sight of God from the first, and that there were other causes to draw him from his profession, it is evident that his intended marriage with a heathen woman has been the occasion of disclosing the emptiness of his faith. No respectable Chinese female would be allowed by her friends to neglect the idolatrous rites which for ages this people have observed upon such occasions; and this poor man, loving the praise of men more than the praise of God, has, with his wife, bowed down at the ancestral tablet, and worshipped the departed spirit of the creature. His sin has been accompanied with flagrant falsehood and other gross crimes—so that it will probably be necessary to suspend him from the privileges of the church. Alas! how little do the churches at home know of the real sources of anxiety here, and the real trials of the missionary. These are not deprivation of meat, and drink, and clothing, nor altogether the absence of friends; but they consist rather in those spiritual conflicts which the eye of man cannot perceive. After the long and laborious effort of preparing for direct missionary work, how few there are to listen to the words of truth; and even though one be converted, how beclouded is his mind, and how deceitful may be our fondest hopes! As in this case, every effort which has been expended in his behalf, appears not only in vain, but calculated to enhance his own condemnation and to cause greater dishonour upon the name of our blessed Master. Then there are various casuistical questions which the Missionary is often called upon to decide in an hour, and when he has no human assistance to guide his judgment, and respecting which, the Bible gives no specific direction. . . . Many prayers should be offered by home churches in behalf of those who represent them in the ends of the earth, on this and kindred subjects.

One thing is evident to us all—that more earnest endeavours should be put forth, not only to make our girls' school a nursery of piety, but to secure to a greater extent the direction of the marriage of the pupils with those who are similarly trained in the boys' school. Yet great caution here is necessary, lest the too easily excited suspicions of the parents should be aroused, whereby we might find it difficult to add to the number of our school. We learn that it is almost impossible to establish a female school at Shanghai on account of the suspiciousness of the people; and as the providence of God seems to have opened the heart of this people in a larger measure in this respect than at any other post in China, we would always regret any step which would provoke an unhappy revolution in their minds. It will probably be a long time before the same relations are allowed here between our different schools as are to be found in Ceylon and other missionary stations.

This day, Mr. Coulter has been set apart and ordained as an additional ruling elder to the Mission church, to which office he had been previously elected. The fact that such solemnities are so rarely witnessed in this part of the world, gave an additional interest to services in themselves peculiarly affecting.

Nov. 10th.—My servant whom I brought with me from Amoy, and who had been in the employ of Drs. Abeel and Hepburn, and Mr. Pohlman, has been very low, though he now is in a fair way for recovery. He has for a long time been tolerably well acquainted with scripture truth, and for a while seemed to be anxious for his soul's salvation; but of late his deportment has been careless. He evinced considerable alarm in view of the near approach of death, and professed his faith in Christ, though his conduct hardly gives us any ground of hope.

We have to-day been gratified in listening to a faithful unfolding, by Mr. Goddard, of that precious text "All things work together for good," &c. It seemed especially appropriate and consoling in a time of spiritual anguish, and we were made to feel that such heavy trials as defection in faith on the part of a church member are really working out present and eternal good. To some, the preacher is indeed a source of life unto life, but to others, of death unto death.

Nov. 12th.—We have within the past few days been permitted to welcome the Rev. Mr. Yates, a fellow missionary from Shanghai, connected with the Southern Baptist Convention, the English Bishop of Victoria, and Dr. Bowring, the English Consul at Canton, but who, for many previous years, has in Parliament, by his wisdom and learning, exerted a commanding influence for the good of his native land. He has been a great traveller, and is one of the best informed men now living, in respect to the different nations of the earth. . . . He has already, without introduction, called upon the most of us in a very cordial manner. To many in our churches he would be chiefly known as being the author of that excellent hymn, "Watchman, tell us of the night," which he says he first heard sung by a company of missionaries in Syria, and with what effect we may well imagine.

Mr. Yates, who visits us for a little time on account of his health, brought under his charge the fine bell which has been sent out for our city church, and which has arrived in perfect order, besides a few boxes for different members of our mission, which have been detained three months at Hong Kong. This inconvenience, which the Ningpo missionaries have several times suffered, will, we trust, be entirely removed when vessels come directly to Shanghai frequently enough to make it advisable to send our goods to that port. It cannot be long before this will be the case—for at this time there are about a dozen American ships there, bound directly to the United States, and trade is every week increasing. Our proximity to California will have much to do in this matter. We look at this, however, with especial reference to the spiritual interests of the Chinese who will emigrate; for by the opening of California, the Lord is evidently designing some good to China as well as to our native land.

With Dr. Bowring, also came the newly ordained bishop of the new diocese of Victoria, who, under the humbler title of the Rev. George Smith, visited the five ports a few years ago and wrote an account of his residence in China. He is now upon his first official tour in a government screw propeller—the Reynard—which recently made the unsuccessful trip to the mouth of the Peiho.

The papers and letters by the mail just arrived, bring to me the sad intelligence of the death of our beloved brother Graham, of the Choctaw mission, with whom, as a fellow townsman of the same age, a member of the same church, and a fellow student in college and the seminary, it has been my privilege to pass many happy hours. But though he entered upon his missionary life after me, he has been called home first! His labours were indeed few, but they must have been eminently faithful, for there are few, if any, young men that were more systematic, earnest, or conscientious in the work of the Lord than was John Graham. Brother Reid, to whom he was a bosom friend, will greatly feel his loss, and so will that interesting mission where he had hoped to labour;—but the Lord can provide even when we are brought to the greatest straits. Sooner or later, must we, in our Christian course, be taught to feel not only resigned, but confident that all God's dispensations work out the best good of his people and the greatest advancement of his cause. I recur to an interesting circumstance in our history, that at the same time there were, in 1842, at Princeton, five Newarkers, none of whom during their first year in college was a member of the church—though all eventually were enabled to rejoice in believing. Two of them became foreign missionaries, and another studied for the gospel ministry, but was obliged to discontinue on account of ill health. The youngest of that band has now been called away; may we who remain be prepared to follow him to glory!

Nov. 18th.—This evening the missionary circle met at the house of our English Church brethren, to listen to an account of the Loo Choo Islands, from Bishop Smith. By the direction of the British Admiralty, and with his own cordial consent, the "Reynard" conveyed the Bishop to this beautiful group, where they remained several days. He gave us a graphic account of the many trials of the only Protestant missionary there—Dr. Bettleheim—who, it will be remembered, entered upon his labours a few years ago. At the outset he encountered great opposition to his landing, and it was only by a well managed scheme that he was permitted to find a home on the island for himself and family. Since then, however—and especially during the past year—almost every annoyance which could be contrived has been employed by the officers that he might be induced to leave—but all to no purpose. They do not allow him the use of servants, nor will they permit him to purchase any article of food, nor will they furnish him with fruit, or anything besides his ordinary food. This consists of some rice and sweet potatoes, which are doled out to him every week, to which is added every day a small chicken or a bit of fish. Even a mosquito curtain, which is very essential for comfort, was denied him, on the plea that the government was too poor to afford it. These annoyances would seem to arise from the ill will with which the suspicious Japanese regard the presence of a foreigner on an island so near to them. As the Loo Choos are in a great measure dependent upon Japan, their officers, doubtless, find it necessary to yield to the jealousies of this powerful neighbour, in which, also, they evidently sympathize. Here this devoted family is placed under the most distressing surveillance as to all their words and actions, so that they can have nothing to do with the people. The only wonder is that they have not taken Dr. B.'s life. This is the most distressing feature of this persecution—that he cannot preach to them the gospel of Christ. He is a converted Jew, and his heart seems to dwell with especial delight upon the cross of Christ; he has moreover, gained, with all these difficulties, a fluency of speech in that hard tongue, yet no sooner will he open his mouth to tell of Jesus than all of his audience will flee away. As he passes by, men will attempt to escape into another street; they will shut their doors and windows, and will even leave their goods exposed in the market place. They will not receive his repeated offers for medical practice, alleging that their own physicians are far better than he; and one man he speaks of, upon whose eye he was performing an operation, who suddenly became frightened at the presence of an officer, and ran away with the needle in his flesh. Dr. Smith also testifies to the exceeding shyness of the people, some of whom, in a distant place while he was there, were collected together; but before he had spoken many words, by a concerted movement, every person in ten seconds had fled from the spot.

The only encouragement which the poor man has in his multiplied labours, is an affecting one—he thought he once heard a woman pronounce the name of Jesus, and the thought occurred to him that it might have been in a spirit of devotion. Therefore he labours on, faint, yet pursuing the great aim which led him to sacrifice much to labour in this hard field. He is not supported by any regular missionary society, but by an association in England, formed for his especial benefit; yet he would rather forego this support and live upon his private limited means than give up his beloved Loo Choo. Though a native, I believe, of Hungary, he considers himself a British subject, and claims of his adopted country protection against the annoyances which he suffers; and in his behalf the captain of the "Reynard" warned the authorities against any further maltreatment. Bishop Smith did not, however, deem their past conduct a sufficient cause for military agression, and advised Dr. Bettleheim, if the evils continued, rather to leave the field for the present, than to provoke their further rage or to call for the promised succour from England. What the result will be it is hard to conjecture—and in such a time of trial the good man certainly needs the prayers of the people of God. It may be observed that a failure in this field is not very remarkable, for the Jesuits laboured there a long time, and are still labouring with a similar want of success. The field is not a large one—the inhabitants of the island not numbering more than fifty thousand.

Dr. B., in consequence of his peculiar difficulties in conveying truth to this people, is shut up to the work of translating, and he is therefore preparing a vocabulary of the Japanese language which is there spoken, and translating the New Testament. It may yet appear that his confinement may, in the help it will afford to others, be the best work in which he could be engaged.

Thursday, Nov. 21st.—The Presbytery of Ningpo held its third regular meeting in the chapel yesterday, and Mr. Quarterman was elected moderator. By previous appointment the moderator preached today on "the spiritual dangers of the missionary," from the text, "Satan hath desired to have thee that he may sift thee as wheat." The overture respecting marriage between a Christian and heathen, which was referred back to us by the General Assembly, was placed in the hands of a committee, to report upon in May. It is a serious and a painful question to settle upon, and which we had hoped the Assembly would have at least more fully debated. This evening has been employed in reading a narrative of the state of religion, in connection with conference and prayer.

Nov. 25th.—This day has been observed by us all according to the recommendation of the Presbytery, as a day of fasting and prayer, and two social services were held. The Lord seems indeed to have a controversy with us, or we would be permitted to enjoy the outpourings of the Holy Spirit in the midst of us. One class of persons have to-day been brought prominently to view—the native members of our church. No class of persons require more the prayers of God's people than they—for where faith exists, it is necessarily weak, because it is so little instructed. Our poor brethren and sisters in Christ from among this people, have not had the advantages which have from infancy fallen to our lot—but have been taught, or neglected, as the case may be, by HEATHEN parents, and all their associations have been heathen. It is a miracle of grace indeed, that they are what they are. Perhaps, on one ground, Chinese converts are less favoured than those of many other idolatrous lands. I refer to the fact that they have no written, colloquial language, in which they may learn the word of God and the songs of Zion. These may indeed be committed to memory by the partly educated in the written character, but it must tell as little upon the heart as would our remembering the Greek or Hebrew Testament. However familiar one might be with these languages, they would never speak to his heart like his mother tongue. This is the precise difficulty of the Chinese native convert, and as some of them are uneducated, the evil is the greater. Some measure, it would seem, must be devised to give this people the Bible in their colloquial language—and then we may hope for a similar result to that in Europe, when Luther unchained the word of God from the courtly Latin, and scattered it throughout Germany in the vulgar tongue. From this fact it would also appear that tract distribution at present, should hold a subordinate place in our labours—a principle pretty generally acknowledged in China, and that missionaries must seek to become intelligible and fluent speakers of the language of the people, and should carry the truth by the living voice from house to house and from village to village.

God gives us some encouragement in the midst of the universal apathy of the people. We have for some time been deeply interested in two of our school girls, and one of them has especially evinced a lively concern in matters of religion, and for many months her deportment has been exemplary. With a design of reaching her true feelings, Dr. McCartee asked her to-day which of all God's benefits she most highly prized, and enumerated several of a worldly kind. She, however, passed by them altogether, and instantly referred to the Saviour as that to which all other mercies were subordinate, and professed her own trust in His all-sufficient merits. She is betrothed to a heathen young man, her cousin, and she has only ten months more to remain under our charge. May God grant that she, with many of her associates, may become true disciples! Could Christians at home have any conception of the importance of the outpourings of the Holy Spirit upon these interesting girls, and indeed upon all our schools, they would more largely sympathize with us in our prayers and anxious solicitude.

Nov. 26. Yesterday and to-day the weather has become suddenly very cold, the mercury falling below the freezing point, and ice in our water jars being found one-third of an inch thick. The northerly winds here are very piercing.

Nov. 28. The "Reynard" has just left us for Fuh Chau. Letters have to-day come overland from that port and Amoy, bringing very pleasant and very painful tidings. Mr. Doty at Amoy writes of eight persons who have recently applied for baptism. But from Fuh Chau we learn that the two youngest, but among the most valuable labourers, have been removed, in the providence of God, from their chosen field; Mr. Richards, of the American Board, son of the late lamented missionary to the Sandwich Islands, to return home with ruined health; and Mr. Fast, of the Swedish mission, by a violent death from the hands of pirates. The latter, with his associate, Mr. Elquist, was returning from the vessels at the mouth of the river Min with some money, when their vessel was boarded opposite a Chinese fort, and Mr. Fast was driven overboard and drowned. Mr. Elquist was also severely wounded, and was carried up almost naked to the city. The authorities promise to redress this outrage, but no punishment to the offenders can compensate for so valuable a life as his; for he is represented by those who knew him well as possessed of rare gifts and graces, and as a person calculated to accomplish much good in the blessed cause. But he is not; for God took him. His death furnishes a further illustration of the fact that missionary associations, in their early formation, generally have to pass through heavy reverses, and experience the loss of faithful labourers. God has, indeed, severely tried the faith of his young Missionary Society in Sweden. It was a long time before the two brethren found a place to build near Fuh Chau, and their house which they had rented has two or three times been opened, and they were robbed; and now, just after purchasing land to build a chapel and house, the senior missionary is in a moment cut down. His death also adds another to the list of those missionaries who have died within three years in the Chinese seas—Dr. and Mr. James, Messrs. Lowrie, Pohlman, Spaulding, and Fast—all of different societies represented in China. This amount of unnatural deaths is unprecedented. The American and Presbyterian Boards, together, have not lost so many in the same way since their formation! What lesson are the missionaries to China to learn from this remarkable circumstance? Oh, that we may at least be taught "so to number our days as to apply our hearts unto wisdom."

Dec. 11. We are quite disappointed in learning from Mr. Olyphant that he will not be able to visit Ningpo, as he at first intended. It would certainly have been a source of much satisfaction to the Executive Committee, had one of their number seen us in our various labours, to sympathize with us more fully in our joys and sorrows. He may, however, see us in the spring. We had wished his personal opinion in reference to the question which we must ere long decide—whether we shall detach Mr. Culbertson to Shanghai to assist in the work of translating the Holy Scriptures. The Ningpo missionaries, excepting the Baptists, have to-day begun in concert a revision of the new translation of the New Testament, by the Shanghai committee.

How near we are to our native land! The Sandwich Islands appear to be just off the shores of California, and, lo! a Sandwich Islands' paper, bearing date the last of October, was received by Mr. Martin to-day. It came in thirty days from Honolulu to Hong Kong. Distance will be almost annihilated when steamers ply between Shanghai and San Francisco, and we will hardly be surprised to receive calls from fathers and brothers, in a few years, on tours for pleasure or health. What a blessed thing to remember that God is raising up all these wonderful means for the good of his church, and that they will all further his honour and glory!

The Rev. Mr. Alexander, of the Sandwich Islands' mission, gave his nephew (Mr. Martin) a highly interesting statement, with respect, especially, to schools and the children of missionaries; also of the foreigners, who already number 2,000 of the 80,000 inhabitants of those islands. Of the 165 children of missionaries there, nearly one-half are less than ten years old; and of the remainder forty are members of the church; and none of all these children, whether connected or not, have brought dishonour upon the mission, or the cause of Christ. What a blessed encouragement to the parent who is labouring for Christ on heathen ground, to give, with all confidence, the care of his offspring to the Lord—for He provides for the sons of Levi. A letter has also been recently received from the Nestorian Mission of the American Board, describing a blessed work of grace, especially in the female Seminary. Thus

> "The dwellers in the vales and on the rocks, > Shout to each other,"

our first anxious inquiry being to each, "Watchman, what of the night?" Oh, when shall that morning dawn which shall disclose such glories on our fallen earth as were opened in vision to the prophets of old, and for which age after age the people of God have besieged the throne of his grace? "The morning breaketh;" but "Lord how long thy chariot wheels delay!"

Dec. 15. To-day Apoo presented his child to be baptized; which forms the first case of the kind at this port. His wife shows as yet no interest in Christianity, though apparently favourably inclined to the truth.

Dec. 17. Dr. McCartee was requested a few days since by the Che-Heen to come over and assist in interpreting for six shipwrecked men, who had been brought over from Chusan, and from whom they could only get one word, which resembled the sound of Ningpo. He accordingly was uncertain as to their country, as was the English consulate interpreter, who had been at first called by the Mandarin. Dr. McCartee, conjecturing that they were Japanese, pronounced the names of several cities in Japan, which they instantly recognized with marked delight. To-day Mr. Martin and I accompanied the Doctor to learn more of them, partly by means of a poor vocabulary which has been published of their colloquial language. Our chairs were carried through a long suite of rooms, and as soon as our cards were sent in we followed to the presence-chamber of the Che-Heen, who received us with much kindness. A simple tiffin (lunch) was prepared for us, of which we all partook. A friend of the Mandarin was also present, a Mongolian, about twenty years of age, and of more than ordinary interest. He had traded with the Russians in the North, and had also visited Canton and other extreme points in the empire. He evinced much ease in his manners, and manifested considerable knowledge of other nations, besides the institutions of his own country. When the six Japanese men were brought in, they prostrated themselves according to their custom, and as one question after another was asked they bowed respectfully before replying. We can well imagine the joy of these poor outcasts as they found that they were becoming better understood, and of their gratitude to their strange friend who had been called upon to render this pleasing service. Their ages, it appeared, ranged from eighteen to thirty-five years. About three months ago they were fishing outside of Nangasaki, when they met with a heavy gale, which capsized their vessel, and seven of the number were lost. These remaining six escaped in a small boat, and were driven to the Island of Chusan, whence they were sent by the authorities to Ningpo. These facts were all noted by the Che-Heen, who is bound to report all that he can learn respecting them to the Lieut. Governor of this province; and according to the understanding between China and Japan they must be sent home the first opportunity. If they do not return within a year from the time of their departure, they are liable to lose their heads, and unfortunately for them there will be no junk sailing to Japan within the next twelve months. Their language, especially the cardinal numbers, has some analogy with the Chinese, though by no means borrowed from it; and we noticed with interest the successful imitation of the language these men used by the Mongolian who was with us. Their sound of the letter "R," which is very common with them though almost unpronounceable with Chinamen, he repeated very distinctly. Some European words we found were in use among them, probably derived long ago from the Portuguese, such as savon (soap), tobago (tobacco), buton (button), &c. We are told that the common people, when they write, use an alphabet which consists of forty-eight letters. Their language is said to be virtually two-fold, as the same ideas must generally be expressed in different forms to rich and poor, and some words used by ladies change their meaning when employed by men.

The appearance of these Japanese presented a semblance of the Chinese and the North American Indians. The forehead and face are fuller than those of the Chinese, and the nose is tolerably flat, though there is much in their form to recall both races.

As yet little is known of Japan. One vessel after another has visited her ports, but the same policy of her government seems in each case to regard a cautious reserve towards foreigners—to supply them gratuitously with the necessaries of life, but to accept no foreign presents—and to hasten the departure of each ship. Whenever a foreign vessel has entered her harbours, she is instantly surrounded by well-armed boats, and no one has been allowed to land. This cannot long be the case, especially as the steamers which will ply between Shanghai and California will, of necessity, pass among her islands. They will need a port for the supply of coal there, or some slight accident will frequently induce these and other vessels to call by the way. Some provocation will easily arise, which, added to the one our government has already received, will call forth an aggressive power which will force an opening. The Lord seems as yet to have denied his church an opening in that empire—but even if it were thrown wide open, who is there to go in and possess the land? While so many occupied stations are poorly supplied with labourers, when can we secure enough for so large a nation, as yet wholly unoccupied? Indeed, it seems a kind and wise Providence that saves us from so humiliating a result. If the church were not straitened in herself, we should find that God would furnish us with ample fields for the largest energies of the human heart.

Dec. 29. After attending Chinese services in the chapel this afternoon with Dr. McCartee, we visited some boats, and distributed tracts. On our way we saw two blind boys repeating their lessons in fortune-telling to an adept in that science, who was likewise blind. It consisted of a series of rhymes applicable for the various cases which may come under the ministration of these unhappy deceivers. These people often acquire a high reputation for wisdom, and the business is very profitable.

(To be continued.)

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN APRIL, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Londonderry.—Newburyport, Mass 2d ch mon con colls 44, Ladies 8 $52 00
Pby of Troy.—Lansingburg ch 86 21; Dunning st ch Malta in part to const Rev P S Talmage l m 20; Waterford ch to const James R. Blake, George W Eddy, and Joshua Mandeville l m's 205, Sab sch for Siam Mission 15 326 21
Pby of Albany.—Ballston Spa ch 35 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Phelps ch 18 14
Pby of Wyoming.—Caledonia ch Duncan McPherson 12 50
Pby of Buffalo City.—Alden ch 7; Aurora 1st ch 8 78, Rev J Dubuar 1 16 78

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Monticello ch ann coll 44 64; Goodwill ch 47 50; Centreville ch 20; Coshecton ch 6; Liberty ch 27 50; Florida ch 6; Goshen ch 165 57; Deer Park ch 13 330 21
Pby of North River.—Rondout ch mo con colls 30, Sab sch to ed Walter Crane Phillips and Martha H Wurtz 25 55 00
Pby of Bedford.—South Salem ch a friend 50; North Salem ch mo con 5 50; White Plains ch 33 70; Pound Ridge ch 15; Bedford ch ann coll addl 46, mo con colls 51 11 201 31
Pby of Long Island.—Southampton ch mo con colls 41, Sab sch for Ningpo Mission 8; Hempstead ch mo con 7; East Hampton ch Sab sch 16 27 72 27
Pby of New York.—Astoria ch mo con colls 35 69; University Place ch ann coll addl 42 18, mo con 85 11, Ladies soc 118; New York 1st ch 106 19, M F A for church at Shanghai 100, Young Ladies to ed Mary K Lowrie and Julia Whittesley 12 50, Sab sch to ed W W Phillips 6 25, to ed James Donaldson and Sarah C Dow 12 50, Infant Sab sch to ed Aaron B Belknap 6 25; Chelsea ch mo con 21 81, Sab sch for sup of Bazar sch at Allahabad 57 65; Madison Avenue ch mo con of which 30 "a thank offering" and to const Rev William Bannard l m 53 64, Sab sch to ed John D Wells 15 61, less 3 for "Foreign Missionary;" Forty-Second st ch mo con 28; Wallabout ch mo con 3 77; Brooklyn Central ch mo con colls 57 33; Duane st ch Sab sch to ed Henrietta Romeyn Beers 6 54; Williamsburg ch mo con 4 13; Nyack ch 15; Rutger's st ch fem miss assoc 85 22; Brick ch ann coll 487 03; Fifteenth st ch 251; Yorkville ch 2 1610 40
2d Pby of New York.—Peekskill N Y. S S Myrick 5; Stanton st ch mo con colls 18 71; Mount Washington Valley ch 50; Mount Pleasant ch 42 10; Canal st ch contents of Missionary box 25; Scotch ch James Morrison 10, John Johnston 250, W Post 62 50, Richard Irvin 50, Robert Carter and Bros to const Mrs Agnes Carter l d 100; West Farms ch 12 50, less 2 50 for "Foreign Missionary" 623 31

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Lamington ch 94; Chatham Village ch 3; Rahway 1st ch 82 179 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—Ewing ch "a lady" 5; Trenton 2d ch bal of ann con 8 60, less 6 67 for "Foreign Missionary," Sab sch 2 40; Pennington ch 50; Freehold Village ch 44 54; Titusville ch 15; Millstone ch 10 128 87
Pby of Burlington.—Mount Holly ch 30, Sab sch 8 26 38 26
Pby of West Jersey.—Bridgeton ch Sab sch to ed Samuel Beach Jones and Mary Rülston Jones 46 25; May's Landing ch 10 53, Sab sch 17 01; Woodbury ch 27 55; Cedarville ch of which 22 bal of sub of 1850 72, fem miss assoc 21; Pittsgrove ch addl 27 50 274 86
Pby of Newton.—Lower Mount Bethel ch 75; Blairstown ch 22 62; Knowlton ch 17 75; Hackettstown ch 55; Easton 1st ch 150; Belvidere ch Sab sch 5; Easton Pa. Rev D V McLean D D 25 350 37
Pby of Raritan.—Milford ch 16; Clinton ch 13 70, Sab sch 9 65; Amwell 1st ch 30; Kingwood ch 12 82; Frenchtown ch 7 18; Lambertsville ch 25 114 35
Pby of Susquehanna.—Athens ch 10; Towanda ch 10 20 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Newton ch 5; Wyalusing ch 30; Wilkesbarre ch 15 50 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Phila 9th ch juv miss soc to ed Arch. Tudehope at Allahabad 6; Richmond ch 8; Phila 10th ch mo con 50 56; Phila 11th ch 50; Phila 6th ch mo con 36 75; Phila Central ch ann coll in part 84 28; Phila North ch Sab sch for sup of Rev Andrew P Happer M D Canton 100 335 59
2d Pby of Philadelphia.—Doylestown ch 26 50
Pby of New Castle.—Rock ch Cent soc 6 25; Oxford ch 80, fem seminary for school in Africa 20 106 25
Pby of Donegal.—Chanceford ch 27; Waynesburg ch 133 18; Columbia ch 43 35 203 53
Pby of Baltimore.—Washington, F st ch mo con colls 46 16, youth's miss soc to ed James Laurie and Ninian Banatyne 46 42; Balt 3d ch Sab sch to const their pastor Rev Geo W Musgrave l d 100; Balt 1st ch 647, youths miss soc and teachers in Sab sch to ed J Starkie Imbrie, James Armstrong, and Margaret Armstrong in North India 75; Balt Franklin st ch of which 23 77 mo con 50; Balt Madison st ch 2 96; Govanne chapel 10 977 54
Pby of Carlisle.—Big Spring ch 137 95, Sab sch 4 05; Shippensburgh ch 5, Mrs Stewart 10, Miss Sidney King decd (the contents of her missionary box) for North'n India 25; Cumberland ch Mrs McKaig to ed Linnie McKaig Beal 20; Waynesboro' ch 40; Mercersburg ch 88 14, mo con colls 30, coloured members for Africa 6 50; Williamsport ch 15, Miss Ann Eliza Cunningham 77 cts; Paxton ch 37 419 41
Pby of Huntingdon.—Lower Tuscarora ch in part, to const their pastor Rev E W Thompson l d 140; Waynesburg and Newton Hamilton chs 70; Presbyterial coll in Bellefonte ch 28; Blair co Pa. Miss Knox 2, Mrs Saml Moore 3; Perrysville ch 40; Hollidaysburg ch 25; Clearfield ch 7; Alexandria ch 110; Lewistown ch 78 31; Shirleysburg ch 13, John Brewster 80; Bellefonte ch 55; Lick Run ch 18 95; East Kishacoquillas ch 27 80; Coleraine Forge fem miss sewing soc 13 711 06
Pby of Northumberland.—Brier Creek ch 2 90; Lewisburg ch 60 75; Washington ch 72; Bethel ch 9; Milton ch 85; Pine Run ch 30 75; Lycoming ch 9 01; New Berlin ch 40 75; Northumberland ch 16 55; Sunbury ch 7 45 334 16

SYNOD OF PITTSBURG.

Pby of Blairsville.—Salem ch 28; Bethel ch 7 30, fem miss soc in part to const Mrs Rebecca McMullen and Mrs Nancy Neil l ms 10 60; Congruity ch 2 50; Union and Fairfield chs 18; Gilgal and Perry chs 10, Gilgal ch mo con colls 4 50, Gilgal fem miss soc 15 50; Harmony ch in part 15 06; Rural Valley ch mo con 5; Strongstown ch 2 118 46
Pby of Redstone.—Dunlaps Creek ch 57 06; McLellandstown ch 11 37; Spring Hill ch 13 45; Rehoboth ch 86 13; Uniontown ch 95; Indian Creek and Harmony chs 25 25; Laurel Hill ch 61 22; New Providence ch Rev John McClintock 5; Churches under care of Rev H Hess 8 362 48
Pby of Ohio.—Lawrenceville ch 38 50, Sab sch addl 12; Pittsburg 2d ch addl 10; Pittsburgh 5th ch 18 81; Temperanceville ch 11 25; Sharon ch 14 50; Pittsburgh 1st ch 339, mo con 20 47, Sab sch to ed Francis Heron and to const Mrs Wm Scott of St Louis, Mo l m 30, Juv Sab sch 20, in all 409 47, less 12 50 for "Foreign Missionary;" East Liberty ch addl 37, mo con colls 18, Sab sch miss box 3; Bethel ch bal to const Mrs Jane Kiddoo and Mrs Margaret Fife l ms 40 55; Racoon ch bal to const Rev C V McKaig l d 10 62; Montours ch to const Rev Thomas Stevenson l m 55; Mingo ch to const Miss Julia Dundass l m 35 85; Sharpsburg ch 31; Pine Creek ch 9; Pittsburg 4th ch 19 90; Mount Pisgah ch 18 25; Pittsburg 6th ch in part 75 855 20
Pby of Allegheny.—Tarentum ch 17; Amity ch 1; Mount Nebo ch Thomas Crattis 2 50 20 50
Pby of Beaver.—Neshanock ch 156; Pulaski ch 45 38, Ladies miss soc 9 50; Hopewell ch 9; Concord ch of which 30 to const their pastor Rev John Brown l m 37 25; Beaver Falls ch 35; Clarksville ch 40; Sharon ch 10 342 13
Pby of Erie.—West Greenville ch addl 15 00
Pby of Clarion.—Clarion ch 50; New Rehoboth ch 30 10; Leatherwood ch 10 90 10

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 2d ch Sab sch to ed Delia M Dickson, Cyrus Dickson, Edgar Woods, and James M McKelly at Canton 31 25; Pigeon Creek ch 52; The Cove ch 1 25; Forks of Wheeling ch of which 10 in part to const Chas Bagaley l m 64 25; Cross Roads ch mo con colls 1850, 32, four months of 1851, 17 20 197 95
Pby of St Clairsville.—Short Creek ch 7; Nottingham ch bal to const their pastor Rev Thomas R Crawford l d 81; Deersville ch 10; Mount Pleasant ch "a lady" to const James Alexander and Mrs Nancy Mitchell l ms 60, J Addison Mitchell 5, family of Rev B Mitchell to ed Benjamin Mitchell at Ningpo, and also to const Miss Eliza J C Mitchell l m 30; Fairview ch addl 17; Beech Spring ch 12; Bealsville ch 8; Grandview ch 2 66; New Castle ch 1; Pipe Creek ch 6; Powhattan ch 2; Woodsfield ch 3; Malaga ch 1 245 66
Pby of Steubenville.—Amsterdam ch 5; Harlem ch 7; Kilgore ch 2; Carrolton ch 21 50; Fairmount ch 8 50; Monroesville ch 2; Corinth ch addl to const Rev W J Brough l m 5 35; East Springfield ch addl 7; Richmond ch 6 64 35
Pby of New Lisbon.—Poland ch 63; Canfield ch 4; New Lisbon ch 55; Bethel ch 21 50; Newton ch 8 151 50

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Columbus.—Columbus 1st ch 95 90, mo con colls of which 6 33 for China 26 88, Ladies miss

soc 75; Sab sch to ed two children in China 50; Tarlton and Amanda chs 7 50; Blendon ch 7 47; Mifflin ch 8 16; Worthington ch 12 65; Lithopolis ch 45; Truro fem miss soc 41 52; Circleville ch 18 15, H Remick 25; London ch 8 88; Hamilton ch 24 33; Kingston ch 93 22 — 539 66

Pby of Marion.—Marion ch 5 88; Upper Sandusky ch 8; Milford Centre ch 12 56; Waynesburg ch 1; Kingston ch 1 50; Bucyrus ch 15; Liberty ch 3, Mon Con colls 27 76; '———' Master J Dunlop 52 cts; Union ch 2 89; '———' a Lady 20 — 98 11

Pby of Zanesville.—Muskingum ch 11 80; Pleasant Hill ch 29 50; Newark ch 32 67 — 73 97

Pby of Richland.—Utica ch bal 4 25; Olivesburg ch 2; Bloominggrove ch 3; Mount Pleasant ch 7 65; Orange ch 14; Haysville ch 21 71; Savannah ch 8 43; Martinsburg ch 8 62; Mt Vernon ch 5 90; Perrysville ch 8; Lake Fork Cross Roads ch 16; Sharon ch 7; Shelby ch 2; Waterford ch children 1 27; Frederick ch 4 04; Milford ch 7 34 — 121 21
Less acknowledged in error in April receipts 1850 from Orange ch 17 13; Hopewell ch 8 87 — 26 00 — 95 21

Pby of Wooster.—Chippewa ch 16; Guilford ch 15 87; Northfield ch 19 56; Green ch 2; Springfield ch 4; Jackson ch 6 25; Wooster ch Sab Sch 2 83; Wayne ch 8 07; Mt Hope ch 18 96; Congress ch 12 40 — 105 94

Pby of Coshocton.—Apple Creek ch 40; West Carlisle ch 21 25; Clark ch 13 13; Berlin ch 30 67, Sab Sch 6 03; Mount Eaton ch 13 25; Millersburg ch (addl) 4, Mrs Smith's class in Sab Sch for Tract distribution at Futtehgurh, N India 2 — 130 33

Pby of Hocking.—Athens ch 50; Mt Carmel ch 4; Alexander ch 12; Gallipolis ch 4 — 70 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Chillicothe.—Union ch 12 42, Fem Benev Soc 23 58, in all 36 for sup of Rev R S Fullerton in North India; Brush Creek ch 2 90 — 38 90

Pby of Miami.—Xenia ch (bal) 5; Greenville ch 12; Honey Creek ch 6 80; Dick's Creek ch 2 — 25 80

Pby of Cincinnati.—Cin 1st ch Ladies' Miss Soc 210; Cin 7th ch Sab Sch Miss Soc 3 mos colls 23 53, Ladies' Miss Soc in part 250; Cin Central ch ann coll 195 43, First Mission Sab Sch to ed Robert Young 25; Cin Hight St ch 1; Pleasant Ridge ch ann coll 16, Mon Con 3 28; Bethel ch 4 50; Feesburg ch 2; Cheviot ch W W Rice 25; Monroe ch 9 50, Susanna Johnston 3; Reading ch 16 50; Marshal O, Mrs Lucinda Robinson 5; Cin O 2d Mission Sab Sch Young Men's Soc of Inquiry 3 35 — 793 09

Pby of Oxford.—Oxford ch (bal) 19 22; Providence ch 15 — 34 22

Pby of Sidney.—West Liberty ch (bal) — 17 00

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—Livonia Ind, Jno M McPheters 1 55; Utica ch 4 40; New Philadelphia ch 9 20; Cannelton ch 1; Sharon ch 1; Jeffersonville ch 14 30 — 31 45

Pby of Vincennes.—Petersburg ch 2 50; Carlisle ch 11 65 — 14 15

Pby of Madison.—New Lexington ch — 10 00

Pby of Whitewater.—Sand Creek ch 21 45; Ladies, for sup of Mr Rankin 4 — 25 45

Pby of Palestine.—Palestine ch Rev J Platt — 10 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Delphi ch and Sab Sch — 8 50

Pby of Lake.—Crown Point ch 5; Little Elkhart ch 1 79; Constantine ch 3 10; Valparaiso ch Sab Sch 3 11 — 13 00

Pby of Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne German ch — 1 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—North Sangamon ch, a few children, the fruits of self-denial for Bible distribution among the heathen — 3 00

Pby of Peoria.—Chicago North ch ann cont 74, Sab Sch to ed R. H. Richardson 12; Princeville ch 5; Rochester ch 3 — 94 00

Pby of Iowa.—Fort Madison ch — 6 00

Pby of Rock River.—Albany ch — 7 50

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of Missouri.—Jefferson City ch — 4 75

Pby of St. Louis.—Eagle Fork ch 11; St Louis Westminster ch 2 — 13 00

Pby of Palmyra.—Hannibal ch — 2 50

Pby of Potosi.—Flat Rock ch — 5 90

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Louisville.—Shelbyville ch ann coll 39, mon con colls 22; Louisville 1st ch mon con 10 85; Louisville 2d ch mon con 9 15; Louisville 4th ch Jun Soc to ed Mason D Williams in North India 18 — 99 00

Pby of Muhlenburg.—Salem ch 2 05; Cony Fork ch 1 40; Marion ch 55 cts — 4 00

Pby of Transylvania.—Columbia ch — 10 00

Pby of West Lexington.—Bethel ch (addl) 20 50; Frankfort ch Rev S Robinson 50, Mrs F Vanmeter 25; Harmony ch Mrs M J Lewis 1; Pisgah ch 18 75 — 115 25

Pby of Ebenezer.—Paris ch 72 65; Sharpsburg ch 15; Murphysville ch 11; Covington ch 51 37, J M Preston 35, Sab Sch 31 10; Concord ch 3 — 219 12

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Liberty Hall Va. Mrs P R Cabell 1, Harden's Tavern, Mrs M M Lewis 5 — 6 00

Pby of Greenbrier.—Union ch — 25 87

Pby of Lexington.—New Providence ch 25; Harrisonburg ch 21 75; Windy Cove ch 10 50; Lebanon ch 6 35; Timber Ridge ch 9; New Monmouth ch 14 21; Lexington ch 118 75; Goshen ch 11 35; Pisgah ch 1; Fairfield ch (bal) 50 cts, Rev James Paine 2 50; Waynesboro Va, Daniel Fishburn and family 10, a class of little girls 44 cts; Augusta ch 29; Rocky Spring ch 4 45 — 264 80

Pby of Winchester.—Rec'd from Treas of Pres'y — 66 00

Pby of West Hanover.—College ch 20; South Plains ch, 'a female member' 2; a member of Rev E Cochran's ch 2 50; Charlottsville Va, Mrs Mary Jane Smith 10; Hampden Va, Sam'l Cumming 5 — 39 50

Pby of East Hanover.—Petersburgh ch, 'a few friends' for Evangelical Soc of France 63; Norfolk ch 208; Richmond 1st ch ann coll 139, Miss Mary Simpson 2, Mon Con 29 62, Sab Sch to ed Virginia Richmond 25; Namozine ch 15; Nottoway ch (addl) 15, Dr Geo Fitzgerald 5; Richmond Va, Dr Jas A Waddel 2 — 503 62

Pby of Montgomery.—Salem ch 49 35; High Bridge ch 10; Missionary stations in Floyd co 3 50; Clifton Forge Va, Mrs Cath. Jordan 2 — 64 85

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Wilmington ch 20; Tirza ch 12 15; Mt Horeb ch 1; Elizabethtown ch for Ireland 2; Sardis ch 8 88; Brown Marsh ch 5 52; Long St ch 10, Rev E McNair 10; Buffalo ch 15 25; McPherson's ch 4 50; Philadelphus ch 8 75; Galatia ch 4 95; Antioch ch Fem Miss Soc 11 98; Hopewell and Rockfish chs 3 — 117 98

Pby of Concord.—Charlotte ch (addl) 1; Mallard Creek ch 26; Sugar Creek ch 48 35, Ladies' Miss Soc 24 50; Poplar Tent ch 20 20; Hopewell ch 15; Rocky River ch 64 10; Thyatira ch 5 85; Centre ch 9 30; Joppa ch 13; Franklin ch 3 06; College ch 25; Salisbury ch 45; Unity ch (Lincoln) 20; Unity ch (Rowan) 6 32; Ramah ch 12 87; Sharon ch 20 10; Steel Creek ch 28 40; Pleasant Hill ch 13; Providence ch 20; Bethpage ch 12; Back Creek ch 15 15; Philadelphia ch 11 85; Third Creek ch 15; Concord ch 20; New Hope ch 8; Fourth Creek ch 15 — 518 05

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Mill Grove Ga Robert Miller 1 25, "———" a friend of Foreign Missions 10 — 11 25

Pby of Georgia.—St Augustine ch mo con coll 11; Waynesville ch 25; St Mary's ch 6 50, Rev W G Williams 6 55 — 49 05

Pby of Hopewell.—Milledgeville ch six mon con colls 74 90; Clarksville ch 9 20; Danielsville ch Rev G H Cartledge 5; Augusta 1st ch mo con colls 56; Greensboro' ch 42 05; Mount Zion ch 36; Athens ch 30, "Soc for Home and Foreign Missions" 86 02 — 339 17

Pby of Flint River.—Hopewell ch 16 50; Newnan ch 25; Perry ch 6; Goshen ch 5; Bethany ch 10; Pochilta ch 2 50; Cuthbert ch 4 87; Albany ch 1 50; Mount Tabor ch 4 30; Americus ch 39 50; Ephesus ch 17; Griffin ch 25 — 157 17

Pby of Florida.—Quincy ch — 36 00

Pby of Cherokee.—Woodstock ch 35 35; Roswell ch 20, Juv Soc to ed M A Pratt 20; Sardis ch 5 — 80 35

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of South Alabama.—Mobile 2d ch 150; Mobile Government st ch 128; Valley Creek ch of which 28 35 from coloured members for Africa 180; Pisgah ch of which 5 from coloured members for Africa 44; Mount Pleasant ch of which 2 50 from coloured members for Africa 39 50; Newbern ch 25; Centre Ridge ch 50; Shell Creek ch 5; Fairview ch 37; Friendship ch 7; Marion ch 15; Pensacola ch 5; Flat Creek ch of which 25 to ed Kirk White Smith at Ningpo 30; Selma ch 20; Montpelier ch 5 — 740 50

Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Hebron and Ebenezer chs of which 6 from coloured members for Monrovia 66; Greensboro' ch 25 80 — 91 80

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Natchez ch ann coll addl 50, mo con colls 69 57; Port Gibson ch ann coll 153 75, mo con colls 24, Sab sch Miss L F S 3, Master G A S 50 cts; Red Lick ch 12 15, Master H S and Miss D S Montgomery 2 25 each, 4 50; Ebenezer ch 50 cts; Union ch 12 60; Grand Gulf ch 18 70; Clinton ch 18 40; Jackson ch ann coll 103 50, A C Baine for Alexander High School 5, Sab sch 15; Raymond ch in part to const Rev. J. Cooper l m 21 15; Vicksburg ch 78 70; Lake Providence ch to const Rev Thos H Clelland l d 124 — 715 02

Pby of Tombeckbee.—Montrose ch — 4 20

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Nashville.—Gallatin ch — 24 00

Pby of Maury.—Hopewell ch — 7 00

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Western District.—Memphis 1st ch 129 65; Memphis 2d ch 104 90, Sab sch to ed a girl at Creek Mission Tallahassee 26 35 — 260 90

Total from churches, $16,929 09

LEGACIES.

Southampton L I, legacy of Mrs Abijail Foster — 50 00

Pittsburg Pa, Estate of Thomas Patterson deceased — 45 00

Pittsburg Pa, Estate of Dr Gladden dec'd — 50 00

Cinn'a O, Estate of John Gallagher " — 30 00 — 175 00

SEMINARIES AND COLLEGES.

Princeton N J Theol Sem Miss Bible Tract and Education Society — 139 23

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend — 1 00

A Friend — 1000 00

A few individuals for Indian churches — 600 00

" for Chapel at Ningpo — 500 00

A Friend — 3 00

Claiborne Miss. John C Baldwin — 20 00

New York, "a thank offering" — 1 00

Little Rock Ark Rev Jos Green for Papal Europe — 50 00

"———" E. M. R. — 75

Mo con colls at Kowetah Mission among Creek Indians, of which 1 62 from pupils — 9 50

Boggy Depot Ark Jas S and Mrs Allan — 10 00

A Friend — 3 00

Grand Traverse Mich Lewis Miller — 2 00

Brooklyn N Y Miss Jane D Platt in part to ed Sarah Platt at Kowetah — 5 00

"D" for African Mission — 20 00

N Brunswick N J Rev J J Janeway D D — 700 00

Sales of Memoir of Rev Walter M Lowrie for Ningpo Mission — 539 50

A Friend — 1 00

Associate Reformed Synod of the South — 130 00

W. P. C. — 2 00

Indiana Co Pa a friend — 3 50

Ladies' Jewish miss soc Phila — 50 00 — 3,651 25

Total receipts in April — $20,894 57

Wm. RANKIN, Jr., Treasurer.

DONATIONS FROM FRIENDS IN INDIA

Acknowledged in detail in Foreign Missionary for May.

Received during the year 1848–9 Rs. 5699.15.0 or $2849 97

" " 1849–50 Rs. 11664. 6. 9 or 5832 20

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Ladies of Amity ch Alleghany Pby one box clothing — 42 56

Ladies of Sand Creek ch Ind one box clothing

" Pleasant Hill ch O one box clothing

" Allentown N J one bundle clothing — 9 00

Fem For Miss Association of Rutgers st ch N Y one box clothing for Chippewa Mission — 130 21

NOTICES.

Letters relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to Walter Lowrie, Esq., or the Rev. John C. Lowrie, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Letters relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to William Rankin, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

Payments of Moneys for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

Boxes of Clothing, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. John Leyburn, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. Joseph P. Engles, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. Engles, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. Mitchell, M. D. Treasurer.

PROSPERITY OF THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

It is with much pleasure, and, we trust, humble gratitude, that we are enabled to state that the fiscal year of this Board, which closed March 31st, proves to have been a year of unexampled prosperity. All along, from the beginning, the good hand of the Lord seems to have been round about this institution, opening for it an ever-widening field of usefulness, and giving it such favour as to secure the necessary means for carrying out its plans. The last year, however, has largely exceeded in its results those of any similar period in the Board's history. The donations to the colporteur fund are larger by fifty per cent.: the sales are nearly $18,000 in advance of those of last year. The sales for the fiscal year of 1849, were about $29,000; for the year '50, $42,000; and for '51, that just closed, $60,000. With almost all who love the truth as it is in Jesus, the publications find favour. We thank God, and take courage.

DR. ALEXANDER PREACHING IN MICHIGAN.

The venerable Dr. Alexander, even in his declining years, is enabled to preach the same blessed truths which have been heard so long and by so many from his lips, for the gratification and edification of those whose privilege it is to be within reach of his Sabbath ministrations. But Dr. Alexander is preaching to many other audiences than those assembled in the churches or the Seminary chapel at Princeton. Through his Religious Experience, and Practical Sermons, as well as many others of his writings, he is proclaiming the gospel tidings all over the land. In illustration of this remark, hear a colporteur in Michigan, who says in his last report, in regard to one of the works alluded to:

"Alexander's Practical Sermons are read once a fortnight to over two hundred hearers, where one year ago a Presbyterian sermon had never been heard."

IMPORTANCE OF REPUBLISHING STANDARD RELIGIOUS WORKS OF OTHER DAYS.

The Puritan Recorder, speaking of the importance of republishing and circulating the old standard religious works, says:

"It will vastly contribute to fortify the minds of the younger ministry and brotherhood in the churches, to have the writings of our standard theological authors everywhere easy of access. Our theological literature, as it now is, is a vast advantage against the corrupters of the truth. To carry their plans, they are obliged, in the earlier stages of their work, to maintain that they teach nothing contrary to our standard writers. And those disposed to listen to them, go to these writers with all confidence, and if they do not thereby detect the cheat that is practised there, they perhaps adopt more of the views of the sound writers than of their favourite leader. And so, by a constant drawing of waters from pure wells, the poison which they take from the other source is so diluted as to be in a measure harmless. Thus our Owens, Flavels, Howes and Edwardses being stationed by every minister's study-chair, are preaching the truth more effectually than a single charmer can instil the poison of heresy.

"Here is a reason, additional to the weighty reasons which have been urged, why an effectual effort should be made to fill the libraries of ministers and Christians with these powerful productions of the theologians of other days."

For the Home and Foreign Record.

COLPORTAGE IN MAURY PRESBYTERY.

The labours of Mr. W. H. Arnell, colporteur of the Presbyterian Board of Publication within the bounds of the above-named Presbytery, have been accompanied with the most encouraging results.

Mr. Arnell has sold within the last six months nearly $800 worth of books, principally in the congregations of Hopewell, Ebenezer, Zion, and Bethesda. The sales, however, have not been confined to the families of Presbyterians: all denominations of Christians have purchased and read these books with profit; Christians of every name have found in them "the sincere milk of the word," and are "growing thereby."

Mr. Arnell is doing a great work—1. By furnishing substantial food to our feeble and scattered flocks, who do not enjoy the constant ministrations of the sanctuary. 2. By showing the world and other denominations that Presbyterians do not hold and propagate "the doctrine of devils," which is sometimes charged to their account. Consequently our own people are growing "in the most holy faith," and other denominations are beginning to see that when they are fighting against Presbyterianism they are fighting against the Bible.

There is one fact connected with the labours of Mr. Arnell, which merits special consideration by our Board—he does not leave the impression that it is a mere book-peddling business, designed to make money, but that it aims directly at the conversion and salvation of souls by the dissemination of Bible truth. The amount of money received is a very small consideration, when compared with the good effected. This mode of operating is well adapted to the state of things in Middle Tennessee, and the books furnished by the Board are peculiarly suited to our wants. The Great Supper, by Fairchild, is just what we need; and it is working like good leaven. No living minister in this region is doing so much to establish the people of God in a sound and consistent faith as this little book. It deals with revealed truth as matter of fact; and gives it a practical bearing on the judgment and conscience that is almost irresistible. It is worth to us a whole library of such works as speculate and philosophize, until the reader finds it difficult to understand what is the object of the writer.

It would subserve our wants still farther if some one, who has the time and the ability to do it properly, would prepare—1. A short treatise on the pastoral relation, giving prominence to the duty on the part of the minister of giving himself "to the word and doctrine;" and, on the part of the people, of "relieving him of worldly care." 2. A practicable plan for systematic and general benevolence, by which the "widow's mite," the children's dimes, and the servant's pennies may all be brought into the Lord's treasury.*

* These desiderata are partially supplied by Tract No. 21, "The Importance of Doctrinal and Instructive Preaching;" No. 20, "Claims of the Gospel Ministry to an adequate support," and No. 51, "On Systematic Benevolence."—Ed. of H. & F. Record.

We lose much by our partial collections; and, if to give is a means of grace, as it must be, the spirituality of the Church would be greatly promoted by making it general. We might then look for the approach of that time when Christians will regard it a sin to die rich.

A Presbyter.

LOOKING FOUR YEARS INTO THE GRAVE.

Among the blessed fruits of colportage are the cases not unfrequently occurring, of colporteurs finding persons in distress of mind, wishing for light and comfort, and knowing not whither to turn for it, and directing them to the Sun of Righteousness, whose healing beams drive away the night of their souls. The following interesting narrative from one of our colporteurs will serve as an illustration of the good done by colporteurs in this respect.

"I have travelled over a considerable extent of country, and have called on all the families in the valley, and on the side of the mountain, and found many destitute who would have been very happy to have bought, if they had had the means. I gave them tracts, and conversed with them on the subject of their salvation. To some I have given one of the cheap editions of the small books, such as Baxter's Call, Way of Salvation, &c., for which they were very thankful. Two or three of the Romanist families had not the Bible, and said they did not want my books.

"It is with gratitude I have to say, that in almost every instance I have been well received, and in most families have been very affectionately invited to call again. I have been made welcome to tarry for a night, and partake of their bounty; which has been very cheering to me when wearied travelling from house to house.

"I have found some persons anxious about their salvation. One poor woman, when I introduced the subject of personal religion, burst into tears, saying, 'I am glad you have called and spoken to me on the subject, for I have been for three or four weeks anxious about my soul, and thought I should be very happy to have some one to speak to me on the subject.' She said she was sorry she had no money. I gave her the Way of Salvation.

"In conversing with another person who had been called about four years ago to part with a beloved daughter, and about eight months since with another, on whom she fondly doated, she said she could not be reconciled—she could not find any comfort. 'Madam,' said I, 'I think I can see why you do not find comfort. I think you do not look to the right source. Now, tell me plainly, are you not looking into the grave?' She said, 'You are right, I am thinking of my daughters there.' 'Now, madam,' said I, 'let me say there is no consolation in the grave. Look to Jesus, yes to Jesus—there you will find comfort, and nowhere else. You have been looking four years into the grave, and found no comfort; look to Jesus, who is willing to pardon and comfort all who come to him, and you shall find rest for your soul.' She appeared thoughtful, and the next day, when passing, she told me she had rested better that night than for many months—that she had been looking upwards, and had not been a little comforted.

"A lady who has since called at my house, said, I must take courage—that the lady I had spoken to had found comfort indeed in looking to Jesus, and had presented herself as a candidate for communion, and in her examination referred to the conversation alluded to as the means which had first set her solemnly and seriously to looking to the right source for that consolation she had found.

"I have seen quite a number who were very serious, but I must say too, that I have found many who were very careless, and seemed hardened indeed. I called at one house and saw the lady, and her daughter—a young lady. I asked the lady of the house if she did not want a good book. 'I think not,' was the reply. I asked the young lady to look at my books. She did so, and said, 'That's a book that I want.' It was Boston's Fourfold State, which she purchased. Young ladies do not often make as good selections for their reading. I hope and pray that God will, by the influence of his Holy Spirit, bless his truth to many whose lips I have seen quiver, and whose tears flowed freely as I spoke with them."

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"THOUGHTS ON FAMILY WORSHIP."

It may be gratifying to the author of the above work to learn that, in addition to quickening many a child of God in the discharge of the duty it inculcates, it has been blessed recently in the hands of God, as a means of leading a reader to the knowledge of the Saviour.

An intelligent and highly accomplished physician in the county of ———, in the State of Virginia, lately purchased the "Thoughts on Family Worship;" and though he had no religious convictions at the time, was induced to give it an attentive reading. During the course of the perusal the truth reached his conscience, and he laid the book down with this conviction—"Though I have been a professed believer in the existence of God, yet I have been living all my days the life of a practical Atheist." This led to a diligent inquiry into the state of his affections towards his God. The result was—his full and thorough conviction of sin, and need of a Saviour. He sought and obtained pardon through a crucified Redeemer. It is needless to add, the family altar was immediately erected; and now, morning and evening, the voice of that physician is heard leading the devotions of his family. "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever." D. B. E.

NOTICES OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PRIZE ESSAYS ON THE TEMPORAL ADVANTAGES OF THE SABBATH, considered in relation to the Working Classes: containing Heaven's Antidote to the Curse of Labour, by John Allan Quinton, Journeyman Printer; The Torch of Time, by David Farquhar, Machinist; and the Pearl of Days, by a Labourer's Daughter. 12mo, with nine beautiful engravings. Price 50 cents.

We regard this as one of the most remarkable and useful books of the kind which has ever been issued by the Christian press, both on account of its authorship, its adaptation to promote the keeping holy of God's day, and its extensive popularity. The Essays composing the volume, were called forth by the offer of a prize for the best three Essays on the Temporal Advantages of the Sabbath to the Labouring Classes, by competitors from the working men of Great Britain. No less than 1045 manuscripts were offered. In place of the second of those adopted, this volume contains another, which, from not having been written by a labourer, could not be accepted by the committee of adjudication, but which was highly recommended by them for publication, for the author's benefit. As the Essays stand in this volume, they are written by a Journeyman Printer, a Machinist, and the Daughter of a Labourer, the latter of which, as a separate treatise, has reached a circulation of over 36,000 in Great Britain. The elegant wood engravings bring out very graphically the incidents of a well-spent Sabbath—the plough standing still in the furrow, the horses released from their toil, leisurely grazing in the fields, the father with his household around him reading the words of wisdom and life, and the groups of all ages, from the way-worn patriarch to the little children, making their way under the spreading branches of old monarch trees, up to the house of God. Were these Essays scattered throughout the land, their influence in securing a better observance of that blessed day, now so desecrated, could not fail to be most happy. This work is afforded at a very low price, through the liberality of a benevolent Christian friend, by whom the expense of the stereotyping was defrayed.

THE CHRISTIAN PHILOSOPHER TRIUMPHING OVER DEATH; or, A Narrative of the Closing Scenes of the Life of William Gordon, M. D., F. L. S., of Kingston-upon-Hull. By Newman Hall, B. A., with a lithographed likeness. To which is added, a Memoir of Dr. John D. Godman, by Dr. Thomas Sewall, 12mo. Price 50 cents.

This is a book eminently adapted to attract the attention of educated men especially, to the value and beauty of evangelical piety. Dr. Gordon, the subject of the Memoir, was a man of high intellectual, social, and professional standing. He was a living embodiment of scientific attainments, refined courtesy, and heavenly-minded piety; and in the dying scenes to which the reader is here introduced, there are tokens which cannot be mistaken, of the triumph of a Christian philosopher over the assaults of the last enemy. The work will prove attractive to readers of all classes.

AN AFFECTIONATE ADDRESS TO MOTHERS. By the Rev. Daniel Baker, D. D., of Texas. 18mo. Price 12 cents.

This is written in Dr. Baker's peculiar style. The substance of these pages has often been delivered by the excellent author, and has contributed in no small measure to the great amount of good which he has been able to accomplish through his self-denying, devoted, and widely extended labours. To the many mothers who have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth under his glowing preaching, as well as to many others, this little book will prove a most welcome visitant.

THE CANON OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT ASCERTAINED; or the Bible complete without the Apocrypha and unwritten Traditions. By Archibald Alexander, D. D. A new edition revised for the Presbyterian Board of Publication. 12mo, pp. 360. Price 70 cents.

A work long and most favourably known. So excellent a standard book is regarded as quite an acquisition to the catalogue.

NEW TRACTS.

No. 109. WHAT PRESBYTERIANS BELIEVE. By A. G. Fairchild, D. D., pp. 20.

No. 110. PLAIN DIVINITY, or a Brief Sketch of the Doctrines of Revelation. By James McEwen, pp. 24.

No. 111. THE YOUNG CONVERT INSTRUCTED, pp. 20.

POPERY FULFILLING PROPHECY. By the Rev. B. M. Smith. 5 cents.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF APRIL.

Presbytery of Bedford.

Paterson ch coll 8 26; Bedford ch to const Rev. D. Inglis hon mem (in part) 18 — 26 26

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Rev J Cogswell D D — 30 00

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

Scots' ch per Jos P Engles (addl) 2; 6th ch (addl) S S Class No 7 Male Department 5; 2d ch per Mr Stille (in part) 59 — 66 00

Presbytery of Bethel.

Wraxham ch per E F Palmer — 2 00

Presbytery of Northumberland.

1st ch New Berlin per R Swineford — 2 50

Presbytery of Newton.

1st ch Easton Pa per E Green, Treas — 50 00

Presbytery of Huntingdon.

Mt Pleasant ch per Mr Thompson — 2 00

Presbytery of Blairsville.

A Friend — 4 00

Presbytery of Washington.

West Union ch per Rev Jas Fleming — 7 00

Presbytery of Orange.

Danville ch to con Rev J N Lewis hon mem 30, Jno W Paxton, W S Sutherland, Cash each 5, W S Law 10, Sundry persons 5, to con Hobson Johns hon mem 30; Pittsboro ch sundry persons to con Rev Jas H McNeill hon mem 37; Buffalo ch sundry contributions 55 25 (through Rev Jos Mahon) — 182 25

Presbytery of Fayetteville.

Fayetteville ch Jno Cook, Alf. McRathan, D McNeill, to con Rev Adam Gilchrist hon mem 30, Sundry persons to con Mrs Mary Gilchrist hon mem 69, Jno Murphy Sr to con Jas Dickson Murphy hon mem (in part) 16, Jas McRathan to con Wm Rufus McRathan hon mem 30, John Smith to con Farquard Smith hon mem 30; Sardis ch Mrs J Elliott to con Henry Elliott hon mem 30; China Grove ch collection in cong 15 60, Daniel McDiermid to con Mrs A E McDiermid hon mem 30 (through Rev Jos Mahon) — 250 60

Presbytery of Winchester.

Churches in Winchester per Jno N Bell — 6 00

Presbytery of East Hanover.

Chesterfield ch per Rev J D Dudley — 5 00

Presbytery of Redstone.

Sewickly ch per Rev Jas Allison — 9 00

Presbytery of Harmony.

Bishopville ch per T F Matherson, per W S Martien 13 75, "W R B" per W S Martien 2 50 — 16 25

Presbytery of Tuscaloosa.

Hebron and Ebenezer churches per Rev A P Sillaman — 15 00

Presbytery of Mississippi.

Providence & Pecaw churches per A W Hutchins, (30 of which is to con Rev Thos H Cleland h m) — 42 75

Presbytery of Cincinnati.

Springfield ch per J D Thorpe — 15 60

Presbytery of Flint River.

Emmaus and Muscogee churches per Rev T Marks for the following persons, viz to con Jas McMurray hon mem 30, to con Robt G Johnson hon mem 30, to con Jno Bigham hon mem 30, to con Dr David Deane hon mem 30, S B Deane 3, Chas Blake 1; Americus ch 9 50; Ephesus ch 10; Hopewell ch 2; Robt Boyd, Upatoic, per Rev F McMurray 5; Lagrange Ga, Ebenezer Newton to con his daughter Miss Susan Ann Newton hon mem (in part) 25; Corinth Ga, N Davis to con self hon mem (in part) 15, per Rev W M Cunningham — 190 50

Presbytery of Lake.

Valparaiso ch per Rev J C Brown — 10 00

Presbytery of Whitewater.

Brookville ch — 2 00

Presbytery of Miami.

Greenville ch — 6 00

Presbytery of Sangamon.

3d ch Springfield per J Clemens, Colp 25; Jacksonville ch per J Clemens, Colp 10 — 35 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Missionary Station Floyd Co Va per Rev Jas M Wilson thro' S D Powell Treas 1 50; "A" per Rev J R Agnew 2 50; Indiana ch per A B McKee 3 90; Cold Spring ch (New-school) per Rev Thos Brown to con J R King and Leander G Dryden hon mems (thro' Rev J Mahon) 60; Peperville ch 50 cts; L A Donne, Onnancok Va 2 — 70 40

Total $1046 11

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

HONORARY MEMBERSHIP.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 1st of April, Mr. B. C. Swan was ordained as an evangelist by the Presbytery of Oxford.

Mr. Thomas J. Evans was ordained by the Presbytery of New York as an evangelist on the 27th of April.

On the 13th of April, Mr. H. E. Ruggles was ordained by the Presbytery of St. Louis, and installed pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church in St. Charles, Mo.

On the 3d of April, Mr. George McGuigan was ordained by the Presbytery of Iowa, and installed pastor of the church of Union.

On the 5th of April, the Rev. J. C. Mitchell was installed pastor of the church of Greensboro', Alabama, by the Presbytery of Tuscaloosa.

On the 16th of April, the Rev. Griffith Owen was installed by the Presbytery of Philadelphia, pastor of the Southwark church, Philadelphia.

On the 18th of April, the Rev. Wm. Love was installed pastor of Bethlehem church, by the Presbytery of East Hanover.

On the 9th of April, the Rev. Wm. Cox was installed by the Presbytery of Sidney, pastor of the church of Piqua.

On the 12th of April, the Rev. Charles Fitch was installed pastor of the church of Mount Vernon by the Presbytery of Vincennes.

On the 6th of April, by the Presbytery of Western District, Mr. R. Henderson was ordained as an evangelist.

On the 11th of April, by the Presbytery of Ebenezer, Mr. John A. McClung was ordained as an evangelist.

On the 15th of April, by the Presbytery of New Albany, Messrs. James P. Brengle and John McCrea were ordained as evangelists.

The Rev. A. Y. Moore was installed pastor of the church of South Bend, Indiana, by the Lake Presbytery, on the 10th of November last.

Mr. S. C. Logan, licentiate, was ordained as an evangelist on the 7th of April, by the Presbytery of Lake.

On the 6th of May, the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine was installed by the Presbytery of Donegal, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Columbia, Pennsylvania.

DISSOLUTION OF PASTORAL RELATION.

The Rev. H. B. Gardiner has resigned the charge of the church in Galena, Illinois, with a view to collect and organize a church in Madison, Wisconsin, where he can now be addressed.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. James Richards, D.D. and the church in Morristown, New Jersey, has been dissolved; likewise the relation between the Rev. Oscar M. Harris and the church of Baskenridge, of the same Presbytery.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. P. Lundy and the church of Sing Sing (2d Presbytery of New York), has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. D. Dudley and the church of Namozine, Virginia, has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. G. H. W. Petrie and the church of Washington, Georgia, has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. Milo Templeton and the churches of Troy and Salem, Ohio, has been dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. H. Saye and the churches of Fairforest and Cane Creek was dissolved on the 16th of April by the Presbytery of Bethel.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. James Coe and the churches of Harmony and Dick's Creek has been dissolved by the Presbytery of Miami.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. N. G. Phillips, of the Presbytery of South Alabama, and the church of Laurel, has been dissolved.

LICENSURES.

By the Presbytery of New York—Messrs. Myron Barrett, John Byers, James A. M. La Tourrette, Edward Wall and T. George Wall.

By the Presbytery of Beaver—Mr. Young.

By the Presbytery of Blairsville—Messrs. Samuel P. Bollman, and James W. McCluskey.

By the Presbytery of Bethel—Messrs. A. J. Witherspoon, A. Euloe, A. A. James, and A. Watson.

By the Presbytery of West Hanover—William B. Tidball.

By the Presbytery of New Albany—John M. Worrell.

By the Presbytery of Columbus—George Lewis Kalb.

By the Presbytery of Miami—J. W. Shields.

CALLS.

The Rev. W. H. Woods has accepted a call from the churches of Auxvasse and Augusta.

The Rev. G. D. Armstrong has accepted a call to the church in Norfolk, Virginia.

Mr. Thomas M. Crawford, licentiate, has accepted a call to Slatesville, York co., Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Franklin D. Harris has accepted a call to the church in Bristol, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Dr. Thornwell has accepted a call to the Glebe street church, Charleston, South Carolina.

The Rev. G. H. W. Petrie has become assistant to the Rev. Mr. Howard, of the Huguenot church, Charleston, South Carolina.

The Rev. John Gilchrist has accepted a call to Dunlapsville church, Ohio.

The Rev. John W. Pelan has accepted a call to the church of Connersville, Ohio.

Mr. Alexander Scott, licentiate, has accepted a call to the churches of Blooming Grove and Olivesburg, Ohio.

Mr. R. C. Colmery, licentiate, has accepted a call to Mount Vernon Church, Ohio.

The Rev. N. H. Hall, D.D. has accepted a call from the church of Columbia, Missouri.

The Rev. Robert Irwin has accepted a call from the churches of Union and Hopewell, Indiana.

CHANGE OF ECCLESIASTICAL RELATION.

The Rev. Thomas G. Carver, of the Methodist church, has been received by the 2d Presbytery of New York.

Rev. Alexander Miller, of the Presbytery of Richland, has been dismissed to the Associate Reformed church.

The Rev. John T. McLaren, D.D., of the Associate Reformed church, has united with the Presbytery of Ohio.

The Rev. William Graham Allen, who left the Presbyterian Church a few months since, and united with the Cumberland Presbyterians, at the last meeting of the Muhlenberg Presbytery, made application to be received back into that body, and, after a confession of his error and a cordial adoption of the Confession of Faith, was unanimously received.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The post-office address of the Rev. John McKinney is changed from Urbana, Ohio, to Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania.

That of the Rev. J. W. McKennan from Elizabethtown, Va., to Washington, Pa.

That of the Rev. W. H. Wood is changed to Jones's Tan Yard, Calloway county, Mo.

That of the Rev. James Anderson, is Washington, Guernsey county, Ohio.

That of the Rev. George Morton is Livermore, Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania.

That of the Rev. John Moore is Bradey's Bend, Pennsylvania.

That of the Rev. Dr. James Richards, New York, care of E. C. Richards, Esq.

That of the Rev. J. J. Lehmanowsky, is changed to Hamburg, Clark county, Indiana.

The post-office address of the Rev. William H. Crane is changed from Madison Court House to Quincy, Florida.

The Rev. W. C. Kniffin has received an invitation to labour statedly with the church of Stoner Mouth, and can be addressed at Ruggles Mills, Bourbon county, Kentucky.

DEATHS.

The Rev. Robert G. Wilson, D. D. of the Presbytery of Chilicothe, departed this life, at South Salem, Ohio, on the 17th of April, 1851, in his eighty-third year.

On the 22d of February last, at Galesburg, Illinois, the Rev. Wales Tilleton, departed this life, aged sixty years.

Varieties.

A Protestant Mission to Rome.—It is reported, and we have been assured that it is on good foundation, that steps have been taken to carry into operation the suggestion thrown out by the Rev. R. P. Blakeney, incumbent of St. Paul's, Ison-green, in his lecture on Popery, delivered some months since in the Assembly Rooms, in reference to the appointment of Protestant missionaries to labour among the inhabitants of Rome and Italy. The important preliminary, the raising sufficient funds, has already been done, and the first missionary is to be sent out immediately. Mr. Blakeney himself, as the proposer of the plan, is, it is said, to have the honour of being the person first selected for the onerous office.—Nottingham Mercury.

Postage.—To subscribers within a thousand miles, our next number will be sent under the new post-office law. To them there will be a slight reduction. To those over a thousand miles, an increase.

We do not suppose that our circulation will be much affected by it. Those interested in the prosperity of the Church and the evangelization of the world would not suffer from the former rates; and those who have no delight in these things will not be induced to read the Record on account of the small reduction in postage. The reduction in letter postage may, however, act beneficially, and we hope that our friends will not subject us to the higher rate of postage by not paying it in advance. Those remitting money and acting as agents for us gratuitously, are not expected to subject themselves to postage, but we do expect that clergymen, students, and others, giving notice of change of address, &c., should pay the postage.

An abstract of the act is given in our number for April, but there is an omission which may affect many of our readers, viz: the clause subjecting papers of less than three hundred square inches to only a fourth of the regular rates. The Presbyterian Sabbath School Visitor is a paper of that class, and the postage for it will be

For 50 miles, or under,	2½	cents per annum.
Over 50 and not over 300,	5	" " "
" 300 " " " 1000,	7½	" " "
" 1000 " " " 2000,	10	" " "
" 2000 " " " 4000,	12½	" " "
" 4000	15	" " "

And so for any number of copies. Forty copies will thus be carried a thousand miles for twenty-five cents a month, or three dollars per annum—bringing the inhabitants of a large region of country into as favourable a position as those in the neighbourhood of Philadelphia now are; and thus we apprehend that there will be a great accession of orders to that very popular paper.

Ardent Spirits.—By the returns made by the Board of Trade it appears that the ardent spirits consumed in England, in 1840, amounted to 28,654,107 gallons, being an increase over any former year. Who has been benefitted by all this?—or, rather Who has not been injured by it?

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid. Postmasters are authorized to remit moneys, and we hope our friends will avail themselves of this channel to send on their subscriptions.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

Board of Domestic Missions.—Interesting Matter Deferred, p. 82. Painful Rumour, p. 82. Changes Effected in Churches by Emigration, p. 82. Donation Visits, p. 82. Extracts from Report of Rev. C. Sturdevant, p. 82. Fruits, p. 82. Receipts, p. 83.

Board of Education.—I. Ministerial Education: The Education and Supply of Ministers, p. 85. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 85. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies and Colleges: Our Denominational Influence, p. 86. Why they failed, p. 86. Parochial Schools, p. 86. Academy of Lexington Presbytery, Va., p. 86. Normal Schools, p. 86. Receipts, p. 86.

Board of Foreign Missions.—End of the Financial Year, p. 88. Recent Intelligence, p. 88. The Foreign Missionary, p. 88. India: Allahabad Mission—Communication of the Rev. Robert M. Munnis, p. 88. China: Ningpo Mission—Journal of the Rev. Henry V. Rankin, p. 90. Receipts, p. 92.

Board of Publication.—Prosperity of the Board, p. 94. Dr. Alexander preaching in Michigan, p. 94. Importance of Republishing Standard Religious Works of other days, p. 94. Colportage in Maury Presbytery p. 94. Looking Four Years into the Grave, p. 94. Thoughts on Family Worship, p. 95. Notices of New Publications, p. 95. Receipts, p. 95.

Miscellaneous.—The Best is left, p. 81. Dreadful Mistake, p. 81. The Grace of Giving, p. 81. "We shall reap if we faint not," p. 81. A Hundred Years Ago, p. 81. Readers, p. 81. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 96. Varieties, p. 96.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 7. | PHILADELPHIA, JULY, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"SIMON, SON OF JONAS, LOVEST THOU ME?"

The Lord Jesus, although rich, for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich. And he still chooses to remain in a certain respect poor, to give us an opportunity to show our love to him by ministering to him. Of some he will complain, I was an hungered and ye gave me no meat, I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink, I was sick and in prison, and ye came not unto me. How is it then with you? Are you unwilling to live in a cieled house, and leave God's house covered with cobwebs and dust, and falling to decay? Are you unwilling to accumulate large funds for your families, while you leave his ministers to struggle with pecuniary embarrassments? While you enjoy the means of grace, and the ordinances of the gospel, are you mindful of those that have them not, and do you appropriate constantly of your funds, as God prospers you, to the spread of the gospel? Are you ever ready, with a noble Christian sympathy, to relieve the wants of the poor and suffering saints? Or, shall he point indignantly at last to his neglected house, neglected ministers, and neglected missions, and say, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. He will try us on all these points, giving us full occasion and opportunity to show what is in our hearts, whether we truly love him or no. He is a jealous God; and his eyes are as a flame of fire, as he walks in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks—he searcheth the heart and trieth the reins.

When a husband is long absent, and writes frequent letters to his wife, she will read them, and again and again return to read and think of what he says, and the promises he makes, and what tokens of his love he will bring on his return. Do you read Christ's epistles, study his sweet promises, and return every day to his word, to light upon some peculiar and characteristic expression there, that shall in a clear and lively manner revive in your minds the image of his glorious person and inexpressible grace? A wife, when her husband is absent for the day, looks with interest for his return in the evening—with a warm heart and cheerful fire, the table spread and ready. If he is absent for a week, or for a still longer period, she counts the days, and would hurry on the lagging hours, and hasten his coming. Do you think of Christ with delight, as the one you shall meet every morning and evening in prayer? Does the week seem long to you, and would you hasten on the steps of time, until the Sabbath should come, that you might see the king in his beauty, when he holds his courts? Does the time intervening between one sacrament and another seem long, and would you hasten the hour when you can meet him again in the breaking of bread? Did you ever possess this love? This is the first great question to be settled. If you did, happy are you, for you shall love on, and love, and be loved for ever. If you have not, then instantly set about to obtain it, for without it you can never please God, or be happy. "If any man love not our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema maranatha. Hearken, and consider; incline thine ear also and hear; forsake also thine own kindred, and thy father's house; so shall the king greatly desire thy beauty, for he is thy Lord, and worship thou him." Come out from among them, and be ye separate. Can you say, So I have forsaken all, every former preference, and in my inmost heart I cleave to Christ alone? Do you choose and prefer the presence of Christ, and seek to be with him where he is, to hear his voice, and behold his glory?

There are competitors for your society. The ball chamber, the opera, the theatre, the concert, the social party, call you in one direction. Voluntary societies, and mystic brotherhoods, call you off in another. The domestic hearth, the call of wife and children, turn you in another. Mammon opens his stores, and lures you by promises of wealth and plenty in another. Do you, amid all these potent, clamorous, and seductive appeals, still prefer Christ, so that you fail not to meet him in secret and social prayer, and in the diligent use of the means of grace in his courts? Lovest thou me?

A PASTOR.

THE MOTHERLESS.

Thou art not mine—upon thy sweet lip lingers
Thy mother's smile—
And while I press thy soft and baby fingers
In mine the while—
In the deep eyes, so trustfully upraising
Their light to mine—
I deem the spirit of thy mother gazing
To my soul's shrine.
They ask me, with their meek and soft beseeching
A mother's care—
Then ask a mother's kind and patient teaching—
A mother's prayer;—
Not mine—yet dear to me—fair fragrant blossom
Of a fair tree—
Crush'd to the earth in life's first glorious summer—
Thou'rt dear to me.
Child of the lost, the buried, and the sainted,
I call thee mine—
Till fairer still, with tears and sin untainted—
Her home be thine.

Mrs. Welby.

THAT ONE WORD.

"I never can forget that word which was once whispered to me in an inquiry meeting," said a pious man once to a friend. "What word was it?" "It was the word ETERNITY. A young Christian friend, who was yearning for my salvation, came up to me as I sat in my pew, and simply whispered 'Eternity,' in my ear, with great solemnity and tenderness, and then left me. That word made me think, and I found no peace till I came to the cross."

The sainted McCheyne was once riding by a quarry, and stopped to look in at the engine house. The fireman had just opened the door to feed the furnace with fresh fuel; when McCheyne, pointing to the bright hot flame, said mildly to the man, "Does that fire remind you of any thing?" The man could not get rid of the solemn question. To him it was an effectual arrow of conviction. It led him to the house of God, and will lead him, we trust, to heaven.

A single remark of the Rev. Charles Simeon on the blessings which had resulted from the labours of Dr. Carey, in India, first arrested the attention of Henry Martyn to the cause of missions. His mind began to stir under the new thought, and a perusal of the life of Brainerd fixed him in his resolution to give himself to the dying heathen.

It is said that Harlan Page once went through his Sabbath-school to get the spiritual census of the school. Coming to one of the teachers, he said, "Shall I put you down as having a hope in Christ?" The teacher replied, "No." "Then," said he very tenderly, "I will put you down as having no hope." He closed his little book and left him. That was enough. God gave that young man's soul no rest till he found a hope beneath the cross.

A member of my church, not long since, overtook a lady on her way to the prayer meeting. She asked the young woman if she never thought of her own salvation. The lady thus addressed replied that during all her life she had never had one word spoken to her before about the salvation of her soul! Within a month from that time she became a devoted member of the flock of Christ!

Fellow disciple! have you never yet spoken one word to an impenitent friend about the most momentous of all questions? Then I fear you will find no one in heaven that you was the means, under God, of sending there. Though you may reach the "many mansions," I fear your crown will glitter with no splendour. It will be a starless crown.—Stray Arrows.

A WORD FITLY SPOKEN.

Job Throgmorton, a Puritan minister, who was described by his contemporaries "as being as holy and as choice a preacher as any in England," is said to have lived thirty-seven years without any comfortable assurance as to his spiritual condition. When dying, he addressed the venerable John Dod, "What will you say of him who is going out of the world and can find no comfort?"

"What will you say of him," replied Mr. Dod, "who, when he was going out of the world, found no comfort, but cried, 'My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?'"

This prompt reply administered consolation to the troubled spirit of his dying friend, who departed within an hour after, rejoicing in the Lord.

So long as we are joined to the world; acting in the main for worldly ends; attached to its interest; oppressed with its cares, or devoted to its pleasures; we must either totally reject or explain away the gospel.—T. Adam.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

REV. EDWARD R. GEARY AND FAMILY SAFE.

In the last number of the Record we noticed the rumour of the probable murder of the Rev. Edward R. Geary and family, on their way to Oregon. We are now able to say that this painful rumour is happily not true. From reliable information, we learn that they arrived safely at San Francisco, and would soon leave for Astoria, Oregon. Thus far they had been prospered on their journey. There was a combination of circumstances which seemed to give credence to the report; in fact, they were so varied and strong, as seemed scarcely to admit of a doubt. The friends of Zion will therefore unite with us in gratitude to God for his protecting care over them in all their manifold dangers. And let us not forget continually to remember them, as well as all our Missionaries, in our supplications at a Throne of Grace.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The abstract of the Annual Report, which we publish below, together with the resolutions of the General Assembly on the subject of Domestic Missions, and the remarks connected therewith, will be read with much interest, inasmuch as it sets forth in a condensed form, what has been done, and is now doing by this Board, for this immense and interesting missionary field. These facts speak for themselves, and are calculated to impress upon the mind not only the vast field which, in the providence of God, we are called upon to cultivate, but also the relation this Board sustains to our Church, and especially its extension in our land.

It is impossible, however, in this short abstract, to give even a synopsis of the report. We must refer our readers to the Report itself, which will soon be published and distributed, in which all these facts and statistics are set forth at length.

ABSTRACT OF THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS,

From May 1850 to May 1851.

The Report commences with a notice of the great commission given by our Saviour to his Church and people, to go forth and gather his elect "out of every kingdom, and tongue, and people, and nation," and the part our branch of the Church of Christ is now taking in this great work. Our own country, as the field assigned to the Board of Missions—the immensity of its territory, exceeding that of all Europe by some 500,000 square miles—the present, and rapidly increasing population, together with its various and vast resources, is next noticed at length. Also, what has been accomplished by our Church from its first ecclesiastical organization in 1705, down to the present time. The area, increase of population, destitution, &c., of the different states and territories are noticed at length, giving in the aggregate an immense amount of statistical information, which in a condensed form has never before been given to the public, thus forming an important document for future reference.

A review of the whole missionary work, from the organization of the Board in 1816 to the present time, is next given, only an extract of which can here be given: "From 1830, when the Board was fairly in action under its re-organization of 1828, to 1850 inclusive, the increase of Missionaries has been from 101 to 570, or 469. The increase of funds, from $12,632 to $79,049, or about $67,000. The number of new churches organized 943, averaging 47 a year. The number of houses of worship of all kinds erected, 1484, averaging 74 a year. The number of souls added to the missionary churches upon profession of their faith, 40,537, not reckoning here the number added by certificate."

This certainly presents an encouraging aspect of our missionary work, but look at the bearing of this work upon the expansion of our Church! In the year 1842, we had 19 synods, and 101 presbyteries; 1316 ministers; 1904 churches, and 140,433 members. And in 1850, we had 23 synods; 127 presbyteries; 1926 ministers; 2595 churches, and 207,254 members. Showing an increase in these nine years of 4 synods; 26 presbyteries; 610 ministers; 691 churches, and 66,821 members—at the average rate annually, of nearly 3 presbyteries; 68 ministers; 76 churches, and 7,425 members. Of this increase of churches, 495 are reported as having been added by missionaries of the Board, and of this increase of members, 19,397 were added to the churches served by our missionaries. And the additional presbyteries are nearly all the product, more or less, of the missions of the Church, as will be seen by the mention of their names: Luzerne, Zanesville, Montgomery, Knoxville, Chickesaw, Fort Wayne, Lake, Michigan, Wisconsin, Rock River, Potosi, Upper Missouri, White Water, Muncie, Cherokee, Creek Nation, Washita, Nebraska, Brazos, and California. Already the missionaries of this Board are spread over the whole United States, east of the Mississippi, with the exception of a small portion in the north-east. They have crossed that river, and have begun vigorously to fill up that immense country from the Gulf of Mexico to the British possessions on the north. Yea, they have crossed the continent itself, and in that new world in the far west, they are laying the foundations of the kingdom of Heaven. The conviction then, must surely fasten upon the mind, that the missionary work belongeth to the Church of God, and that the prosecution of it by our Church in all times past, feeble as it may have been, yet hath it been THE VERY SOUL AND LIFE, PROSPERITY, EXPANSION, AND HAPPINESS OF OUR CHURCH. Without it, where should we have been?

And the prosecution of this work is now the very soul and life of our Church. Abandon it—crush it by whatever means, and we must die. Who would crush it? It hath the highest seal of the approbation of the living God. Forty thousand immortal souls snatched from everlasting sin, and introduced into the family of God. What a seal! And a multitude of this host are now before the throne of God in heaven, giving him thanks for the instrumentality of this Church, which by his grace led them unto life eternal. It is a seal infinitely valuable above the contributions of millions of gold and silver, and above all the cares, and labours, and sacrifices of men that has ever been bestowed. Let the Church fall down in humble gratitude and adore the Lord God for the wonders of love and mercy which He has wrought by his people.

THE PROSECUTION AND SUCCESS OF THE WORK THE PAST YEAR.

The number of missionaries in commission at the beginning of the year, May 1st, 1850, was 362, to which have been added to May 1st, 1851, 229. Making the whole number during the year five hundred and ninety-one.

The number of churches and missionary stations wholly or in part supplied, has been as far as reported 1113. The number of churches organized in their missionary fields as reported, 49.

The number of additions on examination 2118, and on certificate 1760, making a total of admissions of 3878.

The whole number in communion with the missionary churches 25,894.

The number of Sabbath Schools reported 610, of teachers 4096, and of scholars 24,824, baptisms 2279, houses of worship erected 64. When these returns were incorporated into the Report there were 146 missionaries not heard from, consequently they fall very far short of the true state of the missionary work of the Church.

These missionaries have been faithfully employed in preaching the gospel, conducting prayer meetings and Bible classes, promoting temperance, circulating the Scriptures and good books, visiting families, and in every way seeking to build up the people of God in their most holy faith. The state of religion in the missionary field has been very encouraging. Many interesting revivals have been reported.

Nor should we fail to record with the liveliest thankfulness the attention paid, in some parts of our bounds, to the religious instruction of the coloured population. In New York and New Jersey the Board have had two coloured ministers serving coloured congregations. The moral and religious condition of this class of our population, especially in the chief towns, is such as calls loudly for the sympathies and aid of Christians of all denominations. From the southern and south-western States within a few months we have received some fifty reports, giving acounts of labour performed, and of much encouragement in this field of missionary labour.

Our ecclesiastical year has heretofore closed on the 1st of May. So little time intervened between this and the meeting of the Assembly, as to render the Report of the Board necessarily imperfect. To avoid this, the Board have determined hereafter to close the year on the 1st of April. They have also passed the following preamble and resolutions in respect to ante-dating Commissions:

In consequence of the constantly repeated applications of Presbyteries to ante-date Commissions; some for three, others for six, and some even for twelve months, and without any apparent reason, other than want of attention and prompt action on the part of Presbyteries and Committees of Presbyteries on Missions, thereby embarrassing the business of the Board, and depriving the Board of an accurate knowledge of the expenses of our Missions, for which provision must be made weekly, therefore,

1. Resolved, That the Presbyteries and the Committees of Presbyteries on Missions, be respectfully requested to have Commissions of their Missionaries renewed, before the expiration of their time of service, if practicable to do so, and in all cases to state definitely the time when they wish the Commission to be dated.

2. Resolved, That from and after the 1st day of May, 1851, the Board will ante-date no Commission beyond two months from the time of the reception of the application at the Mission Rooms, either in Philadelphia or in Louisville.

3. Resolved, That the 1st and 2d resolution of this action of the Board be printed on the Commissions of our Missionaries.

4. Resolved, That this action of the Board in relation to ante-dating Commissions, be communicated to the Presbyteries, through the Home and Foreign Record, and other papers of the Church.

The enlargement of the Church the past year, chiefly through the instrumentality of her Missions, was the division of the Presbytery of Brazos, into three Presbyteries. Also the Presbytery of Wisconsin into three Presbyteries, thus opening the way for the constitution of two new Synods. Also the division of the Presbytery of Iowa into two. These two latter number seventeen ministers. Two years ago there was but one minister on the ground, now occupied by the Presbytery of Cedar. Two Missionaries were sent out to Oregon Territory this spring—the Rev. Ed. R. Geary and the Rev. Robert Robe—the former by the Isthmus, and the latter by the overland route. These, should they arrive safely, with the Rev. Lewis Thompson, who is already there, will be a sufficient number to constitute the Presbytery of Oregon.*

FUNDS.

The whole amount of funds placed at the disposal of the Board during the year, has been eighty-two thousand, eight hundred and eighteen dollars and fifty-one cents. The amount paid out at the different

* The General Assembly has just ordered that these brethren shall constitute the Presbytery of Oregon, in connection with the Synod of New York.

Treasuries seventy-four thousand, seven hundred and sixty-one dollars and seventy-seven cents, leaving a balance at the end of the year, of seven thousand and fifty-six dollars and seventy-four cents. There have been drafts drawn against this amount, up to May 1st, 1851, but not presented for payment, at that date, which, with one thousand dollars borrowed by Western Executive Committee, at Louisville, to meet pressing liabilities to Missionaries, will very considerably reduce the balance reported above.

In addition to the funds reported, clothing, to the value of several thousand dollars, has been received and distributed to the Missionaries, according as their wants have been known. To the benevolent Females of our churches, we are indebted for these charities, and in the name of these Missionaries and their families, as well as the Assembly, would we return to them our sincere thanks.

The Board could report itself entirely free of incumbrances, had it not sustained some losses during the year, which are noticed at length in the Report.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

This important branch of the work of our Church has been wisely connected with the Board of Missions. From the time of its organization, in May 1844, to May 1851—seven years—there has been received for this important work, $43,724 65, of which sum $33,724 65 was contributed by individual donors, and $9,675 10 by the churches. The average contribution to this fund annually has been $6,199 96. The whole number of churches aided by the Board, and brought to completion during this time, is 297, or 42 annually—a large result from the limited means, and demonstrates both the wisdom, necessity, and success of this scheme.

The whole amount of funds received from May 1st, 1850, to May 1st, 1851, has been

From individual donors,	3,290 50
Collections in churches,	3,201 67
Total,	$6,492 17

The whole of this has been paid out, with the exception of $29 65—leaving a balance in the Treasury of this sum.

Up to November, appropriations were made to aid in building and finishing thirty churches. And thirty-nine have received their appropriations from the Committee.

The fact that the appropriations exceeded by several thousand dollars the funds in the treasury—and all this liable to be called for at any moment—induced the Committee, with the approval of the Board, to cease to grant any new appropriations until the state of the treasury should warrant their going on. A large number of applications have since been received, and placed on file in the office. These will receive attention in their order, whenever the treasury will justify the Committee in making further appropriations.

AGENCIES.

The number of agents during the year has been less than the wants of the missionary work demanded. No agent has been employed on the Atlantic slope. All that has been accomplished in this department in this field has been done by the Corresponding and Assistant Secretaries from the office in Philadelphia. The Rev. Joseph Smith, D. D., and the Rev. Charles Sturdevant have been employed during the year; the former in connection with the Central Agency—embracing the Synods of Ohio, Wheeling, and Pittsburgh; and the latter in connection with the western Executive Committee at Louisville, and both with encouraging success. The Rev. C. Leavenworth was engaged as a special agent for a few months in the Synods of Indiana and Cincinnati, and laboured with success.

The Board would also notice the lamented death of one of their members, the Rev. C. C. Cuyler, D. D., for many years the Vice-President of this Board, and always the ardent friend of Domestic Missions, and an eminent servant of God, whose praise is in all the churches.

ACTION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF 1851.

Dr. Krebs, from the Committee to whom had been referred the Report of the Board of Domestic Missions, submitted the following resolutions.

1. Resolved, That the Report be adopted and published under the direction of the Board.

2. Resolved, That in view of the vast field for domestic missions now opened in our country, and exhibited in detail in the Report, that it be earnestly recommended to all of the churches to make increased efforts to enlarge their contributions to that Board; and that it be recommended to our pastors and stated supplies, to bring the facts presented in the Report of the Board fully before the people of their charge, and, if possible, introduce among them some systematic form of maturing their contributions.

3. Resolved, That the direction of the Assembly in 1844, (Minutes pp. 374 and 375) be renewed; that a special collection be taken up in all the churches in aid of Church Extension, and that the Assembly rejoices in the success which has thus far attended this scheme, although the contributions have fallen far short of the importance and necessity of the scheme, and our own obligations to sustain it.

4. Resolved, That the results of the domestic missionary work of the General Assembly for the last twenty-one years, viz: the increase of our missionaries from 101 to 591; the increase of our funds from $12,000 to $79,000; the organization of 943 new churches, the erection of 1484 houses of worship; the addition of over 40,000 souls to the missionary churches, on profession of their faith; the constitution of a number of new Presbyteries and Synods, and a great enlargement of our territorial boundaries, and also the results of the past year, by the Report, being most favourable—all furnish to the Assembly an occasion for profound gratitude to the God of Missions, and to encouragement to us to proceed vigorously with the work.

5. Resolved, That the Board of Missions be requested to keep in view the increasing number and religious wants of the German population in our country, and to do whatever may be practicable to furnish them with the ministry and means of grace.

6. Resolved, That the General Assembly rejoices in the special interest which is manifested by so large a number of their Presbyteries in the work of domestic missions, and look forward with an assured hope that this interest will become universal, and that it must result, under God, in incalculable blessings to our Church and country.

On these resolutions a number of very interesting remarks were made—among these Dr. Baker remarked that he considered Texas a missionary field. Young men, who are disposed to go out, are not able to sustain themselves. Two hundred dollars given by the Board is not sufficient to sustain a missionary. The people pay nothing. Presbyterian ministers cannot as yet look to them, because of the impressions made by those of other denominations, that we are preaching for money. He hoped the Board will fully sustain her missionaries. He would take the liberty to suggest a method by which missionary support might be secured, and missionary spirit inculcated, viz: that of missionary sustension by Sabbath-schools. He had been adopted as a missionary by the Sabbath-school in Frankfort, Kentucky. They heard of his having been murdered by the Indians, and were much affected. But when he appeared among them, and informed them that he was still alive and their missionary, their bosoms overflowed with emotion, and still contributed to his support. Sunday-school children are willing to make self-denials to aid in sustaining a missionary; other Sabbath-schools might imitate the example of this. We have lost one thousand Presbyterians in Texas. How? They did not emigrate in colonies, consequently were unable to secure the labours of our ministry; being without the most distant prospect for a minister and church, they fell in with others. These very men are glad to see the face of a Presbyterian minister, as it calls to their recollection scenes of early life, so often witnessed in the sanctuary of their fathers. He narrated the case of a woman, where at one time he stopped, who recognizing him as a minister, from his costume, exclaimed, "Are you a minister, Sir?"—"Yes."—"I have a dear child to give to the Lord in baptism." The way being clear, he proceeded to the administration of the ordinance, when he inquired the name he should give to the child. "What is your name, Sir?" "Daniel Baker."—"That is the name for my child." This, it seems, was in accordance to a previous vow, in reference to giving the name of the officiating minister of the denomination of her choice, to her dear child.

Mr. Green, of Arkansas, stated that the brethren of his Presbytery, when parting with him, had charged him to apply to the General Assembly.

Arkansas is a large State, but destitute of the Gospel. The country is not sickly. It has a good climate; it is rich in soil and mineral resources, and is advantageously situated with reference to commerce. The State is now rapidly coming into notice. During the last year 25,000 persons emigrated into the State. Many of those are Presbyterians, from the charges of some of the ministers of this Assembly. But they have no Presbyterian ministers to preach to them, and will be under the necessity of joining other churches. It has been said, we have lost members in Texas in consequence of want of ministers; it is so in Arkansas. There is no portion of our country so destitute and so accessible. By way of illustration, he mentioned his own reception and success at Little Rock, and his reception as a Presbyterian minister at other points in the State.

Dr. Plumer read a letter from a missionary in California. He plead the cause of that distant country. He had met with a young man as he came to St. Louis, who was just from California, who had a lump of gold worth $600, that he had picked up there. There are mountains of quicksilver in Texas, and people will go where wealth is secured so easily. But there is a country so strangely overlooked, viz: New Mexico. That country is exceedingly rich in minerals. The copper and the lead are mixed with silver in such large proportions that the silver will pay for the smelting of the ore, and the transportation of it a considerable distance; yet there is no missionary there—no one there to preach the Gospel even to our own soldiers.

Mr. Phelps, of Florida, presented the claims of Florida, setting forth the climate, advantages, &c., for growth of population, and the great destitution, and urged the importance of the field as one of missionary labour. The Territory of Utah was also brought under review, and its claims, as a missionary field, urged.

Mr. Shinn, directed the attention of the Assembly to the resolution that had reference to the German population, and urged attention to their necessities.

Mr. Lyon, from Arkansas, lived in a destitute State: he enumerated many of the advantages, as a field of missionary labor.

The remarks presented by the brethren from those destitute States were deeply interesting, and incited much emotion upon the part of the Assembly.

FROM A MISSIONARY ON THE EXTREME FRONTIER IN WISCONSIN.

The part of the country in which Providence has cast my lot, is new. Less than five years ago it was a wilderness in possession of the savage and the wild beast. But it has of late become an important field from the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, which is now being accomplished, so as to open steam navigation from Green Bay and Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river. Owing to this improvement, this part of the State is becoming rapidly inhabited by an intelligent, and for the most part native, population—and the reasonable prospect is, that the day is not far distant when this whole region will become densely populated, by a people who will exert a powerful influence for good or for evil, as their minds shall be enlightened by the pure doctrines of the Gospel, or be left in the darkness of the errors, delusion and infidelity, that are already prevalent in the land.

Since the date of my commission we have had two communion seasons, when eight members were added to our church on certificate, and a profession of their faith in Christ. Among these an aged female, who has thus rejoiced in her latter day to cast in her lot with the people of God, and for the first time during her protracted life, to partake of the Lord's Supper. The members of our church are scattered over a large extent of territory. My regular preaching places are four, (of which the villages of Wankau and Delhi—the latter immediately over Fox river—are the principal,) and of course the labours are very arduous and sometimes dangerous. The last Sabbath I was thrown into one of the sloughs of this country by the fearfulness of my horse, when he sunk breast deep in the mire; similar occurrences have happened to me before, so that I have had in some measure the experience and the dangers of frontier missionary life. One of my preaching places is in the unsurveyed Indian Territory, but now quite thickly settled with a white population. A gentleman from another quarter of this same Territory, called on me yesterday and requested me to make his neighbourhood one of my preaching places, and although I am fully occupied, yet I gave him all the encouragement I could. My heart almost fails under the whole aspect of the destitution and the need of more faithful labourers in the cultivation of this moral wilderness. They are mostly a poor, scattered and destitute people. Recently a lady formerly of Erie county, New York, told me, with tears, that she had not heard a Gospel sermon before for four years.

Thus, my dear Brother, I have endeavoured to give you such information in reference to this field, as I supposed would be interesting; and although not very flattering, yet we must not "despise the day of small things"—we must sow beside the waters, and "in due time we shall reap if we faint not."

The above is an extract of the Report of one of our most laborious Missionaries. His field is a new, but important one, and his trials many and great. Other portions of this letter speak of these trials in detail, and manifest a spirit of devotion and self-consecration but seldom found.

FRUITS.

An excellent Missionary in Western New York, writes us—

"At our communion in April, eleven persons were received into the church by examination and one by certificate. Ten of these were baptized on that occasion. All received by profession of their faith were young persons. This accession to our church, is of course peculiarly encouraging."

Another laborious brother, in a destitute portion of Pennsylvania, writes thus:—

"During the last quarter I have preached about sixty sermons—visited much from house to house—received eight members to the church; three on examination and five on certificate—baptized four; and commenced five Sabbath-schools, with Libraries, &c., besides distributing many Bibles, Testaments, Tracts, &c.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of May, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.
Pby of Albany.—Mayfield 1st ch	12
SYNOD OF BUFFALO.
Pby of Steuben.—Windsor ch 6 74; ch of Mentz 15; Groveland ch 8 31; Sparta 2d ch 15	45 05
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 2d ch	13 50
SYNOD OF NEW YORK.
Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 7; Fem Miss Soc of South Salem ch 18	25 00
Pby of New York.—Duane st ch addl from R Gillen	5 00
2d Pby of New York.—A member of Canal st ch	10 00
SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.
Pby of New Brunswick.—Freehold ch	9 33
Pby of West Jersey.—Cold Spring ch	44 00
SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.
2d Pby of Philada.—Neshaminy ch	58 50
Pby of New Castle.—Upper Octorara ch 10; Oxford ch 50; Doe Run and Coatesville chs 23	83 00
Pby of Donegal.—Strasburg ch	3 00
Pby of Baltimore.—New Windsor ch	15 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Mercersburg ch (of which 20 from Female Domestic Miss Soc of said ch)	40 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Lycoming Centre ch 5 34; Chillisquaque ch 25	30 34
SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.
Pby of Erie.—Washington ch	2 25
SYNOD OF WHEELING.
Pby of St. Clairsville.—Fairview and Stillwater chs	9 00
Pby of New Lisbon.—Deerfield ch for religious instruction of colored population	8 00
SYNOD OF OHIO.
Pby of Zanesville.—Washington ch	30 20
Pby of Wooster.—Fulton ch	7 00
SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.
Pby of Logansport.—Wabash ch	5 00
Pby of Lake.—Valparaiso ch	7 00
SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.
Pby of Winchester.—Fredericksburg ch	21 50
Pby of West Hanover.—"Bethel congregation Albemarle co Va" 13 30; and donation of a friend from same source 9	22 30
Pby of Montgomery.—Through Rev U Powers Treas'r of Pby from Locust Bottom ch 10 62; Beaver Creek ch 4 56; Green Spring ch 5 88; Falling Spring ch 15 00; Fincastle ch 5; Covington ch 2 50; Bell Spring ch 15 77	59 33
SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.
Pby of Concord.—From the Treasurer of said Pby by draft	404 00
SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.
Pby of Bethel.—Unionville ch 15; Fairforest ch 3; Lancaster ch 2; Six Mile Creek ch 1	21 00
Pby of Harmony.—Sundry chs per I F Mathison, Treasurer through W S Martien	157 16
SYNOD OF GEORGIA.
Pby of Hopewell.—Athens ch 31 50; through J R Dow, Treas of Pby from the following—A young Lady in Greensboro 2 50; Mount Zion ch collection 26 75; Washington ch collection 50; Lincolnton ch 8; Waynesville ch 25; Concord ch 4 20; Turkey creek ch 2; Augusta ch 335; Bethany ch 3; Sandy creek ch 2 75; Madison ch 5; Mount Zion ch 24 50; children of Washington ch 20; part Donation from Georgia Dom Miss Soc 65	573 78
Pby of Cherokee.—Through J. Dunwoody, Treas of Pby from the following—Chickamango ch 13; Sardis ch 10; Dalton ch 1 87; Walnut Grove ch 50 cts; Marietta ch 16; Roswell ch 28 63	70 00
MISCELLANEOUS.
J W Wells Esq, Newburg N Y for religious instruction of colored population 100; and from Mrs J W Wells for same purpose 30; Richard M Green Esq, of Lawrenceville N J 100; "C H" Alabama, 10; Rev J Hall, Lebanon Ohio 1 25; Rev S W Watkins, Troublesome N C 136; A Burnette, Harrisburg Pa 3; A Friend 1; A Friend, Fishkill Landing N Y 200	446 61
LEGACY.
Legacy in part of Isaac Hadden dec'd Gainesville Alabama	255 47
Total	$2524 74

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CLOTHING RECEIVED IN MAY.

A Box from the Ladies of the Madison Avenue ch New York valued at	50 00
A Box from the Ladies' Society of Goshen ch N Y (unknown where from until now) valued at	50 00
	$100 00

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Receipts into the Treasury during the month of May, 1851.

Mr and Mrs Condict, Oswego N Y for Iowa	25 00
Squan Village ch New Jersey	1 00
Church of Mentz, New York	6 00
J Stewart Esq, Graceham Maryland	2 50
A Burnette, Harrisburg Pa	1 00
"H" Thompsontown Pa per Rev Dr Engles	5 00
	$40 50

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

NOTE.—There has also been received at the office of the Board of Missions, from "C H" Alabama, $5 for "one of God's aged ministers, in want," and $5 for a colporteur for tracts for distribution among the poor. Also, from Rev. D. J. A., $10 for the aged minister, in want, all which has been paid over as directed.

☞ The sum of $17 53 acknowledged in the June Record as from Milford church, Presbytery of Raritan, should have been from Milford church Presbytery of Hudson.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of May, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.
Pby of Allegheny.—Centre ch	11 00
Pby of Redstone.—Jefferson ch	4 75
Pby of Clarion.—Licking ch	6 67
Pby of Blairsville.—Boiling Spring ch 2 50; Warren ch 6 67	9 17
Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburgh 2d ch a member	20 00
Pby of Beaver.—Beaver ch bal to con Rev B C Critchelo an hon mem	17 11
Pby of Blairsville.—Leechburg ch 11; Pine Run ch 15	26 00
SYNOD OF WHEELING.
Pby of Steubenville.—Hagerstown ch 14 50; New Harrisburg ch 4 10; Ridge ch 12; Harlem ch 8 60; Amsterdam ch 5; Kilgore ch 2 40	46 60
Pby of Washington.—Richietown ch 8; West Union ch 9; Waynesburg ch 3 50; Unity ch 3 75	24 25
Pby of New Lisbon.—Yellow Creek ch	24 75
Pby of St. Clairsville.—Crab Apple ch	10 00
Total,	$200 30
MISSIONARY CLOTHING.
Ladies of Congruity ch a box valued at	17 84
Do Wheeling 1st ch 2 boxes valued at	115 00
Do Beaver Falls ch 1 box in part to con Rev B C Critchelo h m valued at	39 00
Total,	$171 84

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of May, 1851.

Clear Creek ch West Lexington Pby per Dr Young	29 20
Lancaster ch per William H Kinnaird	25 00
Lewistown ch Peoria Pby Ill per David Keith	70 00
A Friend do do do do	100 00
Princeville do do do do	5 00
J K Walker St Louis do do	5 00
Mrs (Rev J A) Lyon do do do	2 50
Waveland ch O Crawfordsville Pby per C Leavenworth	5 00
Rev Jos Stevenson, Bell Fontaine Ohio, (this with $50 contributed about two years ago is to const Robert Stevenson A. M. and Rev Jos Stevenson hon mems	50 00
Danville ch per Rev. J C Young	42 00
Louisville 2d Presbyterian ch per J A Taylor	11 50
Pby of Ebenezer at last meeting per Rev Mr Grundy	14 50
Rev W H Pauling do W W Hill	18 00
Hendersen ch Ky do do	42 05
Goshen ch Ky balance in full	12 50
A lady of Louisville	2 00
Brownsville ch Ind per Rev T Alderice	4 00
John Todd Owensboro Ky	5 00
Check returned by Rev R Irwin	29 20
Princeton ch Ind per Rev S M Archer	5 00
Balance from Danville ch per Rev J C Young	307 00
Balance from Frankfort Ky per W M Todd	31 00
Mt Pleasant Ohio per Rev Thomas Elcock	6 18
Covington do do do	10 00
Mt Jefferson do do do	7 75
Des Peres Mo per Rev H A Booth	8 70
Union Iowa per Rev R McGuigan	9 00
Greenville Ky per Rev A. S. Housley	9 30
Hudsonville Miss per Rev D L Gray	54 35
Salem do do do	10 00
Holly Springs do do do	1 00
Sommersville Tenn do do	5 00
Hickory Withe to const Rev Robert McCoy life mem	50 00
Lebanon Ind per Rev S N Evans	4 00
Thornton do do do	3 00
Mrs M W Evans do do	2 00
Crow Meadow Ill per Rev Alex Brown	4 00
Stirling do do Geo Stebbins	3 50
Otawa Ohio do W K Brice	6 25
Killida do do do	4 25
Rev W K Brice Ohio do do	5 00
Willow Creek ch Ill per Rev John Ustick	9 00
Total	$1027 73

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

NEW CANDIDATES.

The following table shows the number of new candidates received under the care of the Board of Education, for the six months ending May 1st, together with the names of their Presbyteries:

New Brunswick	2
Philadelphia	2
Philadelphia 2d	1
Newcastle	1
Huntington	1
Ohio	5
Washington	1
Steubenville	1
St. Clairsville	2
Coshocton	2
Sidney	1
Richland	1
Cincinnati	1
New Albany	2
Madison	3
Crawfordsville	2
Michigan	1
Wisconsin	1
Vincennes	1
Schuyler	1
Transylvania	2
Winchester	2
South Carolina (Synod)	5
	41
Previously received	45
Total for the year	86

CANDIDATES FOR THE MINISTRY.

The following is a view of the number of candidates, the stages of their preparatory studies, the number licensed, &c., for the last ecclesiastical year.

The number of candidates received during the year has been—New, 86; restored, 2; in all		88
Making in all from the beginning		1962
The whole number on the roll during the year has been		388
Of this number there were
In their Theological course	164
" Collegiate do	133
" Academical do	73
Stage of study unknown	4
Teaching, and otherwise absent	14
		388

During the year forty-nine candidates are known to have finished their course of study.

Five have withdrawn from the aid of the board.

Seven have abandoned study: three of them on account of ill health.

Three have died.

Ten have been dropped for not reporting for more than a year.

Three have withdrawn from the list by marrying.

Seven have been discontinued for various reasons involving, on the part of some, mental or moral qualifications.

THOUGHTS ON MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

The number of candidates for the ministry has not perceptibly increased during the year. The whole number exceeds that of last year only by three. During the first six months, there was a considerable increase; but the first fruits gave better promise than the harvest. The Board have still the mournful duty to discharge, of presenting before the churches the fact of no increase of candidates. During the year, our country has received an addition of nearly one million to its inhabitants, and our Church has received, by God's grace, an accession of several thousand communicants to its former numbers. New openings have in the same time taken place at home and abroad, calling for a large increase of ambassadors of Christ. But our beloved and gifted youth still shrink back from the sacred service of the sanctuary. Some may be intimidated by the magnitude of the office; others, perhaps, ensnared by the allurements of worldly gain; others by the aspirings of political or professional life; others by low and unevangelical views of duty; others by the neglect of a suitable education, and the want of those influences which early mould the soul in a heavenly direction. However various, and whatever may be the causes, the fact exists that our Church does not possess the requisite number of efficient workmen to do our reaping in the great harvest-field of the world.

There has been, indeed, an annual increase in the number of our ministry, thus far; and this increase will continue for some years with the existing sources of supply. But if the rate of increase remains stationary, as has been the case for a series years, it is evident that the relative increase of the aggregate must soon begin to decline, and after reaching a certain point, the deaths and accessions will only counterbalance each other. Nothing, therefore, can be more certain than that it is the duty and interest of the Church to use every scriptural method to perpetuate an increasing ministry.

The mere distribution of funds for the education of the indigent is but one of the means, and one of the subordinate means, to supply the Church with ministers of the right character and qualifications. Perhaps the efforts put forth by the Assembly in this direction, under the exciting pressure of manifold wants, may have exerted some influence in producing a reaction among classes of our youth, whose piety and talents would have adorned the sacred vocation. Providence has so ordered the arrangements of society and the laws of human action that a too exclusive dependence on any one means of prosperity, however proper and wise in itself, incurs the hazard of interrupting the harmonious and full development of the aggregate resources. Whenever the Church places an undue reliance for ministerial strength on the gratuitous education of her indigent sons, she will interfere with that divine system of motives, means, and ends, whose perfection consists in natural development and uniform growth. The Board do not affirm, or believe, that too great efforts have been made to introduce into the ministry those who have needed sympathizing aid in their preparatory studies. But it is quite probable, if not altogether certain, that the importance and dignity of the ministry and the obligations to enter upon its work have not been sufficiently realized by all our pious and capable youth. The great work of ministerial education can be carried on successfully only by a wise regard to each and all the sources of supply which the grace of God permits the Church to trust in. Why should so few, comparatively, of our candidates come from the strong, sober-minded, and ever to be honoured middle classes of society—from those who, having neither the luxuries of wealth nor the miseries of poverty to depreciate character and degrade high aims, are in that condition of God-blest competence which creates the obligation and secures the power, ordinarily, of accomplishing much for the Church and the world? Nor should the rich be lost sight of in providing a ministry, which shall be "all things to all men." Although the wise, the mighty, and the noble are the last and the most dangerous class on whom the Church can place dependence in spiritual things; nevertheless God condescends to men of high as well as of low estate, and with him "all things are possible." Our true course is, to endeavour in the light of the word of God, to produce the impression upon young men of all classes and ranks of life that "he that desires the office of a bishop, desireth a good work;" that it is the duty of the Church to "preach the gospel to every creature;" that all our qualified youth who have been called by the Spirit to accept of Christ as their Redeemer should earnestly ask, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—and that parents, teachers, companions, and pastors should keep the subject of the ministry as a prominent and sacred object of contemplation before all upon whom the office may seem to have scriptural claims. The Board believe that they magnify the special department of the work intrusted to their own supervision, when the general claims of the ministry upon all the sons of the Church are most thoroughly, wisely, and universally enforced, and when the excellence, divine authority, and power of the office are held in awe by all classes and conditions of men.

It cannot be doubted that, great as has always been the attention paid to the increase of the ministry by our Church, we have but begun to discharge our duty. The fathers and mothers in Israel have yet to learn more of the intense meaning of an unreserved consecration of their children to God their Saviour; our whole course of Christian training has to be baptized with the earnest spirit of making converts of the human soul for the purpose of conquering a lost world to the Redeemer; our beloved youth have yet to live with a spirit of more heart-felt self-denial, holier zeal, and livelier desire to glorify God whenever and wherever and however Providence and the Spirit may designate; our church members in the aggregate must not only more willingly give up their children, but employ their prayers and property and influence and effort, for the advancement of Zion; and above all, the officers, the ministers and elders, the elect leaders of God's sacramental host, are called upon, by life and by office, by word and by work, by enterprise, counsel, example, instruction, to prepare the way of the Lord upon the hearts of all disciples in the day of his power.

The Board of Education desire, before the Assembly and before God, to testify their conviction of the importance of a more general and earnest attention to the means of training for the Church a ministry, whose gracious and mighty strength, under God, shall be felt in all lands. It is not sufficient that the candidates under the care of the Board should be not inferior to other classes of students. Being selected by the Church as special objects of her regard and her hopes, they should be eminent both for character and scholarship. It is believed that a higher degree of supervision should be exercised over all our candidates, on the part of Presbyteries, Pastors, theological Professors, Directors, and the Board of Education. Young men, whilst under tutelage, can be made to put forth their highest efforts for improvement, only under a sense of Christian obligation, operated upon by a constant and effective superintendence. The theory that students in the Seminary may be wisely left to pursue their studies in their own way, is supported neither by a correct view of human nature nor by the witness of experience. Law and order, supervision and discipline, the appliances of authority and kindly Christian government, are indispensable to the successful pursuit of education in theological seminaries.

The Board also believe that the Bible and the standards of our Church should receive a fuller prominence than has been customary. Candidates not unfrequently present themselves for licensure, who have no skill in presenting proof texts, and whose knowledge of both Bible and Catechism is extremely defective. Influenced by a sincere desire to call the attention of candidates to the importance of thorough preparation for their great work, the Board caused two letters to be addressed to all under their care, one urging the duty of honouring the Bible more, as a rule of faith and practice, and the other remonstrating against the tendency to leave the Seminary before the completion of a full course. These documents are appended to the annual Report. It is a fearful responsibility to train young men for the ministry; and if every stage of education needs the safeguards and ordinances of Christian love and authority, the department of theological education needs a government adapted indeed to its advanced grade, but nevertheless real, wakeful, and all-pervading.

WESTERN AGENCY.

The Board of Education have long felt the importance of occupying the western field with more efficiency, and have made a number of attempts to secure a suitable superintendent for that great section of country. Besides the official appointments of the Rev. Messrs. Bullock, Dr. Atkinson, Dr. Potts, Dr. Wood, Dr. Stewart, and Dr. Gurley, other brethren have been privately consulted and urged to enter upon the duties of one of the most important offices in the Church, (as it has appeared to the Board.) The efforts of the Board, so long unsuccessful, have finally, it is hoped, resulted in securing the desired end. In addition to the appointment of the Rev. William Speer for the Pittsburgh field, the Board have lately elected the Rev. James Wood, D. D., to take the supervision of the whole of the field, south and west of Ohio. Dr. Wood has consented to accept this important trust, without pledging himself as to the time he will continue to perform its duties. He has entered upon the work, depending upon the guidance of Providence for his future course. The Board entertain the hope that his valuable services may be long enjoyed in this department.

The recent visit of the Corresponding Secretary to the West has confirmed every impression as to the greatness of this field and the necessity of permanently occupying it. A work of immense magnitude is to be done by our Church by educational operations in the West. A new empire is starting into existence, of which St. Louis is at present the natural capital. The spiritual richness of this vast territory is well symbolized by its physical fertility. Education and sanctuary ordinances are the two prominent instrumentalities under God, to sway the destiny of these prairie regions. The work of the Board of Education is evidently one of increasing responsibility. May the Spirit of Christ enlighten and animate the Church to do a great and glorious work in its educational departments—a work that shall keep pace with providential opportunities and even anticipate the wants of the rapidly augmenting population of our States, both new and old.

STATE OF THE TREASURY.

The following is a general view of the finances of the Board of Education during the last ecclesiastical year.

Ministerial Education Fund.

Balance at Philadelphia, May 8th, 1850,	$4363 90
Do. at Pittsburgh, Louisville and Columbus,	415 76
	$4779 66
Cash received at all the Treasuries,	31,700 59
Total amount of available funds,	36,480 25
Amount paid on orders of Executive Committee,	31,892 76
Total balance, May 5th, 1851,	$4587 49

General Education Fund.

Balance, May 8th, 1850,	190 24
Cash received from churches, &c.,	*5896 00
Total amount of available funds,	$6086 24
Amount paid on orders of Executive Committee,	6068 27
Balance, May 5th, 1851,	$17 97

*Of this sum, $500 were transferred from ministerial fund by consent of donor.

African Fund.

Balance, May 8th, 1850,	993 86
Cash received, (Interest.)	90 00
	$1083 86
Amount paid on orders of Executive Committee,	50 00
Balance, May 5th, 1851,	$1033 86

ACTION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ON EDUCATION.

The Committee to whom had been referred the Report of the Board of Education, submitted the following resolutions, which were read:

1. Resolved, That in the judgment of this Assembly, the wants of the Church, and the general improvement of the age demand increasing attention to the qualifications of candidates for the ministry, and that with the view, partly, of keeping more prominent the idea of the necessity of literary attainments in our candidates, and partly with the view of other advantages, the Board of Education are hereby allowed to give their appropriations the title of scholarships; and the Presbyteries are enjoined to use their best endeavours to raise the standard of qualification for the ministry.

[Two reasons weighed with the Board in recommending this designation.

1. The name of scholarship keeps the thing implied more distinctly before the Church. It is a familiar and a descriptive name. It characterizes, better than any other, the idea to be expressed; and helps to make prominent the indispensable importance of scholarship as a qualification for the ministry.

2. The distribution of appropriations in the form of scholarships also relieves, to some extent, the feelings of candidates.

It is a fact known to the Board, that candidates sometimes make objections to, and sometimes decline, the appropriations of the Church, because made with the appearance of pure charity disbursements. Although there is no real ground of objection to the present form of appropriations, yet if a modification can be made in a manner less obnoxious to a delicate sense of honour and independence, it would seem to be wise to adopt it. Names have an influence in giving popularity and success to all enterprises. And especially in the distribution of charitable funds should the donor regard the sensibilities of the subjects of his benevolence, by the choice of methods, which at least keep fully in view the equivalent which it is within the power of the recipient to render.]

2. Resolved, That the practice of requiring a pledge from young men to enter the ministry, especially in the early stages of their preparatory studies, is not deemed conducive to the best interests, either of the candidates, or of the Church; and the Board of Education are hereby authorized to modify their rules accordingly.

[This resolution of the Assembly is not exactly understood by some who were not present at the Assembly, as we infer from remarks in some of the papers. The object of the Assembly was to leave the examination of candidates with the Presbyteries, without requiring any written pledges. The resolution does not dispense with a declaration to the Presbytery of a present purpose to enter the ministry; nor does it absolve a young man from any of the obligations naturally binding under the circumstances. The Board of Education believe, indeed, that it would greatly benefit the whole plan of our educational operations, if indigent young men of the proper talents and character were educated in academies and colleges, without any examination before the Presbytery as to their intentions to enter the ministry, until they were prepared to commence their theological studies. But these views were not urged upon the Assembly, nor does the resolution, as passed, have reference to them. It simply declares that any thing of the nature of a vow or pledge is inexpedient. The fact that the written declaration of the intentions of the candidate has always gone by the name of pledge, shows that its effect was practically more than the mere declaration of a present purpose.

The practice of requiring these written pledges grew up with the forms of the voluntary Societies. For several years, the candidates under the care of the Board were recommended by examining committees appointed by the Board. In such circumstances a written pledge was more necessary. But since the whole matter was placed under the supervision of the Presbyteries, the recommendation of young men may be wisely left with the sound ecclesiastical discretion of these bodies.

The rules of the Board still require a young man to refund all moneys he may have received, if he abandons his intention to enter the ministry. He is also still required to go through a three years' course of theological study; and the fact of his receiving the appropriations of the Board will be equivalent to his declared acquiescence in all its rules. In short the pledge has been done away with, so far as it was most liable to be a snare to the conscience. Whilst there are still entanglements, in the judgment of many, which may or may not be hereafter removed, the Assembly by a vote which was not far from unanimous, has obliterated the unpresbyterian feature of what has been considered practically a written pledge. One of the beneficial effects of this may be increased attention on the part of Presbyteries to the examination and oversight of the young men who may come before them, as candidates for the ministry.]

3. Resolved, That this Assembly prefer that young men within their bounds who are looking forward to the work of the ministry, should be officially recognized as candidates under the care of Presbyteries, only when they are prepared to enter upon their Theological studies, and until that time they be regarded simply as students on probation, under the general watch and patronage of the Presbyteries.

[The object of this resolution is to require a full examination of those who have been studying in reference to the ministry at the academy or college, when they are prepared to enter the theological seminary. Our Plan of Government seems to consider young men as ecclesiastically candidates for the ministry, only when they have received a diploma from some college, or have prosecuted studies which may be considered equivalent to a collegiate education. This resolution of the Assembly, therefore, not only makes our plan more conformable to our ecclesiastical order, but it brings the young men, on their leaving college, before their Presbyteries, and requires another examination before they are officially regarded as candidates under their care.

Before this renewed examination, the young men are to be regarded as on probation and under "the general watch and supervision of the Presbyteries." Their object is and has been to enter the ministry; but the Church is not yet prepared to enrol them as her candidates. She requires them to re-examine their motives and qualifications, and to give the Presbyteries another opportunity of testing their merit before they are officially recognised as candidates. A number of the Presbyteries have always acted upon this principle, in times past. The resolution of the Assembly is believed to be both orderly and wise.]

4. Resolved, That whilst home nurture is, according to the word of God and the covenant of his grace, a main reliance of the Church for the salvation of her children, Providence also testifies to the importance of public education on Christian principles in schools, academies and colleges, and particularly to the intimate relation between Christian education and the power of the Gospel as proclaimed in the sanctuary, and therefore that home, the school and the Church, should all be imbued with the spirit of consecration to the Lord Jesus Christ.

[This resolution is up to the mark. It distinctly declares the importance of conducting education on religious principles, wherever the process may be carried on, at home or abroad. The divine blessing will attend such education; but how can it be expected if God and his word are dishonoured and disowned? The chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him for ever. "Whatever ye do, whether ye eat or drink, do all to the glory of God." Is not the soul more than meat and its education than drink?]

5. Resolved, That this General Assembly, entertaining a lively interest in colleges, in view of the past history of the Presbyterian Church, its present prosperity and its future hopes, learn with great satisfaction the general progress attending this department of Christian education, and also the addition of Westminster College at Buffalo, to the list of these institutions; and it is recommended to our churches and members to assist, as far as possible, in the endowment of our colleges, and to co-operate with the Board of Education in sustaining them during the interval for which they may need aid.

[This resolution confers no new powers and duties upon the Board. Since 1848, the Board has aided colleges during the interval of their complete endowment, and has also assisted in their endowment, through the agency of its officers, as far as practicable. The beneficial effect of this arrangement has been felt far and wide.]

6. Resolved, That this General Assembly has a deep sense of the importance of giving to its youth a Christian education in Academies and Colleges on a more extensive scale than has yet been practised within our bounds, and for the purpose of contributing to some extent in bringing forward promising young men of suitable character, other than candidates for the ministry, the Board of Education are hereby authorized to apply to this object whatever funds may be thus specifically appropriated by the donors.

[By this resolution the Board of Education is authorized to apply any sums that may be specifically given for the purpose of educating deserving young men, who are not candidates for the ministry. The amount contributed for this purpose may be small, but it will be usefully expended. Sometimes the Board has received applications from ministers who were unable to defray the expenses of a collegiate education for their sons. Promising youth might be sent to our Presbyterial academies and colleges, who would otherwise never enjoy the advantages of a Christian education of a high grade. If there are benevolent individuals in our Church, who are disposed to assist in this manner young men of high talent and character, it is wise to give them the opportunity of doing so.]

7. Resolved, That in collecting funds for the purposes of education, the Board shall, in all cases, keep the contributions for candidates, and for schools, academies, and colleges, distinct from each other; but if no special direction is indicated, then the funds shall be appropriated to the education of candidates for the ministry.

[Every person who contributes to the Board has the opportunity of distinctly specifying how his donation shall be appropriated, whether to the assistance of candidates on the one hand, or on the other to the support of schools, academies, and colleges. It is hoped that all who are able will contribute to both departments.]

8. Resolved, That the Board of Education, on account of its responsible work, and the increased pecuniary liabilities attending it, be commended to the liberality of our churches, and that the Presbyteries are invited to secure collections for the cause of education, either general or ministerial, as may be preferred by the churches.

[Is not the educational work of the Presbyterian Church one of very great importance? It should, then, be helped forward by a liberal contribution from every church. The true rules for giving are 1. Every body something. 2. Each according to his ability. 3. All from love to Christ. Our Boards would have overflowing treasuries if these rules were acted upon. Are they not the right rules?]

9. Resolved, That the last Thursday of February be observed as a day of special prayer for the outpouring of the Spirit of God upon the youth of our land, who are pursuing their studies in literary institutions, and especially that many of them may be called and qualified by divine grace for the work of the ministry.

[Nothing can be done successfully in advancing the kingdom of Christ without the divine blessing. Prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit is indispensable. The achievements of prayer form an important part of the records of Providence. In addition to daily prayer and prayer in the sanctuary, the Assembly has recommended the observance of a day of special, united prayer, for the blessing of God upon the educational work in our Church and country. Such days have aforetime been memorable in Zion.]

On motion, the resolutions were taken up seriatim; their consideration elicited much discussion, which occupied the Assembly several hours. After this discussion, the resolutions were adopted in the above form.

EDUCATION AMONG THE HEBREWS.

Strange as it may perhaps seem to some of us, there has scarcely ever been a nation in which the people were so universally taught to read. That such was very generally the case in the time of our Saviour, we would infer from the manner in which he often appeals to the people, asking, "Have you not read what Moses saith?" "Have ye not read in the Scriptures?" thus implying that his hearers could and did read the writings of Moses and the prophets. The same thing is plainly to be inferred when we are told respecting the inscription which Pilate placed over the head of the Redeemer at his crucifixion, "This title then read many of the Jews." But we have proof that may be viewed as still more conclusive. We may quote the law which impliedly enjoins it on parents as a solemn duty, that the young should be taught to read and to study the statutes and the ordinances which God had revealed. "The words which I command thee this day," he ordains, "shall be in thy heart, and thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children, and thou shalt write them upon the posts of thine house, and on thy gates."—Dr. Matthews.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, MAY, 1851.

Presbytery of Wyoming.

Scottsville ch 4 00

Presbytery of New York.

Astoria ch Jas T Soutter Esq 75; University Place ch N Y 532 50 607 50

Presbytery of Elizabethtown.

1st ch Elizabethtown 185 00

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

Freehold ch 7 01; 1st ch New Brunswick, 53; Squan Village ch 1; Lawrenceville ch 37 98 01

Presbytery of Raritan.

Flemington ch 14 47; Pleasant Grove ch 2; Lower German Valley ch 1 17 47

Presbytery of West Jersey.

Cold Spring ch 15 00

Presbytery of Newton.

Greenwich ch N J 31 17

Presbytery of Luzerne.

Kingston ch 6 25; Newton ch 3 9 25

Presbytery of Donegal.

Chestnut Level ch 20 00

Presbytery of Carlisle.

Carlisle ch 70; Gettysburg ch 14 75; Hagerstown ch Md 30 114 75

Presbytery of Erie.

Washington ch 2 27; Mill Creek ch 5 7 27

Presbytery of St. Clairsville.

Washington ch O 14 20

Presbytery of New Lisbon.

Salem ch James McCombs on account of a scholarship 25 00

Presbytery of Crawfordsville.

Poplar Spring ch 3 10

Presbytery of Kaskaskia.

Edwardsville ch 4 25; Rattan's Prairie ch 2 6 25

Presbytery of Peoria.

Prairieville ch 2 00

Presbytery of West Hanover.

Sundries through Farmers Bank Va 24 25

Presbytery of Montgomery.

Falling Spring ch 15; Fincastle ch 5; Covington ch 2 50; Mount Union ch 20 cts 22 70

Presbytery of Mississippi.

Jackson ch 10 00

Presbytery of Louisiana.

Carmel ch 20; Comite ch 2 22 00

Presbytery of Memphis.

Mt Bethany, Presbyterial coll 55; Hickory Withe ch 20; Raleigh ch 6; Macon ch 12, in all 93; less discount 1 40—91 60; 1st ch Memphis for a candidate 66 40 158 00

Presbytery of Western District.

Mount Carmel ch 55, less exchange 1 10 53 90

LEGACIES.

Legacy of the late Horatio Ladd of Bradford Co Pa 47 50; legacy of Rev Isaac Hadden, late of Gainesville Ala in part, 255 46 302 96

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend Baltimore quarterly instalment on three scholarships 150; a Friend in B—— per Rev D Stewart 50; A Friend in Illinois 100; "One tenth" per Mr W S Martien 2; Wm Rankin jr Esq 10; Rev R J Hall Xenia O 1 25 313 25

Total $2067 03

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH, MAY 1851.

Presbytery of Blairsville.

N Alexandria ch 19 50; Murraysville ch 17 38; Unity ch 36 51 73 39

Presbytery of Redstone.

Greensburgh ch 21 75; Mt Pleasant ch 10 25 32 00

Presbytery of Ohio.

2d ch Pittsburgh to con Rev A T McGill D D, and Rev Wm D Howard, hon membs 100; 1st ch Allegheny 62 08 162 08

Presbytery of Clarion.

Licking church 5 66

Presbytery of Washington.

Ritchie Town ch 10 00

Total $283 13

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,

No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Mission House, June 13, 1851.

India Missions.—Letters have been received of dates as follows: Lahor, April 5; Lodiana, April 7; Amballa, April 2; Futtehgurh, April —; Allahabad, April 2. The Rev. J. H. Orbison had reached his station at Lodiana. The brethren at that station were much interested in the case of a Sikh, who came to them not as an inquirer but as a believer. They had reason to hope that he is a true believer in the Lord Jesus. He had been a colonel in the Sikh army. A young man from Persia professed to be an inquirer, and had resolved to cast in his lot with the little company of native Christians at Lodiana. At Allahabad, Anna Finley Sandford and Mary Johnston, of the girls' boarding-school, had been admitted to the communion of the church, and their Christian walk was in all respects satisfactory to the missionaries. An aged woman was near the end of her pilgrimage, whose illness was supported and comforted by the hopes of the gospel. Mr. Owen says, "Her mind is in great peace, and she appears really to be one of God's hidden ones, under the protection of the Most High." The mission-letter contains the following notice: "Married, at Allahabad, on the 11th of March, the Rev. R. M. Munnis to Mrs. Fanny Mandal, widow of the late Dr. James Mandal."

Siam Mission.—A letter of the Rev. S. Mattoon, of February 27th, brings advices of three weeks' later date, but not containing anything of special interest. Mrs. Mattoon writes a note from Singapore on the 3d of April, saying that herself and children were quite well, and expected to return to Bangkok by the first good opportunity.

China Missions.—Letters have reached us from Canton, March 28th; Ningpo, March 8th; Shanghai, March 14th. The Rev. M. S. Culbertson and family, by the advice of the Mission and of the Executive Committee, have removed to Shanghai, with the view of his being engaged with other missionaries at that city in the translation of the Scriptures. He expected to carry on missionary labours amongst the Ningpo people, thousands of whom have removed to Shanghai for purposes of business. The Rev. R. Q. Way was chosen pastor of the church at Ningpo, to succeed Mr. Culbertson. His installation took place on the 23d of February. Mr. Quarterman preached the sermon, from Philippians i. 17. Mr. Rankin gave the charge to the pastor, and Mr. Culbertson to the people. The chapel for Chinese and English services on the north bank of the river was dedicated on the second Sabbath of February; Mr. Culbertson preaching a sermon from Isaiah lvi. 6, 7. At the Chinese services in the afternoon, the chapel was quite full. The printing-press at Ningpo was steadily at work. One of the workmen, formerly a member of the boarding-school, is spoken of as in a serious state of mind. Mr. Coulter, after mentioning several interesting things, says of him, "So far as we are able to judge, he is really anxious to be a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus." At Canton, Mr. French says, "The two day-schools in connection with the mission have an encouraging number of pupils, and we hope that one of them will prove an entering wedge for the introduction of the gospel in the neighbourhood in which it is situated. Our chapel labours are continued as usual." Mr. Happer speaks of a meeting for females at the house of one of the missionaries of another Society, who lives "in a family neighbourhood," which has been held once a week since December last. "The attendance has been encouraging, about eighty adult women, besides a good number of children. The attention has been gratifying." This meeting was conducted by Mrs. Happer, the wife of the missionary at whose house the meeting is held, not being yet sufficiently acquainted with the native language. The premises occupied by our brethren are in a neighbourhood not yet prepared for such a meeting. An earnest plea is made for a medical missionary at this station. "A dispensary on a large scale would be the means, with the blessing of God, of bringing quadruple the number of immortal beings under our preaching. Is there no pious physician in connection with our churches, whom the love of Christ will constrain to come and join us in these labours."

Sailing of Missionaries.—The Rev. David A. Wilson and his wife sailed from this city for Monrovia, in the brig Leonora, on the 16th of May. Mr. Wilson will have the charge of the Alexander High School at Monrovia. Both he and his wife are from Gettysburgh, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Wilson is a niece of the Rev. Dr. McConaughy, late President of Washington College, and Mr. Wilson a nephew of the late Rev. Henry R. Wilson, D. D. We desire to commend these missionary friends to the special prayers of the churches. May God long spare them and greatly bless them in their important work!

IOWA AND SAC MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. WILLIAM HAMILTON.

Facts and Conversations.

Mr. Hamilton, in forwarding this journal, says that while omitting much of what passed in his interviews with the Indians, he has often given not only the ideas but the words employed by them in their replies, as best illustrating the working of their minds.

Jan. 6th, 1851.—Yesterday was the first Sabbath of the year, the usual Sabbath of our celebrating the Lord's Supper. In the afternoon I visited some lodges, but did not find them very anxious to receive instruction, though they made no objection to my talking to them. One woman gave me a long scold, because, as she said, I did not let her draw for a child in the school, to whose father she was once married. She said she was poor, and should have drawn for four persons. I told her I was not a chief, nor did I control their money; she could draw for as many as the chiefs would let her—the boy had not drawn any money.

Tuesday, 7th.—To-day, in the first hut I entered, I found several sitting round their fire, one of whom was cooking. An old man spoke of his happiness in being warm from what had been given him. Said he, "I am o-hrú-wa. I think of what you say to me."—"What does that word mean? The interpreter once told me it meant 'not to think much of one's self,' not proud, (humble.) Is that its meaning?"—"It means wise. You do not understand the language. You ask what a word means."—"There is much that I do not understand."—"You have made me warm, I feel glad. Teach all the Indians, they will listen to you. I hear you,—I am wise. GREAT MAN is my name."—"The Iowas hear me, but believe not. Should you be sick and ask me for medicine, or hungry and ask me for food, and I should tell you all the time, 'I hear you, I hear you,' and yet give you nothing, what good would it do you? Just so do you act. You do not obey."—"It is true."—I next went to "Shoot's," and requested those within to go with me to a tent close by. As they were cleaning the hearth, and had thrown out the fire, to put fresh ground on the hearth, I went to White Crane's. He is blind, and lives alone in a tent, made of three or four mats for the sides, and two for the roof. It is about four feet in diameter, and four or five high. As I went in, he said, "My grandson, I am sorry I cannot see you, let me touch your hand—I am glad. I am sorry that I did not get the things I asked you for."—"Did not the others bring you any thing? part was for you."—"No, I got nothing. Send me something by Corn Tassel" (Sandie Reed, one of our scholars) "and tell him to take it to his brother. I want some fat meat."—"What do you think of what I told you?"—"Of the words you speak? They are very good. I think of them."—"Are you afraid to die?"—"No, what should I fear?"—"Are you not a sinner?"—"No, I am an old man; I have no sin."—"Have all old men no sin?"—"No, they have none."—"Who takes away their sins?"—"God does it."—"For whose sake does he take away sin?"—"I do not know."—"I have told you it is for the sake of Christ who died for us. You do not recollect. Do you pray?"—"I do not say words, I only think inwardly. I wish to be good. I used to pray when I was young."—"But you did not then know anything about the Saviour. What did you pray for?"—"I prayed for animals:—that I might get beaver and other animals."—"Would you rather God would leave you blind, and take away your sins, or give you good eyes, and not pardon your sins?" He had often spoken of asking God for good eyes.—"I would rather have him pardon my sins." He said much more to the same effect, and when I left, wished me to send him something to eat, which I did in the evening, of "fragments."

Jan. 10th.—Took with me, to-day, some bread for the blind folks. Found two of them asleep in their mat tent, without fire, which I succeeded in kindling, after some effort. When I gave them the bread, they thanked me very much. Telling them I would call again, I went into another tent, where were several women and a man. When I began the exercises, the man went out, but afterward peeped in at the door. One woman said, "I pray for the forgiveness of my sins, and a new heart." As I went out I saw Shoot, and asked him for some wood, of which he had a large pile, for the old blind men, as their fire had gone out. He said, "O no! it is so windy that fire makes too much smoke. It is very good to kindle a fire in the evening." While there was truth in his remark, I thought it rather an excuse to save his wood. Called again at the blind men's hut, who seemed anxious to have me talk to them, saying, "We like to hear."

Tuesday, 14th.—At the first tent I visited, I found only a boy, who said but little in answer to the questions I asked him, except "I don't know." At the next tent there was only one, but others came in. When I commenced the exercises by singing, one girl laughed immoderately. I stopped awhile that she and others might become quiet. When I commenced praying, she again burst out into a hearty laugh, and ran out of the tent, ashamed, I suppose, that she could not be quiet. The others were attentive, though I had to listen to their various complaints, for half an hour, before they would listen to me. At the next tent I found two women, (including the laughing one), a man and some children. They seemed to listen with interest. Passed by where there had been another, but they had moved away, the fire was still burning.

Friday, 17th.—To-day I went first to White Crane's. It was very cold, and his fire was nearly out. He complained of having no one to make fires for him, and spoke much about being hungry. I said to him, "Do you think God sees you?"—"Yes, he sees all persons, I think he sees me and thinks of me."—"What is his mind, do you suppose, when he thinks of you?"—"I think he pities me."—"You are very hungry. What if God should not give you anything to eat; would you dislike him?"—"Why should I hate him? I would not hate him."—"Will he take you to heaven, when you die?"—"I think not, I have nothing to pay him."—"He does not do it for pay; he invites us to come and get without pay; he gave his Son to die for us because he pitied us. Jesus has shed his blood to wash away our sins. Do you think he has taken away your sins?"—"I think he has taken away many of them; not all:" and again he said, "He has taken away a few; many he has not taken away."—When he pardons one sin, he pardons all. He does it freely—for Christ's sake."—"This is very kind. I pray to him inwardly." After further conversation and prayer, I went to Naumonya's. He referred me to another tent, but in going to it, I passed another, and stopping there, the old blind 'Great man' said to me, "Do not preach at Shoot's; he is foolish; he has thrown me away." I invited them to the next lodge. Several came in after the exercises had closed. I made some remarks to some of them, and then said to Naumonya, "Do you think the Iowas will ever become Christians?"—"Not the old people. The children you have in the school, may."—"If God sends his Spirit to teach them, they will become Christians, but not without. It is a great sin not to listen to the word of God. You ought to pray earnestly for the pardon of your sins."—"Perhaps so."

Monday, 20th.—Took the old blind man, White Crane, some bread, for which he expressed many thanks, and also expressed his gratitude for some meat Mr. Irvin had sent to him. In conversation, I said to him, "Should I bring you nothing to eat, and teach you, or teach you and bring you nothing to eat, which would you prefer?"—"Both are good."—"But should I do only one, which would you rather have me do?"—"I would rather have you teach me; food is also good, and it is good to be taught, but should you not teach me any more, I would think of what you have told me."—"Do you think God has pardoned your sins?"—"Not all, but most of them;" and again, "a few, most of them are not yet taken away." Perhaps he alluded to corrupt affections. I said, "If he pardons one he will pardon all. Do you think God will take you to heaven when you die?"—"I do not know; he will do as he pleases."—"If he takes you to heaven, will it be for your own sake?"—"No, why should it be for my sake? it will be for the sake of his Son. I am poor. I think the Son of God influences you (told you) to bring me something to eat."—"Do you know that the Son of God is God?"—"Yes, I know it, because you have told me."—"Is there but one God?"—"But one."—"Do you know that the Holy Spirit is God?"—"I know it, and I know that there is a hell, because you have told me." The old man was without fire, and I kindled one for him, for which he thanked me, and said he was comfortable. I next went to Pipe's, another blind man. Several were in this tent. After the more public exercises were over, I entered into a familiar conversation with the old man. He said, "I have heard you ever since you came among us. I always tell them to be good, and do what is right. Be good! be good! be good! I say all the time." I gave him some bread, also, a small part of which he broke off and threw towards the fire. I said to him, "Why do you throw that bread away?"—"It is an offering to the spirit," said one; "it is our custom."—"Will the spirits eat it?"—"Yes." After looking awhile, I said, "I do not see them eat it." At this they laughed. The old man said, "I have many relations: they are far away. We prepare victuals for them, and they come and eat it?"—"They do not return to the earth—those who believe in Christ are taken to heaven, the wicked are cast into hell. Where will you go when you die?"—"I will go no where: I will stay about here. If God brings a horse for me, and says, 'Here, I have brought a horse for you,'—I may go with him."—"There are no horses in heaven."—"What I have said is what we have been taught—it is our way; we have the big, sacred pipe, and I pray to the four, the Sun, the Moon, the Wind and the Thunder. My mother, that died long ago, with the small-pox, came for me winter before last: I saw her."—"You dreamed, I suppose."—"Yes."—"What did you say to her?"—"I did not like it. If I had been willing, when she said to me, 'I have come for you,' I suppose I would have died. I am very good, very good, very good. My children have spots on their foreheads, and I prayed to the four to have them do right."—"I know these are the customs of your forefathers, but this is not the way to worship God. He commands us now to repent."—"Yes, I know, because you have told me—I had good wives, who made me leggins and moccasins; as they have not come back, I expect they are married: should I die, I would drive their husbands away, and say to them 'I want my wives.'"

So dark is his mind yet, notwithstanding he said he had heard us ever since we came here. After endeavouring to instruct him in a better way, I went to Britain's tent, with whom I conversed awhile, when he told me I had better go to White Cloud's, saying, "Many are gathered together there, and I am going there myself." Another, speaking, said, "I think if the Iowas would call at the mission to hear you, they would mind better what you say; when you go from house to house to teach them, they forget as soon as you go away."—"I have been trying to get them to come to meeting at the mission for a long time, but cannot succeed." A woman spoke up and said, "Yes, that would be good, and have the women there, and have a great feast."—"That would be good," said the others. On my way to White Cloud's, I passed Shoot, burning a log. Said I, "It is the Sabbath, and you are cutting wood." "O no, I am just making a fire to burn the log: I looked for you a long time, but did not see you. I cut this yesterday." Pointing to his axe, I said, "Why was your axe left out all night, if you cut this yesterday?" At this he laughed. He professes not to work on the Sabbath. I wished him to accompany me to White Cloud's, but he would not.

(To be continued.)

WEST AFRICA: CORISCO MISSION.

LETTER OF THE REV. JAMES L. MACKEY.

Missionary Medical Practice.

Writing under date of February 1, 1851, Mr. Mackey gives some interesting statements on this subject.

. . . I brought out, as you know, a supply of medicines for our own use, and to be dispensed among the natives, if it should be deemed advisable. While at Gaboon, I profited by the experience of Mr. Wilson and of the French physicians connected with their military station in Gaboon, with whom I frequently met. After we came to Corisco I took some pains to seek out cases of sickness, and where the superstitious practices of the people did not interfere I administered medicine. There are three evil spirits in which the people believe, and they trace all their sicknesses to the agency of some one of these spirits. They are ukuku, mondi and melâgâ. All the superstitious of the people and all their fetishes have special reference to these three demons, and their native doctors, or fetish men, are distributed so that each one has his appropriate sphere. One is an ukuku doctor, another a mondi doctor, and another a melâgâ doctor. At first I could not get control of any cases of disease. I saw persons who were sick, but they had more confidence in the mummeries and dances of their fetish men, than they had in the white man's medicine. Two or three providential, I may say, and indeed very striking cases soon occurred, which have very much changed the current of opinion among the people. The first case was that of the headman of a town very near to us. I was well acquainted with him, and had been accustomed to see him almost every day. He was taken sick, the ukuku doctor was sent for, I did not know of his sickness until I heard the singing and drumming in his town. When I went to see him I found him quite ill, but he told me with great confidence that in three days he would be well, the doctor had ordered the people of the town and others who would volunteer their service, to dance, beat drums, and sing three days and three nights, and then the evil spirit would leave him. I talked to him a little while and represented to him the folly of this kind of work, that the noise the people made would only be likely to make him worse, that he had better order them to give up this palaver at once, and I would give him medicine, and I hoped would be able to restore him to health. He offered to take medicine from me, but I told him I would give him none as long as he kept the ukuku doctor there and allowed the people to carry on this drumming and dancing. He finally promised me that he would take my advice, stop the singing and dancing, and that if I would come the next day he would be ready to take my medicine. That night the drumming was kept up during the whole night with redoubled vigour, a great many people were gathered into the town, the racket, and hallooing, and beating of sticks and drums were astonishing. This was kept up during the whole forenoon; about the middle of the day I went to the town according to promise, but the people would not permit me to see him. I saw by their looks and conduct that they did not want me there. I would mention here that this is the only case when the slightest disrespect has been shown to either Mr. Simpson or myself since we came among this people. That night the drumming ceased; Vany was to have got well. I inquired for him the next morning, but learned he was no better. I sent him word that as soon as he was willing to trust himself to my care I would give him medicine. I did not see him for several weeks, but heard occasionally that he was growing worse. The ukuku doctor was dismissed, and the mondi doctor brought. I do not know the treatment resorted to by him, but it was of a quieter nature than the former. I passed over through the town, and I observed a particular kind of bush laid on the roofs of all the houses and scattered about the doors. Vany did not get well still, and the mondi doctor was dismissed. They sent off next to the main land for a noted melâgâ doctor. This man is a native of Cape Esterias, he enjoys a wide reputation, and is resorted to in extreme cases. He was with the sick man two weeks, and failed to restore him to health. He concluded that because the man seemed to be incurable, somebody on the island was in league with an evil spirit for his destruction, and if the man was not discovered and put to death there was no hope for Vany. Suspicion was immediately fixed on two young men, sons of a man who had in an affray some years ago killed Vany's father. I was well acquainted with both the young men. One of them had worked considerably for us. A day was appointed for their trial. All the principal men on the island attended, and many from the neighbouring island of Illavi and from the main land. The largest assembly of people were collected together that I have seen here. Mr. Simpson and I attended. When we first came to the island, we asked and were granted all the rights and privileges of Corisco men. We claimed our right now to sit in judgment and to advise in regard to this present case, with the other head men of the island; our right was acknowledged. The trial was opened by the old wizzard doctor. We stood in the middle of the street, the people were assembled in large numbers on both sides. He waved a small brush which he held in his hand, making many mysterious movements, talking all the while apparently to some invisible being, frequently he called over a short form of words to which the people all responded. When he had spoken about half an hour he called out one of the accused young men. He spoke in his own defence about half as long, when the other was called out, who spoke about the same length of time. I could understand scarcely any thing of what had been said, and did not know how either the charge or the defence stood. I thought it a good occasion when so many people were together to preach them a sermon on such superstitions. To shield my interpreter, who I feared might keep back something that I said through anxiety for himself, I wished them to understand particularly that he spoke my words and not his own. I reviewed this case of Vany's from he was first taken sick, mentioned the different kinds of palaver that had been made, all to no good purpose. Vany was worse now than when the ukuku doctor was first called. I denounced in the strongest terms that could be put into their language the folly and sin of such practices as this, resorted to when men were sick. I told them men would get sick and they would die without the instrumentality of an evil spirit, or an individual in league with one, &c. Most of the people listened with attention until I was done. Some pronounced it all true, but it was decided that one of the young men should drink a certain preparation which would test his innocence or guilt. The sick man was to be washed, and certain herbs put into the water which washed him, this was to be boiled and given him, (the accused) to drink. Any others who chose were to drink at the same time. They said this could do no harm, if he was guilty he would die, if not he would go unhurt. I had suspicions that they would poison the man, and warned him not to drink unless Vany would drink also, if it would not hurt an innocent man let all the people then drink, and that he should not drink first. This test took place a few days after his trial. The sick man, with twenty or thirty others besides the accused drank out of the same kettle, but all came off unhurt. Vany was now willing to deliver himself unreservedly into my hands. He had some derangement of the liver, and from debility had dropsy in his legs and feet. I commenced treating him at once. In a few days he was able to walk about, and in three weeks was perfectly well. This case and its results was known to everybody on the island, and I think its termination shook the faith of the people very much in their fetish doctors.

Another case occurred in a town near the one above mentioned, which, though not so public as the first, was not less important as far as it was known. It was the case of a woman who had fever. I was called to see her after she had been sick some time. The people had given up hope of her recovery, and when I saw her I had no expectation that she would live over twenty-four hours. I declined at first to give her any medicine, but her friends seemed so anxious that I consented, if they would lay aside all their fetishes and carry out my prescription I would give her medicine, but I told them I did not expect she would get well. She took my medicine, the next day she was better, and she continued to improve until she was quite well. A case in another town that excited some attention among the people was that of a child which had convulsions from cutting teeth. When the convulsions first came on, its mother and the other women of the town all thought it was dying. It had several fits before I saw it, and the women were crying and mourning for it as if it were already dead. I told them what to do for it, and the convulsions did not return. I have mentioned these cases particularly, because they were among the first I attended to, and they were the cases that seemed to turn the attention of the people away from their fetish doctors. For the last month or two there has not a case of sickness occurred in the south side of the island near where we are, but I have been sent for or consulted about. Some days I have had more calls than I could attend to. The superstitions of the people appear, as I remarked above, to be altogether confined to their diseases, and I trust that some medical attention, if judiciously applied, may be overruled, to dissipate many of their false notions in regard to evil spirits.

INDIA: ALLAHABAD MISSION.

COMMUNICATION OF THE REV. ROBERT M. MUNNIS.

Account of the Allahabad Mela of 1851, and other matters connected therewith.

[Concluded from page 90.]

January 17th.—To-day Mr. Warren had a long and keen discourse with two pundits (Hindú religious teachers of the Brahmanical caste). The subject of discussion was the number of Hindú incarnations of the Deity. Mr. Warren stated that the Christian religion recognised but one God, and one Mediator, the man Christ Jesus, while the Hindús had gods many and lords many. To convince them of the folly of this, he told them, among other things, the well-known proverb of the man who tried to sit down on two stools; the stools slipped from under him, and he fell to the ground. He also compared the Hindús to sheep in a field full of furze. The Brahmans sent them from one place of pilgrimage to another, and at every place they lost part of their fleece, through the cupidity of the Brahmans; and he was a very fortunate man indeed, who, after his wanderings, had any wool left on his back. I may remark in passing, that this is the most successful method of reasoning with the natives of this country. A proverb or a comparison will convince them, when the most logical argument falls on their ears perfectly harmless, without producing the least impression. These pundits were at length silenced, and we had an opportunity of presenting some gospel truth, which we gladly embraced. Mr. Warren read them the 115th Psalm and commented on it, and I read a Hindú tract on "Deliverance from Sin." We hope it was altogether a profitable day.

January 18th, Sunday.—Went down to the Mela. A thunder storm came on, followed by heavy rain, and the people were glad to take shelter in our preaching tent, so that it was soon filled. I began to read a tract on the "Evil of Sin," when a man in the crowd asked me what was sin. I then read the ten commandments, and explained to him that doing any thing contrary to these commandments was sin in the sight of God. I then added that no man since the fall of our first parents had kept them, but broke them daily in thought, word, and deed. I next explained to them the plan of salvation through a Redeemer; that Jesus Christ had satisfied the demands of the law, and that if we believed on him, his righteousness was imputed unto us, &c. A man in the crowd attracted my attention. He had lost his left thumb, and the rest of the hand was shrivelled up. I called him over to me, and asked him how he had lost his thumb. His story was somewhat as follows: "Three years ago I was a native policeman, and one time a wolf came when I kept watch, and carried off a child. When the magistrate heard of this, he came and scolded me for my negligence, and told me I must shoot the wolf. I explained to him that this was not a place where wolves lived, and that it must be a ghost from a neighbouring Mohammedan burying ground. On this the magistrate became very angry, and told me if I did not shoot the wolf he would discharge me. While we were talking, the wolf came again. I levelled my musket and fired. But sure enough it was a ghost, for the gun burst, wounding my thigh severely, and blowing off my thumb." He is now employed by the Brahmans of Gháyá to escort pilgrims to the temple there. I told him that such work was very displeasing in the sight of God; that he was endeavouring to lead many of his fellow countrymen to destruction. He plead the universal excuse in this country for doing any thing contrary to conscience: "I do it for a livelihood." He fully believed the ghost story, however, and was very much surprised that I did not give a cordial assent to it too. I may tell another circumstance that happened three days after this, which will show that he is not the only one under the dominion of superstition in this country. A man came into the verandah of the Mission house, and took up a bottle of oil to carry it away for some domestic purpose. A little dog of mine saw him, and thinking he was going to commit theft, caught him by the leg. A few hours after the occurrence, as I was walking in front of the house, the man who had been bitten came up to my dog, and began to count the toes of one of his feet. I asked him what he was doing. He told me he wanted to know how many toes my dog had on each foot. If a dog, said he, have twenty toes, his bite will be severe and tedious of cure; but if he have eighteen, it will soon heal. This man is a native Christian, and I believe a very consistent one too; but it is very evident he is not free from native superstition. Indeed, at every step in this country, I am reminded of the superstitions and prejudices current in Roman Catholic Ireland. Hundreds of customs among these people I can readily recognise as old acquaintances, thereby proving that they have a common origin.

January 19th.—To-day we had a discussion with a pundit and Cálá. (Both these are teachers of Hinduí and Sanskrit, but the former must be a Brahman, the latter of some other caste.) Mr. Warren and Mirza, catechist, conducted the discussion. The point in debate was the difference between the moral character of our blessed Lord, and that of the several incarnations, as Ram Krishn, &c., mentioned in the Hindú sacred writings. Mr. Warren stated that God was a pure and holy being, and that if it pleased him to assume human nature, it must of necessity be a holy incarnation. By this test we were able to discover that none of the Hindú incarnations were true, for they were all notorious for their shameless profligacy. But that our Lord "was holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners." By this we know that he was the true and only incarnation of God. He had also come to save sinners, while the Hindú incarnations came to destroy them. Seeing then that we were all sinners, these manifestations of the Deity, even if they could be proved to be such, which they could not, would not by any possibility do us any good. For instance, Krishn was guilty of murder, and all kinds of wickedness. Although this is notorious, and in the mouths of all the natives, would you believe it? these men denied that such a thing was written in their sacred books concerning Krishn. Mr. Warren then appealed to another pundit in the crowd; he said that the sahib (gentleman) had told the truth; that according to their books Krishn had committed murder, &c., but that it could be satisfactorily accounted for, so that no blame could be attached to Krishn's moral character. He then explained himself. Yes, said Mr. Warren, when your books say a thing is black, we must understand that it is not black, but white. This man came three days after to the tent, and asked for one of our religious books. I gave him a Sanskrit tract on the "Person and Glory of Christ," written by J. Muir, Esq., Bengal Civil Service, which he promised to read carefully. The shamelessness of the Hindús and Mohammedans in denying any thing in their religious books, when it suits them to do so, is very deplorable. A Mohammedan a day or two after this, came and entered into a discussion with Mirza on Mohammedanism. Mirza read passages from the Qurán, reflecting on some of the Mohammedan usages, but the man with all the coolness imaginable said, "These are not extracts from any holy book; you have made them for the occasion." We are always glad when the people sit and listen quietly to our message. But we do not often enjoy this luxury. The enemy of souls sends men every day to our tent to cavil and quarrel with us, and we are obliged to listen patiently to their foolish and frequently blasphemous objections. If we do not, the people around raise a laugh at our expense, and cry, You do not answer these men, because you cannot. Sometimes they bow before the majesty of gospel truth, and remain silent and attentive listeners; but more frequently they go away speaking in bitter and disrespectful terms of the Christian religion. Some among them acknowledge that the Christian religion is very good, and that it is written in the Shasters that this country will become eventually Christian. But when asked to follow their Shasters in this particular, they decline, and say that they intend to follow the great men of the land. When they become Christians, so will we.

February 1st.—This was a great bathing day with the Hindús, who call it Amáwas, the change of the moon, when the sun and moon are in conjunction. On this day the Hindús bathe and offer flowers to Mahadeo and Beni Mádho. This day many persons came to our tent to hear what was said. Among these, four Sikh faqírs, with whom we had a good deal of discussion, but nothing satisfactory. They were disposed to cavil. They laughed at the Hindús for their stupidity in expecting any benefit from bathing in the Ganges. They also ridiculed their idolatry. Still, poor men, they were as far from the truth as the persons whom they laughed at. They trusted implicitly to their own understandings, and said if they could not comprehend every thing fully, and perceive clearly why God laid such and such plans, they could not believe. As Mirza remarked to them, "You make an idol of your own understanding, and then, falling down, worship it." Such discussions as these are any thing but pleasant and profitable. The missionary has to listen to three or four angry, noisy, disputants at once, and if they can be induced to speak one at a time, they conduct the argument with the greatest unfairness. When the missionary thinks he has completely silenced them, he finds to his great sorrow that the discussion is but begun. They never allow themselves beaten; and glide off from one topic to another interminably. One of these Sikh faqírs came frequently to our tent and heard the gospel preached; may it be blessed to his salvation.

February 6th.—This day is called Basant Panchamí. On this day the Hindús worship Saraswatí with books &c., and also make an image of her, which they worship. Placing before Deví mangoe blossoms, and shoots of barley and rice, they worship her, and make merry. The Basant Panchamí is the opening of spring, and is a season of general license and merriment. To-day we had an unusually small mela, as many had left for their homes. However, we collected good congregations, and had several good opportunities of preaching the gospel.

All those who take an interest in missionary labours will be rejoiced to hear that this famous mela at Allahabad is declining rapidly. This year's mela was very small indeed. A circumstance has occurred which may help to make the next even smaller. The cholera has broken out among the wretched pilgrims, and for the last five days from ten to twenty have died daily. Many pilgrims in great alarm left Allahabad and went home, before the Basant Panchamí, thereby depriving themselves of the great benefit of bathing on such a great occasion. For instance one man was seized with cholera, to whom Mirza gave some medicine. As soon as he felt a little better, he ran from the mela ground, saying "I will stay here no longer." Perhaps you are aware that it is considered a very meritorious thing to sleep on the sand in the bed of the river, which is very damp and unhealthy, and in this season especially so, on account of the rain which so unseasonably fell. The man who rents this land from government, parcels it out to the pilgrims, six feet by two, and on this they live during the mela season, and for this they give two rupees rent! This foolish practice of sleeping on such ground has been the cause of much mortality. During one rainy night four faqírs died, notwithstanding all their holiness! Such cases as these might, one would think, open the eyes of the poor Hindús. Seeing the special favourites of heaven dying before their eyes like other men, their eyes might be opened to see their folly in worshipping mortals like themselves, "who are crushed before the moth."

In former years missionaries came from other stations to help us to fight the battle of the Lord. But this year we have been left to struggle alone. We have however been, by God's grace, able to muster a pretty good force, and to show a bold front. Much gospel truth has been exhibited, and many books, large and small, have been given away to readers. Mr. Warren and myself, with one or two catechists, have been in nearly daily attendance. And Mr. Owen came down whenever he could get away from his duties in the College, the attendance at which institution has been good, notwithstanding the mela.

My dear Christian friends, it is your duty to pray for us, that the word of God here may have free course and be glorified; that here Christ's kingdom may come and his will be done as it is done in heaven.

INDIA: FURRUKHABAD MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. AUGUSTUS H. SEELEY.

A Missionary Tour among Villages not before Visited.

Mr. Seeley was accompanied by his family on this journey, and by Madárá, a native reader, and by Dhoukal, a native teacher of English in the Furrukhabad school. As the bronchial complaint under which he has suffered is not yet removed, rendering it difficult to speak long, their help was of the greater service.

Dec. 16.—Having sent on our tent in the morning, we left our bungalow at 5 o'clock P. M., and came to it about dark, in a very large and beautiful mango grove, near a village called Kherá, containing a population of between 400 and 500.

Dec. 17.—Early this morning we visited Kherá, and succeeded in collecting an audience of fifty persons, who listened with great attention for more than an hour, while we read a chapter from one of the gospels and explained to them the general truths of Christianity. When they were told of the incarnation of Christ, they seemed more than ever interested, and asked several questions about it. They said this subject is entirely new to us, but we think it is very good. There were no schools in this village, and we found but one man able to read; we gave him a gospel and some tracts, which he promised to read to the villagers.

The people told us that there was a pundit belonging to the village, but we could not get a sight of him, although we took some trouble to do so. One man promised to find him and come with him to my tent, but neither of them came.

Returned to our tents at 9 o'clock; found breakfast waiting, after which we started for a village about one and a half miles off, but found most of the men at work in their fields; talked a few minutes to several persons whom we found loitering about the village; gave a gospel to an old grey headed, deaf Pandit, who could read a little; left for another village near by, called Niyánat, but got no one to listen to us. As we were not far from another village we went to it. At the entrance we stopped to examine one of their gods, placed upon a square mound of earth, which was covered with flowers and grain of various kinds, offerings to the deity. While we were standing, several persons drawn by curiosity came to us. I inquired the name of their god, and of what use he was to the village. They replied, "it is Mahadev, he is the protector of our village, and we get blessings in every way by worshipping him." I insisted strongly that it was a stone, and they as strongly that it was a god. I told them that it could not hear, nor see, nor walk, and that it was lifeless and senseless; that it could not avert one evil from them, nor procure one blessing for them, and therefore they had nothing to hope or fear from it. This they would not believe. As the sun was now shining with intense heat, I told them to come with me under the shade of a large Neem tree which was near, and I would tell them about the true Protector of their village; Him from whom they derive every blessing. They immediately brought a small bedstead for a seat. As I was able to talk but little, I asked Madárá to read a part of Christ's sermon on the Mount, and explain to them the character of God, his holiness, his justice, goodness, and truth; also the character of man, his wickedness by nature and practice. He concluded by explaining to them the way of salvation through Christ. Dhoukal also spoke to them for some time, about the folly and wickedness of worshipping idols. Thus more than forty persons, for the first time, listened to the gospel with a good degree of interest.

The people were mostly farmers; they had no schools, I asked them why they did not get a schoolmaster to teach their children? They said, "How can we pay so much?" I asked them if they thought three rupees [a dollar and a half] per month, a great sum? They said, "Yes, for so poor people as we are; our children will be farmers, and what profit will it be for them to read?" When we told them we must go, they urged us to stay longer and tell them more about our religion. We left some tracts, and told them that they contained an account of our religion. Reached our tents early in the afternoon, well jaded. At 5 o'clock, we started for our next encampment, five miles distant. The fields most of the way were covered with excellent wheat; the farmers were busily engaged in watering it. Met several fakírs on their way from Allahabad to Matra.

Dec. 18.—Went this morning to Kalulí, a village containing 600 people. Had a large audience; read a portion of the sacred Scriptures, and made a general explanation of the plan of salvation. They listened with the greatest attention, and said they knew it was very foolish to worship idols. Here, as elsewhere, we found no schools. One man came saying, "I can read, give me a book." He made sorry work in attempting to read our books. I asked for their pandit; a man ran to call him. He was within hearing, and had been listening to what was said; but was very reluctant to come forward in his true character, but the people forced him to come to us. He was very ignorant, and could not read; he could repeat some Mantis or Sloks, [verses] which he had committed to memory. Surely the blind here is leading the blind. When told that all he was teaching was false, and that he did it only to get his food, he confirmed it with a mournful countenance, and said "Sahib, what can I do? If I do not this, my only work, I shall die." As we were coming away, we gave several tracts to the head man of the village. He said he would make the pandit learn to read them to the villagers, and at the same time, looking at him, told him if he attempted any more of his nonsense in the village, he would give him a sound beating. He promised he would not. These villagers seem the most free from prejudice and cavilling of any I have seen in India.

In the afternoon, went to a large village near by (Bagháimá) composed of weavers and farmers. Madara and Dhoukal preached to about fifteen persons. Found an old grey-headed fakír, who had lived here for the last four years; he was seated cross-legged, almost entirely naked, upon the ground, which had been plastered with cow-dung to purify it; his face was covered with ashes of the same substance; before him was placed a small table about six inches high, covered with idols of brass, iron work and stone, with a number of small brass cups and spoons; he was stirring something in one of the cups, and muttering something which I could not understand, except now and then the name of his god, Rám. As I approached near him, he beckoned to me not to come upon the purified ground. If I had done so I would have polluted him and all his gods too; so I stood upon unholy ground and asked him what he was doing. He said, "I am worshipping." What are you worshipping, I asked. I am worshipping these gods, he said, pointing to them. How many gods are you worshipping? I again asked. Very many, he said, mentioning the names of several, as Rám, Krishen, Mahadev, &c., &c.—don't you see them here before you? Do you call this a god? I said, stooping down and putting my finger upon a little brass idol; (this I did, not thinking of polluting it.) He said, it is, and immediately gave it to me, and broke off conversation in order to purify himself for having touched the idol after I had laid my finger upon it. I then told him that there is but one God and but one (avatar) incarnation of him, viz., Jesus Christ the only Saviour of sinners. He seemed very impatient while listening to these things, and said with much emphasis, "Here is my Jesus Christ and Saviour," pointing to his idols. We left this old hardened idolator, grieving for the hardness of his heart and the deep delusion to which he is subject.

Dec. 19.—Encamped near Birpore or Brave Village. Soon after one of the villagers came complaining of the oppression of the land owner. He said, "He takes away our grain, cuts down our trees, brings in false accounts against us, and oppresses us so much that we will all die, unless you will condescend in your great clemency to give an order in favour of your poor slaves." I told him I was very sorry for him and his village, but that it was not in my power to help them. This he would not believe, but insisted that I was an officer of the government, and that no one would dare to do different from what I would command. I told him that I had come to speak to them of spiritual and heavenly things, not of earthly, and if he would be still, we would tell him about the only true religion. By this time quite a crowd had collected, to whom we preached the gospel. In speaking about the absurdity of bathing in the Ganges in order to purify the soul, one man said he did not for his part see any good from it, for "I know people who have been bathing all their lives, and they still tell lies, deceive, and quarrel, and do all kind of wickedness." I assured him that he was reasoning correctly; that the only way to know the tree is by the fruit; and I hoped that not only he, but all of them would apply this true test to all their religious observances.

Before we left our tents for the evening march, a man came from one of the villages, who had heard us preach in the morning, and wished us to come and explain to the villagers more fully what we had told them in the morning. He said what they heard had made them think a great deal, but that they did not agree among themselves as to what had been told them. Madárá and Dhoukal went and explained more perfectly the way of life to about twelve persons. I saw nothing that led me to think they were not entirely sincere in making this request. We left soon, and a little after sundown found our tents near two villages in a beautiful mangoe grove. The full moon was just rising from behind a grove of palm trees as I went to the nearest village, to say a few words to the people about the way of salvation; nearly a hundred people assembled. In attempting to show the folly of worshipping idols, I was interrupted by a Brahman, who continued to trouble me all the time. He was ignorant, impudent and exceedingly vain, and I had but little satisfaction in this attempt to show the people the truth.

Dec. 20.—Early this morning encamped near Nawab Gange, and preached in a village near by, called Nuni Pore; the people, simple-minded and desirous of knowing the truth. As we were leaving, a rather silly Brahman came and requested that we would say nothing more to the people about these things, for he was afraid they would beat him. The people wanted to give us food, and requested that one might come and live with them, in order to teach them more about our religion. I do not believe they were sincere in making this request, and very much doubt whether a shilling could have been raised in the whole village to secure a good faithful catechist.

Dec. 21.—This morning encamped not far from Beg, a large village, of mostly farmers, but with a much larger proportion of Brahmans than usual. I went to the chief place of resort in the village, asked a man to give me a seat, and sent two others to call the villagers. They soon began to assemble, when Dhoukal read and explained the parable of the Prodigal Son. Madará followed, setting forth the general truths of the gospel, and concluded by showing the folly of idolatry.

While going to my tent I met five fakírs; they had come from Benares, and were going to Matra, and from that place to Budrinath. They appeared unwilling to talk with me, and were exceedingly filthy and stupid. When told that it was wrong for them to wander about the country, deceiving the people and getting their food for nothing, they confessed it, but said, 'What can we do?' In the evening, encamped near a small village called Hátipore. Dhoukal and I went to the village; he talked a little while to thirty persons, who listened with good attention.

22d.—Sabbath, about sunrise, started for a village about one and a-half miles distant, called Awaspore; spoke a few minutes to about forty persons. Found a schoolmaster teaching a school: when all were present he had four boys. This is the first school I have found in all the villages I have visited. Left Madara to preach to them, while Dhoukal and I went to another village and succeeded in collecting together between thirty and forty persons, who listened with apparent interest and patience, for some of them we had called back when on their way to their fields. The people seemed very free from prejudice. Arrived at our tents well tired. In the afternoon Madara preached to an audience collected about our tents. At evening, saw a Mohammedan fakír; he lived in a little mud hut by the side of the road; was a man thirty-four years of age; he said he had abandoned the world, and had no desire for wealth or honour, and that he spent much of his time in prayer and meditation. He expected salvation, he said, through the mercy of God and the intercession of the Prophet. I attempted to show him the only way of life, through Jesus, but I fear I left him without making much impression upon his mind. Christians should pray more, not only for the heathen, but for the followers of the False Prophet.

CHINA: NINGPO MISSION.

LETTERS OF THE REV. A. W. LOOMIS.—NO. I.

Introductory—State Religion of China.

I propose to give some account of the religions and the popular superstitions of the Chinese. The subject has been spoken of by others, and full accounts are given of it in some books. Yet a general view of it in a few letters will not be without interest and value, it may be supposed, in the sight of many readers.

A stranger going to China, and mingling with the people, might, unless he gave particular attention to this subject, live among them a long time without noticing any diversity in their religious belief or forms of worship, for he would find them apparently not much unlike in these respects. He would find all enslaved by the same superstitious fears, practising the same or similar ceremonies, and employing now a priest with a head shaved of all its hair, and now one with a head but partly shaved; going to worship in one temple or another, as might be convenient; all patronizing the fortune-tellers, all worshipping ancestors, with household gods and daily forms of worship the same in every dwelling and shop. There are, however, three principal sects, of distinct origin and different creeds; they are termed Confucionists, Taouists, and Buddhists. Each of these must be considered before the reader decides whether the Chinese need the gospel, or whether they already have a religion that is good enough; and he will then be able also to form some opinion of the difficulties in the way of their receiving the truth. Though the Chinese are the most civilized of the heathen nations, and in some of the arts excel all other nations, yet it will be seen that with all the aids that they have possessed, with a written language, with their philosophers, whose teachings in many respects are good and useful, and with multitudes of men who devote their whole lives to study, they are as far as possible from the truth as revealed in the Scriptures, their morals bad, and the whole nation as far from the kingdom of heaven as any of the savage tribes.

Before considering the three leading sects, I will devote a little space to that which is termed "the state religion," and the rites which are performed at the capitol and by the emperor. It will be seen that the emperor, who claims to be the celestial sovereign, son of heaven, infinite in knowledge and complete in virtue, who himself is worshipped by the people, is but a poor deluded worshipper of false gods; and that from the sovereign to the beggar all are wholly given to idolatry.

In a book entitled "The Middle Kingdom," we find this statement:—"There is a state religion in China of very ancient date, which has undergone few modifications in its general features, during the long succession of monarchs, and still retains much of its primitive simplicity. It does not consist of doctrines which are to be taught, learned, and believed, but of rites and ceremonies; it is entirely a bodily service, and its ritual is contained in the statistics and code of the empire. The objects of state worship are chiefly things, although persons are also included. There are three grades of sacrifices, the great, medium, and inferior, collectively called Riun sz, the crowd of sacrifices. The objects to which the great sacrifices are offered are only four, viz: tien, the heavens or sky, called the imperial concave expanse; ti, the earth, likewise dignified with the appellation imperial; tai miau, or great temple of ancestors, in which the tablets of deceased monarchs are placed; and lastly, the shiĕ tsih, or gods of the land and grain, the special patrons of each dynasty. * * *

"The medium sacrifices are offered to eight objects; viz. the sun, or "great light," the moon, or "night light," the manes of the emperors, kings of former dynasties, Confucius, the ancient patrons of agriculture and silk weaving, the gods of heaven, earth, and the passing year.

"The inferior sacrifices are offered to the ancient patrons of the healing art, and innumerable spirits of deceased philanthropists, eminent statesmen, martyrs to virtue, &c.; clouds, rain, wind, and thunder; the five celebrated mountains, four seas, and four rivers; famous hills, and great water courses, flags, gods of cannon, gates, queen goddess of earth, the north pole, and many other things. * * *

"The personages who assist the emperor in his worship of the four superior objects, and perform most of the ceremonies, belong to the imperial clan and the Board of Rites: but while they go through with the ceremony, he, as pontifex maximus, refuses to pay the same homage that he demands of all who approach him, and puts off heaven with three kneelings and nine profound bows. When he worships heaven, he wears robes of a blue colour, in allusion to the sky; and when he worships earth, he puts on yellow to represent the clay of this earthly clod; so likewise he wears red for the sun, and pale white for the moon. The princes, nobles, and officers who assist, are clad in their usual court dresses, but no priests or women are admitted, except at the worship of Yuenfi, the goddess of silk manufacture.

"There exists in China only one temple consecrated to heaven, and one to earth; both of them at Peking, and there also the annual sacrifices at the solstices are offered. The temple of the sun is east, and that of the moon west of the city, and at the equinoxes a regulus, or prince of the imperial clan, is commissioned to perform the requisite ceremonies, and offer the appointed sacrifices.* * The sacrifices consist of calves and bullocks, sheep or pigs, and the offerings of silks. Both are brought into the temple on chargers, not killed before or on the altar, but laid out ready dressed, in proper order. The custom of presenting cooked sacrifices is general in Chinese worship: no garlands are placed on the victim when its life is taken, nor is the blood sprinkled on any particular spot or article.* * * Heavy chastisements await any of the common people or the unauthorized, who should presume to state their wants to high heaven, or worship these objects of imperial adoration; strangulation or banishment, according to the demerits of the case, would be their retribution. The ignobile vulgus of China may worship stocks and stones in almost any form they please, but death awaits them if they attempt to join the son of heaven, the vicegerent of heaven and earth, in his adoration to the supposed sources of his power."

It seems to us a very strange thing that the people should not be permitted to worship the same objects that are worshipped by their emperor. This prohibition is based upon the supposition that the supreme in heaven may be worshipped only by the supreme on earth; and another design in it is to magnify as much as possible the position and character of the ruler of the nation, and cause his elevation above all other men to appear as great as possible. The people, or some of the people, do nevertheless worship heaven and earth, and they will worship anything which they suppose can help them. While the law forbids all, except the few especially provided for the service, from worshipping the objects sacrificed in the rites of the state religion, the emperor himself receives divine honours from his officers and people, and no person will ever hear a Chinaman speak of his emperor but with the most profound respect. In all papers in which the name of the emperor is written it invariably stands at the head of the column and above every other name, and above the other columns. In many of the temples, in the shrine which contains the idol, at one side and a little in advance of it is a tablet on which is inscribed in gilt letters one of the titles of the emperor, viz: "Ten thousand years, or the one of ten thousand years." Thus worship is rendered to the emperor along with the image. The same tablet is to be seen in the Mohammedan mosque at Ningpo; this, they say, is only to show that they are good and loyal subjects. There are certain religious acts which government officers in virtue of their official station are required to perform, so that should they become Christians they must needs resign their situations, unless the laws could be modified in their favour. At the annual ceremonies of Leih Chun, in the beginning of spring, certain of the officers have to participate in idolatrous rites, such as sacrificing the ox, and offering sacrifices to the god of the passing year, the patron of agriculture, &c. At times of excessive droughts or excessive rains the people expect that the officers of their department or district will go in state to the temples and implore the gods for relief from the evil, and by proclamations require all the people to observe a partial fast, and prohibit the slaying of animals till the gods are appeased and the punishment withdrawn.

At the solstices, equinoxes, new and full moons, the magistrate of the district, accompanied by the officers below him, is required to repair to the temple of Ching Hwang, the tutelar divinity of the city, and there sacrifice to him and to the gods of the land and grain. On the occurrence of any public calamity, real or imaginary, the officers are required to engage in religious ceremonies in order to avert it. There are many things that will oppose the progress of the Christian religion in China, but the magnitude of these obstacles will be found only as we come upon them: and it is doubtless wisely ordered that we should not see them all, or know their full force at the outset of our work, for then our courage might fail. But when we have gained confidence by witnessing the reduction of one obstacle, others are allowed gradually to be developed, and we at length are enabled to go on with unshaken trust in God, against whom no powers or machinations can prevail.

A. W. L.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDUCATION IN INDIA.

A correspondent of the Louisville Herald furnishes an account of the annual examination of the Institution of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, in Calcutta. About 1000 scholars were present. Among the exercises was the reading of an essay "On some of the causes which prevent educated Hindus from embracing Christianity."

The reason which attracted especial attention was, "That with the exception of Missionaries, or such as are paid for so doing, no other Christians advise them to embrace Christianity." One of the audience was the Hon. Mr. Bethune, President of the Government Council of Education, which prohibits the use of the Bible and all Christian books in their schools and colleges, and who has been engaged for some time in getting up a female school, and stimulating others to get up similar schools on the same principle. He was so much impressed with this essay, that at the close of the examination, in some remarks before the school and the audience assembled, he said "he had been particularly struck with this essay, and asked permission to have it, in order to print it for circulation, as he was of opinion that it would not only prove useful to Hindus, but also to our own countrymen." After this, Sir William Burton, Chief Justice of Madras, addressed the school. In the course of his remarks, he said he doubted the truth of the statement in this essay; but supposing it to be true, he continued: "I am not a paid missionary, but with my whole heart I do most earnestly entreat you to embrace that religion which I have found to be my only dependence, the only ground on which I can rest my hope, and which I am sure will enlighten, and bless, and save you. You have enumerated various reasons which you say hinder you from becoming Christians, but you have omitted the chief one. Have you ever prayed to the Father of light that he would enlighten you and enable you to overcome the difficulties which you mention? Have you ever, in your whole lives, applied earnestly to God on the subject? Answer me that." So pungent an appeal from one of such high standing in a worldly point of view, is indeed a rarity. It is to be hoped that it has not been made to that audience of 1000 students, and perhaps as many spectators, in vain. May God bless it, and send it as an arrow from his own quiver to the hearts of many, both white and black, both of those who heard it and of those who may read the account of it.

NO HOPE!

In Pridden's Australia, we find the following: "Throughout all the funeral ceremonies of savage and heathen nations, the same distinguishing mark is to be observed—they are the vain devices, the miserable inventions of men, who sorrow for their departed friends as those who have no hope. Nothing, it is asserted, can awake in the breast more melancholy feelings than the funeral chants of the Australians. They are sung by a whole chorus of females of all ages, and the effect produced upon the bystanders by the wild music surpasses belief. The following is a chant, which has been heard upon several such occasions, and which, simple though it be, fully expresses the feelings of a benighted heathen mourning over the grave of a friend, whom he has lost (as he thinks) for ever:—

The young woman sings,
The old woman,
My young brother,
My young son,
In future shall I
Never see
} Again.

My young brother,
My young son,
In future shall I
Never see
} Again."

This, Christian reader, is the only consolation a heathen has in bidding a last adieu to friends on earth. Truly they have "no hope," and are "without God in the world." Imagine yourself now in their condition, without one ray of light to illumine the future, but all darkness, gloom, uncertainty, and despair, and you imagine only what would really be your situation but for your knowledge of divine revelation. It was that condition in which the missionaries, who first came to England, found our forefathers—it is the condition of all who have not heard the gospel, which brings life and immortality to light. Since it is the gospel alone which maketh us to differ from them, should we not prize it above all price? and should we not sympathize with those who have not its enlightening influence and consoling promises, to cheer and animate them through life's dreary pilgrimage?—The Commission.

INFLUENCE OF POPERY ON CIVILIZATION.

Popery reigns supreme in Spain; and no Protestant mission is allowed to interfere with its efforts in moulding the minds of the people. Such has been the influence of this "one true religion," that it is said, among all her sea-worn cliffs, from the Pyrenees to the Alps, Spain has not a single lighthouse; she has no railways, no canals, no telegraphs; and till lately there was no safety for travellers on the highways.

DONATIONS
TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS
IN MAY, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Londonderry.—Newburyport Mass 2d ch mo con 15; Portsmouth N H Mrs M C Dimick 3 $18 00
Pby of Troy.—Waterford ch 3; Troy 2d street ch 351 39 354 39
Pby of Albany.—Westminster ch Utica 54 20, less 17 for Home and Foreign Record; Princeton ch 36 73 20
Pby of Columbia.—Jewett ch 84 61, mon con colls 24 108 61

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Groveland ch 8 39; Mentz 1st ch Sab sch addl 2 50 10 89
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 2d ch 1 00

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of North River.—Wappinger's Falls ch mo con 2; Newburg N Y. John W Wells for Liberia Mission 200, Mrs Wells 50; Wappinger's Creek N Y "a friend" 100 352 00
Pby of Bedford.—South Greenburg ch 15 70
Pby of Long Island.—Smithtown L I W P Briffett 10; Sag Harbour ch 100 110 00
Pby of New York.—Wallabout ch mo con 4 02; New York First ch mo con 110 68; Madison Avenue ch mo con 21 19, Wm Baird 5; Forty-second st ch mo con 20; Brooklyn First ch mo con colls 23 50; Astoria ch James T Soutter 100; Duane st ch ann coll addl Ro Gillen 5, Infant Sab sch to ed Henrietta Romeyn Beers 6 34; Yorkville ch mo con 3 71; Williamsburg ch mo con 19 69 319 39
2d Pby of New York.—Canal st ch "a member" 20 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Mount Freedom ch 11 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—Princeton 1st ch Ladies sewing soc for Allahabad Mission 60; Freehold hold ch 29 89 00
Pby of Burlington.—Burlington ch Sab sch to ed Theo S Cuyler 12 00
Pby of West Jersey.—Cold Spring ch 25 00
Pby of Newton.—Greenwich ch 2 50
Pby of Raritan.—Flemington ch 66 50; Pleasant Grove ch 20; Lower German Valley ch 6 92 50

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Spring Garden Institute miss soc to ed Mabel King Combs among the Seminoles 30; Cohocksink ch 14 50; Philad Tenth ch "a friend" 100; Philad Sixth ch mo con 15; Philad Central ch mo con colls from May 1850 to April 1851 inclusive 176 69, Jas Campbell 10, J V Cowel 10, James Boyles 20 376 19
Pby of Newcastle.—Upper Octorara ch 10; Wilmington First ch 71; White Clay Creek and Head of Christiana chs 33 114 00
Pby of Donegal.—Strasburg ch 3; Middle Octorara ch 25 28 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Balt 2d ch children of J Harman Brown to ed Mary E Wilson 25 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Mercersburg ch col'd Sab sch 8 50; Silver Spring ch 188, annuity of James Graham dec per Jas Graham Jr 7 14, per J Mohler 4 59; Gettysburg ch 23 07; Dickinson ch 26; Carlisle ch 5 262 57
Pby of Huntingdon.—Shirleysburg ch Mrs Anne Porter 3, Mrs. Jane Templeton 2 5 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Derry and Washingtonvile chs 35, H Robinson to const self l m 30, Derry fem miss soc of which 30 to con Mrs Eleanor Russell l m 36, Washingtonville fem miss soc 30; Sunbury ch 2 133 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURG.

Pby of Blairsville.—Cherry Run ch 3; Ebenezr ch fem miss soc 2 47; Johnstown ch 100; Poke Run ch 55 68; Washington ch 44 90 206 05
Pby of Redstone.—Spring Hill and Sandy Creek chs Rev W W McLain 7; McClellandstown ch 6 61; Dunlap's Creek ch 5 25; Tyrone ch 13 45; Morgantown ch 25, Ladies sewing soc 30; Mount Pleasant ch 17 87 105 18
Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburg 2d ch mo con 36 23; Highland ch 28 64 23
Pby of Allegheny.—Cross Roads and Plain chs in part to con Rev L McAboy l m 25; Bull Creek ch fem miss soc 6 62; Centre ch 55; Concord ch 9; Muddy Creek ch 10 14 105 76
Pby of Beaver.—Bethlehem ch 20; West Middlesex ch 8; Unity ch to con Mrs Isabella Reed l m 30 40; Beaver ch 38 96 40
Pby of Erie.—Washington ch 2 34
Pby of Clarion.—Concord ch 9; Callensburg ch 1 50; Licking ch 5 67 16 17

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—West Union ch 7; Ritchietown ch 12; Upper Buffalo ch 41 27; Upper Ten Mile ch 29 66, little Elizabeth Murray 13 cts; Lower Ten Mile ch 31 37 121 43
Pby of St Clairsville.—Crab Apple ch 10; Concord ch 12 30 22 30
Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 2d ch of which 100 from fem seminary to con Rev Samuel H Shipley l d 178 93; New Hagerstown ch 27 50; Steubenville 1st ch 55, Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin "a thank offering" 12 50 273 93
Pby of New Lisbon.—East Liverpool ch 11; Salem ch fem miss soc of which 25 to ed Clement Vallandigham 100, less 1 75 for Foreign Missionary; Middle Sandy ch 21 50, less 2 for Foreign Missionary; Liberty ch 17, fem miss soc 14 75 160 50

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Zanesville.—Washington ch Sab sch 5 60

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Miami.—Lebanon O Rev J Hall 1 25
Pby of Oxford.—Bethel ch Saml Potter 5; Riley ch intst on D Dick's note 3 8 00
Pby of Sidney.—Covington ch 5 50; Mt Pleasant ch 2 7 50

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—New Albany 1st ch 120 00
Pby of Madison.—New Washington ch 5 00
Pby of Indianapolis.—New Prospect ch 4; Bethany ch 4 95; Franklin ch 14 65, Sab sch 7 35; Shelbyville ch 4 34 95
Pby of Palestine.—Pisgah ch 9 50

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Crawfordsville.—Putnamville ch 7 75; Ohio ch 1 15; Vandalia ch 2 10; Poplar Spring ch 10 25; Thorntown Ind J C 12 33 25

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—Jacksonville ch 27 00
Pby of Rock River.—Sterling ch 3 50
Pby of Wisconsin.—Milwaukie North ch Sab Sch to ed a heathen child 5 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of St. Louis.—St Louis Central ch Sab Sch to ed Mary Strother Pelt, J W Skinner and Alexander Van Court 50 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Louisville.—Louisville Chesnut St ch 46; Louisville 1st ch mo con 14 50; Owensburg ch, John Todd 5; Shiloh and Olivet chs 20 85 50
Pby of Muhlenburg.—Henderson ch 29 45
Pby of Transylvania.—Danville ch 155 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Winchester.—Fredericksburg ch 16 00
Pby of West Hanover.—Roanoke ch, "a thank-offering" for China and to con Mrs Matilda C Brown and Daughter l. m's 60, chidren of ch 2 25, Milton (a servant) 25 cts; Mercy Seat ch 2; Village ch 42 30; New Concord ch 4 59; Old Concord ch 15; Orange and Madison chs 20; Amherst ch 4 11; Cartersville Va, Rev P Harrison 20 170 50
Pby of East Hanover.—Richmond 2d ch mo con 39 29, Sab sch for colportage in France 5 38; Nottoway ch 20; Chesterfield ch 4 68 67

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Knoxville.—Knoxville 1st ch mo con colls, of which 1 35 from Sab sch 27 00

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Memphis.—Memphis Tenn, Rev D L Gray 5; Macon ch 37 30; Portersville ch 12; Mt Carmel ch ann coll, of which 25 from Rev Jas Holmes D D and family to ed James Holmes in N India 134, Sab sch 15 70, Ladies' Sewing Soc 50, in all 199 70 to con J W Hall, Edward Elim, Hosea Sherrill, J N Hall and Thos S Hall l. m's; Hickory Withe ch 52 30; Somerville ch 77 80; Brownsville ch ann coll in part 29, Rev J E Bright and lady 20, Miss Emma Bright 5, Major R F Maclin 10; Jackson ch ann coll in part 68 15, Aunt Sally Cooper 2, Sab sch 2; Denmark ch 82 10; Germantown ch 10 10 612 45
Pby of Chickasaw.—Harmony ch 13 20; Pontotoc ch 19 15; Monroe ch 2 50; Ripley ch Rev W A Gray 10; College ch ann coll 60 10, Sab sch to ed a heathen child 10, coloured members 2 50; Edmiston ch in part to con William Edmiston and Rev A W Young l. m's 54 30; Oxford ch 39 90; Lebanon ch 5; Hopewell ch 1 50; Zion ch 24 30; Willington ch 2 25; New Hope ch 5; Bethany ch 4; Chulahoma ch Mary M Wetherby (nine years old) reward of self-denial 1 50; Holly Springs ch 39 35; Charleston Mi, Rev J H Miller 5; Bellemonte Mi, Mrs M J Reid 5 304 55

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Wilton ch 37 00
Pby of South Carolina.—Spartenburg ch 27; Willington ch 20 47 00
Pby of Bethel.—Waxhaw ch 7; Lancaster ch 4; Six Mile ch 3; Hopewell ch 60; Unionville ch 15; Bethel ch 35; Catholic ch 40; Beersheba ch 13 65; Bullocks Creek ch 5 45; Yorkville ch Sab sch for Bible distribution in N India 9 192 10
Pby of Harmony.—Salem ch (L R) 31; Lebanon ch 34; Mount Zion ch 118; Williamsburg ch 74; Salem ch (B R) 119 34; Cheraw ch 204 50; Indiantown 9 50; Darlington ch 83 65; Concord ch L McFadden 10; Dr R R Durant 10 693 99
Pby of Charleston.—Charleston 2d ch mo con colls 57 36, Juv Miss Soc to ed heathen children in China and among Otoe and Omaha Indians 118 62; James' Island ch 13 68, Rev J Douglass 40, Ladies' Soc 16 50; Beech Island ch 18; Charleston coloured ch 25 289 16

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Flint River.—Pochitla ch 20 05

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Gainesville ch 155; Mesopotamia ch 10 165 00

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Vicksburgh ch (bal) 12 00
Pby of Louisiana.—New Orleans 3d ch Sab sch to ed Grace Leeds and Abby Eldridge Beatty at Tallahasse 50; Carmel ch 70, Miss'y Box at Parsonage 5, Ladies for clothing for Missions 31; Bethany ch 40 75; Jackson ch 25; Comite ch 10; Woodville ch 10 241 75

Total from churches $7210 69

LEGACIES.

Gainesville Ala, legacy of Rev J Hadden dec'd 255 47
May's Lick Ky, legacy of Thos Wallace dec'd, of which one-fifth for missions in Liberia 904 50 ——$1159 97

SEMINARIES.

Union Theol Sem'y Va, mo con colls 98 18

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Hebrew 5 00
A Friend 10 00
Annapolis Md, Capt C K Stribling 50 00
"N H D" for education in Liberia 50 00
Boston Mass, Geo Johnston 8 75
Amity ch N Y, for sup of Rev Jas Wilson 17 00
Harrisburg Pa, A Burnette 1 00
——— Rev A J Witherspoon 50 00
——— Doctor James M 1 50
——— Mi. Richard Mason 5 00 ——198 25

Total receipts in May $8667 09

Wm. RANKIN, Jr. Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Slaterville ch Donegal Pby, one Box Clothing for Creek mission at Kowetah 55 00
Ladies' Sew Soc East Hampton ch L I, one Box do 38 25
Ladies of Chelsea ch N Y, one Bundle do — —
Ladies of Scrub Grass ch Pa, one Box do 118 95
Ladies of Blairsville ch Pa, one Box do 50 75

NOTICES.

Letters relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to Walter Lowrie, Esq., or the Rev. John C. Lowrie, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Letters relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to William Rankin, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

Payments of Moneys for the Board may also be made at
Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

Boxes of Clothing, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

The Foreign Missionary.—Newspaper edition.—Ten Copies for One Dollar, or Five Copies for Fifty Cents; Postage paid by the Publishers. Each number will contain an attractive engraving.

Pamphlet edition.—Twenty-five Cents a year. Copies of the Pamphlet edition, when desired, are sent free of charge to Donors of Five Dollars and upwards, and to Ministers whose churches contribute to the funds of the Board.

Letters relating to this newspaper, should be addressed to "The Foreign Missionary," Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Overland Letters.—Letters for the Overland Mail, to India, Siam, and China, should reach the Mission House in time for the steamer which sails nearest the first of each month. Postage: assessed according to weight, at the rate from New York of forty-five cents for half an ounce, This may be paid, by sending post-office stamps to the Mission House, or in other ways.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. John Leyburn, D. D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. Joseph P. Engles, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. Engles, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. Mitchell, M. D. Treasurer.

THE LATE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

It is matter of no little gratification to those to whom are committed the responsibility and labours of conducting the Boards, to know that their work meets the approbation of the Church, and especially as represented in its highest judicatory—the General Assembly. At no previous time in its career has this Board been able to report results so extensive and favorable, and never, we believe, has the Board received more fully the approbation of the Church. The Assembly found much "cause for gratitude to God, in the success with which He had crowned the wise and zealous efforts of the Board during the year," as will be seen by the subjoined resolutions. No changes were recommended in the present plan of conducting its operations. A memorial was received from the Presbytery of West Lexington, suggesting that the Board of Publication establish a branch in the city of Louisville, and that the Board of Missions be transferred to the same city, or a second Board, with full powers, be established there. The Assembly resolved that it was inexpedient to take the proposed action in reference to these Boards at present.

A resolution was adopted directing the Board of Publication to place in the Libraries of each of the Theological Seminaries or the Synods of our Church, a copy of each of their standard publications as they are issued. A similar resolution had been adopted at a previous Assembly, and to some extent acted upon. As it is often difficult to forward a single volume to remote points, it would greatly facilitate the carrying out of this end, if the proper persons in the Seminaries will inform the Board what disposition to make of the volumes to which they may be entitled.

The functions of the Committee on the Book of Sacred Music were transferred to this Board, with directions to complete and publish the work as soon as practicable.

The following are the resolutions adopted on the Annual Report:

Dr. Brown, from the Special Committee, to whom had been referred the printed report, presented the following resolutions, which were adopted, viz:

1. Resolved, That the Assembly find much cause for gratitude to God, in the success with which he has crowned the wise and zealous efforts of the Board during the past year.

2. Resolved, That inasmuch as the design of the Assembly in reference to this Board is to call forth the resources of the Presbyterian Church in supplying the Church and the world, as far as possible, with a sound religious literature; and its operations have met thus far the Assembly's expectations to a gratifying extent; the Board deserves the liberal and zealous support of the Synods, Presbyteries, and churches of the Presbyterian Church, and should receive at their hands a preference over other institutions which profess to have kindred objects in view.

3. Resolved, That this Assembly learn with pleasure the success which has attended the publication of the Presbyterian Sabbath-school Visitor, and recommend it to the hearty support of all the churches under its care.

4. Resolved, That in order to bring the publications of this Board more fully to the notice of the public generally, and the churches under the care of the General Assembly, and to furnish increased facilities for obtaining them, and thereby extending encouragement to colportage, it is recommended to the Board, by such arrangements as may seem best to them, to place a full supply of their publications at such points of general access as they may select.

ABSTRACT OF THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

The Annual Report of the Board of Publication, presented to the General Assembly during the late sessions at St. Louis, gave a detailed account of the operations of the preceding year, of which we can insert but a brief outline.

During the year, the Board have added to their catalogue 19 new Books, of which they have printed 33,800 copies; 12 new 12mo Tracts, of which 56,000 copies have been printed; 5 new 18mo Tracts and Catechisms, of which 10,000 copies have been printed. They have also printed 20,000 copies of the Family Almanac for 1851, and 20,000 Psalms and Hymns, diamond 64mo. The whole number of copies of new publications issued during the year is 139,800. The new editions of Books and Tracts printed from stereotype plates, amount to 290,500 copies. Total number of Books and Tracts published during the year 430,300; being an increase of 46,800 copies over the issues of last year.

RECEIPTS.

The Report shows a large increase over the receipts of former years. The donations to the colporteur fund, from which the salaries and donations of colporteurs are paid, are larger by more than fifty per cent. than those of last year, whilst the sales exceed those of last year by $17,500. The sales for the year ending 1849, were $29,000; for the year 1850, $42,000; and for the year just closed, $60,000. Total receipts of the year from all sources, $80,987 52.

DONATIONS.

The Board have been enabled, to some extent, to respond to numerous solicitations for donations. When the churches shall have furnished the adequate funds, much more may be accomplished in the gratuitous circulation of books and tracts. There have been granted to needy ministers 1136 volumes; feeble churches 734 volumes; Sabbath-schools 1301 volumes; Hospitals and other Humane Institutions 171 volumes; Literary and Theological Institutions 243 volumes; Ships of War and Military Stations 222 volumes; individuals for gratuitous distribution 717 volumes, in addition to 250,000 pages of tracts. Donations have also been made through the Board of Foreign Missions, of Books and Tracts to the amount of $500, and by colporteurs of 5525 volumes and 528,154 pages of Tracts.

COLPORTEURS AND THEIR FIELDS.

The whole number of colporteurs employed in the course of the year has been one hundred and twenty-five. Their fields of labour have occupied twenty-four States, as follows:—Connecticut, 5; New York, 17; New Jersey, 7; Pennsylvania, 13; Maryland, 2; District of Columbia, 1; Virginia, 3; North Carolina, 9; South Carolina, 3; Georgia, 7; Florida, 2; Louisiana, 1; Texas, 4; Arkansas, 1; Mississippi, 1; Tennessee, 7; Kentucky, 5; Ohio, 22; Indiana, 8; Illinois, 4; Iowa, 1; Michigan, 1; Missouri, 1; Wisconsin, 1.

The Synods of Virginia and Pittsburgh still conduct their own operations under a distinct organization, but are practically auxiliary to the Board.

AGGREGATES OF COLPORTEUR LABOUR.

The following are the aggregates of the labours of the one hundred and twenty-five Colporteurs:—Time spent, thirty years, four months, and sixteen days; families visited, 50,890; conversed or prayed with, 22,151; families found destitute of the Bible, 1898; Presbyterian families visited, without the Confession of Faith, 2237; volumes sold by Colporteurs, 58,492; volumes granted by Colporteurs, 5525; pages of tracts granted by Colporteurs, 528,154.

The results of the year show that the Board has never before been in so prosperous a condition. Its publications are finding favour amongst almost all who love the truth as it is in Jesus. The success with which a gracious Providence has thus far crowned our labours is far greater than our anticipations; whilst the prospects for the future are full of hope. The Board feel called upon to thank God, and take courage.

GRATIFYING TOKENS.

A recent tour to the General Assembly, which carried us through various parts of the Church, and gave extensive opportunities for learning the minds of brethren from all sections of our Zion, has shown us more fully than ever that the Board of Publication has been greatly gaining on the interest and affections of the people. We can observe a large advance in this respect even within the last year or two. Everywhere there seems to be a desire for the circulation of our publications, and much gratification is expressed at the large plans and views which it is believed the Board are adopting. Let brethren in all parts of the land remember, that in common with all other benevolent institutions, this Board requires pecuniary means for carrying on its work, and that whilst other publishing societies receive as high as $100,000 and upwards in donations annually, the Board of Publication has not yet received more than some $12,000, or $13,000 in annual donations. Increased liberality will secure increased results—and whatever is done should be done at once. The seeking out and recommending for appointment, suitable colporteurs—pious, judicious, industrious, persevering men, will also greatly conduce to the advancement of the work. The times, the country, and the church earnestly demand that a sanctified literature should be universally diffused, and that furnished by the Board seems to be generally regarded as such as the circumstances require.

BOOK OF SACRED MUSIC.

It will be perceived that the General Assembly discharged the Special Committee appointed by a previous Assembly to prepare a Book of Sacred Music adapted to our own hymn book, and suited for general use in the churches; and that the functions of that Committee, together with the materials they had prepared, were transferred to the Board of Publication, with directions to complete and publish the work.

The Board will use every means to carry out the directions of the Assembly with as little delay as possible; but it should be borne in mind, that the accomplishment of this work will require no little time and labour. The excellent Committee of the Assembly who have had this matter in hand for several years, have encountered many difficulties in obtaining the use of copyright tunes, &c., and these difficulties have not been removed, but are now transferred to the Board. Extensive correspondence and conference must be held with the owners of copyrights before even the preliminary arrangements for making the book are completed; and then when the list has been made as perfect as possible, it must be put into the hands of an editor, who must spend probably months in arranging the harmonies and preparing the work for publication. We mention these things that the churches may be patient, if the book should not make its appearance quite so soon as might be desired.

DOCTRINAL OBJECTIONS MET BY COLPORTAGE.

Among the other important results of colportage, we must not forget the disabusing the minds of many who attend our own churches, of prejudices and misconceptions in regard to our doctrines. In addition to a timely word of explanation sometimes given, colporteurs often succeed in leaving in families where there are such misconceptions, books adapted to enlighten them in the faith as held by their own branch of the Church of Christ. The following will serve as a specimen:

"I felt myself however sometimes compelled," writes a colporteur, "to combat with the opponents of our Calvinistic creed. On one occasion entering a house, the members of which all attended the Presbyterian Church, but were not members, I sold a Confession of Faith to the gentleman; his lady inquired what the name of the book was; and on being told, after turning over its pages in a hasty manner, exclaimed, 'I never could allow that book to be under my roof—it should not be read, and it ought never to have been printed.'

"What was I to do? The doctrine of our Church, as far as election is concerned, was attacked. After some little conversation on the subject, I found that she and her son charged our Confession with teaching that God passed a decree which put the fall of Adam beyond the possibility of escape. I told her if the chapter in the Confession which treated on the fall of man said so, I was as loathe to believe it as she was; and if she could find it so, I would condemn the doctrine. On turning to the 6th chapter how surprised was she to read—'This their sin God was pleased, according to his wise and holy counsel, to permit.' Here was a fact of which they never heard before, and which gave them no little satisfaction. After answering several objections adduced against the doctrine of election, especially against its demoralizing tendency, and in favour of election on the ground of foreseen faith and good works, which was easily done by a reference to Ephesians i. 4, and 2 Timothy i. 9, I left them, but not until they willingly purchased the Confession of Faith, Fisher's Catechism, and the Great Supper—all mighty weapons to maintain the doctrines of Calvinism."

PERMANENT EFFECTS OF GOOD BOOKS.

One of the advantages belonging to the press is, that its issues continue to do good long after the living voice has ceased to be heard. A colporteur's labours are often felt through the happy influence of the books he has circulated, long after he has left the field of his toils. A person lately in the service of the Board says:—"An amiable pastor of a Reformed Dutch church writes, '—— supplied my people with different publications of the Presbyterian Board about three years ago, and at this time I think I can trace the beneficial effects of his labours.'"

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE.

In order to meet the wants of those who may wish to supply themselves with the publications of the Board, a descriptive catalogue has been issued, giving the character of each of the books. It contains an alphabetical list of the publications, a classification of them into the "Minister's Library," the "Congregational Library," and the "Sabbath-school Library;" a description of the books, list of tracts, catechisms, &c. It is convenient for reference, and the evidence it affords of the progress and prosperity of the Board is truly gratifying and encouraging. Our churches can now procure a good congregational library of 134 volumes for $45.66 cash, or in cheaper binding for $42.00, and a good Sabbath-school library of 87 volumes for $16.39 cash, or in cheaper binding for $13.19. A correspondent suggests that churches make their pastors a present of the minister's library. It contains 33 volumes, and may be had for about $20.00 cash.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

We would very respectfully call the attention of pastors and sessions in the Synod of New Jersey to the fact that at the meeting of that body held in Elizabethtown last October, the Board of Publication was included among the objects embraced in their schedule for systematic collections, and that the months of July and August were appropriated to this Board. We earnestly hope that this order of the Synod may be complied with. The present unprecedented state of prosperity of the Board gives great encouragement for appropriating funds to its aid, and shows what might be done if our churches generally and liberally co-operated in carrying out its designs. A very wide field is opening; a great work has already been accomplished, and a far greater one lies before us; will Presbyterians not come forward cheerfully and generously to aid their own Board in doing this important and glorious work? As it would be impracticable for us to reach more than a very few of the churches by an agency, within the two months specified, we trust pastors and sessions will not wait for any such appliances from without, but that they will at once make the collection, and forward it to the Treasurer of the Board. As but a small number of the churches in the Synod of New Jersey have ever before been called on for a contribution for this specific object, we trust that the reasonableness and propriety of our request may commend itself to all.

NOTICES OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Lessons of Life and Death. A memorial of Sarah Ball, who died in her eighteenth year. By Elizabeth Richie. 18mo. 144 pages. Price, muslin gilt, 28 cents; half-roan, 22 cents.

We have seldom read a more charming narrative of youthful piety, than that contained in this little volume. The subject of the memoir was endowed with remarkable intellectual gifts, and with those social qualities which gave her unusual attractions, whilst to those was superadded that greatest of all adornments, the ornament of true, simple-hearted piety. The narrative is beautifully written, too—something in the Legh Richmond style, and altogether we have not for a long time met with a little book which strikes us as better adapted to afford pleasure and profit wherever it may be read. The fine taste of its typographical execution should not be overlooked, in considering its more important merits.

NEW TRACTS.

What think ye of Christ? 4 pp.

The Sympathy of Jesus. 8 pp.

Communion with God, the best succour in the Worst Seasons. 8 pp.

Our readers will no doubt be gratified to find that the Board are adding to their excellent series of doctrinal tracts, so many that are experimental and practical. The present three are of this description—full of gospel truth, presented in an earnest, pointed manner, well calculated to arrest attention, and leave abiding impressions for good. Some churches have adopted a plan for the monthly distribution of the Board's tracts, and are greatly pleased with its success. Will not other churches do likewise?

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF MAY.

Presbytery of Steuben.
1st Mentz ch per Rev G C Heckman thro' S D Powell Treasurer Bd Miss	1 00
Presbytery of Hudson.
Goodwill ch from the Fem Benev Soc per Rev Wm Blain	13 37
Presbytery of Bedford.
South East ch 9 75; Plattskill 97 cts per Rev Wm J McCord	10 72
Presbytery of New York.
Williamsburg ch 15; Greenbush ch 1; S S Myrick 3	19 00
Presbytery of Raritan.
Solebury ch per Rev Wm H Kirk to const self and wife hon mems	60 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
2d ch per Mr Stille addl 16; 10th ch addl per A W Mitchell M D 41 78, and a "Friend" thro' the pastor per A W Mitchell M D 25	82 78
Presbytery of Philadelphia 2d.
Neshaminy ch fem tract soc per Rev Jacob Belville	10 00
Presbytery of Donegal.
Middle Octorara ch by the lad benev soc to const Rev Solomon McNair hon mem	30 00
Presbytery of Northumberland.
Pennsdale ch per Rev L W Chapman	3 00
Presbytery of Columbus.
Columbus ch 17; Kingston ch 18; per Thomas Moodie Treasurer	35 00
Presbytery of Marion.
Milford ch per Thomas Moodie treasurer 6 20, Mt Gilead ch per Rev S Brown 3 85, Canaan ch 9 12	19 17
Presbytery of Richland.
Ashland ch 3; Richland ch 1; Middleton ch 1, per Thomas Moodie treasurer; Jeromeville ch per W W Colmary 3	8 00
Presbytery of Wooster.
Wayne ch per Thomas Moodie treasurer	2 25
Presbytery of Chilicothe.
1st ch per Thomas Caruthers	29 00
Presbytery of Concord.
Rev John E McPherson	40
Presbytery of Montgomery.
Beaver Creek ch 4 25; Covington ch 2 50, per Rev Urias Powers treasurer	6 75
Presbytery of Georgia.
Waynesville ch per Rev Henry K Rees	5 00
Presbytery of Western District.
Mount Carmel ch 31; Portersville ch 10 to const J T Hall hon mem	41 00
Presbytery of South Alabama.
Fairview ch per Rev D D Anderson	10 00
Presbytery of St. Clairsville.
Crab Apple ch per Rev S Brown	13 55
Presbytery of Zanesville.
Zanesville ch 5, Jackson ch 2	7 00
Presbytery of Miami.
Springfield ch (to const Rev Burt l m) 36 Dayton ch (to const Rev Dr Gurly and lady l ms) 61 47 per Rev S Brown	97 47
Presbytery of Ebenezer.
1st ch Covington per Rev S Brown	18 56
MISCELLANEOUS.
W W Rice Esq 25; a "Lady" 5; a Friend per John D Thorpe	30 00
Mrs Ruth Terbill to const Rev Robert W Dunlap an hon mem	30 00
A "Friend" Louisiana per Thomas Henderson Esq	1 50
Graceham ch Frederick co Md per John Stewart	2 50
Rev R J Hall Lebanon Ohio	1 25
Total	$588 27

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ——, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

In May last, by the Presbytery of Rock River, the Rev. John Ustick was installed pastor of the Willow Creek Church, Illinois.

On the 14th of April, the Presbytery of Lake ordained Mr. S. C. Logan as an evangelist.

On the 16th of April, the Presbytery of Winchester ordained Mr. Edward Kennedy with a view to his subsequent installation as pastor of Prince William church.

On the 16th of April, the Presbytery of Winchester ordained Mr. F. N. Whaley as an evangelist.

On the 18th of May, the Rev. Samuel H. Hay was installed pastor of the church at Camden, South Carolina, by the Presbytery of Harmony.

On the 22d of May, by the Presbytery of New Brunswick, Mr. A. Gosman was ordained and installed pastor of the church at Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

On the 15th of May, by the Presbytery of Newcastle, the Rev. A. A. Hodge was installed pastor of the church of Kirkwood, Maryland.

On the 3d of June, by the Presbytery of Newcastle, Mr. James M. Crowell was ordained and installed pastor of the church of Upper Octorara, Pennsylvania.

On the 23d of May, Mr. Charles F. Williams was ordained as an evangelist by the Presbytery of Nashville.

On the 28th of May, the Presbytery of Northumberland ordained Mr. Samuel A. Gayley and Mr. William Simonton, and subsequently installed Mr. Simonton pastor of the church of Northumberland, and appointed a committee to instal Mr. Gayley pastor of the church of Great Island.

On the 1st of June, the Rev. S. J. P. Anderson was installed pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of St. Louis, Missouri.

DISSOLUTION OF PASTORAL RELATION.

The Presbytery of Rock River, at its meeting in May last, dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. H. B. Gardiner and the church of Galena, and the Rev. O. Park and the church of Albany.

In April last, by the Presbytery of Newton, the pastoral relation between the Rev. D. X. Junkin, D. D., and the church of Greenwich, New Jersey, was dissolved.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. R. L. Stanton and the Second Presbyterian church, New Orleans, has, by mutual consent of parties, been dissolved by the Presbytery of Louisiana.

By the Presbytery of Northumberland, at their meeting in April last, the pastoral relation between the Rev. John H. Grier and Rev. D. M. Barber, and the church at Pine Creek, was dissolved.

CALLS.

The Rev. John M. Worrell has accepted a call from the church of Oxford, Ohio.

The Rev. Casper R. Gregory has received a call from the church at Oneida, New York.

The Rev. John S. Hays of Aberdeen, Mississippi, has accepted a call to the Louisville church, Mississippi. Correspondents will remember the change.

CHANGE OF ECCLESIASTICAL RELATION.

The congregational church of Roscoe, Illinois, have placed themselves under the care of the Old-school Presbytery of Rock River.

The Rev. James Lillie, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church of Mansfield, New Jersey, has joined the Baptist denomination.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Rev. Robert C. Matthews, a son of the late Dr. Matthews, has received and accepted the appointment of agent for the collection of the funds now due, and to raise subscriptions for the further endowment of the Theological Seminary at New Albany. His field is Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri.

The Rev. Dr. Wood has resigned his Professorship in the Seminary at New Albany, with a view to entering upon a general agency for the Board of Education in the West.

The Rev. A. B. Quay has removed from Indiana, Pennsylvania, to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Andrew McMillan, of Everettsville, North Carolina, has removed to Aberfoil, Alabama, where his correspondents may address him.

Thomas E. Davis, having removed from Mount Ulla, North Carolina, to Rutherford, North Carolina, correspondents will please address him at the latter place.

The Rev. J. J. Scott has removed from Feesburg, Ohio, and become the stated supply of Truro church, Columbus Presbytery. His post-office is now Columbus, Ohio, where correspondents and editors will please address him.

The Rev. A Lloyd, having accepted a missionary appointment in New York city, would inform correspondents that they may direct to him at No. 1088 Broadway.

The post-office address of the Rev. D. W. Lyons has been changed to Postville, Allemakee county, Iowa.

The Rev. William B. Browne, pastor of the church of Hillsboro, North Carolina, has been elected Principal of the Augusta Female Seminary, Staunton, Virginia, which is now his post-office address.

DEATHS.

Departed this life, on the 4th of May last, the Rev. Ezekiel B. Currie, in the 84th year of his age. Mr. Currie was a member of the Presbytery of Orange, and died without a pastoral charge. He was born in North Carolina, where he died.

Varieties.

The Associate Church.—The Associate Presbyterian Church has recently sent a missionary, the Rev. Mr. Andrew, to reinforce their interesting mission in the Island of Trinidad. The mission, it is said, presents just now very encouraging prospects.

The Two Assemblies.—The delegates to the Old-school Assembly were two hundred and twelve, and those to the New-school Assembly one hundred and fifty.

Refugees.—One hundred and fifty Hungarian refugees have embarked from Havre for New York.

Ocean Steamers.—Since the launch of the Washington in 1847, a fleet of seventy sea-going steamers has been created in this country, (not including those of the navy,) forming an aggregate of 75,000 tons; and at least a dozen will be added this year.

Minnesota.—The Territorial University of Minnesota has been located at St. Anthony. This is a new town, built up within the last two years, immediately around the Falls. It is chiefly occupied by hardy immigrants from the State of Maine. No more beautiful or romantic sight could have been selected. The University building is to be erected immediately. The school fund has been so husbanded in that territory, as to secure to every child a good common school education, free of all expense to parents.

Thoughtful and Wise.—The young men of Chicago have presented the Rev. H. Curtis, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of that city, a policy of life insurance for $2000. We hardly know of a better way to show kindness to a minister than this. It would prolong many a man's usefulness.

Southern Baptists.—The Southern Baptist Missionary Convention recently held its biennial session at Nashville, reporting the receipt of $25,970 during the year. This is a slight diminution from the collections of previous years.

The Isthmus Railroad.—This company have now one thousand men at work, the iron is on the ground, the first section to Gatun is nearly ready for the rails, one locomotive has arrived, the town of Aspinwall is already laid out on the island of Mansanilla, in Navy Bay.

Cost of Royalty.—Some idea of the cost of royalty may be formed from the fact that the English Prince of Wales, though under ten years of age, has a revenue of nearly $300,000 per annum from the Duchy of Cornwall!

Florida Sponge.—A Key West paper says that the sponge which will be gathered in that neighbourhood during this season will be worth fifty thousand dollars. A number of French manufacturers are said to be using the material in the making of the finest broadcloth, by mixing it with wool or with cotton. The fabric produced by this combination equals in lustre the finest Saxony, and is as strong as linen.

Indian Relics.—A few days ago, while a man was ploughing on the premises of the Messrs. George, in Hamtranck, Michigan, the plough struck the lid of a coffin, wherein was deposited the remains of (it is supposed) an Indian chief. Mingled with his bones was discovered a tin kettle, a spoon, a knife in a leather sheath, comb, pipe, whiskey bottle with General Jackson on it, and about sixty-seven dollars in gold and silver pieces, sowed up in a leather case.

Shooting Stars.—M. Quetelet states, in relation to the Shooting Stars of August, 1850, that the number per hour on the evening of the 9th of August was about 60 for Brussels; on the evening of the 10th, 111 for Brussels, 180 for Markree, Ireland, and 58 for Rome. The direction was the same in each place.

Destitute Emigrants in New York.—Since February 1st, the Commissioners of Emigration have furnished lodgings in Canal street for 39,000 destitute emigrants, who have, on the average, remained four days.

Evangelizing in France.—It is a fact full of encouragement, that the various Protestant Societies for evangelizing the people of France, have, in spite of the huge obstacles in their way, by the favour of Providence and the help of friends from abroad, come out at the end of the year finished by the recent anniversaries, with better results than have been reported in any preceding year. The Tract Society have distributed over a million of tracts, exceeding the last year's distribution by more than 200,000. Its receipts have been 17,500 francs more than last year.

The Evangelical Society has maintained twenty-six ministers, besides many other labourers. Its receipts for the year have been $28,012, a good part of which comes from other countries.

Rev. Wm. H. Campbell, D. D., of Albany, has been chosen Professor of Biblical Literature at New Brunswick, to fill the chair vacated by the resignation of Dr. McClelland, who has long and ably performed the duties of that very important professorship.

Rev. Dr. Wolffe.—The converted Jew, a distinguished oriental scholar, is making a tour through Scotland. He was once a scholar with the present Pope.

Damp Walls.—A correspondent of the Builder has communicated a very simple method of preventing damp walls, by the mere outside application of a lather of soap, and hot water, and then, as soon as dry, sprinkling the wall with a saturated solution of alum.

The Real Miracle of Rimini.—Mr. Drummond may say what he likes about the winking picture of Rimini; but there is one miracle which it has unquestionably performed. It certainly has opened the eyes of wavering Protestants.

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid. Postmasters are authorized to remit moneys, and we hope our friends will avail themselves of this channel to send on their subscriptions.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

Board of Domestic Missions.—Rev. Edward R. Geary and Family Safe, p. 98. Annual Report, p. 98. From a Missionary in the Extreme Frontier in Wisconsin, p. 99. Fruits, p. 100. Receipts, p. 100.

Board of Education.—New Candidates, p. 101. Candidates for the Ministry, p. 101. Thoughts on Ministerial Education, p. 101. Western Agency, p. 102. State of the Treasury, p. 102. Action of the General Assembly on Education, p. 102. Education among the Hebrews, p. 103. Receipts, p. 103.

Board of Foreign Missions.—Recent Intelligence, p. 104. Iowa and Sac Mission, p. 104. West Africa: Corisco Mission, p. 105. India: Allahabad Mission; Communication of the Rev. Robert M. Munnis, p. 106. Furrukhabad Mission; Journal of the Rev. Augustus H. Seeley, p. 106. China: Ningpo Mission, p. 107. Miscellaneous Education in India, p. 108. No Hope, p. 108. Influence of Popery on Civilization, p. 108. Receipts, p. 109.

Board of Publication.—The late General Assembly and the Board of Publication, p. 110. Abstract of the Annual Report of the Board of Publication, p. 110. Gratifying News, p. 110. Book of Sacred Music, p. 110. Doctrinal Objections met by Colportage, p. 111. Permanent Effects of Good Books, p. 111. Descriptive Catalogue, p. 111. To the Members of the Synod of New Jersey, p. 111. Notices of New Publications, p. 111. Receipts, p. 111.

Miscellaneous.—"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" p. 97. The Motherless, p. 97. That One Word, p. 97. A Word Fitly Spoken, p. 97. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 112. Varieties, p. 112.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 8. | PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

A FEW WORDS TO THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN BAPTIZED, BUT HAVE NEVER BEEN CONVERTED, AND HAVE NOT COME TO THE LORD'S SUPPER.

My Dear Friends:—Some of you are young, and some of you are no longer so. Whatever may be your age, I affectionately request your attention to some thoughts, which are worthy of serious consideration. Do not slight the words of kindness because they come to you in print, or at an unexpected time. I do not wish to chide or upbraid you. That might drive you farther away from your own mercies. Yet I wish in all plainness to ask you a few serious questions, and to make a few friendly suggestions. The questions I would ask are such as these:

1. ARE YOU HAPPY? Has not the world sadly disappointed you, and been to you as a liar, and as waters that fail? Has not your own conscience often condemned your course of life, as unwise, wicked, and dangerous? Does not serious reflection upon your future state and prospects make you miserable? Do not God's word and Spirit often reprove you for your sins? Have you not proved by your own experience, that the way of transgressors is hard? Is not a life of sin a life of misery?

2. DO YOU NOT BELONG TO GOD? Did he not make you, and endow you with all your faculties of body and mind? Has not a very kind Providence been over you all your days, granting you food, and friends, and comforts, and life, and breath, and all things? Has not the Lord often rescued you from great perils and evils? Did not God so love the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life, and could he have given any thing greater? Is not salvation so offered as to make it very wicked in you to reject it? Were you not in your childhood solemnly given to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost? Were not your parents bound to give themselves, their children, and all they had to God? Do not these things create the strongest obligations on you to love and serve the Lord?

3. DO YOU NOT INTEND TO TURN TO GOD? Are you not unwilling to live, at least are you not afraid to die in your present condition? Will it not be a fearful thing to give an account to God for the abuse, or even the neglect of so many calls, mercies, and advantages, as you have enjoyed? If your pleasures were without alloy, yet would it be wise to follow them when you know they must be followed by an eternity of misery? Have you no purposes of repentance?

4. BUT WHEN WILL YOU BEGIN? Is not this the accepted time? Is not this the day of salvation? The best time in your whole life to make peace with God, and to commence preparation for eternity is perhaps past, but is not the present the best time that remains to you? May not this be the last year, the last week, the last day of your life? Can it be right longer to jeopard the everlasting interest of your soul? If these things be so, then listen to a few suggestions.

1. MANY PRAYERS HAVE BEEN OFFERED FOR YOU.—In the day of your baptism, all the pious who were present lifted up their hearts to God for you. Your pious father or mother, or both of them, have often and solemnly brought your case before God. This should greatly encourage you to pray for yourself. The prayers of others will not save you. If you harden your heart, they will rather increase your condemnation. Awake, therefore, and cry mightily to God; "for whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

2. YOU STILL ENJOY THE MEANS OF GRACE.—You have God's word, both written and preached. The love of Christ to perishing sinners is still strikingly presented to your view in the Lord's Supper. You have good examples set you in the lives of those who fear God. Sometimes you see others turn to the Lord; and there is nothing better suited to impress you than that you still see God's hand stretched out both in threatening and in invitation. I beseech you to improve these means of grace.

3. GOD'S OFFERS IN HIS WORD SUIT YOU.—He calls you with a frequency and an urgency that would affect any but those who are desperately wicked. He says, "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Jesus Christ says, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "And the Spirit and the Bride say Come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." God demands of you no merit, no goodness, no strength of your own. So kind are his offers that it justly awakens astonishment that they are not promptly and universally accepted by perishing men. They could not be more full, or free, or gracious, or sincere.

4. NOR IS IT YET TOO LATE.—Perhaps you have an awful sense of your guilt and folly in having so long slighted God's mercies. This is good cause of humiliation and repentance, but cannot justify hopeless despondency or further delay. Arise, for the Master calleth thee. "The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin." God's mercy is great: it reacheth to the heavens, yea, it is higher than the heavens. Great as your sins may be, they are not unpardonable, if you will flee to Christ. Others as guilty, as vile, as hardened as you, have found mercy. Christ is able, and he is willing too, to save all that come to God by him.

5. CONTINUED REFUSAL OF HIS GRACE WILL SURELY BRING PERDITION.—Your hands cannot be strong, your heart cannot endure, when God shall deal with you out of Christ. The loss of a soul in hell is far more dreadful than any man has ever represented or conceived it to be. In the case of poverty, or imprisonment, men's fears have sometimes been worse than the reality, but no man ever had excessive fears of damnation. Be persuaded to flee to Christ, and be reconciled to God. NOW OR NEVER. W. S. P.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

BIRTH AND DEATH.

Death sunders soul and body; it cuts in twain what before was one; it breaks by force those strong bonds of our being which make us what we are. It tears us from every object with which we have been conversant, removes us from every path in which we have been accustomed to tread, and drives us over the dark valley, which, though crossed by myriads, is still pathless and trackless.

Birth launches us upon the sea of existence, where every thing is untried and unknown, and from which there is no return. Death transports us into the vast ocean of spiritual existence, where all again is untried and unknown, and admits of no return.

Birth is the gateway to the world of sense; death to the world of spirits. Birth ushers us into time; death into eternity. To be born, is to commence an unending existence. To die is to enter on an unchanging destiny.

Each is a period so unique in character, so momentous in results, as to have peculiar note in the annals of life.

Intermediate between these two is another point, in some respects more open to our inspection, but not less wonderful and important: that in which the soul undergoes a transformation of moral character. A change where death and birth "meet together;" the old nature dies, a new nature is born. It is in one and the same moment, a crucifixion and a resurrection—a "dying unto sin," and a "living unto righteousness."

As original generation draws us from the darkness of chaos into the light of life, so regeneration transfers us from the darkness of depravity to the light of the Lord.

As the death of the body releases us from subjection to matter and sense, so does death unto sin, from the bondage of moral corruption.

By birth we pass the chasm between annihilation and existence; by death we cross the stream between the seen and the unseen. By the renewal of the Spirit we rise from the depths of the Divine wrath to the heights of celestial bliss.

By birth we become creatures; by death we become spirits; by conversion we become saints. "He who is born but once, dies twice; while he who is born twice, dies but once." M. G.

"TEACH US TO PRAY."

Lord, I know not what I ought to ask of thee: thou lovest me better than I can love myself. O, my Father, give to thy child that which he knows not how to ask. I dare not pray either for crosses or consolations; I present myself before thee, I open my heart to thee. Behold those wants that I know not myself. See and do according to thy tender mercy. I adore thy will without knowing it. I am silent before thee; I yield myself up; I would sacrifice myself to thy will: I would have no other desire than to do it. Teach me to pray; pray thyself in me.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

THE LATE MEETING OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

ITS SPIRIT AND INFLUENCE.

No member of the late Assembly could avoid the impression of the increase of interest in that body in the great and good enterprises it has projected, and for many years carried forward with gratifying success.

The Reports of the several Boards were delivered by the Secretaries in the usual order, and to each of the Reports the Assembly gave most marked attention. These Reports told of the efforts of our branch of the Church of Christ, to build up and to enlarge his kingdom in our country and throughout the world: and indicated in the most positive manner, the general piety and engagedness of our officers and members. Here have we the true developments of the Church of Christ. What signify our standards of doctrine and discipline, and our rigid adherence to them; and our organization, so admirably adapted to the establishment and spread of religion, if we possess no warmth of love, no fire of zeal, no energy of action, no firmness of purpose, no spirit of charity and self-denial? Without these we shall die! We have been reproached with a cold and dead orthodoxy; with the spirit of presumption, glorifying Presbyterianism, "The Temple of the Lord—the Temple of the Lord are these!" Let the reproach be buried deep beneath our love and good works, and be remembered no more. The history of our Church the past year, indicates the presence of a "spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." Life is breathing throughout our body. The Commissioners have gone home from the Assembly, with revived affections and new resolutions of increased activity in their respective fields of labour. The churches have read the proceedings of the Assembly. They have rejoiced in the evidences of the Lord's presence and power with us. They have thanked God and taken courage. So let this spirit of life be cherished; let it grow; and let it, during the present year, bring forth fruit more abundantly to the praise and glory of God.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

EXTRA COPIES FOR GENERAL DISTRIBUTION.

Owing to unavoidable delays, the Report presented to the General Assembly in St. Louis in May, has not yet passed through the press. The opinion was expressed by a large number of the members of the Assembly, that the Report,—detailing as it does much information of the present state of the domestic missionary field in our whole country, and setting forth the importance and necessity of the work and the extent to which our Church has been, and is now engaged in it,—should be put into very general circulation in our churches and congregations. We have received applications for extra copies for this purpose.

We take this means of notifying Ministers, Elders, and Members, that we shall be glad to furnish as many extra copies as they may desire: and do request them to forward their orders, accompanied with the address to which the Reports should be sent.

We are not sure that the edition ordered to be printed by the Board will supply the demand: but should calls for it render it necessary, another edition might be issued.

Brethren, let us hear from you immediately, and suffer us to bespeak your efforts, not only to circulate the Report, but also to have it read when circulated. We hope that the Report will come before our people. They will then understand the great work in which the Church is engaged more fully, and will consequently be incited to aid it more faithfully by their prayers and their contributions. It is an evil that the Reports of all our Boards, although printed and circulated, are suffered in so many instances to lie unread, even by officers in the Church. Surely we should desire to know what, as a Denomination, we are doing for the up-building of the Redeemer's kingdom.

SUGGESTION ON THE DISPOSITION OF SURPLUS FUNDS IN PRESBYTERIAL TREASURIES.

It is the right of Presbyteries, while acting in connection with the Board in the appointment of missionaries, if they prefer it, to establish their own treasuries, and to collect and disburse funds for the benefit of the missionary work within their own bounds. It is a matter of gratitude that some Presbyteries, having such treasuries, do collect more than sufficient to supply their wants; and have a surplus by them. In such cases, instead of letting their money lie idle, could they not transfer that surplus to the treasury at Philadelphia, and aid the Board in relieving the wants of missionaries throughout the whole country?

There is a considerable surplus at the present time in some of the Presbyterial treasuries, while the principal treasury in Philadelphia is in need of funds to meet its weekly and large appropriations. Will the brethren think of this, and come to our assistance? We will thank you kindly for it.

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN THE UNITED STATES.

SUPPORT OF MISSIONARIES TO THEM.

The Presbyterian Church has long been a true and faithful witness against the corruptions of Popery, and sometimes a suffering witness. Nor has there been wanting a spirit of love towards the souls of men fast bound in those corruptions. Our ministers and members do, as occasion offers, exert themselves to bring these souls to the true knowledge of God in Christ Jesus, and not without success. We rejoice in all the efforts made by evangelical denominations in this good work, both in our own and in foreign countries.

It will be seen by a reference to the Minutes of the last General Assembly, that the Synod of New Jersey suggested to the Assembly, in an overture, the propriety of creating a separate Bureau or Agency for the more effectual spread of truth in Papal countries. The Assembly, while it acknowledged the great importance of the work, was not prepared to recommend, at present, any new agency for this specific object, but recommended the Board of Foreign Missions to extend its operations in Papal countries in both hemispheres, and to take up separate collections in the churches in aid of this work, unless the same object could be as well reached in some other way. They recommended also the appointment of a sufficient number of agents to advance this work in every proper way, &c.

This action of the Assembly was judicious, and it went as far as the necessity of the case demanded: creating no new agency for this work, it left the Foreign Board to the exercise of its prudence and discretion in carrying it on. We thus arrive at the feeling, nay the conviction of the Assembly, that it is not a multiplication of Boards and Agencies that we need for the successful prosecution of benevolent enterprises, but merely the appropriation of these enterprises to the Boards already in existence, to which they naturally belong; and clothing these Boards with all requisite authority for their conduct. The practical wisdom of the Church will sustain the Assembly in this action.

The same principle carried out in relation to the Roman Catholic population of the United States will throw that population under the care, and into the field of the Board of Domestic Missions. To that Board this population naturally belongs, as well as any other population in our country. It is of special importance that efforts should be made to reach and to convert, by God's blessing, Roman Catholics; and these efforts can be made under our existing organizations, to every advantage, without resorting to any new ones for the purpose.

Our missionaries, scattered throughout most of our States and territories, are brought in many instances into immediate contact with Roman Catholics; and we would, in this manner, suggest to them the propriety of making some special efforts on their behalf: singling them out as a class, not indeed individually, nor for the purpose of controversy, but as persons claiming their kindness and attention, who are in error, and fully within reach of our influence and subject to the truth and spirit of God. We are too frequently incredulous of the conversion of Roman Catholics. Why should we be? The truth of God endures in all its preciousness and power. The Spirit of God beareth witness, now and for ever. Is any thing too hard for God? What was the Reformation throughout all Europe? The regenerated mass at that period were Roman Catholics. Have no Roman Catholics been converted since? Have we no conversions now? Let France, let Ireland speak. Let the voice of these United States be heard. The number is not small, of Catholics converted annually in this country. It will be exceedingly gratifying to the Church, to learn that the labours of its missionaries are crowned with a blessing among this class of our population.

Our Presbyteries should keep this subject before them, and explore fields and appoint missionaries, and the Board is prepared to second their wishes and efforts as far as means are furnished by the Church. And we here take occasion to state, that all contributions for the support of missionary operations among the Roman Catholic population of our country which our Churches desire to make, will be received by the Board of Domestic Missions and properly applied to that end: and still further, that in all cases where missionaries are needed for this field, the Board will, at the request of Presbyteries in the usual form, make appropriations for their support.

CLOTHING.

We invite the attention of our readers to the following interesting communication. The Female Members of our churches will here learn something of the value of their charities, and be stimulated to abound in them to the glory of God and the happiness of His people. The introductory remarks are from the pen of one who for zeal, piety, and years and reputation, is numbered with the warmest affection and confidence of his brethren, among the fathers of the Church.

Mr. Editor—There is nothing that can give such a correct view of the vast importance of the work of Domestic Missions as a plain statement of facts, as they exist at the stations occupied by your missionaries. It appears to me, that if all the churches would read the Record which you give of the labours and the wants of those devoted men now in commission, that your treasury would soon overflow with the gifts of God's people to supply their necessities.

I have been led to this conclusion by the perusal of a letter from a faithful "Soldier of the Cross," in reply to a communication accompanying a box of clothing sent for the use of himself and family, from our little church in the country. I ask a place in the Record for a brief extract, to show the feelings of those brethren when they are remembered by the churches more highly favoured in the providence of God. I ask also that the fact may be noticed, that the salary paid by the people is all in produce, and the only money received during the year is one hundred dollars from the Board. Is it not high time to double the appropriations made to those devoted men, who are spending all their time in the missionary work. S.

Respected Friends—Most gratefully do we acknowledge the reception of the box you sent us, with its valuable contents. It came to hand yesterday, all in good condition; a timely supply admirably adapted to our wants. The suit for myself, that for the little one, the dresses, bonnet, caps, and most of the shoes and other articles, fit as though they were made to measure. I am thus particular, thinking it will be gratifying to you, as it certainly is pleasing and comforting to us. Our prayer to God is, that he may bestow upon you all needed good in this life, and finally say to you, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

During the first four years of our residence here, the people were able to give us only 50, 60, 75, and 100 dollars in substantial articles of food, such as their farms produce. From the Board of Missions we had each year one hundred dollars—since that our salary has been larger, but we have not yet been able to cancel some debts contracted at the beginning. Your liberality will enable us to do something this year toward removing this burden. The special religious interest mentioned in my last, has measurably subsided. On the last Sabbath in March, we received 16 to our little church—our number is now 62. Most of the recent converts were from the Sunday-school. The books and tracts you sent us are a rich favour, and I trust will do good. Hoping for an interest in your prayers, that we may be able to make grateful returns to God for all his benefits, and be useful to many precious souls in time, and finally be admitted with you all through his grace, to the rest that remaineth for his people. I am most sincerely, &c.

THE PUEBLO INDIANS IN THE TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO.

The following letter from Dr. Massie, now of Santa Fé, is laid before our readers, under the assurance that it will be read by them with no ordinary degree of interest and profit. These Indians are classed in with our newly acquired Mexican population, and may perhaps more properly fall under the care of our Foreign Board. But whatever missionaries are sent to New Mexico by the Board of Missions, they will not fail to make some inquiries touching this people. We trust that the present letter is but an earnest of future communications from the intelligent and benevolent author.

St. Louis, Missouri, April 3*d*, 1851.

Rev. C. C. Jones, Philadelphia.

Dear Sir—My friend, Mr. McCoy of Independence, Missouri, has requested me, by letter, to give you such information and impressions as I may have received in regard to the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico. He intimates that this information is desired, in connection with the idea of Christianizing these tribes by missionary labours. It gives me pleasure to comply with Mr. McCoy's request—my only regret being, that I am not possessed of a more minute and comprehensive knowledge of the subject than my opportunities have enabled me to acquire.

The word pueblo—meaning town or village—was doubtless used by the Spaniards, at a very early period after the conquest of Mexico, by Cortes, as a term contradistinguishing those Aborigines who dwelt in houses, and cultivated the fields, from those of nomadic habits, who depended on the chase alone for subsistence. The term would have been applicable to the inhabitants of Uxmal and Palenque, and to the Aztic builders of ancient Mexico, as it is now universally applied in Mexico to the aboriginal dwellers in cities, or fixed habitations. Some persons have supposed the term to be less comprehensive, and to cover only those tribes which have been persuaded by the missionary fathers of the Catholic Church to adopt the Christian religion, and abandon the chase for the farm. But such is not the case. The civilization of the Pueblo Indians is not due to the above cause. It is undeniable that there have existed, from time immemorial, in the region between the territory of Utah and Central America, many tribes of Indians—perhaps originally a single nation—remarkable for a comparatively high degree of civilization, and the possession of many of the most amiable traits which adorn the human character in the highest state of social advancement.

I have nowhere seen the idea advanced, that the Indian character is most ferocious on the Atlantic borders, and becomes gradually less and less so, as we approach the coast of the Pacific. But such I have, for several years, thought to be a fact beyond question. The savages of the Atlantic side of the continent were famous for fortitude, courage, and the love of war. The "forest Indians" of the valley of the Mississippi were likewise noted for the same traits, fighting the white man on foot, face to face, with the tomahawk. Yet they were less difficult of extermination than the Indians of the Atlantic States, although they were, no doubt, more courageous and difficult of subjugation than the "Prairie Indians" of the Great Plains, east of the Rocky Mountains, and west of the Mississippi, who, more timid, fight upon horseback, and for food and plunder, rather than from the love of revenge and military glory. But these last, are, in their turn, more warlike and intractable than those tribes which inhabit the Pacific slope of our continent.

These views are believed to be correct; but be that as it may, missionary labours among the natives of the Atlantic half of our continent have been, for the most part, fruitless, whilst less energy has been rewarded with a greater degree of success among those inhabiting the remoter west (Mexico). That a better disposed, more intelligent and civilized class of human beings, dwelt in that portion of the continent cannot be denied. The remnants of the race now existing (the "Pueblos"), the remains of their architectural, agricultural, and manufacturing labours, place it beyond dispute. And these considerations go to make it probable that the first occupants of the "western world" first dwelt somewhere on the Pacific coast of North America. From them—a civilized few—sprang the many nations who occupied the continent on its discovery in 1492; and who had become, as I have before suggested, more ferocious, warlike and barbarous, the farther they wandered off towards the Atlantic, from the parent colony on the Pacific. Presumptive evidence of the common origin of the American Aborigines is further afforded by the very singular fact, that they are universally free from idolatry, worshipping as they all do, so far as my knowledge of them extends, a "Great Spirit," possessing good attributes. To mention this fact on account of its connection with the origin of the human race would be irrelevant to the subject of this letter; it is mentioned, the rather, with the view of affording encouragement to the Christian missionary. He can enjoy the pleasing reflection, that he has not to encounter the labour—perhaps unsuccessful and dangerous—of inducing the Indian to throw down and abandon the worship of gods made of wood or stone; but the more pleasing and encouraging one of properly directing ideas, having a true and proper foundation. It would seem to be half the battle to the missionary, to find the belief of the spirituality of the Divine Being already implanted fixedly in the minds of the people among whom he is to labour.

But the short limits of a letter require that I should return to the subject specially, of the Pueblo Indians. These people inhabit some twenty-five or thirty towns, situated in various parts of the territory of New Mexico, from the valley of Taos on the north, to El Páso on the extreme south, and from the "Old Pécos church" (an Aztic building) in the valley of the Pécos on the east, to the town of Zunia on the west, situated, I believe, upon the San Juan, a tributary of the "Colorado of the West," which discharges itself into the Gulf of California. These towns are of very various sizes, their average population being, at a random conjecture, about six hundred or eight hundred. The ruins of such of their deserted towns as I have had the opportunity of seeing, although showing no evidence that the builders possessed a knowledge of the arch, exhibited otherwise a degree of architectural skill astonishing to an American, who has an acquaintance only with the Indians of other portions of the country more eastward.

Their style of building is altogether unique, and must be considered, for the Aborigines, even magnificent; especially so, when we bear in mind that they inhabit a country, where, to the savage, a good and permanent dwelling is a luxury of life, rather than a necessary. The inhabitants of the different towns have but little, if any, intercourse with one another; indeed each town is said to have a language of its own. It is more probable that they are only very different dialects of the same language. However that may be, it cannot be a labour to be dreaded by Presbyterian ministers, who are always liberally educated, to undertake the acquisition of one, or even many languages, which it is very obvious can neither be very copious nor difficult.

Some of the towns have adopted the Catholic religion, and have, in a few instances, if I mistake not, a priest living among them. But I have been told by those who are more intimately acquainted with them than I am, that the adoption has never been thorough, as they still continue to practice certain ceremonies handed down from ancestors more remote than the first Spanish occupants of New Mexico, or the second and permanent ones succeeding the great rebellion of the natives, and the downfall of Spanish power there in 1688.

These superstitions, however, would seem to be more harmless than religious superstitions are commonly found to be. When we consider the slight opportunities they have hitherto had for improvement, we will be agreeably surprised to find them so free from vices, and in the possession and practice of so many virtues. They are noted for liberal hospitality, for amiability of disposition, and honesty in all the transactions of life. As a people, they are truthful, peaceable, and industrious. In horticulture and agriculture, they have not only kept pace with their instructors, the Spaniards, but, in some instances, even surpassed them. I may be mistaken; but it is my candid opinion, that at no past period has so favourable and interesting a field presented itself to the philanthropic American, to test the efficacy of enlightened agencies, in the speedy elevation of numerous communities to the privileges and blessings of civilization. I think, that, under the guidance of judicious instructors they will be found apt scholars, and facile instruments for the promotion of useful ends. The missionary who goes off to strange and distant countries has unforeseen labours and dangers to encounter, as well as national and religious prejudices, which often render his life uncomfortable, and his efforts for good nugatory. But the teacher who goes among the Pueblo Indians, on the contrary, although he must make up his mind to submit to a species of exile, for a time at least, will be upheld and encouraged by many pleasing reflections. He will there find no national prejudices, which might be turned against him individually. In truth, a contrary sentiment prevails, for it has been a cherished tradition among the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, ever since their subjugation by the Spaniards, that deliverers were to come to them from the East. They generally believe that this prophecy is now fulfilled; and that the Americans who have captured and now hold the country are their long-expected deliverers. They are certainly delivered from Spanish rule, but it has yet to be seen whether they are to be delivered by the same instrumentality from the worse bondage of intellectual and moral darkness. Not only would the missionary find this favourable sentiment prevailing in his behalf, but I believe he would find the people willing, nay, anxious to receive instruction. This is even plainly inferrible from the readiness with which they have caught and acted upon such ideas as the Spaniards have furnished them suitable to their condition. They are the most industrious people in the country, and the best farmers; they are amiable, just, and moral, and to say thus much of them, is to say very much in their favour.

But I fear I have prolonged this letter to tediousness, and will therefore bring it to a close, by assuring you that I shall be happy to correspond with you further on the subject, should you desire it. I am now on my way to Santa Fé, where I go with the view of practicing medicine. A letter directed there will reach me, provided it escapes the mishaps of the way.

Most respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
TH. E. MASSIE.

HOUSE OF WORSHIP BUILT, AND REVIVAL.

The happy effects of liberality, zeal, and fidelity, are manifest in the following interesting letter from Ohio, received a short time since at the office. "The Lord is faithful."

"I have good news to communicate to the Board. The past year has been one of signal mercies to the congregation of Kingston. They have finished a good and handsome church, have a good bell, have a sufficient number of lamps to light the house well, and a set of furniture for the communion service; and owe nothing for the whole. Since the completion of our house, attendance upon worship has been more than doubled, and there has been a revival in progress nearly ever since. Twelve have been added to the church within the last six months, nine on profession, and three on certificate. Within the last two months, thirteen or more have professed to have obtained hope—they have passed from death unto life, and others are yet inquiring. I trust the good work is yet silently progressing. It has thus far been a work of great solemnity, and deep conviction of sin and guilt, and utter inability to do any thing to deserve mercy or save themselves. There has been no out-burst of passion and wailing as has sometimes been the case; and at every pause of the speaker, the most profound attention and silence of the audience was seen. The work has up to this time every characteristic of a genuine revival of religion. The subjects of the work are either young married persons, or young men and women all of them save one. Another striking fact is witnessed in all being the baptized children of the Church, with only one exception. Those who are yet inquiring, are nearly every one the children of religious parents and baptized persons. God has ever been faithful to perform his promise to believing parents and their children, and this has been strikingly manifested in the present revival among us.

During the past year I have preached 140 times, and have visited all the families in the congregation, from one to three times each. Our congregation is prosperous and increasing, and well united, are much revived and encouraged. A. J.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

Religious excitements, not genuine revivals, and serious difficulties in the way of some of our brethren in the field.

Last year, about this time, two denominations had what they called great revivals, all round our little church. The former took in 130 members, the latter about one-third that number. Since that time there has been a fearful reaction. The one, I apprehend, had only that religion, they got in water baptism, and in that delusion they remain. The other revival was gotten up and attended by an unusual degree of excitement and noise. That, in due time, subsided; and now they retain less than a score of their then converts! But, worse still. The backsliders have generally fallen into a state far more hopeless than that they were in before. And many of them have turned out to be scoffers at religion. My observation leads me to this conclusion, that these so-called revivals, in which the means used are appeals to the passions with noise and excitement, to the neglect of the real gospel, are ruinous to true piety. A revival of true religion is a most desirable thing, but a revival without it, is most fearful.

A good way to preach sound Doctrines.

My method is to preach the truth plainly and pointedly, without naming other sects, and when I preach upon the distinguishing doctrines of our Church, to present them not in the technical language of theology, but in the language of Scripture. I find that by avoiding technicalities, we may preach sound doctrine without giving mortal offence.

A Movement for Missions and a word to Theological Students.

A word to theological students: not to abandon study, nor to neglect the careful preparation and writing of sermons, but to aspire after the gift of a ready utterance without reading.

The meeting of our Presbytery was held in this place this week. It is thought exceedingly desirable in our present situation, that we should have one or two itinerant missionaries within the bounds of this Presbytery. The great difficulty after all will be to obtain men suited to the work. So far as my observation enables me to judge, but few young men immediately from the Seminary are suited to such a work, especially of those who have been accustomed to no other than the refined and polished manners and methods of living of the eastern cities and towns. It requires one who has been somewhat accustomed to country life, if not to life in the log cabins of the back woods. A young man who finds it necessary to sit for three days in the chimney corner to write out a sermon, and who can deliver it in no other way than by reading it, would present rather an awkward figure in the school-house, or barn, where there are no fixtures to support a written sermon, if indeed it should be thought necessary to furnish a stand for his Bible and hymn book.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of June, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Troy.—First church Kingsbury	$11 00
Pby of Columbia.—Jewett church	65 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Wyoming.—First church Sparta	15 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—First ch East Aurora	3 38
Pby of Michigan.—Meridian church	3 50

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—West Town ch 6, and from Mrs J Hill same ch 5	11 00
Pby of North River.—Fishkill 1st church	26 00
Pby of Long Island.—East Hampton ch 46 50; Huntington ch 13 30	59 80
Pby of New York.—Rutger's street ch from Youth's Missionary Society 50; Wallabout ch 4 39	54 39

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of West Jersey.—Pittsgrove ch additional	2 50
Pby of Newton.—Thro' E Green Esq Treasurer of Pres. from Stroudsburg church 20, Mrs Sarah McCandless 20, Muscanetcong Valley ch 10,—50; First and Second Stillwater chs 50	100 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Kingston church	9 40

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Great Valley ch 37 17; 10th ch Phila Mrs and Miss Tate 10; A Lady of Penn Square ch Phila 50	97 17
Pby of Philadelphia 2d.—Newtown church	16 40
Pby of New Castle.—Red Clay Creek ch 23 50; Lower Brandywine ch 6 50	30 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Little Valley church	25 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Chilisquaque ch 11; A friend (Mrs J S C) church of Derry and Washingtonville 100	111 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Clarksburg church	2 50

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Pleasant Hill ch 8, "——— and wife" part of one-fifth wool money 6; Lexington ch 7	21 00
Pby of Coshocton.—Millersburg church	11 12

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Wisconsin.—Wyocena ch 3; Fort Winnebago ch 15	18 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Ebenezer ch 30; Unionville ch addl 3; Cane Creek ch 3	36 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Maury.—Piedmont church	3 50

SPECIAL COLLECTION.

Wilfred Hall 11th Pres ch Phila	25 00
Jas Leslie 10th do do	10 00
		35 00

LEGACIES.

Legacy in part of Henry Long decd of Mifflin co Pa 333 34, Less exchange 1 25	332 09
Legacy of John Johnston decd of New York city, per Executor John T Johnston Esq	500 00
		832 09
		$1599 75

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Lady in Cincinnati for California through J L K 5; "One-tenth" 2; Womelsdorf ch 17; A feeble church in Virginia 7 50; Rufus Young Lexington Mo 2 50; Mrs Mary T Sampson, Baldwin co Alabama 1 25; J P Sanderson Esq to const his grandson J SANDERSON LAWSON an hon mem 50; A Lady, Marion co Ohio 2; Mrs Z Sweatland, Cazanovia, New York 10; "A stranger" 10; "An unknown lady," Albany New York 15 122 25

Total $1722 00

CLOTHING RECEIVED IN JUNE.

A Box from Ladies of Gettysburg ch Pa valued at	121 88
A Box from Ladies Sewing Association of Newtown ch Penna valued at	50 00
A Box from Ladies of Pres ch of Waterford N Y valued at	63 00
A Box from Ladies of the 1st Pres ch Newton, Sussex co N J valued at	54 00
	$288 88

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of June, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.—West Elizabeth ch in part 10 11; Allegheny City 2d ch 8; Mingo ch of which 12 70 bal to const Rev J R Dundass, and 22 30 in part to const Benj Williams Esq h m 35 00	53 11
Pby of Allegheny.—Amity church	11 18
Pby of Blairsville.—Saltsburg ch 9; Ebenezer ch of which from a lady 15, 30 56	39 56
Pby of Redstone.—Round Hill ch in part	20 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St. Clairsville.—Newcastle ch a widow's mite	1 00
Pby of Washington.—Sistersville ch 8; Elizabethtown ch 6; Wheeling 1st ch mon colls 51 56	65 56

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Columbus.—Lancaster church	10 00
Pby of Richland.—Sharon church	4 00
Total,	$204 41

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of June, 1851.

Mrs Marg M Helm Glasgow Ky per Rev W B Kilgore	$1 00
Miss Margaret Guthrie Jeff co Ky	20 00
Monroe ch Ohio per J D Thorpe	20 00
Somerville Ohio do do	7 60
Do Ladies Domestic Miss Soc per J D Thorpe	2 20
Presbytery of Marion (particulars not sent) per J D Thorpe	34 84
H F Marrion Hanover Ill per J D Thorpe	50
1st Presb ch Walnut Hill O do do	21 73
Sandusky church do do	3 32
Oakland college Miss Soc to const Rev J Chamberlin hon mem per Prov Elliott	35 00
Fem Miss Soc of Maysville per Rev W W Hill	50 00
A Friend Ky	5 00
Mrs Frances A Saunders to const her husband Rev J M Saunders hon mem	50 00
Miss P Hughes Louisville	5 00
Mrs R McFarland for sup of Rev H L McGuire per Rev W W Hill	40 00
Charleston Ill per Rev R S Mitchel	5 25
Cole co do do. do.	1 55
Unity ch Iowa per Rev Salmon Cowles	6 00
Terre Haute Ind per Rev A C Allen	14 45
Edwards ch Ill per Rev W W Backus	8 00
Mt Sterling Ill per Rev O J Heyer	10 00
Washington Ohio per Rev Jno Marquis	12 25
Popes River Ill per Rev S B Crittenden	1 00
Lower Rock Island ch per Rev E W Larkin	7 00
Rock Island Ill do do	10 50
Lamar Miss per Rev D L Gray	50 50
Fredonia do do do	12 50
Chulahoma Miss do do	5 00
Munroe do do do	5 00
Edmonton do do do	3 00
Zion do do do	5 00
Hopewell do do do	1 50
Harmony do do do	4 50
Panola do do do	1 00
Holly Springs do do do	27 10
Philad do do	8 50
Rev A Johnson do do	50
Proceeds of Note discounted in Bank per Rev W W Hill	348 00
Total	$844 29

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

THE CHURCH MUST FURNISH THE MEN.

The Church may solemnly acknowledge the necessity of learning in the ministry, and prove the sincerity of this acknowledgment by furnishing the necessary teachers and appliances of education. But of what avail are these without appropriate subjects of instruction? A mill—to use the favourite figure of the enemies of an educated ministry—a mill with every thing complete and in abundance except corn to grind. A store-house of provisions without mouths to eat them—an armoury of weapons, both defensive and offensive, without living men to wield or wear them. Like the hollow suits of armour still preserved in the old arsenals of Europe as memorials of a past age, habergeons, cuirasses, greaves, and helmets, standing erect in warlike posture, but without a living man within them, and therefore motionless and worthless, except as curious pieces of antiquity. Such too must be the costliest apparatus of instruction, if the men are not forthcoming to receive it. This may seem to be a visionary want, a mere chimerical obstruction, and it is so in those countries and those churches where the ministry is placed upon precisely the same footing with the other liberal professions, as a reputable means of subsistence and an object of legitimate ambition. But among ourselves, where the ministry is recognised, in theory at least, as a calling wholly different in kind from every other; where the act of seeking it involves a kind of personal confession and the virtual assumption of religious vows, there is no such excess of the supply above the actual demand for ministerial labour. That there is no excess of ministers in our own Church, is apparent, from the simple fact that while our field of operations is continually widening, and the calls for labourers growing daily more importunate, the number of those actually training for the office is no greater than it was five years ago. The time then is well chosen for a reiteration of the truth, that the Church must not only provide men to teach, but men to be taught. How is this want to be supplied?

First of all, by prayer to God, according to our Saviour's argumentative command to his disciples. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest." But he will not send them, as he sent the quails upon the camp of Israel. Nor will he raise them up like the fabled crop of Cadmus from the earth. The very answer to our prayers for men to work for God will be connected with exertions for our own. He helps us when he makes us help ourselves. The question therefore still recurs: what is the Church to do in proof of her sincerity, and in promotion of the gracious answer to her own request?

Another obvious duty is to seek for the appropriate materials of which able ministers are to be formed. These materials do not always lie upon our pavements, or along our highways, any more than the materials of our costly fabrics, or most necessary articles of daily use. They are often latent, and must be discovered and drawn out from their concealment, and extricated from their embarrassing associations and connexions, as the precious ores are separated from the baser substances with which they co-exist in nature. At times, indeed, they may seem to be profusely scattered on the very surface of society, as gold is now picked up by handfuls on the soil of California. But all is not gold that glitters. In a moral, no less than in a material sense, golden dreams are often doomed to disappointment, and apparent exceptions only seem to confirm the general law, that what is truly precious is acquired by patient, self-denying toil.

Another analogy between the cases is perhaps not wholly fanciful, or may, at least, afford a wholesome practical suggestion. As the mania for sudden and easily gained wealth, which now prevails among us and around us, can hardly fail to flood the market with spurious or supposititious gold, however genuine the larger part of the new acquisitions may be, so the eager, indiscriminate attempt to force into the ministry every young man who seems possessed of piety and talent, may be expected to result in many a lamentable failure and imposture, as well as to be followed by a violent reaction towards the opposite extreme of apathetic negligence and passive waiting upon Providence for that which is ordinarily given only as the reward of diligence and sound discretion. Against both of these evils let the Church be on her guard, by seeking earnestly for men to serve God in the ministry, but carefully proving them when they are found. This process, added to the means already mentioned, that of fervent and unceasing prayer to God for labourers in his harvest, will do much to meet and counteract the painful and alarming diminution of aspirants to the ministry. But although it will do much, it will not do all. For after bringing young men to the threshold of this work, the Church is not to leave them there and go in search of others, but must help them over it, and put it in their power not only to contemplate the great harvest, but to enter it, and fall to work upon it. Since Apostolic times it is no longer a questionable point that poverty may co-exist with piety and talent. If the empty suits of armour would be worse than useless in the day of battle, because tantalizing to the combatants, would they be of more use, or less tantalizing, if the men who ought to wear them were drawn up in sight of them, but not allowed to touch them, much less to put them on or carry them away? Even so the most complete and liberal intellectual provision for the training of the ministry, and even the most ample supply of men to be trained, can only disappoint the Church and tantalize a dying world, if the two things still remain apart which must be joined together to produce the end desired. And as nothing half so frequently creates obstruction as the poverty of those who are otherwise entitled to the opportunity of training for the ministry, it follows that the Church can do her duty in this great matter only by providing the means of their subsistence. She must not only find the men, but feed them.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

The number of theological students attending the New College at Edinburgh during the last year, was 258, the largest number ever in attendance, of whom about 30 speak the Gaelic language. The number of students attending at Aberdeen was 39; making the whole number at both places 292. Deducting the Irish students, amounting to 17, and the whole number of young men studying with a view to the ministry in the Free Church was 275.

The common fee paid by each student at the New College is £4 10*s.*, or about $22.50.

The Assembly decided to encourage donations to increase the facilities for theological education both at Aberdeen and Glasgow, in addition to those now enjoyed at Edinburgh.

An overture, making a knowledge of the Hebrew language a pre-requisite to entering upon theological studies, had been sent down to the Presbyteries by the Assembly of the preceding year. It was carried in the affirmative by 52 Presbyteries against 9. This is an important improvement, and will no doubt engage the consideration of our own Church.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Chalmers' Counsel to his Brother.—In a letter to his brother Patrick, under date of the 21st of May, 1812, Dr. Chalmers gives the following counsel, which it would be well if all would diligently heed:

"I look upon Baxter and Doddridge as two most impressive writers, and from whom you are most likely to carry away the impression, that a preparation for eternity should be the main business and anxiety of time. But, after all, the Bible should be the daily exercise of those who have decidedly embarked in this great business; and if read with the earnest sense and feeling of its being God's message; if perused with the same awe, and veneration, and confidence, as if the words were actually coming out of His mouth; if, while you read, you read with the desire and the prayer that it may be with understanding and profit, you are in a far more direct road to 'becoming wise unto salvation' than any other that can possibly be recommended to you. There is no subject on which people are readier to form rash opinions than religion. The Bible is the best corrective to these. A man should sit down to it, with the determination of taking his lesson just as he finds it; of founding his creed upon the sole principle of *'Thus saith the Lord,' and deriving his every idea and his every impression of religious truth from the authentic record of God's will."

Catechize the Young.—Catechizing the children of a congregation by its pastor, is a duty never neglected without a violation of clerical obligation on the one hand, and a positive injury to the parish on the other. Of the times and occasions for discharging this duty, of the best modes of fulfilling it, of the additional catechisms to be used, of the combination of oral with the printed questions—all these are points for the responsible judgment of the Pastor under the control of his obligation to Christ and to the Church.

Preaching.—When I preach, let me remember:

1. That nothing is in vain; but in its consequence and effect eternal, for good or evil, to myself, to my hearers, and to the world.
2. That the least evil may work infinite harm, and the weakest good an infinite blessing.
3. To preach as if it were, as it may be, my last sermon.
4. That it may be the last to some hearer.
5. That an unknown company of angels, both good and bad, wait, watch, and listen, with unspeakable anxiety.
6. The great God, my Saviour and Master, is there to see and hear; his searching eye turned full upon me, and his heart engaged with an infinite intensity of interest.
7. That swift as he is to mark unfaithfulness, he is swifter still to give his help to the weakness of a trusting heart.
8. That I must confront my audience again in the presence of an omniscient Judge, when all the facts will be exposed in their naked reality.

CHRISTIAN BOLDNESS.

"The righteous are bold as a lion."—Prov. xxviii. 1.

Who the righteous are—the servants of God; obedient to him—placing their trust in him. The figure—boldness of the lion, the king of beasts.

1. Christian boldness is not recklessness. This has no regard to consequences—it seeks not results, but present gratification; the Christian has in view the highest consequences—the glory of God—the promotion of his cause—the salvation of men; it looks entirely at consequences.

2. It does not require a throwing away of influence. Here Christians sometimes mistake; they are reckless of their influence—this is wrong; should never expose themselves unnecessarily—the general should be careful of his soldiers, so the Christian. His influence, a talent—never foolishly throw it away, even if he might hope to secure a great present good—he may secure this, and still be bold.

3. It does not require us to disregard the feelings of men. Here too, is a mistake—why did Paul become all things to all men, that he might meet their feelings—we may be bold, and still not hurt men's feelings more than the sword of the Spirit will hurt them.

4. It is not imprudence. We sometimes err here—on both sides. Where should men be more prudent than in the cause of God—the general to be bold must be prudent—rashness is not boldness, in any one, much less in the Christian.

5. It requires a determined support of the truth. It is cowardice to yield—we must fight manfully for the truth—so Christ did—so the Apostles—so the early Christians; we must defend the truth everywhere—in all our intercourse with errorists—must be no yielding—no compromising—no fence-riding—no willingness to be called any thing—no disposition to lower down truth—to hide its point—to make the sword of the Spirit powerless—no unwillingness to use it if called upon.

6. It requires a determined support of religious practice. There should be no fear of being considered singular—of being called rigid, austere, hypocritical; the question should be, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and then the opinions of the world may be and ought to be disregarded.

7. It is to be directed by the Bible—otherwise it is not Christian boldness.

8. It requires a reliance upon God. Be strong in the Lord—this to be remembered—a necessary part—without this all vain.—Congregationalist.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

'Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

LIST OF PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

The Christian training of the lambs of the flock is obviously a proper subject of care and effort on the part of the Church. Nothing can justify Christian people in allowing their children to be educated in principles which do not recognise the word of God as an agent in the formation of character. The system of schools, established with the approbation of the General Assembly, are Christian schools in the full meaning of that term—having Christian teachers, Christian instruction, and Christian superintendence. Such institutions commend themselves as auxiliaries in the great work of blessing the young with knowledge and religion. The Presbyterial reports have been quite defective; but so far as ascertained, the following is a list of the primary schools in operation during the ecclesiastical year just ended.

PRESBYTERIES.	CHURCHES.	STATES.
Troy,	Lansingburgh,	N. Y.
Wyoming,	Warsaw,	"
New York,	First church, (2)	"
"	15th st church,	"
"	42d st church,	"
"	Chelsea,	"
"	Madison Avenue,	"
New York 2d,	Scotch church, (2)	"
Elizabethtown,	Paterson 1st church,	N. J.
New Brunswick,	Princeton, (3)	"
"	Pennington,	"
"	Cranberry 2d,	"
"	Titusville,	"
"	South Trenton,	"
"	Goshen,	"
"	Squan Village,	"
Burlington,	Burlington,	"
"	Mount Holly,	"
West Jersey,	Camden,	"
"	Williamstown,	"
"	May's Landing,	"
Newton,	German Valley,	"
"	Oxford,	"
Susquehanna,	Friendsville,	Pa.
"	Wyalusing,	"
"	Rome,	"
Luzerne,	Wilkesbarre,	"
"	Summit Hill,	"
"	Middleport,	"
"	New Philadelphia,	"
Philadelphia,	10th ch Miss. school,	"
"	Southwark,	"
"	Port Richmond,	"
"	Phœnixville,	"
Philadelphia 2d,	Newtown,	"
Baltimore,	Bridge st Georgetown,	D. C.
"	New Windsor,	Md.
Blairsville,	Donegal,	Pa.
Redstone,	Fair Mount,	"
"	McConnelsville,	"
Beaver,	New Brighton,	"
"	North Sewickly,	"
Miami,	Yellow Spring,	Ohio.
Wooster,	Northfield,	"
New Albany,	Owen Creek,	Ind.
"	Charlestown,	"
"	Bedford,	"
"	Orleans,	"
"	German ch New Albany,	"
Indianapolis,	Hopewell,	"
"	Bloomington,	"
"	Bethany,	"
"	Rushville,	"
Whitewater,	Sand Creek,	"
Logansport,	Peru,	"
Crawfordsville,	Poplar Spring,	"
Sangamon,	Waveland,	Ill.
"	1st ch Springfield,	"
Schuyler,	Henderson,	"
"	Oquawka,	"
Peoria,	Chicago,	"
"	Brunswick,	"
Palestine,	Grand View,	"
Kaskaskia,	Edwardsville,	"
St. Louis,	Carondelet,	Mo.
"	Bethlehem,	"
"	Bethel,	"
Potosi,	Apple Creek,	"
Louisville,	Louisville 4th ch, (2)	Ky.
"	Big Spring,	"
"	Shelbyville,	"
West Lexington,	Lexington 2d ch,	"
"	Frankfort, (2)	"
Transylvania,	Hanging Fork,	"
Winchester,	Romney,	Va.
Lexington,	Staunton,	"
"	Fairfield,	"
Fayetteville,	Antioch,	N. C.
South Carolina,	Charleston 1st ch,	S. C.
Harmony,	Indiantown,	"
East Alabama,	Bethel church,	Ala.
"	Lowndes,	"
"	Uchee Valley,	"
South Alabama,	Mobile 2d ch,	"
"	Valley,	"
"	Selma,	"
"	Pisgah,	"
Cherokee,	Roswell,	Ga.
"	Carthage,	"
Chickasaw,	College church,	Miss.
Louisiana,	1st ch New Orleans,	La.
Western District,	Memphis 1st ch	Tenn.
Knoxville,	Baker's Creek,	"
Arkansas,	Batesville,	Ark.
Oregon Territory,	Clatsop's Plains,	Oregon.

OUR SYSTEM A GOOD ONE.

The system is a good one, being founded on principles sacred to religion and human progress. The Church of Christ in every age has not failed to inculcate religion as a part of elementary training. These well-settled principles will recover their lost ground, and re-establish themselves more and more in the favour and practice of the Presbyterian Church. In a former Report, [in 1848] the Board exhibited the historical argument at some length; and showed, in relation to our own Church, that the importance of uniting religion with education was its uniform testimony down to 1785. An additional link of evidence, not then ascertained, binds this testimony to the corner-stone of the present century. In 1799, the General Assembly passed a series of resolutions, amongst which was one enjoining upon pastors the duty of instructing their congregations in Bible truth, &c., concluding in the following terms:

"Above all that they be faithful in the duties of family visitation, and the catechetical instruction of children and youth. And that in order to aid these views, they endeavour to engage the sessions of the respective congregations, or other men most distinguished for intelligence and piety in them, to assume, as trustees, the superintendence and inspection of the schools established for the initiation and improvement of children in the elements of knowledge; to see that they be provided with teachers of grave and respectable characters; and that these teachers, among other objects of their duty, instruct their pupils in the principles of religion, which should be done as often as possible in the presence of one or more of the aforesaid trustees, under the deep conviction that the care and education of children, the example set before them, and the first impressions made on their minds, are of the utmost importance to civil society as well as to the Church."

Opinions thus wisely expressed, and recommended by the word of God, and by a regard to the welfare of our children, must ultimately prevail. Difficulties are to be expected. But principles are greater than difficulties, and truth will triumph.

The schools established by our Church were established on the assumption that the common schools of the land did not, and could not, impart sufficient religious instruction. There are known to be localities where the Bible and Catechism are taught in State institutions; but these localities are comparatively few, and must, it is feared, diminish in number. The growing element of Romanism in our population is an additional reason, among others, for believing that evangelical instruction, in the generality of State common schools, is an impracticability. Under such circumstances, the Presbyterian Church must persevere in the daily religious education of her children, wherever it may be practicable to found, under her own care, Christian institutions for that holy purpose.

SUCCESS AN ENCOURAGEMENT.

A reason for the belief that the Assembly's system can be ultimately extended to a large number of churches, is that it is eminently successful in many places. Its failures in some localities are amply compensated by remarkable success in others. The following letter shows what can be done in an ordinary country village, in no degree distinguished from hundreds or thousands of villages in our land.

To the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church.

The undersigned is instructed by the session and trustees of the Waveland Presbyterian Church, Illinois, to make to you the following report:

The school under our supervision and management was commenced on the 4th day of November last, having been delayed by the difficulty, and until that time, the impossibility of procuring a suitable teacher.

The Scriptures are daily read in the school by all the scholars who are able to read; thus they have read the four Gospels regularly through, and eleven chapters of the Acts of the Apostles. This exercise is accompanied by questions and remarks upon the passage read, which is generally one chapter each day. In addition to this, all the scholars are expected to commit to memory one verse of Scripture each day. Thus the greater part of the school have committed to memory the fifth and sixth chapters of the Gospel by Matthew—82 verses.

Some religious works, judged to be suitable, have also been publicly read in the school. "Mary Carrow's School," and "Line upon Line," have been thus read.

The school is opened and closed each day with prayer, in connexion with the reading of the Scriptures and singing.

Recitations in the Shorter Catechism are attended to several times a week; and the whole school, as one class, are catechized every Friday.

You will perceive by the accompanying schedule, that twenty-two of the scholars have committed the whole Catechism to memory, and most of these answer the questions very readily and accurately, whether asked consecutively or out of the regular course. Several others of the scholars, it will be perceived, have made considerable progress in the study of the Catechism.

We hope that four or five more will have completed it by the close of the present quarter.

The gratifying interest and success of the school in this study, have stimulated and encouraged many families, not directly connected with the school, to attend to catechetical instruction at home.

The order and progress of the school have been highly gratifying to us. It is ruled by love—it is conducted on Christian principles; the Bible is acknowledged and appealed to as the standard of duty, and of opinion, and the scholars are, without exception, ardently attached to the school, and to their teacher.

The school is evidently growing in popular favour; prejudice against it is, we think, wearing away; and we confidently believe that by the time it has been in operation one year, its practicability, desirableness, and success will be so clearly demonstrated, as to leave no considerable opposition to it in the community, and no necessity for calling on your Board for aid in sustaining it. For this we hope, by the blessing of God, upon our efforts to honour Him, and his truth, in the education of our children.

Our church building is now furnished with seats, and writing desks, which are tolerably convenient, both for the school, and for our other religious uses.

We have procured, through the beneficence of some ladies in Baltimore, a good library of 154 volumes, selected from the books of the Presbyterian Board, American Tract Society, and miscellaneous publishers.

The second quarter of the school will close the last of the present month.

THOS. W. HYNES, Moderator.
Montgomery Co., Illinois, 1st April, 1851.

THE GOOD INFLUENCE OF OUR SCHOOLS.

An important reason for adhering to our system of parochial schools, is the beneficial influence they exert upon the common schools of the State. The fact that a Christian denomination will not patronize schools where religion is excluded, but will rather establish its own, is already contributing to infuse sound principles into minds heretofore indifferent. In several instances, known to the Board, where the parochial school has stood in the same village with the common school, the former has been of great use to the latter. And there is every reason to believe that if the parochial schools were discontinued in the cases specified, the State schools would relapse into their former indifference. Questions decided by the ballot box are not often decided in favour of evangelical religion, even in a comparatively religious community. Whilst it is believed that the Church cannot evangelize the common schools of the land, much good may result from the beneficial influence of institutions where God's truth is duly honoured.

THE WANT OF FUNDS A CHIEF DIFFICULTY.

The Board are confirmed in the hopefulness of the system of Christian schools, from the fact that the only thing that prevents many from being established, is the necessity of providing additional funds. Many churches may not be able to impose upon themselves additional taxes, and others may not be willing. But when the question is, in a great measure, one of funds, there is reason to believe that Christian principle will eventually surmount the difficulty.

There are other difficulties experienced by some of our most intelligent brethren, especially the difficulty of withdrawing ourselves from the rest of the community in the educational movement. The advantages of promiscuous education are very great; and nothing short of covenant fidelity in the religious training of the young, would commonly justify the wisdom of setting up denominational schools. But when it is found, as it certainly is in the generality of State schools, that sound evangelical instruction cannot be imparted, the advantages of union are held at far too high a price. There is a limit beyond which Christianity cannot consent to a compromise, and where worldly expediency comes in contact with religious obligation. When, however, any Church considers that religious advantages are sufficiently enjoyed by its children in State or other schools, the Board would by no means recommend separate action, unless greater good can be accomplished by the change.

The Board believe that the want of funds is one of the chief obstacles to the efficient prosecution of our present educational plans. And as this is a difficulty by no means beyond the reach of Christian zeal and self-denial, there is hope of a much wider extension of our system of schools than has yet entered into our moderate views of computation.

As one of the fiscal encouragements of the year, the Board report to the Assembly a legacy of $5000, accruing to the Church at Hustonville, Kentucky, for the endowment of a school under the care of the session of the Church. The testator is Mr. David Williams, a member of the church at Hustonville, lately deceased. It is understood that at least an equal and probably a greater amount has been left to Centre College, as residuary legatee. Such legacies will doubtless increase with an increasing conviction, that Christian education is among the greatest blessings which the piety of one generation can bequeath to the generations following.

SCHOOLS OF FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

Dr. Candlish gave in the report from the Education Committee. The number of congregational schools was now 422; of side or district schools, 174; of missionary schools, planted in destitute localities, 13; and of grammar schools, 5—to which must be added the two normal schools of Edinburgh and Glasgow. In connexion with the congregational and other schools there were about 33 industrial schools, in which females were employed to teach needlework and other branches of female industry. For this establishment of schools there were 687 teachers receiving salaries or gratuities upon the Scheme. In the normal schools there were two rectors, 18 male teachers, and 7 female teachers; making 687 in all, not taking into account assistants, monitors, pupil-teachers, &c., or the teachers of Free Church schools not connected with the Scheme. The number of children reported as attending our salaried day-schools is 53,962, besides 1450 attending the model classes of the normal schools, and 141 normal students; and taking an average from the ordinary day-schools returned for those not returned, there fell to be added 2894; making the whole number attending our salaried day-schools 58,387. Add 15,000 children attending Free Church schools not connected with the Scheme, and the whole number is brought up to 73,387 children, who may be reported as receiving education at the hands of the Free Church. In regard to the funds, the collection made in August last amounted to 2784*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*—the entire amount of the Schoolmasters' Sustentation Fund for the year is 7557*l.* 3*s.*—making in all, with legacies and interest on investments (1552*l.* 2*s.*), and normal school fees (1112*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*), a total income for the year of 13,006*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.*

THAT OLD PRIMER.

"Where is that old primer?" once inquired a man, under deep impressions of the truth contained in that admirable compend, the Assembly's Shorter Catechism, which his sainted mother had taught him in early life. These truths had found a lodgment in his young heart. There they had lain like sacred leaven for years, till suddenly the life-giving Spirit had imparted to them his own power and energy, and the man was brought into the kingdom of Christ. We have been glad to observe for a considerable time past, renewed attention to the Shorter Catechism as a manual of instruction in the family and in the Sabbath school. We speak of it now only to urge it more and more on the attention of those engaged in imparting to youthful minds the great truths and doctrines of salvation. Innumerable books are written professedly for the religious instruction of the young. Some of these books are of doubtful tendency, with hardly salt and savor enough to preserve them from putrefaction. The young man who is to be trained up for heaven needs more of the sincere milk of the word; and we think parents and teachers may consider themselves at fault who omit to use the Shorter Catechism as a most important means of grace and instruction to the souls of children committed to their care.—Evangelist.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 1851.

Presbytery of New York.

Astoria church	26 65

Presbytery of Luzerne.

Mauch Chunk church	12 00

Presbytery of Newton.

Stillwater 1st and 2d chs 7; Stewartsville ch 32 63; Musconetcong Valley ch 9 75; Newton ch 38 20; Fox Hill ch 8 15	95 73

Presbytery of Philadelphia.

6th ch Philad. Ladies for the Jones Scholarship	75 00

Presbytery of Carlisle.

Greencastle ch Mrs C Davidson 50 cts, collections 43 87	44 37

Presbytery of Huntington.

Spruce Creek 2d ch 10 12; Mifflintown and Lost Creek chs 52	62 12

Presbytery of Northumberland.

Warrior Run ch 26 50; Derry and Washingtonville ch by a friend "Mrs J S C" 100	126 50

Presbytery of Richland.

Waterford ch ——— and wife, part of one fifth of wool money 6; Frederick ch 2 50	8 50

Presbytery of Maury.

Piedmont church	3 50

LEGACIES.

Legacy of Henry Long late of Little Valley Pa 333 33, less 1 25 discount 332 08; Legacy of John Johnston late of New York city 1000	1332 08

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend Mifflin co Pa 50; A Friend Marion co Ohio 2; A Friend 5	57 00
Total,	$1843 45

FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &C.

University Place ch N Y Mr Bull 25, Mr Brown 25, in all 50; Transferred from Fund for Candidates amount erroneously paid to that fund 100	150 00

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH, JUNE 1851.

Presbytery of Blairsville.

Saltsburg ch 30 29; Ebenezer ch 25; Gilgal and Perry chs 15, Congruity ch 21 82; Rural Valley ch 16; Glade Run ch 14	122 11

Presbytery of Ohio.

Bethany ch 23; Raccoon ch 23 50	46 50

Presbytery of Allegheny.

Butler ch 32; Middlesex ch 10	42 00

Presbytery of Beaver.

Neshanock church	24 00

Presbytery of Washington.

Burgettstown ch 15; Fairview ch 33; Cross Roads ch 11 76; Wellsburg ch 6; Frankfort ch 4; Lower Ten Mile ch 3 79; Forks of Wheeling ch 40	113 55

Presbytery of Steubenville.

Steubenville ch 6; Lancaster ch 25 15	31 15

MISCELLANEOUS.

Refunded by "W R" 50; Mrs. J Waugh 2 50	52 50
Total	$431 81

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & Co., Treasurers.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,

No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Mission House, July 12, 1851.

African Missions.—A letter of the Rev. J. L. Mackey, of March 27, mentions the good health of the missionaries, Mrs. Simpson having become quite well. Mr. and Mrs. Simpson had gone on a visit to Fernando Po, expecting to be absent from Corisco two or three weeks. Mr. Mackey expresses an earnest wish that more missionaries should be sent this year to that field of labour. Mr. W. McDonough, under date of April 4, reports his school at Settra Kroo as having from ten to eighteen scholars. The Rev. H. W. Ellis, in a letter of May 15, states that three persons had been lately admitted to the communion of the church at Kentucky. Mr. B. V. R. James, on the 13th of May, reports seventy-six scholars in connection with his school at Monrovia, with a regular attendance of about sixty.

China Missions.—Letters have been received from the Rev. A. P. Happer, at Canton, April 22, and the Rev. J. K. Wight, at Shanghai, April 9. Mr. Happer says "the attendance of the day scholars is very good. It averaged the past month about thirty-six out of the forty-two on the roll." Some of their parents attend the morning service. Mr. Happer renews his earnest request for another minister and a physician, to be connected with the Canton mission. Mr. Wight mentions that the Shanghai mission had not yet succeeded in procuring ground for a permanent site of the mission premises. Mr. Culbertson, besides his duties on the Translation Committee, spends a part of his time in visiting the Ningpo people at their shops for religious conversation. They seem much pleased to find in a strange place a foreigner speaking to them in their own dialect.

Choctaw Mission.—The Rev. A. Reid writes on the 20th of June, that in consequence of the prevalence of the measles among the boys in the school, it has been considered expedient to dispense with the usual examination at the close of the term. Between sixty and seventy cases had occurred, and we regret to learn that four of the boys had died. It had been a season of great care and fatigue to the missionaries; but they were supported by the persuasion that the Lord was with them in their affliction.

Creek Mission.—Letters from Kowetah, May 30, and Tallahassee, June 10, have been received. At the latter, many cases of the measles had also occurred, which were doing well.

Arrival of Missionaries.—The Rev. W. H. McAuley and family arrived safely in the Concordia at Boston, about the end of June. They were exposed to renewed danger on the voyage from Bermuda. Mr. McAuley hopes to be able to present the cause of the heathen amongst the churches in Alabama, his native State, and also in the neighbouring Synods.

Sailing of Missionaries.—The Rev. J. E. Freeman and his wife sailed from Boston for Calcutta in the ship Marcellus, on the 10th of July. Mr. Freeman returns with renewed health to his field of labour. Mrs. Freeman was a member of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabethtown, New Jersey. We would ask for them an interest in the prayers of the churches.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

OUR INDIA MISSIONS.

Our present force in that large field is only twenty-seven. And in view of the present rate of receipts, and the importance of other fields that must be cultivated, it is hardly thought expedient to attempt to keep more than about thirty men there. That is, thirty ordained missionaries from this country, together with as many native ministers and other assistants as they can qualify and employ. Is this an adequate force for such a field? Look at its extent and its population. The field already designated and partially occupied, embraces a territory as large as two or three of the first States in this Union, and a population equal probably to the whole of North America! Thirty men, will not give one minister to a million. Surely, then, the supply will not be deemed extravagant. To occupy the whole field, as this country is now occupied, will require at least thirty thousand native ministers. What a host! what labour, what funds, and what time it will require to educate them! Then what wisdom and what diligence to superintend and direct them in their work! And yet all this must be realized before that field will be supplied as this country now is. Even Texas, we are informed, has more than one minister to every thousand of her population at this moment. What a work then is here to perform, before that India will begin to compare with even the most destitute parts of our own country? We now occupy ten stations there. Put them all on a line from Allahabad to Lahore and they would be about seventy miles apart; and at nearly every one of the present stations, and indeed in almost any part of the entire field, you might describe a circle that would embrace a population equal to that of Texas, California, and New Mexico combined! Is not the force then proposed for that field, in all conscience small enough? The only considerations that could ever have suggested such a limitation, are the limited amount of funds afforded by the churches, and the extent and importance of other fields, that we are equally, and some of them much more bound to cultivate. Hence the duty and importance of giving all possible efficiency to the agencies at work there, to raise up and qualify an adequate native ministry, to carry forward and complete the work.

On that vast field, we now expend about fifty thousand dollars per annum. A large sum, many will exclaim. Too large, some will think, to expend upon a single field, and that so far from home. And yet it is not half as much as several Christian cities have recently paid for a few songs! Not near as much as many of our congregations have expended upon a single church edifice. Not a cent more, nor even as much, as very many of our cities and larger towns expend annually upon the same objects at home; for the support of the Gospel, for Bible and Tract distribution, for Sunday-schools, for the various departments of education, church-building, &c. It is not even as much as our Sabbath-schools could raise at the moderate rate of one cent per week.

But if we turn to China, there we find the field is still more ample, and the force employed less adequate. Let no one think then, that we are attempting too much while we have not yet even half a man to every million of the perishing multitudes there depending upon us for the bread of life. Rather let us mourn that the liberality of the Church has enabled the Board to attempt so little; and let us all strive together in our prayers and in every possible way, that our agencies there may be increased a thousand fold.

W. S. R.

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

LETTERS FROM A MISSIONARY TO HIS CHILDREN: NO. VII.

The Literature of the Hindus.

My Dear Children—During the hot months in India all extra labour must be avoided by foreigners. This accounts for the long interval between the last letter in this series, and the present. I now wish to tell you something about the literature of the Hindus.

Many persons in America think, because this people worship idols they must be very ignorant of all science, as well as of the Bible. When I was at home, a few years ago, I was sometimes asked how I managed to live on roots while in India! In point of intelligence idolaters are not all to be classed with the South Sea Islanders, or the American Indians.

You know the Greeks and Romans are still celebrated for their arts, and sciences, and philosophy, although they too bowed the knee to stocks and stones.

The Hindus have likewise their Augustan age, their classic ground, their philosophers, their poets, and their historians, and boast of a literature, which far surpasses in extent that of any western nation. Like their assumed antiquity, in whatever way it is viewed, it bears the semblance of infinity. The age of man is not sufficient for the perusal of even a tithe of their Shástres. It is said eighty-eight thousand sages wrote as many sacred books. Those best known are the Veds, Upaveds, Vedanga, and Puráns, all of which are said to have been revealed by Brahman.

The Veds are considered the fountain of all knowledge, and are divided into two thousand one hundred and ninety-one parts. They were collected and arranged in their present form by Vyásá, who was the son of a fisherwoman. They are called Sonti, or that which is heard. It is probable that they were transmitted orally from generation to generation to the time of Vyásá. The divinities invoked in them are air, fire, and the sun, all of which are supposed to be manifestations of Brahm, or the Self-existent. The present idolatry of the Hindus derives no authority from them, nor is the least trace of the worship of Rám or Krishn, or Mahadev in them. Much that is inculcated in the Veds has become obsolete, and a more gross form of idolatry substituted in its stead. The worship of air, fire, and the sun, has been replaced by that of heroes, dumb animals, and stocks and stones. There are, however, a small sect of Hindus still called Vedántists, who profess to follow the ancient creed, and inculcate an abstract and speculative monatheistical worship. An effort has lately been made in Calcutta by a large number of educated native youth, who call themselves Young India, or reformers, to restore the antiquated ritual of the Veds—to abolish idolatry, and the impure rites of modern Hindus. But with their ancient doctrines they have mixed up a good deal of infidelity derived from Hume, Voltaire, and Paine. Their chief object is to defeat Christianity by opposing it with a more rational religion than that now extant. The Veds consist chiefly of hymns, prayers, and precepts.

The Upaveds are divided into four parts, which comprise treatises on diseases, medicines, sacred music, the use of martial instruments, and the mechanical arts.

The Vedangas are six in number, and treat of religious acts, and ceremonies, grammar, prosody, astronomy, and difficult phrases in the Veds.

The Puránas, which are called by way of distinction the eighteen, are ascribed to another Vyásá. They were composed to support the various religious sects, as they acquired predominance, or as they profess, for the instruction and amusement of mankind. The date of the earliest is not known; but the latest cannot be more than five hundred years old. They contain an account of the creation, the destruction and renovation of worlds, the genealogy of gods and heroes, the difference between right and wrong, what is pure and impure, what is to be desired and what is to be avoided, by what means the soul may ascend to God, questions on the divine nature, and sublime speculations on the supreme power, goodness, and eternity of God. There are also eighteen Upa Puranas, of inferior sanctity. The whole of these constitute the present popular creed of the Hindus.

Besides these principal Shástres, there are the Ramayana, and Mahabhárat; the two great epic poems of the Hindus. The former records the adventures of Rám Chandr in his contest with the demon Rávaná, and the latter celebrates the great war between the Kúrás and Pandús, which took place at Kurukhshetr, only eighteen miles from Ambálá, where I write, and in which the god Krishna acted a conspicuous part. These two poems comprise the most valuable part of Hindu literature and history. Previous to them they have no credible memorials. They form the starting point of authentic Indian history. They are supposed to have been written about two thousand five hundred years ago. From this period the popular idolatry of the Hindus may be said to have commenced. To the Ramáyána and Mahábhárat, both Rám and Krishna owe their celebrity and deification, and by them the present religion was established. Valmeeki, the author of the former, and Vyásá of the latter, were the greatest poets of which the Hindus can boast, and through their genius, the achievements of their heroes have been kept alive for more than two thousand years. They are the Homer and Virgil of the Hindus.

Besides these works, which are all considered Scriptures, they have a body of law called Smriti, also in eighteen books, which treat of the administration of justice, and the punishment of crimes.

This was delivered by Manu, the Hindu Adam, for the instruction of the human species. There are also innumerable commentaries on the Hindu sacred books, among which the Vidyádarsa, or view of learning is the chief. Likewise dictionaries, and works on astronomy, philosophy, grammar, logic, chronology, cosmogony, medicine, theology, mythology, poetry, the drama, fiction, geography, mathematics, &c. All of these are supposed to be parts of the Shastres, and consequently not allowed to be read or studied by those not of the Brahmanical Order. This prohibition, however, like all others which are contrary to the laws of God and nature, is in many cases a dead letter. There have been bold spirits in all ages, who disregarding these dogmas of the Brahmans have burst the bonds of caste, and by the force of their own genius have become celebrated for their learning. Such was Vyásá, the collector of the Veds.

The language in which both the sacred and profane books of the Hindus are written is Sanskrit, which means the polished. It is now a dead language, so highly artificial that some philologists suppose that it never was spoken—that it was invented by the priests, and consecrated to the mysteries of religion. One fact in regard to it is certain. The Brahmans, in order to secure for themselves passive obedience, and for their faith a peculiar sanctity, have prohibited the laity from acquiring a knowledge of Sanskrit, and to prevent them from learning the first principles of it, they have made the grammar a part of the Veds! It is universally admitted that Sanskrit is the purest and most perfect language extant. It does not contain a vestige of foreign mixture. This proves its great antiquity. It is the parent of all the numerous languages of India except one or two, which are of Arabic origin. The modern Sanskrit, in which the Mahábhárat and Ramáyána are written, is not more difficult to acquire than Greek, to which, in many respects, it bears a striking resemblance.

The ancient, or that of the Veds, is, like their doctrines, almost obsolete. Very few of the most learned pandits of the present day can read it intelligibly. Since the subjugation of Hindustan by the English, a few works have been translated, under the auspices of government and others, by individuals both in India and Europe, from Sanscrit into the spoken languages of the people which are in Northern India, Hindi and Urdu; but the mass of the literature of the Hindus is still locked up in an almost unknown tongue.

The Hindi is the dialect used by the majority of the Hindus, and that in which the Shastres are expounded by the pandits. Some philologists suppose that it is the language of the aborigines of India, greatly enriched from Sanscrit. Others think it is a dialect of this fruitful language. It is a very pure, polished, rich, and euphonious language. The Urdu is the "Lingua Franca" of Hindustan, but is used chiefly among the Musulman population of Northern India. It is a mixture of Hindi and Persian, and dates its origin from the invasion of Mahmood of Guzni, about eight hundred years ago, whose followers introduced Persian into India. As the name imports, it was originally a camp or bazar language, and was used in military and commercial transactions between Mohammedans and Hindus, the former supplying the nouns, and the latter the verbs; but is now more extensively used throughout Hindustan than any other dialect. It differs very little from Hindi in its structure. The same grammar answers for both, but their dictionaries are quite different. The Urdu has this advantage over its sister, that while for the latter we can only draw on Sanscrit for aid, for the former we can draw to any extent on Persian, Arabic, and Sanscrit, and that without Urdúizing them, as has to be done in English, when we tax the learned languages for assistance. As these are the two languages we use daily when we preach in the bazars, sometimes commencing our sermons in one, and finishing them in the other, as our audiences vary from Mohammedan to Hindu, or vice versa, and in which we translate and print the most of our books, I will give you a specimen of them both in the Roman character, as follows:

The Lord's Prayer in Urdu:

Ai hamáre báp, jo asmán par hai, tere nám ki tagdis ho. Teri badsháhat áwe, teri margi joisi Asman par hai zamin par bhi bar áwe Hamári roz ki roti áj hamen bakhsh. Aur jistaráh ham apne garzdárou ko bakhshte kain tu apne dain kam ko bakhsh de. Aur hamen azmaish men nadál, balki burái se bachá. Kyunki bádsháhat, aur gudrat, aur jalál tramesha teráhi hain. Amin.

The Lord's Prayer in Hindi:

He hamáre pitá jo swargmen hai, tera nám pawitr howe. Terá váj áwe, teri ichchha jaisi swargmen, waise pritwi men howe. Hamáre pratidiu ki roti áj hamko de, aur hamove vinou ko chhema kar jaise ham bhi apre viniou ko chhema karte hain. Aur hamen porikshá men na dál paruntu burái se bachá; kyunki váj, aur prákarm, aur máhátme sadá tere hain. Amin.

Besides these two languages, we have Panjábí in our sphere of labour. This is chiefly spoken by the Sikhs in the Panjáb. It is, however, little more than a corruption of Hindi and Urdu. In other parts of India there are various dialects; but nearly all founded on a common basis. The learned languages of India are Sanscrit, Arabic, and Persian, all of which have ceased to be used in speech, but are still taught in the indigenous schools. The Brahmans and Maulavis, who are the literati of the Hindus and Mohammedans, affect to despise the vernacular languages, and to be ignorant of them. They say they are neither fit for religion nor science. We however use them for both, and find them to answer very well, with the aid of a little Sanscrit and Persian to express the nicer shades of thought. The consequence of this dogma is an almost entire cessation of improvement in literature among the Hindus and Musulmans of India. Very few of their most educated men are able to compose works in the learned languages, and their strong prejudices against those of the people will not allow them to make use of them for this purpose. Hence arises, in a great measure, the stagnation of mind which prevails to so lamentable a degree among the higher classes in India, and the great degradation and ignorance of the mass of the people. Imagine what a different state of things would exist in Europe or America, if no new books had been written for the last eight hundred years, and if all the literature written previous to this time, and religion too, were still sealed up in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, for the special benefit of the priesthood. Were such the case, the long dark night of ages which preceded the Reformation would still be enveloping the world in worse than Egyptian darkness. The light and liberty which now exalt the western hemisphere so much above the eastern, would never have shone on the world, nor burst asunder the fetters of enslaved millions. A Bacon, a Newton, or a Milton, would never have introduced new eras in the science of philosophy, astronomy, and song. America would still have been a howling wilderness, inhabited only by the red man and wild animals.

But I must now close this long letter. I hope in future to give you a more detailed account of the astronomy, philosophy, geography, and poetry of the Hindus, also a description of their schools.

Your affectionate father,

J. M. Jamieson.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. GOLOK NATH.

Brief Notices of a Month's Labour.

October 1st, 1850. Tuesday—To day I had but one individual to talk to at the Mission premises: [Ialandar.] He was a Hindu of some learning, and we had several times had opportunity of seeing each other, and talking together on the subject of religion. We both sat at the school-house, and continued disputing about idolatry till evening.

2d. Wednesday—Having found nobody at the Mission compound to converse with, I went to the city, and succeeded in getting a small company to hear me read and explain a page or two in Pilgrim's Progress in Panjabí.

3d. Thursday—At Guzán ki basti [village of Guzan.] I spent some time this evening in talking with a few individuals on the necessity of a Mediator, who could effect a peace between man and our sin-avenging God.

4th. Friday—A couple of Udásí faqírs, with a few Hindus from the city came to converse with me in the afternoon—a long conversation on the subject of sin and judgment ensued; and ended in giving a book or two, to read and think more on the subject.

5th. Saturday—Busy in getting things ready to start on Monday morning towards Jwála Múkhí.

6th. Sabbath—Preached a sermon to suit the subject of prayer on the first Sabbath of the month.

7th. Monday—Brother J. B. Lewis, Abdullah and myself started very early, and made a long march to Hoosheyarpur; put up with Captain C——, a Christian officer, for the night.

8th. Another long march of twenty kos [thirty miles] brought us in the evening to a place called Anib. On the road I received eight boxes of books sent up for the occasion from Lodiana. The people going to the Mela were travelling on my left and right, and as I had a slow mule to ride, I could not very easily pass them, so I attempted to improve the opportunity in talking with them on various religious subjects.

9th. Stopped at a place within a kos of the river.

10th. About ten we reached Jwála Múkhí, and got our tents pitched at the usual place.

After taking some refreshment, brother John and myself began with our distribution, and in a short time we had a crowd of readers before us. The mela this year was somewhat larger than usual. The Rajah of Pateeyala with 15,000 men of his own establishment, and as many more from his territory, were present there before we got to the ground. The majority of these men were Sikhs, and could read Gurmukhí, and received our books with great eagerness.

11th. Friday—At day break we rose and began the work of distribution. A large crowd was immediately collected, and remained with us till it was time for our breakfast. After a short time we recommenced our work, and continued till evening. In this way we laboured at this heathen fair for parts of five days, when the Mela became very thin, and we also struck our tent to return home.

On the afternoon of the 14th, recrossed the river Béyas. During our stay here we gave away nearly seven boxes of books, a large number being Panjábi and next Hindi.

We had made it a rule among ourselves not to give any one a book without making a short lecture previous to handing it, explaining the contents as briefly as possible, but at the same time telling the person every thing necessary for understanding the volume he received. For instance, when we thought of giving away a New Testament to an individual reading well enough to deserve it, we commenced by saying, "Here is a book which contains the account of a person (the incarnate Son of God) born in the country of Judea, in the town of Bethlehem, near the great city Jerusalem, some 1850 years ago; sent by God to be the Saviour of mankind, by offering his life a ransom for their sins. You will find in the first part of this book a short account of his miraculous birth, his wonderful preservation, the beginning of his ministry, his doctrines and teachings, his parables, his miracles, his death, his resurrection, his great commission to his apostles, the descent of the Holy Spirit on them, their extraordinary sufferings and preachings, the organization of Christian assemblies, and the rapid spread of Christianity in a large tract of country among hostile nations. In the latter part you will find several letters or epistles addressed to these assemblies, inculcating Christian doctrines and morals; and at the close there is a book in which several events connected with the Church and State are predicted, a part of which has already been fulfilled, and a part still remains to be fulfilled." This has been my uniform practice in giving a large book, but in handing over portions of Scriptures, and tract volumes, my remarks necessarily have been much shorter; but I have never failed to say something appropriate with every book I distributed. It is true I gave away thus a less number of books; but I trust a greater amount of good has been done. I hear the people frequently make remarks that they cannot understand our books; particularly the New or Old Testament. In order to help them a little in their difficulty, I had adopted this plan.

We had long discussions with the officiating Priests, and Bhagats of the Shrines, about the general attributes of their Debis. They all ascribe power, power to subdue giants, to their Debis. But we attempted to explain to them that the Saviour of the world had to subdue the power of Satan and his kingdom, and to satisfy the just claims of the broken law of God; he had to die himself in the stead of sinners.

Strange doctrines these seemed to them. The great Isá Masih, of the Christians and Musulmans, died on the Cross as a Malefactor! But we said to them that he also rose again the third day, and thus gained a victory over death itself. In short, I attempted with my feeble powers, to enlighten my hearers on this one important subject the salvation of sinners through the death of Christ.

On our way back, we had ample opportunity of talking on religious subjects with the returning pilgrims, and I trust some of them will retain the impression they got from our remarks, viz.: that they had gained nothing by coming to the great goddess Jwala; on the contrary they had lost all the money they brought from home, and which they had so hardly earned, and could have better and more usefully expended on other objects.

19th. Saturday—At home again. Had a long conversation with a company of Musulmans this evening at Mizán ki busti on the subject of atonement; but it ended in nothing.

20th. Sabbath—Preached in the Mission Chapel from Job xix. 25, about twenty persons from without were present.

21st. Monday—Daniel and myself spent a short time at the bázár to-day, and had a good audience to speak to a while, on the plan of salvation with repentance and faith.

22d. Tuesday—City. Talked with a Bázár cloth merchant for half an hour.

23d. Wednesday—Visited Sheikh ki basti, conversed with a few Banyas [shopkeepers] for about an hour or so—returned home with Azím who had accompanied me.

24th. Thursday—A pandit from Hosheyarpore occupied my time, and gave me a good opportunity to teach Christianity privately. He went back apparently well satisfied.

25th. Friday—In the city. A large crowd to hear a simple exposition of a chapter in the gospel.

26th. Saturday—At Gurzan ki basti. Daniel talked and I listened to his remarks.

27th. Sabbath—Preached from the 99th Psalm; more than twenty persons were present.

28th. Monday—Went to Cantonments to visit a friend.

29th. Tuesday—A company of Musulmans from Tanda called on me this afternoon. After a long conversation on various subjects, they took their leave, with a few books to read at home.

30th. Wednesday—To-day I preached a long sermon at the bazar, but was occasionally interrupted by Musulmans when I had the least disposition to stop to hear them.

31st. Thursday—An old friend from Gurzan ki basti kept me at home talking on the subject of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection till evening. The conversation indeed was interesting. The poor old heathen was quite surprised to hear that the Saviour of the world had to die for his people.

MISSION IN SIAM.

LETTER OF DR. S. R. HOUSE TO CHILDREN.

Recollections of the Cholera in Bangkok—Vain devices of the Heathen.

BANGKOK, Siam, February, 1851.

My Dear Young Friends:—During the past few weeks there have been many deaths from cholera in this city; indeed since the sad visit we had from that terrible disease in the summer of 1849, when 2000 and more were carried off by it here in a single day—there has perhaps not been a month in which some have not died from it in Bangkok. We have got used therefore to having the cholera among us, just as they have in Calcutta and Bombay and other cities of India where they almost always have it, and the people now do not dread it as they did when after being free from it thirty years, it broke out again in Siam some twenty months ago. Those indeed were dreadful days, when in less than a fortnight more than 20,000 people perished in this one city where we live; when go where you would in the streets you would meet men carrying away their dead slung from a bamboo borne on the shoulders of two of them; when hundreds of corpses were thrown into the river, and heaps on heaps were piled up like logs and burned to get them out of the way. I have for a long time thought some recollections of what the people of this country did in those days of the pestilence would interest my young friends in America, and lead them to pity the poor heathen who have none to look to that can help them in their time of trouble.

I need not say that the Siamese were very much frightened when this dreadful cholera broke out among them. They saw their friends and neighbours sicken in an hour, and dying on their right hand and left, in almost every house, and each one feared it might be his turn next. And where did they look for help? Did the King proclaim a fast-day, think you, and the people repent of their many sins and pray to God to have mercy upon them? Alas! God was not in the thoughts of this people at all. Their religion teaches them there is no God—no Creator who made the world—the world made itself, they say—it always was, and the God they do worship, whose images are in every temple, was nothing once but a mere man like themselves, and now that he has become a god and left the world he knows nothing, cares nothing about it, or about aught else indeed.

The common notion among them about the pestilence was, that an army of wicked spirits had come invisibly to carry off mankind to make them their servants in the unseen world. Oh how anxious they were to make these spirits of the air their friends. So they made various offerings to them—offerings to devils—without one thought of looking to the mercy of Him who alone has power to save from death. It was a common practice on those days to make a little square tray of pieces of the plantain-tree, and, putting their offerings on this, leave it by the side of the street near by where the spirits might find it, or else placing it on the water let it float away down the stream. The river was full of these little floats, and everywhere you went on land you would see them. Now what do you think the offerings were that were laid upon these trays? Coming home one night, I stumbled over one of them that lay right in my path, and having a lantern I stopped to examine it. It was a curious collection of odds and ends. You would hardly believe anybody could be so silly as to think he could escape death by trusting to such follies. On the rude tray, which was about a foot square, was strewed some rice, some coarse salt tied up in a little rag, some fresh flowers, betelnut, sliced plantain, the end of a torch, and two rough images of clay representing a man and woman each with a dirty shred of cloth around them. The object in making these images was that the spirits might take these persons of clay and accept them for their servants in the place of the man and woman that made the offering. I never heard of any of the invisible spirits carrying off any of these dainty gifts, but more than once I have seen sensible-looking dogs helping themselves very freely to the rice and whatever else that was eatable they could find among them.

Others again would take a great deal of pains to make a little junk or ship just like that curious Chinese junk that was in New York two or three years ago; perfect little models they were, all painted off gaily; and then they would fit them out with little red and white banners and wax tapers, and fruit and flowers, and put in them as passengers little clay images of men, and women, and children, and just at dusk they would light up the tapers and away would launch the little vessel, an offering to the spirits to be carried away by the tide.

Many wore amulets and charms about their necks, to keep off from them the evil spirits that bring disease. They consisted of strips of paper with curious squares and marks upon them, sewed up in bits of red cloth on leather of a three cornered shape.

But by far the most common practice as a preventive of cholera was the putting a string or a few strands of white cotton yarn about their necks and wrists. Go where you would, in the market or along the river side, you would see all or nearly all the women and children tricked out with this white string. I have been in the houses of noblemen where one was just taken sick, where all the women of the family were busy dividing a hank of this cotton yarn into portions and tying them around the wrists or neck of themselves and their children, with as much earnestness as though their lives depended on it. A poor dependence indeed, as they might have seen with half an eye were not their understandings blinded. Often in trying to feel for the pulse of some poor dying creature, have I had to push this silly wisp of cotton thread away to get at the wrist. The cholera was not to be kept off by a little cotton string. And yet they thought they could not only keep it from themselves but from their households by such means. Many houses were entirely encircled by a long cord of this cotton, with here and there little square bits of paper all written over fastened to it. I saw the outer walls of the palace of the King himself, and they are more than a mile in circumference, thus girt round—the cord looped up from the battlements every few rods. Death crossed the enchanted line however, if the spirits did not, and hundreds of the King's large household were swept away. The disease reached all to whom God sent it, nor have spirits power to harm or to bless unless He suffers them.

The pestilence had not been prevailing long, before the Chinese in the city, at their houses on land, and at every floating house (and these last you must know line the river and canals on which Bangkok is built, for miles), had a tall bamboo pole put up with cords fixed to it, by which a little lantern could be raised to the top when night came. After dark, when all these were lighted up, they gave the river a beautiful appearance as if some celebration was going on, which we could have enjoyed better if we could have forgotten the superstition that led to it. And this foolish waste of oil was kept up every night and all night long, for weeks and months. Besides this the Chinese tried to get the favour of their gods by processions on land and water, by boat races, firing of crackers, &c.

There were other spirits besides those that they supposed had caused the pestilence, that the Siamese treated with great respect during those days. Before or near almost every house in Siam, raised up on a single post about as high as one's head, stands a little wooden doll-baby house, for such I am sure you would take it to be,—in the shape of a Siamese house, having one small room inside open in front, with a little porch or stoop before it. In this porch and in the little room you will always find a quantity of offerings, such curious ones too, that when you see them you will be more sure than ever it was a doll's play-house you were looking at, and yet the grown-up people of the family have put them there to get the good will of the spirit that guards the spot where their dwelling stands. There is a piece of board shaped something like the head of a spear, some slips of cloth all scribbled over, some little images of elephants and horses, and perhaps of men and women, made out of clay, and there is rice, and betelnut and tobacco, with flowers, and if any of the family are sick, wax tapers will be burnt there and food set out. The worshipping these spirits of the place is a kind of superstition that appears to have been handed down by the forefathers of the Siamese from the ancient times before the Buddhist religion, which knows nothing of it, was introduced into their country. As the people here believe these spirits can protect them from sickness, you may be sure during cholera time their offering-houses were well served—and the little sprites (had there been any) had no lack of tobacco and betel, and food and clothing, and clay horses to ride.

You will not wonder to be told that the temples of the idols and their idol priests were not forgotten in those days. The preaching places were filled with hearers—presents were made in abundance to the priests—and much bowing down to idols and pagodas practised; all to make merit that would ensure their safety. One great man I heard of, thought he could not die of the cholera, he had just gained so much merit by paying the expenses of making several new priests—some three or four hundred ticals; but he too was carried off like the rest. Priests would be called to chant their prayers over the dying, that they might be happy in the next life. Once I was much affected by seeing a poor mother try to comfort her son, a young man struck down and fast sinking with a violent attack of cholera, by telling him to think of the favour of his (idol) god, and then putting his hands together with the palms touching,—as he was too far gone to raise them himself, lifting them for him above his head, as they do when they worship the image of Buddh.

Many other things I might tell you, dear children, about this visit of the cholera to Siam, and the foolish practices of the inhabitants; but I have told you enough, I trust, to lead you to feel sorry for this ignorant heathen people, and to pray that they may be turned away from their sins, and follies, and idols, and made to trust in the living God who alone can save. How much reason have you to be thankful, my young friends, that, unlike the poor heathen, you have been taught by your parents, and teachers in the Sabbath-school, about that kind Heavenly Father, who is merciful and gracious, and loves them that love Him, and can deliver from all evil, yea redeem our lives from destruction, and our souls from eternal death.

Believe me your sincere though distant friend,

SAMUEL R. HOUSE.

CHINA: NINGPO MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. HENRY V. RANKIN.

Missionary Incidents and Reflections.

[Continued from page 92.]

6th January, 1851. Monday—This day, the first Monday of the new year, has, as is usual, been set apart as a day of fasting and prayer by all the missionaries in Ningpo. Social meetings were held in the morning and afternoon, in which we have found it pleasant and profitable to lift our united prayers to the God of missions. There is much to make us mourn. The past year has witnessed but few additions to the Church in China, and more labourers have from one cause or another been called from the field than those who have joined us in the work. One missionary in another part has recently been cut off by the hands of violent men, and we are just now saddened by what seems the premature death of another. Three of the little ones in our community have been taken to the fold of the good Shepherd. Yet we have so many grounds of thankfulness that we found it profitable in the morning to meditate upon the words, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

We have recently had in our neighbourhood an instance of spirit marriage. A young man who had recently died after being betrothed to be married, needed a wife, it was discovered, in his new state. The friends therefore conjured up one from the dead, and the ancestral tablets were brought, and ceremonies were performed as if the parties were alive! The mirth of those interested in the affair has been quite boisterous. Another marriage superstition of the Chinese occurs to me in reference to one of the girls in our school. A match being contemplated for her with a promising son of a very worthy teacher, it was found upon examining the horoscope that one of the parties was born under the sign of the dog, and the other under that of the sheep, between which animals, it was argued, not much harmony was likely to exist. This of course decided the matter against the proposed marriage.

7th January, Wednesday—The mission have today agreed that Mr. Culbertson should at the earliest convenient opportunity go to Shanghai, and take his seat in the Committee for translating the Old Testament, to which he was elected a few months ago. His absence for a time will be a great loss to us, yet the work is of such commanding importance that we feel impelled to make the sacrifice. By the time that he reaches Shanghai, the translation will probably have advanced through the Pentateuch, though a subsequent revision will be necessary, which is to be sent to the various stations.

The chapel on our lot, and adjoining the female school, is now almost completed, and in about a month we hope also to enter the new city church. In the erection of both these edifices, Mr. Culbertson has been one of the Committee, and the delay in the work is the principal cause of his probable detention with us for a month to come. We have experienced much trouble in the building of the church. Ningpo houses are all built in a manner the reverse of ours. Upright beams are joined together in the form of the desired house and immediately covered over with tiles. After this the brick walls are thrown up. They are designed simply to protect the inmate from the weather, and not at all to support the roof—the bricks being built in alternate layers upon their faces and edges on both sides of the wall, and the wall is then filled in with broken tiles and earth. The lime is formed chiefly from well-pounded shells, and is not very good, nor are the bricks generally as good as those at home: yet they form a very enduring wall for this climate. The bricks and tiles are all of a slate colour. We have found it advisable to plaster the buildings which we have put up outside as well as within, though the people are usually more sparing of their lime. When they do plaster their houses, the coating is frequently formed in part of mud, which they use freely in various ways. The contract for the city church, however, contemplated solid walls to bear in part the weight of the roof; but to have the contract carried out we have been obliged to exercise the most rigid watch. We have, by turns, been present while the work was advancing every day, and yet notwithstanding all our vigilance have, upon overhauling the walls occasionally found hollow spaces. It has therefore been to us all, and especially to the building Committee, a heavy burden, from which however we will soon be relieved.

14th January, Tuesday—To-day with Brother W. Martin, I visited a room which has just been fitted up by us, to serve as a school-room and chapel, outside the south gate, and about two miles from our residence. It was market day in that part of the suburbs, so that for half a mile the dense crowd with their many provisions greatly impeded our progress. As soon as the door was thrown open the house was filled. We told them of our object to establish a school and divine service among them, and that every Sabbath the gospel would be preached. The field is very interesting, from the large population and their favourable disposition, besides being far removed from any other preaching station or school in Ningpo. Upon coming back we turned into the country and passed through a few small villages in which we experienced uniform courtesy. The plain outside the city in this south-west direction, we found abundantly covered with tombs, some of which were costly and massive. In this vast necropolis were deposited the ashes of more than are now alive, but to how few, alas, had the gospel of the kingdom been preached! Like those with whom we now mingle, these had followed the vain pursuits of life; but now "the memory of them is forgotten; also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished." One sees so much of death and the grave in China, that many solemn impressions of his earlier days become gradually effaced. If we turn off at all into the country, we must needs pass by tombs which are built of brick above the ground with a large stone for a covering. A small heap of dirt is at first thrown upon the stone, which is added to with pious care every year by the friends of the deceased till mounds are formed. Some of these, when several tombs were placed near each other, have in the lapse of centuries become large artificial mounds and hills, and covered as they generally are with pines and cypress trees, they form the only elevations for miles in the extensive plain which surrounds Ningpo. At Amoy and Fuhchau, where the country is undulating, we find the hills exclusively taken up with graves, which present a solemn appearance to a stranger, especially during the feast of the tribes in spring, when "the mourners go about the streets," and we behold the innumerable graves covered over with paper, which can be seen at a great distance, and which marks the extent of these cities of the dead. The tombs are very enduring in these places, whereas we often in this vicinity pass by tombs in ruins, where lie exposed human skulls and bones. Now and then a dead infant tied up in a piece of matting is washed ashore on the river side, and in the winter it is not uncommon to see in the streets the bodies of beggars, exposed perhaps for several days before they are removed. The dead are indeed everywhere in this land—for the people have no regular burying grounds, but in the luckiest spots—whether it be in the centre of their farms or upon some distant elevation, they deposit the remains of their friends. Yet with all their reverence for the departed, it is melancholy to observe with what scorn they treat the Christian doctrine of the Resurrection. More than once I have noticed the mention of that precious article of our faith, the occasion of evident aversion on the part of those who had listened attentively to and coincided in many other important doctrines. So did the heathen of old regard it, even when proclaimed by Paul; nor would we be discouraged in holding up to their now darkened minds the awful verity that these millions of the dead shall live again; and that the trump of the arch-angel is yet to awake the mouldering remains of buried generations now sleeping side by side over the hills and plains of China and the world, and especially to invite them to participate in the first resurrection. The dry bones of those spiritually dead, are very many, and lo! they are very dry; yet the Spirit of the Lord will yet breathe upon them, and they will stand up an exceeding great army. Hasten, O Lord, the fulfilment of thy gracious purpose of mercy!

19th January—This day I regard with interest as the first in which I have formally and publicly proclaimed the "glad tidings." Brother M. and myself opened our new chapel this afternoon with prayer and a short and simple unfolding of the chief points of Christian faith. The room was quite full, and the audience tolerably quiet, though they must have exercised much forbearance with our broken language. It is indeed no child's-play to attempt to utter the mysteries of the cross in so hard a tongue, and it seemed almost presumptuous to commence this great work with so imperfect an acquaintance with the dialect. If anything in this world it be proper "earnestly to covet," it certainly, on the part of the missionary, is the gift of tongues, joined with an ardent love to his Saviour. The two are by no means incompatible, though even in the pursuit of the former the devil places temptations to neglect the latter. We do not get rid of our arch enemy by crossing the ocean, and the foreign missionary needs the prayers of the faithful at home that he may receive these two "good gifts." Three things Christ demands of Christians in their prayers for the cause of missions—generally that His kingdom should come—again, that more labourers should be sent into his vineyard—and those in the field should also be remembered, that "the word of God may have free course and be glorified"—and for this end "that utterance may be given unto us, that we may open our mouths boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel." The apostle tells us that it is God who opens this door of utterance, (Col. iv. 3,) and he entreats the Ephesian Christians partly for this end, to "pray always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication."

20th January—To-day letters have reached us giving an interesting account of the visit of two native Christians at Shanghai to the Jews in the province of Honan. Though they are sadly degenerated, many importants facts have come into notice by this visit to them, for the first time, of Protestant Christians.

1st February, Saturday—This is the beginning of the Chinese new year, and, as is usual, has been the occasion of great mirth and joy among the people. In the streets it presents the appearance of the only Sabbath in the year. The weather has been very unpleasant, and we have not in consequence received the usual number of calls from our Chinese acquaintances in the city to pa-she, or pay respects to the new year. Our own house has been filled with happy faces and merry hearts to-day, in consequence of the beginning of the week's holiday which we give to the girls, and especially of a New Year's dinner, prepared with more care than usual, and of which they and a few of Miss Aldersey's pupils as guests, partook with much satisfaction. We gave them also trifling presents, which they seem highly to prize. This is the season in which much idolatry prevails, especially of a domestic kind. Families are accustomed to worship heaven and earth, and the spirits of their deceased ancestors, and to eat things offered to idols. We hoped, therefore, to save our dear pupils from this evil by detaining them in the school. There is not much difficulty in this, since the home which we furnish them is so much more pleasant than the majority of those from which they came, and the hope of the "loaves and fishes" perhaps, also tempted some to remain. In one case at least, however, we feel assured that a higher motive obtained—for hers is a tolerably pleasant home, and her friends are in pretty good circumstances. She is now the largest girl in school, (the oldest having left us a few days since upon the expiration of her term,) and for some time has shown much solicitude in respect to her soul; and the desire of being away from the idolatries of her friends, doubtless induced her to entreat her aunt to permit her to remain—a request very readily granted. The oldest girl has just left us, and will soon be married. She is now about eighteen years old, and has been under our care during four years. She was at first very vicious, and though still not wholly subdued, her character has evidently become much softened. We have also just admitted a few new members into the school—two of whom, the children of Roman Catholic parents, are indentured for a term of eight years.

2d February, Sabbath—At communion in the Chinese language to-day, the church members sung, for the first time, in a new Collection of Hymns, just prepared by Dr. McCartee. These consist chiefly of literal translations of some of the most precious hymns with which Christians of every denomination are familiar. There are twenty-three in all; they contain Bishop Kenn's morning and evening hymn —"From Greenland's icy mountains," "While shepherds watched their flocks by night"—hymns appropriate to the Sabbath, to the sacraments, to death and the judgment—paraphrases of the 1st and 100th Psalms—and the creed, and ten commandments, and a doxology, and others also in verse. It was truly affecting to hear so many voices singing to the tune of "Windham," a version of "'Twas on that dark, that doleful night," even in a strange tongue. To me it was more touching than when sung in the original. There has been a great defect of Christian literature in this important branch, and we may indeed hope for much good from this little volume.

3d February—Letters from Shanghai to-day announce the pleasing intelligence that the late Imperial Commissioner Keying, so favourably known by foreigners, has just issued a book which vindicates the Christian religion.* The extract sent to us is a clear and full expression of belief in the prominent doctrines of the Christian faith, and if genuine, as there is every reason to believe it is, it gives us great hope to pray with renewed confidence, since one so high in honour and office dares to acknowledge the only true God. As an auxiliary confirmation to those who make use of that translation, it is interesting to notice that throughout, in speaking of God, he uses Shin and not Shang-ti. The use of a term in this vexed question by one of his literary distinction, is of course a strong argument in favour of Shin. To this may be added another—that the Jews, when asked recently by those sent to them in Honan, replied, as they did to the Jesuits a hundred years ago, that they did not worship Shang-ti—for he was worshipped by the Chinese heathen. Keying received a copy of the Manchu Testament from Mr. Thom, and while at Canton, he states that he attentively studied the doctrines of Jesus. We just learn that he, with Muh-chang-a, another old eminent statesman, have been degraded for their too greatly favouring the barbarians—the former to the fifth rank, and that the latter has been stripped of all honour and titles. The young Emperor (who is only eighteen years old) seems to be pursuing a rash course of conduct, and he may yet involve his country in trouble. Already there has been much insurrection in some of the southwestern provinces, which has been, however, in a measure quelled.

10th February—Yesterday the new chapel on the north bank of the river, and adjoining the female school, was dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, after an interesting discourse by the pastor, founded upon Isaiah, lvi. 6, 7. In the afternoon, Chinese services were conducted in it, and a full audience was in attendance. The chapel forms a neat building, consisting of a portico outside, and a room 41 feet long and 23 broad. It furnishes accommodations for nearly 200 persons. The cost of it, including land, fences, &c. is a little more than five hundred dollars, two hundred of which was collected here. There is something interesting in the dedication of a "House of God," and especially is it so in a heathen land. May God grant ever to fill it with his presence and glory.

To-day the pastoral charge of the church was resigned by Mr. Culbertson, as he expects soon to leave for Shanghai, and Mr. Way has been elected to supply the place. A meeting of Presbytery will soon be called to act upon the matter.

(To be continued.)

CHINA: CANTON MISSION.

AN EXCURSION TO WHITE CLOUD MOUNTAIN.

The Rev. A. P. Happer, under date of November 26, 1850, sends an account of a short journey to a place of some note in the neighbourhood of Canton.

I lately made an excursion to the top of a high hill, eight miles to the north-east of the city, called by the Chinese the "White Cloud Mountain." So far as I know we were the first foreigners that ever ascended it. The Rev. Dr. Ball, with whom I went on this visit, sent a native convert, who is employed as a tract distributor, to the mountain a few days previously, to find out the best way to go up the hill. This man now acted as our guide. We started on foot at 6 o'clock in the morning. For three or four miles after we left the crowded streets of the city the road led us through rice fields, and we only saw a few farmers who were engaged in harvesting the rice. As we approached the foot of the hill, the path was by the side of a little rivulet, in which fish were swimming. This recalled to our memories more than any thing else the purling brooks, on whose green banks we had sported in the days of our boyhood. When we arrived at the bottom of the hill, we found an excellent paved road, which was continued all the way up to the principal temple. In some places there is a succession of solid granite steps, like stairs. At the principal ascent there were more than two hundred steps. This road is built for the accommodation of the multitudes who annually go to this temple to worship, and for those who go there to worship at the grave of their ancestors. This hill contains many good locations for graves; and as the priests who own the mountain derive great profits from the sites sold for graves, they seek in every way to enhance their value. We found afterwards that there are three or four other paved roads up the hill. These have been built by devotees, who expected in this way to obtain merit in the sight of their idols.

We found a half-way house on the side of the mountain where the weary could rest themselves. Here, instead of spirituous liquors being offered for sale, there was an abundant supply of tea, that most refreshing of all beverages. We afterwards found on some of the more frequented roads large temporary sheds for the accommodation of passengers. In some of them a hundred persons could be seated around tables and supplied with tea and cakes, or with more substantial fare if they wished it. This I consider a great improvement on what is too often seen in our own gospel-enlightened land, where beer and all kinds of spirituous liquors are provided in similar places. We found these tea houses good places to distribute tracts, as there were always some persons, and frequently a great many, sitting under the shade to rest and refresh themselves; and they were always pleased to hear the short message we had for them and to receive our tracts.

The hill is wholly polluted by idolatry. There are seventeen temples located on different parts of it. We visited several of them, and at each one the priests received us kindly. The principal temple is beautifully situated near the top of the mountain in a deep ravine. While nearly all other parts of the mountain are destitute of trees, it is surrounded by a dense forest. A mountain stream flows down through the ravine. It opens to the south, and in summer must be a delightfully cool retreat from the heat and noise of the city. It would be an excellent health retreat, if we could obtain rooms in the temple. This temple is now in fine repair, having been fitted up at great expense a few years ago, by the high officers of this province, headed by the intelligent and liberal minded statesman, Wóng Ngán Lung, who was then Governor. There was one room appropriated to the tablets erected to the memory of those, who had at different times contributed to the erection and embellishment of the buildings. Before these tablets incense is kept constantly burning.

It is a monastery as well as temple, and is occupied by twelve Buddhist priests. The buildings are erected in a very irregular manner, and without any reference to architectural design. One building rises above another, as they are built on the mountain as it rises higher behind them. Over all the doors and altars, very highly ornamented tablets are suspended, the gifts of devotees. On these are various inscriptions. The inscription over the principal entrance, states that the "White Cloud mountain is at rest or in good health." Such inscriptions as the following are about the altars: "We pray protect us in peace." "Protect me in peace." "Those who sincerely pray shall obtain." "Those who sincerely pray shall have an answer." "Happiness arises from the heart." These sentences, when spoken in reference to the true God and his worship, are very beautiful and appropriate; but when used in relation to the worship of idols, how vain and futile! The last sentence may teach us all an important lesson, that what we all seek after depends much more upon the state of the heart than on any external circumstances. In the enclosure is a spring of very poor water, but which is very celebrated, and is dignified with the name of the "Nine Dragon Fountain." Near it stands a tree, very much like the betel nut tree, which is worshipped. Before it incense sticks were burning, and around it were suspended tablets. And in other parts of the hill we saw several places where shrines were placed at the foot of trees before which incense was burnt.

The priests received us in a very friendly manner, invited us into the sitting room, placed tea and sweetmeats before us, and asked us to eat rice with them. They pointed out to us two tablets which are especially prized. One was sent to the temple by the Emperor Kin Lung about a hundred years ago, and the other was given to it by the late emperor Taou Kwáng. It is a great honour to an idol to receive such gifts from the Emperor; for the Emperor has not only the power to promote the officers for meritorious deeds, but he also has the prerogative of promoting the idols. And when in any place any remarkable favour has been received—as when rain is sent during a drought, or shipwrecked sailors escape to the shore, the local officers memorialize the Emperor to confer promotion on the idol through whose interposition the blessing was received.

After resting ourselves and looking through the buildings, we started on to reach the top of the hill. We toiled up a mile further on a narrow path till we came to the summit. Here a magnificent view opened out before us. We could see around in all directions as far as the eye could reach. The prospect to the south is most beautiful, affording a view of the highly cultivated plain watered by the Canton river from the city down far below Whampoa, where the foreign shipping lies.

But that which most deeply affected our feelings was the moral field spread out before us. Immediately around the base of the mount, at least one hundred villages were in sight, the population probably averaging one thousand or fifteen hundred to each village. What a multitude of immortal souls who had never heard the name of Jesus, the only Saviour of sinners! They truly are as sheep without a shepherd. How could we help uttering with unusual fervour the heaven-directed prayer unto the Lord of the harvest, to "send forth more labourers into the harvest." And from this mount of observation we would send home to the churches of Jesus Christ, to his blood-bought followers, the urgent cry of the perishing, "Come over and help us." My heart has lost none of its deep solicitude for the wants of my native land. The deep feelings of my heart are moved at every call for men of devotedness and zeal, to go forth and labour among the waste places of Zion. And I would that a thousand prophets anointed of the Lord would answer to the pressing calls of the Board of Missions. But I hear the blessed Saviour say "the field is the world." And again, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." And I cannot but be affected at the sight of these perishing millions. "How can they believe on him of whom they have not heard. And how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent." Here within a circuit of twenty miles from this city are five millions of immortal and accountable beings hastening to the judgment-seat of Christ, and there are only eight messengers from all Protestant Christendom, labouring to promulgate the blessed gospel of the glorious God among them! Here is a population equal to the whole present population of the two great States of New York and Pennsylvania, and yet only six ministers of the gospel sent to them, while in New York and Pennsylvania there are more than two thousand ministers, beside all the faithful and praying men and women among the six hundred thousand church members. Brethren these things ought not so to be.

One of the most distressing and afflictive dispensations of God toward our American Zion is the small increase, if not the actual decrease, in the number of candidates for the gospel ministry. God verily hath a controversy with his Church. And not to exclude the attention from other sins, what is more likely to be one great ground of controversy than this manifest dereliction of duty in regard to this last and great command of the ascended Saviour! "There is a scattering which yet increaseth, and there is a withholding more than is meet which tendeth to poverty." Let us arise and "bring the tithes into the store house and prove the Lord herewith if he will not open the windows of heaven, and pour out a blessing until there shall not be room to receive it." Let the rich cast into the treasury of the Lord as God hath prospered them, and the poor, and the widow, of their penury; and let all consecrate and train their children for this work of God. Is it strange that God should withhold converting grace and the call to the ministry from the children of the Church, when so many of the parents would be unwilling to have their children go as missionaries to the heathen! . . .

While the necessity of a great increase of foreign labourers for this vast field was thus deeply impressed upon my mind, I felt also more than ever the need of a native ministry in order to carry out this work, and also of pious native laymen. The gospel can only be carried to these crowded villages and cities by native labourers. How constantly and earnestly should the people of God pray that God would raise up an able and pious native agency to carry out this work.

As we passed over the hill, we saw the manifestation of that deep feeling in the Chinese mind—their respect for the dead. We saw on the very top of the hill some very elegant and costly graves. They were built of granite stone, which had been carried on men's shoulders six or eight miles, and much of the way up a very steep hill. Some of the stones must have required eight or ten men to carry one of them, and they could only carry one in a day. . . . We returned about two o'clock, P. M., delighted with our walk. We have been there several times since. We took our families once in chairs. Each visit afforded new gratification derived from the kindness of the people, and the new beauties and interest of the scenery.

A DIME FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.—THE GOOD IT MAY DO.

A few days ago I preached at a school-house. The pupils were very respectful, and paid good attention. May God grant that the seed sown may produce fruit for eternity. One little boy gave me a dime. Who knows what may be the result of the giving of that dime? It may supply a heathen family with a Testament. That Testament may be the means of the conversion of that family—of that neighbourhood—and who knows where it will stop? Some of the persons converted by this means may become preachers; others converted still by their ministry may become preachers, and others again, and so on. All these may be the means, in God's hands, of converting many, yea, thousands. And let us consider how great a work it is to save one soul. A soul saved from endless hell! A soul saved from eternal fire! A soul saved from everlasting horror, anguish, and the blackest despair! A soul saved in heaven, saved from all sin, from sorrow, from every pain! A soul saved in the bosom of Christ! And then eternity! O, what tongue or pen of angel could ever tell the glory of one soul saved in heaven for ever! Then to think of being instrumental in saving one soul—many souls. How pleasing is the thought here! But how much more pleasing the thought of meeting them in heaven!—Commission.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN JUNE, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Troy.—Kingsbury 1st ch $10 00
Pby of Albany.—Albany 2d ch 185 75

SY NOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—White Lake ch mo con 4; West Town ch mo con 11 43, Mrs J Hill 5 20 43
Pby of North River.—Newburg 1st ch Sab sch to ed John Johnston and John W Wells 50 00
Pby of Bedford.—South Salem ch mo con colls 31 25
Pby of Long Island.—Smithtown ch mo con 2, Mrs Phineas Smith 5 7 00
Pby of New York.—Wallabout ch mo con 4 39; New York 1st ch mo con 113, Andrew Reed 30; Chelsea ch mo con 20, Ladies sewing soc 22 66; Forty-second st ch mo con 20; Madison Avenue ch mo con 22 14; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con of which 10 for Iowa and Sac Mission 33 67; University Place ch mo con 48 26; Fifteenth st ch mo con 31 25; Williamsburg ch mo con 17 59 362 96
2d Pby of New York.—Peekskill ch mo con coll's 15; Canal st ch "a member" 27 42 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Elizabethtown 1st ch farewell missionary meeting, for bell for Allahabad ch 25; Elizabethtown 2d ch R Haines for do 10; Lyons Farms ch D Bosworth for do 20 55 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—New Brunswick 1st ch mo con 35 38
Pby of West Jersey.—May's Landing ch John Wesley Smith 1; Pittsgrove ch addl 1 2 00
Pby of Newton.—Stillwater 1st and 2d chs 20; Danville ch 6 75; Knowlton ch 3 25; Musconetcong Valley ch 20 50 00
Pby of Susquehanna.—Canton ch 4 00
Pby of Luzerne.—Manch Chunk ch bal to ed Richard Webster 10, in part to ed Maria B Salkeld of which 10 from Miss Julia N Lathrops Sab Sch 15 25 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Phila 10th ch ann coll addl Moses Johnson 25, Morris Patterson 25, S A Mercer 10, H M Hildeburre 10, W Shippen 5, S Hood 5, W Chapin 3, a friend 2, in all from Tenth ch 85; Central ch G W McClelland 20; Sixth ch mo con 20 125 00
2d Pby of Philadelphia.—Neshaminy ch 52 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Bethel ch 13; Long Green ch 17 30 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Big Spring ch class in Sab sch 2; Fayetteville ch 22; Toms Creek and Piney chs John Thompson 5, Alex Houser 5, Jacob Shewmoker 5, Saml Galt 1, Sterling Galt 1, Jas Crocket 2, John Horner 2, David Horner 1, Jas Graham 75 cts, Samuel Galt 25 cts, Jane Cornel 25 cts, Rev R S Grier 9 75, Silas Horner 5, Eli Horner 5, James McAllister 3, Jas Barr 3, Mrs Shewmoker 2, in all from Toms Creek and Piney chs 51; Shippensburg ch 60 135 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Mifflintown and Lost Creek chs 71 50; Pine Creek ch sewing soc bal to con Rev Daniel L Hughes l m 20; West Kishacoquillas ch 39 130 50
Pby of Northumberland.—Buffalo ch 50 50; Derry and Washingtonville chs a friend (Mrs J S C) 100 150 50

SYNOD OF PITTSBURG.

Pby of Blairsville.—Ebenezer ch "a lady" 30; Gilgal and Perry chs 22, Gilgal Ladies miss soc 3 55 00
Pby of Redstone.—Georges Creek ch 16; Connellsville ch to con Rev Ross Stevenson and Alexander Johnston l m's 63 68 79 68
Pby of Ohio.—Sharon ch 11 00
Pby of Allegheny.—Richhill ch 21 80; Middlesex ch "a lady" 3; Freeport ch 16 06; Slate Lick ch 46 07; Bull Creek ch 15 50; Tarentum ch 36 05, little Margaret Smith 10 cts; Concord ch 2 140 58
Pby of Beaver.—Mount Pleasant ch 8 12; Little Beaver ch 33 25; Pleasant Valley and East Palestine chs 14 16 55 53
Pby of Erie.—Franklin ch mo con 6, Sab sch 6 12 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Elizabethtown ch 6; Upper Ten Mile ch 63 90; East Buffalo ch 43 05; Wheeling 1st ch mo con coll's 51 56 164 51
Pby of Steubenville.—Ross ch 11 54; Two Ridges ch 5 50 17 04
Pby of New Lisbon.—Madison ch 13 18

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Columbus.—Lancaster ch mo con coll 17, "a family thank offering" 10, Sab sch 3 30 00
Pby of Marion.—Churches not named 16 27; Sandusky ch 3 33; Marion co Ohio a lady 2 21 60
Pby of Richland.—Mansfield ch 10; Waterford ch "——" and wife part of one fifth of wool money 35; Sharon ch bal 3 48 00
Pby of Hocking.—McConnellsville ch 19 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Chillicothe.—Hillsboro' ch Mrs Henderson 1, Sab sch Miss E Gran Girard's class 7 50, Miss Ruth Kirby's 1 40, Mrs E Steel's 7 05, Mrs S McDowel's 1 25, Mrs J M Nelson 50 cts, D J Fallis' class 7 60, Mr Perrin's 1 50, A Mathews' 1, A Evans' 1, J Kibler's (coloured) 60 cts, J Van Pert's 1, S E Hibben 8 54, J M Nelson 1, in all from Sab sch in aid of building church at Tallahassee in the Creek Nation 40 41 00
Pby of Miami.—Harmony ch 2 25; Bethel ch 6 30 8 55
Pby of Cincinnati.—Cincinnati 1st ch ann coll 103 81, Sab sch to ed S Ramsay Wilson 25 128 81
Pby of Oxford.—Somerville ch 7 60; Hamilton and Rossville chs 90; Oxford ch bal 20 50, mo con coll's 17 50, two little girls, contents of their missionary box 95 cts; Eaton ch 19 36, less 5 for Foreign Missionary; Camden ch 1 25, Beulah ch in part 7 73; North Providence ch 9 85 169 74
Pby of Sidney.—Piqua ch in part 41 32, less 5 for Foreign Missionary 36 32

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of Madison.—Hanover ch mo con 20 00
Pby of White Water.—Dunlapsville ch 12; Richmond ch bal 7 28, Sab sch 2 27 21 55

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne ch 3 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Kaskaskia.—Edwardsville ch 8 75
Pby of Sangamon.—Springfield Ill M G B 5; Springfield 1st ch 27 25; Springfield 3d ch 27 59 25
Pby of Schuyler.—Camp Creek ch 10; Oquawka ch young ladies miss soc 7 17 00
Pby of Peoria.—Lexington ch 70 00

Pby of Iowa.—Washington ch 4 20; Madison Avenue ch Brighton 1 30; Lowel ch 1; Burlington 1st ch 10; Unity ch 5 21 50
Pby of Cedar.—Dubuque ch of which 11 from Sab sch 41 00
Pby of Rock River.—Hanover Ill H F Morrison 4 25; Albany ch 10; Sterling ch 6 20 25
Pby of Wisconsin.—Fort Winnebago ch 5, Sab sch to ed Reginald Heber 5; Winebago Rapids ch 10 20 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of Upper Missouri.—Lexington Mo Rufus Young 2 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Louisville.—Owensboro' ch 54 00
Pby of Muhlenburg.—Henderson ch 33 00
Pby of West Lexington.—Mrs E Todd 4 85; Harmony ch 23; Woodford ch 6 50; Frankfort Ky Rev Robert L Breck to con Miss Pauline Breck l m 30; ——— Mrs M A Parker for Africa 20 84 35

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Hopewell and Rockfish chs 25 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Ebenezer ch 30 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Florida.—Manhattee ch Ro Gamble 10, C C May 5, Dr J A Braden 5, Rev Edw Lee 5 25 00
Pby of Cherokee.—Marietta ch 10 00

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of South Alabama.—Baldwin co Ala Mrs Mary T Sampson 1 25
Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Oak Grove ch 10; Pleasant Ridge ch 14; Demopolis ch 20; Bethel ch 55; Livingston ch 10; Bethsalem ch 7; Mount Zion ch Rev J P McMullen 15 131 00
Pby of East Alabama.—Marble Spring ch 32; Lafayette ch 30 95; Talladega ch 27 89 95

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Mississippi.—Port Gibson ch mo con 8 75, Sab sch to ed A J McGill 5; Zion ch 9; Ebenezer ch 50 cts; Natchez ch mo con coll's 69 73, Sab Sch 20 40, Bible class 9 45, colored members 12 70 135 53
Pby of Louisiana.—Plaquemine ch Sab sch to ed Susan Hildreth in North'rn India 26 50; Prytanea st ch mo con 24 80; New Orleans 2d ch 16; A Friend in Louisiana 3 70 30
Pby of Tombeckbee.—Friendship ch for Lodiana mission 9 65; Presbyterial coll 9 85 19 50
Pby of Brazos.—Port Lavaca ch F Beaumont 5 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Maury.—Piedmont ch 11 45
Pby of Tuscumbia.—Florence ch 65 00

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Western District.—Union ch 47 00
Pby of Memphis.—Emmaus ch 51; Mount Carmel ch colored members for African Mission 5 56 00
Pby of Indian.—Wah-pa-nucka ch C Stephen 2 50, Finlay McKenzie 2 50, A McKnight 2, E M Braly 1, A J Whitton 1, Jas A Lee 1, W T Lloyd 1 50, Edward Fisk 1, Jos B Edwards 2, Cyrus Harris 2, R Wright 2 50, Wm R Grey 2, W McDermit 1, Noah Watkins 1, Newton Haynes 1 50, Gilbert Ansley 1 50 26 00

Total from churches $3778 94

LEGACIES.

New York, Legacy of John Johnston dec'd 500 00
Piqua O. Legacy of Hon Thos Adams dec 400 00
Mifflin co Pa. Legacy of Henry Long dec'd in part 333 33 —— 1233 33

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sand Lake ch N Y for sup of Rev Jos K Wight 10 00
Hamilton C W Doctor C McQueston 100 00
do do do do
by request of Mrs McQueston dec'd to con Rev Geo Paxton Young l d 100 00
Mifflin co Pa a Friend for Missions to the Jews and Romanists 100 00
A Friend 1 00
New York Miss Matilda Bleeker for scholarship at Ambala 25 00
A Friend for Jewish Mission 15 00
do do Ningpo Mission 15 00
A Friend 1000 00
Troy N Y. A Meenely for bell for Allahabad church 50 00
South Orange ch N J do do 23 00
Rev J E Freeman do do 63 58
A Friend for Alexander High School 1 00
——— A D Hepburn 5 00
——— "One Tenth" 2 00
——— A Friend to the cause of the Blessed Redeemer 20 00—1530 58

Total receipts in June $6542 85

Wm. RANKIN, Jr. Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Fem Miss Soc of Ebenezer ch Pa, one Box Clothing 64 46
Ladies Miss Soc of Candor ch Pa, one do for Spencer Academy 31 00
Ladies of Bethel ch one Box Clothing — —
Missionary Sewing Soc of Waynesburg ch Pa one Box Clothing for Otoe and Omaha Mission — —

NOTICES.

Letters relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to Walter Lowrie, Esq., or the Rev. John C. Lowrie, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Letters relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to William Rankin, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

Payments of Moneys for the Board may also be made at
Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

Boxes of Clothing, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

The Foreign Missionary.—Newspaper edition.—Ten Copies for One Dollar, or Five Copies for Fifty Cents; Postage paid by the Publishers. Each number will contain an attractive engraving.

Pamphlet edition.—Twenty-five Cents a year. Copies of the Pamphlet edition, when desired, are sent free of charge to Donors of Five Dollars and upwards, and to Ministers whose churches contribute to the funds of the Board.

Letters relating to this newspaper, should be addressed to "The Foreign Missionary," Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Overland Letters.—Letters for the Overland Mail, to India, Siam, and China, should reach the Mission House in time for the steamer which sails nearest the first of each month. Postage: assessed according to weight, at the rate from New York of forty-five cents for half an ounce. This may be paid, by sending post-office stamps to the Mission House, or in other ways.

FORM OF A BEQUEST TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

I bequeath to my Executors the sum of dollars in trust, to pay over the same in after my decease, to the person who, when the same shall be payable, shall act as Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, to be applied to the uses and purposes of said Board, and under its direction; and the receipt of the said Treasurer shall be a full and legal acquittance of my said Executors, for the same.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M. D. Treasurer.

NEW ENGLAND AND THE BOOKS OF THE BOARD.

For some time past we have been gratified with the increasing demand from the land of the Puritans for our standard publications. As these have become better known there, there has been a discriminating sense of their value. Sound Calvinists in that important section of the Church and country have found in the great body of our books that system of doctrine which they hold in common with Presbyterians, and hence have been willing to purchase and recommend them. Several colporteurs have been employed with the approbation and co-operation of New England pastors, for circulating them through their congregations, and with much encouragement and success.

Very recently a distinguished Congregational clergyman invited the Corresponding Secretary to be present during the sessions of the General Association of Connecticut, with the view to making the acquaintance of the members of that body, and bringing to their attention the extent and character of the Board's operations. The long absence of the Secretary at the West, and other engagements, having rendered it impracticable to accept this invitation, the Rev. Dr. Boardman very kindly consented to undertake the visit, and very faithfully and acceptably represented the interests committed to his charge. He was fraternally received, and—what had not been anticipated—invited to address the Association. It was even proposed by some members that they should recommend the books en masse—which could hardly have been expected, inasmuch as some of them are distinctly Presbyterian. We have every reason to know that the address of Dr. Boardman, and the comparison of views elicited, have very much strengthened the current which had already set in favour of the Board of Publication.

Our brethren in New England may rest assured that we have no design nor disposition to take advantage of their friendship to introduce among them such publications as would be hostile to their own church order—but inasmuch as they see fit to unite with us in circulating books which teach our common Calvinism, we shall greatly rejoice in such valuable co-operation. The Rev. Dr. Hewit, himself a distinguished, well known Congregational minister, has since voluntarily visited the General Association of Massachusetts, and brought before that important and venerable body of ministers the claims of this Board. We thank Dr. Hewit for this, together with many other acts of kindness, and also thank the Association for the audience they gave to one who represented the Board of Publication.

A THANK-OFFERING.

An esteemed pastor in the West sends us the following note, with the inclosed generous contribution, received by him from one of his church-members—a mother in Israel. We heartily respond to the sentiment he expresses, when he says, "Oh that our churches abounded in such members. It gives me as much pleasure to send it, as it will you to receive it."

July 4th, 1851.

My Dear Friend and Pastor,

Thinking this to be a suitable day on which to make some acknowledgment of our obligations to render thanks for the many and undeserved mercies we have enjoyed through past years, I inclose thirty dollars for the Presbyterian Board of Publication, of which I wish to be made a life-member, and thirty dollars for the American Bible Society, of which also I wish to be made a life-member. * * I hope our people will be stirred up to do much for the spread of the gospel, and the extending the blessings we enjoy, to those who have them not," &c.

Sincerely do we thank both the donor and her pastor for this welcome and timely donation. Are there not many others who have equal reason for giving some tangible expression to their appreciation of God's great goodness to them and theirs? Reader! Have you ever made a thank-offering?

VERY DECIDED.

We find the following paragraph in a late number of the New York Observer. The Rev. Dr. Hall, of Norwalk, is the author of several very admirable works, amongst which are "The Puritans and their Principles," "The Law of Baptism," &c. He occupies a high position among the Congregational ministers of New England, as a sound, judicious, and able divine. We thank him for the very decided terms of favour towards the operations of this Board in which he has seen proper to express himself.

"In our report of the proceedings of the General Association of Connecticut, a remark respecting the books of the Presbyterian Board was attributed to the Rev. Dr. Hall of Norwalk. It was made by the Rev. Mr. Hall, from some other part of the State; and we are the more anxious to make the correction, as Dr. Hall highly 'approves of those books, has purchased largely of them, placed many of them in his church library, has recommended them, and is still ready to recommend them any where and every where.'"

A FRATERNAL ACT.

We have frequently alluded to the kindness shown the Board of Publication, by ministers and others in various sister branches of the Church of Christ. Our books have been circulated, our colporteurs cordially recommended, and in some cases liberal donations have been made by individuals and churches not in connection with our General Assembly. Amongst others of such friends and brethren we feel called upon to mention the Rev. Frederick A. Ross, of Tennessee, who not long since very generously constituted himself an honorary member by the donation of $30, and also afforded a collection in his church in aid of the operations of the Board.

Just now we have a similar fraternal act from the Rev. Dr. Hewit of Bridgeport, Connecticut,—a well-tried friend to whom we have been indebted for many favours, and whose zealous efforts for circulating our publications have mainly contributed to the popularity they are now enjoying in New England. Dr. Hewit says, "I enclose Thirty Dollars to make my grandson Nathaniel Hewit a member for life of your Board of Publication. He will be three years old next November."

Such tokens of fraternity and liberality from distinguished ministers in other branches of Zion, are peculiarly grateful. We hail with much joy their joining hands with us in our efforts to extend the influence of our common Calvinism, as well as our common salvation.

THE BIBLE DICTIONARY—PRICE REDUCED.

In order to place the valuable Bible Dictionary recently published by the Board, as far as practicable in the hands of all Sabbath-school teachers and Church members, the price has been reduced to fifty cents, from which also the discount is made as usual. It is now probably the cheapest book ever issued by the Board, and we anticipate for it a wide and permanent circulation.

A COLPORTEUR'S ENCOURAGEMENT.

A colporteur of the Board, who has been very successful in his labours in one of the Southern Presbyteries, thus speaks of the encouragement he has met with in his work.

I have great reason to believe that the books which I am circulating through ——— have done good, and, by the blessing of God, will do much more good. In many places where I travelled, the people were exceedingly glad to see the books. In places where I could not find it convenient to visit some families to supply them, as soon as they heard of books being left in the neighbourhood, they went to the houses where I had sold books and borrowed them. I trust that the perusal of these valuable works will bring many sinners to a saving knowledge of the gospel.

Last Sabbath evening I was talking with a Christian friend, and during our conversation he asked me if I remembered selling a book to a gentleman the last time I was at his house. I answered, Yes. "Well," said he, "the man whom you sold that book to sat down and read it carefully day after day. And since he read the book, he and his family attend church regularly every Sabbath, whereas formerly they never entered a church door." I might write you a long letter, on my travels in this place, detailing the success I have met with, and the discouragements which come in my way. I hope that God has blessed my weak instrumentality in his service. I have conversed with many sinners on the love of Christ; I have kneeled with them in their families, and besought the blessing of God for them, and their dear children. Often have I seen the tear trickle down their cheeks, and in parting with them, I have received their warmest thanks and their blessings for my visit. May God water the seed which has been sown.

WHAT OUR BOOKS AND TRACTS ARE DOING.

We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter received at the office of the Board of Missions, from a missionary in the West, who has seen how much good may be done by the free use of books and tracts, and now feels the need for more.

"Could not a small donation of the cheaper publications and tracts of the Board of Publication accompany that box for gratuitous distribution? They are much needed; particularly such as are adapted to guide the inquiring sinner to Christ, the young convert in the work of self-examination, and also such as vindicate the doctrines and order of the Presbyterian Church, against the bitter assaults and misrepresentations of its enemies. Errorists of various complexions have all to be met in their different forms of opposition and modes of attack, and the quiet, and most peaceful, and successful way of doing it, is by the printed page. These, in connection with faithful pastoral visitation, strengthen and hold up the hands of the living ministry, to an extent that can hardly be realized by those who have not had experience in missionary life. "Why," says one, "I was always an Old-school man, but I did not know it until I read that book," (Old and New Theology.) "We are all Arminians by nature," is an expression made by some members of my own church, to me, after reading such works as "Musgrave on Decrees," "The Great Supper," Dr. McKinney's "Doctrine of Election stated and explained to the Youthful Inquirer." Then we often find the desponding Christian and the impenitent disposed to listen to admonitions and warnings, or, perhaps, deeply anxious about their eternal interests, far removed from the ordinary means of grace, and whom in providence it may be impossible for us to see again for months. How unspeakably important the appropriate tract, or cheap volume, put into their hands to follow up the counsel already given, and minister the words of consolation and of life, when the living voice is far removed, or silent in death! Such cases have come under my own observation."

WHAT OUR BOARD OF PUBLICATION DOES FOR OUR CHURCH.

1. It furnishes our ministers and membership with some valuable works, which were nearly or quite out of print, and renders them much more accessible by cheapening them.

2. It furnishes "the Constitution" of our Church at one-half the price it was formerly afforded by booksellers, and carries it, by the hands of colporteurs, to the doors of all our people, that all may be furnished, and no longer plead ignorance of our doctrines and Church government. Also, people of all other denominations, and of the world, may now easily procure this book from our colporteurs, and read and judge for themselves. It is a pleasing fact that our colporteurs are selling this book now quite largely out of our Church, and the examination of the Confession of our Faith is having the effect to dissipate those ignorant and unreasonable prejudices which have frequently obtained against our creed and order. The price was formerly seventy-five cents; it is now sold at thirty-seven cents, printed and bound in a much better style.

3. It furnishes our Hymn-book at about one-half the price it would have been furnished had it been left to the private enterprise of booksellers. The Board issues it in sixteen different sizes and styles of binding. All tastes may be suited, and the pockets of all. Those who wish to give five dollars for a Hymn-book can be furnished with a splendid copy, and the little child with its twenty-five cents can buy one. Every church and every family may now be fully supplied. There remains no more excuse for "reading the line" in public or family worship.

4. It gives our Sabbath schools a Hymn-book more select in the character of its hymns than any that have heretofore been published. It furnishes a choice periodical for our youth, "The Sabbath School Visitor;" and we hope will sooner or later favour our Sunday schools and Bible classes with question books on the Scriptures, which will supply the defects of the "Union Questions."

5. This Board sends into our feeble churches, in the newer parts of our country, books and tracts, which constitute a most important auxiliary to our ministers who are performing their self-denying labours to build up these churches. In such regions, heretical sects and proselyting teachers usually abound and greatly annoy. Books and tracts, published and endorsed by our Church, and put into the hands of our church members in such places, serve to fortify their minds against error, and furnish them the means of defence against misrepresentation and calumny, and thus greatly sustain the preaching of the truth.

6. Our publications become a source of influence for our Church. The world have awarded to Presbyterian churches the credit of an intelligent ministry, and hence an influence greater than that of some other branches of the Church which exceed us in numbers. An extensive and substantial Christian literature, added to our living ministry, will scarcely do less than double the influence of our Church. Influence, however, should not be sought after for personal or social aggrandizement; but as a means of honouring Christ, and of building up his kingdom, it may be earnestly coveted as one of the "best gifts."

It is highly important that all our church members and pastors should duly appreciate this arm of the Church's power. NEREUS.

New Castle, Ind., June 14.

PROFITABLE READING.

It is not hasty reading, but seriously meditating upon holy and heavenly truths, that makes them prove sweet and profitable to the soul. It is not the bee's touching of the flowers that gathers honey, but her abiding for a time upon them, and drawing out the sweet. It is not he that reads most, but he that meditates most, that will prove the choicest, sweetest, wisest, and strongest Christian.

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

LETTERS TO THE RIGHT REV. JOHN HUGHES, Roman Catholic Bishop of New York, by "Kirwan." Three parts in one. 18mo.

"Kirwan's Letters" are too familiar to need any further recommendation. The popular style in which they are written, their admirable adaptation to the present state of Popery, and the fact that the author speaks to a great extent of things with which he had had a practical and personal acquaintance, has rendered these letters a most powerful weapon in the Papal controversy. They are particularly well adapted to open the eyes of Romanists to their own thraldom; and hence the vituperation which both the letters and their author have encountered from high functionaries in the Romish hierarchy. Most of the readers of this notice will probably have been already aware that Kirwan is now speaking in some six different tongues, the letters having been translated into as many languages. The Board are enabled to furnish it in paper covers at a very cheap rate, and earnestly hope that friends of Protestism and friends of Romanists may not fail to use so effectual and successful an implement as widely as the importance of the interests involved demand.

SARAH LEE AND SUSAN GREY.

This little volume in stiff paper covers is a fac-simile of the English edition. It is written in rhyme, and intended as an offering to our juvenile readers.

TRACTS.

LETTERS TO THE AGED, extracted from "Thoughts on Religious Experience," by A. Alexander, D. D.

In order to give a still wider circulation to these admirable letters from an aged and venerable man of God, to those who, like himself, are in the evening of life, they are here issued in tract form. Many will rejoice to have such valuable thoughts accessible at so cheap a rate that they may be widely distributed.

THE DYING PROFESSOR.

BROTHERLY LOVE.

THE DANGER OF SELF-DECEPTION.

These are all taken from that admirable practical treatise, 'James's Christian Professor." Few writers of the day abound more in the evangelical and the pungent than John Angel James. The matter of these tracts is well worthy of being put into a form such as this, that it may reach the numerous professors, for whose benefit it is so well suited.

A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE in a Letter to a Friend.

A very interesting, instructive narrative of the remarkable dealings of God's grace in the conversion of a soul.

THE FIRS-TDAY SABBATH, or the Lord's-Day the Christian Sabbath.

The subject of this tract still occasions much controversy in different sections of the country. The argument here given will be regarded as conclusive by all candid minds, as to the Scriptural warrant for now observing the first and not the seventh day of the week as the Christian Sabbath.

COMFORTS AND COUNSELS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

The author of this knows well how to speak words of counsel and comfort to the sons and daughters of affliction. To not a few of the smitten of God's people will these pages probably prove as streams of water in a dry and thirsty land.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF JUNE.

Presbytery of Albany.
Lemuel Jenkins	2 00
Presbytery of Newton.
1st and 2d Stillwater ch per E Green Treas	1 50
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
Central ch widow's mite 1; 4th ch per Rev Lewis Cheeseman 30	31 00
Presbytery of Huntingdon.
"A Friend to Colportage" Mifflin co Pa per Dr A W Mitchell	50 00
Presbytery of Northumberland.
Derry and Washingtonville chs Mrs J S C per Rev J H Rittenhouse	100 00
Presbytery of Marion.
Upper Sandusky church	1 00
Presbytery of Vincennes.
Claibourne ch per A B McKee	5 00
Presbytery of Palmyra.
Big Creek ch per Keith and Woods	7 50
Presbytery of Maury.
Piedmont ch per Rev Mr Hodgeman	3 55
Presbytery of Hopewell.
Macon ch per Rev W J Keith	14 92
Presbytery of South Alabama.
Mrs Mary T Sampson per Rev W Kelly	1 25
Presbytery of Tombeckbee.
Anonymous	2 00
Presbytery of Western District.
Denmark ch per Jas B Neeley 28 35, Col Jno W Love 10, James B Neeley 11 65	50 00
Presbytery of Memphis.
Hickory Wythe church	7 50
MISCELLANEOUS.
One Tenth per W S M 2, Rev S Brown 55 42, "A Lady for tracts for a Colporteur" 5, "A Lady" Marion co Ohio 4	66 42
Total	$343 64

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ——, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 23d of May, by the Presbytery of Donegal, Mr. Thomas M. Crawford was ordained and installed pastor of the church of Stateville, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. David X. Junkin, D. D., was installed co-pastor of the F. street Presbyterian Church, Washington city, on the 17th of June, by the Presbytery of Baltimore.

On the 27th of May, the Rev. Levi Hughes was installed by the Presbytery of Logansport, pastor of the First church, Logansport, Indiana.

On the 6th of June, by the Presbytery of Washington, the Rev. David R. Campbell was installed pastor of the church of Mount Prospect.

On the 21st of May, by the Presbytery of Donegal, the Rev. S. Hume Smith was installed pastor of the churches of Centre and Mechanicsburg, Pa.

By the Presbytery of Ogdensburg, at an adjourned meeting in June, the Rev. L. Merril Miller was installed pastor of the church of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and at the same time, Mr. Archibald Ferguson was ordained as an evangelist.

On the 11th of June, the Rev. Watson Hughes was installed by the Presbytery of Redstone, pastor of the church of West Newton, Pa.

On the 18th of June, by the Presbytery of Richland, Mr. Alexander Scott was ordained and installed pastor of the Blooming-grove and Olivesburg churches.

At the same time, and by the same Presbytery, Mr. Robert C. Colmery was ordained with a view to his installation over the church of Mount Vernon.

On the 26th of June, the Rev. John Cross was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church of Middletown, Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

On the 25th of June, the Presbytery of St. Clairsville ordained Mr. Robert Armstrong as an evangelist.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

On the 7th of July, the Presbytery of Philadelphia dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. Wm. Henry Green (appointed by the last General Assembly, a Professor in the Princeton Theological Seminary) and the Central Presbyterian church, Philadelphia.

CALLS.

The Rev. A. H. Hand has accepted a call to the church of Greenwich, New Jersey.

The Rev. James B. Ramsey has accepted a call from the church of Croton Falls, New York.

Mr. H. M. Painter, a licentiate of the Presbytery of Miami, has received a unanimous call from the Presbyterian church of Vicksburg. Correspondents will please notice the change.

The Rev. Wilson Phraner has received a call to the Mount Pleasant church, Sing Sing, New York.

The Rev. L. H. Christian has accepted a call from the First Presbyterian church of Camden, New Jersey.

LICENSURES.

Mr. Ebenezer D. Finney was licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Donegal, on the 23d of May.

On the 11th of May, the Presbytery of Carlisle licensed J. W. McCune, Joseph Clark, and Edwin B. Raffensperger to preach the gospel.

Mr. Robert Crookshank has been licensed to preach the gospel by the Presbytery of Ogdensburg.

On the 18th of June, the Presbytery of Cincinnati licensed Mr. Henry W. Biggs to preach the gospel.

On the 25th of June, the Presbytery of Allegheny licensed Mr. Robert E. Williams, a graduate of the Western Theological Seminary, to preach the gospel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Rev. J. M. Harlow has removed from Bristol, Pennsylvania, and become the stated supply of the First Presbyterian church of East Aurora, Erie county, New York.

The post-office address of the Rev. James Motzer is Adam's Mills, Muskingum county, Ohio.

The post-office address of the Rev. William B. Brown is changed from Hillsborough, North Carolina, to Staunton, Virginia.

The Rev. James Gallatin has removed from Franklin, Indiana, to Canton, Jackson county, Iowa. Correspondents will please address accordingly.

The Rev. James Stafford having removed to Carlyle, Illinois, requests his correspondents to address him at that place.

The Rev. H. C. Read having become the stated supply of the Glasgow (Kentucky) church, has removed to that place.

At the late stated meeting of the Presbytery of Newton, the Rev. Dr. John Skinner resigned the pastoral charge of the Second Presbyterian church, Easton, Pennsylvania, and accepted a call to devote his ministry exclusively to the church of Harmony, Warren county, New Jersey, where correspondents are requested to address him.

The Rev. Milo Templeton has removed from Troy, Ohio, to St. Mary's, Mercer county, Ohio, where correspondents are requested to address him.

The post-office address of the Rev. John M. McLees is Greenwood, Abbeville district, instead of Woodville—the name of the post-office having been changed.

Varieties.

FRANK CONFESSION OF THE NATURAL HEART.—Mr. Scudder, of Ceylon, was told by one of the natives, as he had been urging them to accept of Jesus as their only Saviour, that "it would be hell to them to be obliged to walk according to the Christian religion."

POSTAGE STAMPS.—The Washington Republic announces that the Post-office Department has already issued two millions and a half of postage stamps, and are sending them out at the rate of four hundred thousand per day.

ARRIVAL OF MORE CHINESE.—A late San Francisco paper says, Some hundreds of emigrants from the Celestial Empire have arrived in this city within the last week. This element of our population is likely to be a rapidly increasing one.

ORDINATION OF A CHOCTAW.—At the recent session of the Indian Presbytery among the Choctaws, Pliny Fisk was ordained as an evangelist. Mr. Fisk is the first Choctaw that has been ordained by the Indian Presbytery.

THE WYOMING MASSACRE.—Anderson Dana, Esq. died at Wilkesbarre, Pa., on the 24th ult., aged 86 years. He was a boy at the time of the ever-memorable Wyoming massacre. His father and brother-in-law were killed there, when he fled with his mother, her family, and others to Connecticut.

GREAT NUMBERS OF ELEPHANTS IN AFRICA.—A drove of 700 or 800 elephants has been known to visit the Bonny country at one time. The numbers scattered over the whole region are countless. As they all have tusks, and some of their tusks weigh 120, 130, and 140 pounds each, the quantity of ivory which Africa may produce, is almost without limits.

THE AGE OF LIGHTNING.—The full accounts of the great fires in California, were sent from New York to Boston, by Morse's Telegraph, 10,000 words in five hours, or at the rate of 33 words per minute.

INJURY OF TREES.—The trees in the city of Brooklyn have suffered greatly in their foliage by worms. Even the Abeel or silver-leafed poplar, which has been thought worm-proof, shows in many places the ravages of the insects.

DARKNESS.—Among 3,495 families in Ulster county, N. Y., 494 were found destitute of the word of God. 176 of these were Roman Catholic families, who refused to receive the Bible as a gift!

ANOTHER GONE.—The Rev. Daniel S. Butrick, who has laboured as missionary among the Cherokees about 30 years, died at the Dwight Mission on the 8th of June. It is said that he has left among his papers a history of the Cherokees, which is to be published.

AMERICANS IN LONDON.—The number of Americans attracted to London by the World's Fair is not so large as was anticipated. A letter writer states the number there at the time of his writing, at 1500.

AMERICANS EXCLUDED.—It is said that Americans are not permitted to visit or examine the great manufactories in England.

THE "SITTING" INFIRMITY.—Dr. James W. Alexander recently attended service in Dr. Hamilton's Church, Regent Square, London. Speaking of the "genuine Presbyterian usages," which were "unspeakably refreshing," he says, "In a great and crowded congregation, I could observe no instances of that infirmity which increasingly causes American worshippers to pray sitting."

NEW AND OLD SCHOOL.—The Stated Clerks of the respective General Assemblies furnish statistics, from which it appears that the whole number of ministers in the Old School Church is 2,027, and in the New School 1,481; Churches in the Old School 2,675, in the New School 1,579. In other points the statistics of the two bodies seem to hold about the same relative position.

NO COMPROMISE.—It is said that the effort made to compromise the difficulty between the Northern and Southern Methodist Churches as to the division of property has failed.

MORTALITY OF NEW ORLEANS AND LAFAYETTE.—It appears that in 1850 the number of deaths in New Orleans and Lafayette amounted to 8,066; and of these 1,426 were from Cholera, 107 by Yellow Fever, Intemperance 103, Consumption 674, or of all Lung diseases 908.

A TEMPERANCE CHURCH.—Dr. Tying of New York, at a recent Anniversary, said, that of the six hundred members of his church, he did not know a single person who either drank liquor or offered it to others. And he never saw, in any of their dwellings, any of the paraphernalia of drinking.

PREPAY YOUR LETTERS.—Three cents will thus accomplish what would cost your correspondent five.

FUND FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS AND THEIR FAMILIES.

The following sums have been received, viz:

From the Rev C R Lane Tunkhannock Pa	$1 00
" Second ch Steubenville Ohio	7 00
" College church Mississippi	12 00
" Tombeckbee Presbytery	12 00
" Jackson church Louisiana Presby	2 00
" Carmel do do do	10 00
" Comite do do do	2 00
From a Friend (Mrs J S C) Penna	50 00
From the First church Vienna N Y	11 75
" Williamsburg church N Y	12 00
" Greensburg ch N Y	2 00
From a Friend Philada	5 00
" Lady	5 00
From J M R Louisville	5 00
From the Head of Christiana church	5 00
" Cumberland church	10 50
	$152 25

GEO. H. VAN GELDER,
Treas. Trustees of the Gen. Assembly, P. C., &c.
Philada., June 28th, 1851.

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid. Postmasters are authorized to remit moneys, and we hope our friends will avail themselves of this channel to send on their subscriptions.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—The late Meeting of the General Assembly, its spirit and influence, p. 114. Report of the Board of Missions, p. 114. Suggestion on the Disposition of Surplus Funds in Presbyterial Treasuries, p. 114. Roman Catholics in the United States, p. 114. The Pueblo Indians in the Territory of New Mexico, p. 115. House of Worship built, and Revival, p. 116. Interesting Items, p. 116. Receipts, p. 116.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—I. Ministerial Education. The Church must furnish the Men, p. 117. Free Church of Scotland, p. 117. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 117. Christian Boldness, p. 117. II. Christian Education. List of Primary Schools, p. 118. Our System a good one, p. 118. Success an Encouragement, p. 118. The good Influence of our Schools, p. 119. The Want of Funds a chief Difficulty, p. 119. Schools of the Free Church of Scotland, p. 119. That Old Primer, p. 119. Receipts, p. 119.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—Recent Intelligence, p. 120. Our India Missions, p. 120. India: Lodiana Mission; Letters from a Missionary to his Children, No. VII., p. 120. Journal of the Rev. Golok Nath, p. 121. Mission in Siam, p. 122. China: Ningpo Mission; Journal of the Rev. Henry V. Rankin, p. 122. Canton Mission: An Excursion to White Cloud Mountain, p. 124. A Dime for Foreign Missions, the good it may do, p. 125. Receipts, p. 125.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.—New England and the Books of the Board, p. 126. A Thank-offering, p. 126. Very decided, p. 126. A Fraternal Act, p. 126. The Bible Dictionary—Price Reduced, p. 126. A Colporteur's Encouragement, p. 126. What our books and Tracts are doing, p. 126. What our Board of Publication does for our Church, p. 127. Profitable Reading, p. 127. Notices of New Books, p. 127. Receipts, p. 127.

MISCELLANEOUS.—A few Words to those who have been Baptised, but have never been Converted, and have not come to the Lord's Supper, p. 113. Birth and Death, p. 113. "Teach us to Pray," p. 113. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 128. Varieties, p. 128.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 9. | PHILADELPHIA, SEPTEMBER, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"TELL THEM TO PREACH CHRIST."

BY J. J. MORRIS.

A devoted soldier of Jesus Christ, who but recently has laid his armour down, at the call of the Great Captain, and passed from the conflicts and trials and dangers which oppose the church militant, to the victor-crown, the shouts, hallelujahs and anthems of the church triumphant, was asked by his friends, just as he was about to quit for ever the theatre of his earthly action, what message he had to send to his brethren in the ministry. "Tell them," he said, in a voice of deep earnestness and pathos, "Tell them to preach Christ to the whole world." This was his dying message, and is therefore valuable to all who profess attachment to the same Lord and Master, whom he honoured by a course of life most exemplary and beautiful, and an influence which cannot terminate until the last saint has been conducted through the open gates of the heavenly city. "Tell them to preach Christ!" He wished them, as his soul caught brighter and clearer views of the glory of that world to which he was hastening, and obtained a correct estimate of the importance of salvation, to preach Christ more fervently, more extensively, to sound the gospel-trumpet far and wide, and wake its echoes through the dense jungles of India, along her consecrated rivers, over her flower-covered mountains, among her thronged bazaars, her idol temples, her huts of poverty and palaces of splendour.

The ministers or servants of Jesus, and the minions of Satan, each resemble a great army of opposing warriors. There are levies of men and means to be made continually, marches to be taken, citadels to be stormed, and the empire of Jesus to be carried forward until it shall be co-extensive with the world. Upon the Church devolves the important duty of furnishing supplies for the successful carrying on of this conflict. With the followers of Jesus reposes this momentous cause. The ministers of Jesus are efficient for his service, but they must be sustained. Prayers of piety, gifts of sympathy, contributions of gratitude, are effective accessories to this glorious cause. They are co-workers with Christ, and declare clearly the course of the current of the heart's affections.

If I love Jesus, I will love his cause also. If I hope to share the triumph, I must take part in the warfare which precedes the victory, though it be interspersed with bloody conflicts and appalling dangers.

The man who contributes to the support of a missionary in heathen lands, is performing his part in the establishment of Christ's kingdom in the world. The child who furnishes his pittance to transmit the Bible to villages destitute of the word of God, is performing his part in the glorious enterprise of the world's evangelization.

Let the Church prove her attachment to the Saviour, by obeying the kind yet solemn injunction of her departed member—"Tell them to preach Christ!"

For the Home and Foreign Record.

A WARNING.

The pastoral relation is of divine appointment; and God sometimes manifests his displeasure at its violent disruption. In a small church in the country, among a farming population, a pastor had laboured quietly and diligently for years. There had been no general awakening under his ministry, but silent and gradual additions had been made to the church. It was one of the smallest in the body with which it was connected; and yet usually its annual additions exceeded those of any other, and this among a population diminishing by emigration. But some were not satisfied; and the pastor must leave, though at this very time a number were inquiring what they must do to be saved. The pastor must go; and among the reasons, it was urged by a young man, that "a new minister might call out some who did not regularly attend; and by hearing from him a single sermon, they might be converted."

A change was made, and what has been the result? The Holy Spirit was grieved. Those inquirers have remained where they were, or have gone back to the world; and though they have one of the best of men for a pastor, and years have passed, there has not been, so far as I know, a single conversion there since. The pastor is discouraged, his heart broken. He has been greatly afflicted; but with deep emotion he said, "All these things are nothing in comparison with the greater trial of Zion's desolation." To trifle with God's institutions is a fearful thing. Let the churches respect the pastoral relation. "They watch for your souls as they that must give account."—Heb. xiii. 17.

M.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

HOW TO MAKE LIFE USEFUL.

Christian beneficence furnishes one of the simplest, most accessible, and most successful means of rendering life truly useful.

Who would not wish to do good in his generation? What heart so insensible to every right emotion as not to desire to accomplish something for the welfare of his race, whilst upon this mortal stage?

True, indeed, God has kindly provided many methods of accomplishing so glorious an end, but these are not all of them accessible to all. All cannot go as missionaries to the heathen; all cannot preach the gospel at home; all cannot occupy extensive spheres of influence and active labour, even as private members of the Church; but who is there who cannot bring his tithes into the store-house of the Lord, and thus aid in the great work of elevating and saving mankind? Who would not wish, by a means so simple, and falling in with the very employments of his life, to aid in scattering the night of Paganism—diffusing the temporal blessings which every where attend the progress of true Christianity, and in giving to dying men that bread of life which cometh down from heaven, and which will give them strength to walk in safety through the waters of adversity, and in triumph through the valley of death, and prepare them for eating for ever the heavenly manna in the paradise of God? If parting with a little or even much of your glittering dust will aid in the attainment of ends so glorious, who will refuse to avail himself of the privilege afforded?

There is no telling what Zion could accomplish did but her children one and all thus come to her help. What has not the Free Church of Scotland been enabled to achieve within the few years, since this spirit of noble Christian liberality has been thrilling through all her members! Her sons and daughters have counted it all joy, to deprive themselves of comforts, and live in constant self-denial, that they might pour into her treasury their offerings; and from seed thus sown, churches, manses and school-houses have sprung up as if almost by miracle; pastors and teachers have found in the constant provision for their support the counterpart of the widow's cruse; and a mass of gold and silver has been gathered for good, to which the Church since the Apostles' days has never seen a parallel. Ah, could this same spirit pervade the universal Zion, should she not, by the blessing of her great Head and King, shake herself from the dust, and put on her beautiful garments, and go forth conquering and to conquer! May God speed that day!

REPENTANCE—THE LONGER DELAYED THE MORE DIFFICULT.

AN ALLEGORY BY ONE OF THE FATHERS.

A hermit was conducted by an angel into a wood, where he saw an old man cutting down boughs to make up a burden. When it was large, he tied it up, and attempted to lift it on his shoulders and carry it away; but finding it very heavy, he laid it down again, cut more wood and heaped it on, and then tried again to carry it off. This he repeated several times, always adding something to the load, after trying in vain to raise it from the ground. In the meantime the hermit, astonished at the old man's folly, desired the angel to explain what this meant. "You behold," said he, "in this foolish old man, an exact representation of those who, being made sensible of the burden of their sins, resolve to repent, but soon grow weary, and instead of lessening their burden, increase it every day. At each trial they find the task heavier than it was before, and so put it off a little longer, in the vain hope that they will by-and-by be more able to accomplish it. Thus they go on adding to their burden, till it grows too heavy to be borne, and then, in despair of God's mercy, and with their sins unrepented of, they lie down and die. Turn again, my son, and behold the end of the old man whom thou sawest heaping up a load of boughs." The hermit looked, and saw him in vain attempting to remove the pile, which was now accumulated far beyond his strength to raise. His feeble limbs tottered over their burden; the poor remains of his strength were fast ebbing away; the darkness of death was gathering around him; and after a convulsive and impotent attempt to lift the pile, he fell down and expired.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

PRE-PAYMENT OF LETTER POSTAGE—A PROPOSITION.

The Board of Missions will hereafter pre-pay all letters sent from the Office, and do request all Missionaries and Correspondents to pre-pay letters sent to the Office. Under the present Post-office Law, this arrangement is forty per cent cheaper than if the postage is not pre-paid.

BOARD OF MISSIONS—ITS PRESENT NECESSITIES—APPEAL TO THE CHURCHES.

Mission Rooms, 265 Chestnut Street,
Philadelphia August 4, 1851.

Dear Brethren—As most of the contributions for Domestic Missions are made in the autumn, winter, and spring, the practice of the Board in Philadelphia has been to husband its supplies, so as if possible to have several thousand dollars on hand in the month of May, for a reserved fund, to meet the drafts upon the Treasury during the summer: a season when, comparatively, little money is paid in from any quarter.

This year we were unable to pursue this course, for the reason that the increase of missionaries and the increased appropriations for Missions, during the year, kept more than even pace with our income, and have now gone far ahead of it: THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE CHURCHES NOT HAVING INCREASED WITH THE INCREASE OF THE OPERATIONS OF THE BOARD. The income for the year ending May 1, 1850, was $79,049, and the income for the year ending May 1, 1851, was $82,818, an increase of only $3,769! The sum needed to meet our enlarged operations the past year, should not have been less than $10,000 or $15,000. The churches have fallen short, and this is the secret of our present necessity. Brethren, you have the explanation.

On the 1st of June we had $2430 in the Treasury in Philadelphia. Our receipts in June were $1722, and in July $1123, and to the 4th of August $56, or $2901 for ten weeks.

Our average weekly appropriations in Philadelphia alone, for missionaries and current expenses of the office for these ten weeks, have been $897, and the aggregate $8967. To this amount we must add $1903 appropriated to and paid for the Western Executive Committee in Louisville, making $10,870. Of this amount all has been paid except $1696, still due our Missionaries.

To effect this payment in part, the Board was obliged to procure a loan of $3500, and also a further loan of $2000 to meet the loss sustained in October last: the two loans amounting to $5500. Add this amount to $1696 still due our missionaries, and we have the indebtedness of the Board in Philadelphia $7196.

This is not all. To this sum we must add $1000 due our missionaries by the Western Executive Committee at Louisville: and also a further sum of $2000 borrowed by the same Committee, for payment of missionaries, making $3000, the indebtedness of the Board in Louisville, which added to that in Philadelphia, makes the entire indebtedness of the Board, this day, August 4th, Ten Thousand One Hundred and Ninety-Six Dollars! And how much money have we in the Treasury? Not above two hundred dollars!

Such is the condition of the Treasury of the Board of Missions, and such our present necessities. Many are under the impression that the Treasury of the Board of Missions is full: that the whole work goes smoothly and prosperously on, and the Board has need of nothing. It is not so. And we have deemed it due to the Board and to the two Executive Committees, and also to the Churches, to make this candid statement, that the churches may see precisely the position of their Domestic missionary operations at the present time.

Will the churches, blessed in temporal things by a kind and bountiful Providence, and holding ample means of supply in their possession, allow the Board of Missions to be several thousand dollars in advance of its Treasury, for the payment of missionaries labouring in all parts of our great and happy country? Missionaries too who have been sent out on the faith of the churches, and are annually enlarging the bounds and increasing the power and influence of our Church, and scattering the richest blessings upon communities wherever they go? Will the churches suffer a work to languish which God in infinite mercy has sealed with His special approbation? Sealed! Yes, thanks to His holy name, by the outpouring of His Spirit upon missionaries and their charges, evidenced in the conversion of over two thousand immortal souls, during the past year, and over forty-two thousand during the last twenty-one years!

We feel confident that, coming to a knowledge of the present necessities of the Board of Missions, the churches will respond to our appeal for help. Ministers and churches who have done nothing will make an immediate effort and send up their free-will contributions, while those who have done something will add more to their charities; and many private members whom God has blessed with competency, and some with affluence, may of their abundance dedicate a portion to this cause of their Master.

If the Board should continue without relief, then indeed would our honour as a Church be touched, and our love to the brethren whom we have sent forth to minister, and our love to the glorious and ever-blessed Redeemer, and our love to the perishing souls of men, be impeached. But we have confidence in the Ministry, and in the Eldership, and in the Membership of our Church, that as they have ever come forward to sustain by their prayers and contributions this noble work, in all times of its need, so will they not be found wanting now.

Let each one, therefore, conscientiously see what he can do and set his hand to the work, without waiting upon others, and without delay. Whatever you have in store by you, Brethren, send it, be it much or be it little: and let us again "owe no man anything, but to love one another." Then, instead of halting, we may go forward: instead of curtailing, we may enlarge our missions. It is no time to halt in our course: we must go forward. The pastors and missionaries into whose hands this Appeal may come, are respectfully requested by the Board to read it to their people, and to solicit speedy aid from them in such manner as they may deem best.

Contributions may be sent to Mr. Samuel D. Powel, Treasurer, 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

By order of the Board of Missions.

J. J. Janeway, President.
C. C. Jones, Corresponding Secretary.

CIRCULATION OF THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Annual Report has just issued from the press, and we are now mailing copies as fast as possible. The new postage law requires all reports of the kind to be pre-paid. Consequently we are involved in an unexpected expense of between $200 and $300 for the circulation of the Report. Will the brethren please remember this, who order extra copies, from a distance. The postage is 5 cents on the Report under 500 miles, and 10 cents over 500 and under 1500 miles. A considerable number of extra copies have been called for and taken from the office, and we thank the brethren for their efforts to put the Report into circulation among our Elders and People. There we need the circulation. And Ministers will greatly aid the good cause, if, upon the reception of the Report, they would lay it at the monthly concert, or at some suitable time, before their people, and also set the Report in circulation, and endeavour to have it read by them. It is indeed a sore evil for the Church, that her Reports of her labours in extending the kingdom of our Lord, although printed and circulated, are so little read. Our people are good and true, and need information, and with more information there would be more prayer and more fruit to the glory of God. We must all learn what, as a Church, we are attempting to do, and wake up to our responsibilities and duties. And now is the time.

Should the present Postage law continue in force another year, we shall endeavour in the printing and circulation of the Report, to save this expense, which instead of being diffused as heretofore in drops, upon the church at large, and is not felt, now falls in a mass and heavily upon the Board alone.

THE SUNSHINE AND THE SHADE.

FROM CALIFORNIA—PRESBYTERIAN HOUSE OF WORSHIP BURNT.

A very recent letter from Rev. Albert Williams, Pastor of the Presbyterian church in San Francisco, received at the Office, gave a most favourable view of the progress of his ministry there, and of the great value of the House of worship to his flock and the city. While we were rejoicing in his prosperity, by the late Steamer we received the afflicting intelligence that our beautiful and so much needed House of worship was laid in ashes, during the last fire! Here indeed is the sunshine and the shade in our missionary operations. We do not know if there was any insurance on the building. The loss is a sad one to the brethren in San Francisco, and the more seriously felt now, because occurring so soon after the great fire, and in connexion with the second fire almost as extensive as the first. God's dealings with that wonderful city are very severe. Is He teaching that city and the multitudes here that do business with it, that the silver and the gold are his: and that he will have no other gods before him? It is the first time we believe that he has laid his hand upon a house erected to his own honour and glory; and that house was prepared at considerable expense in New York, and sent out and put up in San Francisco, and bid fair to be a blessing to generations. Let us lay this fact to heart. Let it cause us to stand in awe and sin not, and to humble ourselves before Him: but let it not relax our energies, nor discourage our hearts. Though all San Francisco burn down and all the houses of worship also, yet the gospel must, and by God's blessing shall, be planted there. We must go forward. That land belongs to the Redeemer and it shall bow the knee to him. So let us go forward. If any churches or individuals desire to make an expression of their sympathy to the brethren in San Francisco, their contributions will be received at the office of the Board of Missions, and faithfully transmitted to them.

The following extract from the California Weekly Courier, of July 1st, will show the sympathy felt by our brethren of other denominations in San Francisco for our loss.

"CHRISTIAN LIBERALITY.—We stated a few days since that the Rev. Mr. Shaler had made the offer of his pulpit and house of worship to the Rev. Mr. Williams and his congregation to worship in, until they could rebuild. We have since heard through the Rev. Mr. Hunt, that he and all the other evangelical pastors in this city have tendered to Mr. Williams the same generous offer of their pulpits and houses of worship."

PASTORAL VISITING

By the missionaries of the Board.

Some people would have their Pastors chiefly occupied in visiting: others would have them visit but little, or not at all. Some would have their visits pass off in a social way; others would have them devoted to religion. The duty of visiting from "house to house" is enjoined in Scripture, and has everything in reason to sustain it. Such work as ministers perform in families during the week, is an application of their Sabbath prayers and sermons, and has in numerous instances been crowned with astonishing success in the conversion of souls, the edification of Christians, and the reformation of communities. There can be no perfect ministry without it. Yet it is a duty, like all the direct duties of the ministry, environed with its difficulties and dangers, and certainly requiring the pastor to bear its cross. How the duty is best to be discharged, must be learned from the word of God: and from efforts, and from observation and prayer. The great difficulty, after all, in the way of a proper and successful discharge of the duty, lies in the want of an earnest and devoted piety on the part of the ministry. Let that piety exist in the soul of a minister and he will gain access to the homes and hearts of his people, and find time for it, and find a way for it also. Is it difficult for a minister to visit religiously, in a time of revival? The great majority of the excuses of ministers for a neglect of this duty, are founded, when they are searched to the bottom, upon selfishness, pride, and love of ease. The heart leads us astray in its deceitfulness, and we laud and consecrate ourselves to one great duty to the neglect of others, and why? Because there is an aversion at heart, on account of the sacrifices attendant upon them! Yet in our self-deception, we endeavour to feel justified. Surely if any in the ministry should abound in pastoral visiting, it should be those who are settled in missionary fields and churches. It is alone by visiting, that the missionary can know the people of his charge, and the strangers that settle around him personally, and gain their esteem and confidence, and finally their affections: it is alone in this way that he will come to an exact understanding of the religious faith and character of people gathered from all parts of the world: it is alone in this way that he can secure the attendance and support of men in his church; it is alone in this way that he can properly interest the people in the gospel, and obtain the attendance of their children at the Sabbath-school, and attach the children to him, and so lay a broad and good foundation for a permanent church and congregation. More turns on a faithful performance of this duty in our missionary fields, for success, than brethren are aware of. Some missionaries in a short time build up a self-sustaining church. Others in equally promising fields have to be supported for so long a time by the Board, that the burden is great upon the funds of the Church. Complaints are made in particular instances that the missionaries of the Board do not visit as pastors the people of their charge, but live at home, in a sort of independence of them, and neither they nor their churches grow. This is indeed lamentable, and we would fain hope, and we do believe, that such instances are rare exceptions to the general rule to the contrary. Let our pure minds be stirred up by way of remembrance.

We add an extract from a letter, showing conclusively the duty and happy consequences of faithful pastoral visiting in our missionary fields. This brother hopes that his church in another year will be self-sustaining.

"I have recently visited all the families of the congregation (about fifty in number) and conversed with them on the subject of religion, inquiring into their state, and giving such advice and instruction as seemed proper. Though I have found by this course that there are some things discouraging, I have also found some that are encouraging. I have found a sad neglect of family religion in some families, there being no family-worship and but little family instruction, children ignorant of the catechism, &c. Yet, I have found other families where the family altar is set up on which is offered the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and thanksgiving. In visiting families of the latter description, I have had my spirits raised, and my heart encouraged. I have also found a number who are not professors of religion, whose minds are more or less impressed with the importance of the subject. One of this description has since in a sudden manner been called from the scenes of time. I scarcely thought, while making pastoral visits, that I was visiting some for the last time; but so it has come to pass in one instance, and it may in others. When shall we learn to converse with our fellow men as if we were conversing with them for the last time? I believe I was kindly received by every family I visited, at least there was no manifestation of unkindness. I believe that ministers often do themselves and others injustice, by supposing that they shall be received with coldness, if not repulsion. In one family where I anticipated such a reception, I was received with great kindness, and found them in quite an interesting state of mind. By these visits I have become much better acquainted with the families of the congregation than I was before, and they with me; and I think it has tended to strengthen our mutual affection. There has also of late been a perceptible increase of the number who attend upon public worship on the Sabbath." N.

A MISSIONARY TAKING LEAVE OF THE BOARD.

"In taking leave of the Board, I desire to return thanks for the timely aid I have received from that source, and also to bear testimony to the promptness and fidelity with which the concerns of the Board have been conducted, so far at least as my case is concerned. But though I cease to be a missionary technically, I expect still to be one practically. There is much destitution in the region of country, I understand, where I go. I hope to find time to spare from my pastoral duties to preach Christ and him crucified among these destitutions."

S.

CHURCH EXTENSION.—AN EASY PRESBYTERIAL PLAN.

A very recent letter from a missionary in a Presbytery, by no means a rich one, contains the following statement. "A part of the time I have been visiting some of the churches in our Presbytery asking aid for the house of worship we are about erecting at L. P. This absence has not been agreeable to my feelings, but in accordance with the recommendation of Presbytery. Its results promise to be an enlarged interest among our people in this field, and doubtless the whole work of missions, as well as the speedy and unencumbered erection of the desired building."

Now here is the proper course to be pursued in the vast majority of cases where houses of worship are to be erected in destitute parts of Presbyteries. The churches of the Presbytery within whose bounds the house of worship is to be erected, ought to be appealed to, whether they are self-sustaining churches or not, not omitting the church for which the house of worship is to be erected. It is their own territory—a part of their own household of faith—for which they are bound to do what they can. After they have done all they can, let that fact be made known, and then apply to the general funds of the church, under the care of the Board of Missions, through its Committee on Church Extension. If Presbyteries would conscientiously carry out this just plan, many applications for aid to the Church Extension Committee would never be made, that now are made; and many applications when made would be for far smaller amounts than we are accustomed to. The Church Extension Fund being thus relieved, would put it into the power of the Church Extension Committee frequently to make large and efficient appropriations at various important points in the vast field, that ought to be immediately occupied and furnished with a house of worship. But it is almost universally the case that the application is made to the Church Extension Committee in the first instance, and the churches and the Presbytery never do any thing afterwards, when they might in many instances not only do something, but all that would be required.

One further benefit of this plan would be the bringing before the people of God the destitutions in their own ecclesiastical boundaries; enlisting their feelings and efforts, and giving exercise to their charities would promote their growth in grace and usefulness in the world. May our Presbyteries consider and adopt this plan.

ORANGE PRESBYTERY, NORTH CAROLINA.

The Happy effects of Missionary Zeal and Labour.

We take great pleasure in laying before our readers the following most interesting communication from the Rev. J. Doll, in relation to the progress and present state of Orange Presbytery. It fills the heart with sincerest joy and gratitude. Would God that all our Presbyteries were in like manner active and enterprising, and blest in their work! Among the signs of God's presence in that Presbytery is that of twelve candidates for the ministry. In these days of drought in respect to candidates, this is refreshing. Orange Presbytery covers a noble part of the State of North Carolina. We shall be glad to receive similar communications from other Presbyteries. The spirit of missions is abroad in the churches. The Lord pour out his Spirit upon us!

Milton, N. C. July 12, 1851.

Reverend and Dear Brother—Up to the close of the year 1848, the number of our churches had continued for some years at 42, except one year; that was, I believe 1843, then our list numbered 43, but the next year it was reduced to the old number of 42. The roll of ministers varied from about 27 to 31. At the meeting of our Presbytery in December 1848, at Greensboro,' North Carolina, Presbytery took this matter into deliberate consideration and adopted a plan (a copy of which I send you), for the more vigorous management of our Domestic Missionary operations. From that hour God has blessed us. The Minutes of the Assembly for 1848 will show that that year our Presbytery contained 27 ministers. Since that time two of that number have died leaving but 25 of those who were then members. Now our roll numbers 33. By reference to the same minutes you will perceive that our churches numbered 42. Now they number 47. There are now 12 young men in the bounds of this Presbytery, looking forward to the ministry, two of whom are pursuing their academical course but have not yet placed themselves under the care of Presbytery. Showing an increase of 8 ministers, 5 churches, and 5 candidates, in the short space of two years and a half.

Look now at the Minutes of the Assembly for the year 1850, (I have not yet received the Minutes for 1851,) and I think you will find only two Presbyteries that have more than 12 candidates, and only two, I think, that have that number.

Not long since I had intended to take these and other facts as a text and write you a long letter by way of encouraging your heart in the work, and confirming you in a well known truth, that wherever the church developes the great missionary feature in its constitution, there the blessing of God will rest.

Pecuniary embarrassment consequent upon the settlement of a new country one cause of the failure of ministerial support.

"But the fact is, our operations in this State must be sustained chiefly by the Board for some time yet, or be abandoned. A large proportion of the country is under mortgage, under interest at twenty-five and thirty-three per cent.; the consequence must be great embarrassment. The failure of the wheat crop, the distance from market, and enormous taxation, have operated heavily against the farmers, and in my opinion we shall have hard times here for years. The people are not able to sustain the gospel even were they willing, but the great mass care little about it, and many think they are paying a minister a compliment if they go and hear him preach."

REVIVALS.

——— Pa., January 29, 1851.

"Thus I attend to about five meetings a week, and visit more or less every week. I have distributed many pages of religious tracts during the last quarter, most of which I obtained from your office. I have also disposed of a number of excellent books of our Board of Publication and other religious books. Besides I have commenced to circulate a library, consisting of near one hundred volumes, which I obtained from the Board in the fall, through the kindness of a few friends in Wilmington, Delaware, and in Philadelphia. My plan is to put one volume in each family every three weeks, which may be used during the weeks of my absence and then returned for another. In this way I trust much good information may be communicated. I regret to say that catechetical instruction has been too much neglected in my bounds; but I trust, as there is more attention paid to it now than there was, that the time is not far distant when parents will give more attention to this subject, and that it will then be more encouraging to your missionary. We have now four prayer meetings in our bounds, and one Sabbath-school; one of the prayer meetings is conducted by females and pretty well attended.

Since my last report six persons have been admitted to the sealing ordinances of the Church on examination and one on certificate. On last Sabbath the sacrament was administered in this place. The attendance was good, and unusual solemnity prevailed. Several persons have given us reason to hope that the time is not far distant when they will unite themselves with the people of God." H.

——— N. Y.

"During the week preceding our communion season, which was the first Sabbath in January, I appointed two sermons, two prayer meetings, and a day of fasting and prayer. There seemed to be more of God's presence with us than before. It was remarked by some of the members of the church that the fast day was the most solemn and affecting day that the church had enjoyed for twenty years. A student who arrived in our place that day, came to the house of God. God met him there in giving him conviction of sin, and in about two weeks he found the peace which Jesus gives. He is a promising ingenuous youth from a pious family, and perhaps the Lord will prepare him for much usefulness. Several weeks previous to the communion season one young lady experienced religion. She and another who had entertained hope for some time, were received into the church on confession of their faith, and two others by letter. Since that time my abours have been very abundant. I have preached three times on the Sabbath, twice in the week, and held two or more prayer meetings each week. As many as twelve or fourteen persons have obtained hope in Christ since that time; and numbers more are convicted, tender, and inquiring 'what must we do to be saved?'" L.

——— Ohio.

"Since that time we have had a blessed season at C——— church. I preached there almost every evening for three weeks, and during the day held prayer meetings and inquiry meetings. Many felt the strivings of God's spirit and professed to be seeking Jesus. The people continued to turn out through the mud and rain. And on the Sabbath preceding the last, the Lord's supper was celebrated, and twelve came forward and united with the church, seven of whom were heads of families. We hope there are several more who are setting their faces Zionward.

The church here is doing what they can towards the completion of our meeting house. In addition to the former subscription, nearly two hundred dollars have been given to the trustees in promissory notes. The brethren here have really done well according to their ability. O may the Lord prosper them! and that I may be an instrument in building them up in faith, and increasing their numbers." J.

——— Ind.

"The people of God are greatly revived, and a spirit of union and brotherly kindness prevails to a remarkable degree between Christians of the different denominations, Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians. Our prayer meetings have been increased in their number and are generally well attended. They have been precious seasons to many, so much that some have said they were the most delightful they remember to have ever enjoyed. 'The sinners in Zion are afraid, fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrite.' Backsliders are returning, humbly confessing their sins; several are seriously inquiring what they must do to be saved, and a few are rejoicing in hope. Indeed I may say that seriousness prevails to a great extent in this community, and for the last month much of my time has been taken up in visiting from house to house, talking and praying with the serious. Well may I say 'The Lord was in this place and I knew it not,' for I learn from some of the inquirers that they have had serious impressions for two or three months past."—W.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of July, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Hamilton Union church	$25 25

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Liberty church	10 00
Pby of North River.—Wappinger's Creek ch 20; Smithfield ch 10	30 00
Pby of Bedford.—Church of Rye	20 00
Pby of Long Island.—Middle Island ch	13 00
Pby of New York.—Wallabout ch mon col	3 86
Pby of New York 2d.—Ladies Benevolent Society of Stanton street Pres ch New York	35 04

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Second ch from Mrs S for California 10; Ridley ch 5	15 00
Pby of New Castle.—Rock cent society of New Castle 8 50; Smyrna ch 5; Upper Octorora ch from Susan K Russell 5	18 50
Pby of Baltimore.—Madison st (colored) ch Balt 3 38; New Windsor ch addl 1	4 38
Pby of Carlisle.—Petersburg ch 8; McConnellsburg ch 55 75; Wells Valley ch 9 25	73 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Waynesburg and Newton Hamilton chs 102; churches under care of Rev J J Hamilton 50	152 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Williamsport ch (6 93 of which for sustentation fund) 15 70; Danville ch 50	65 70

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Jenner ch	3 00

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Lexington ch 2; Normanda ch 5	7 00
Pby of Fort Wayne.—German ch of Fort Wayne	1 50

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Peoria.—North Pres ch Chicago of which 50 to con Mr M O Dorman an hon mem	75 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Orange.—Thro' Rev J A Gretter, Treasurer of Presb'y from the following churches: Harmony 6; Bethlehem 21; "Bethlehem" 6 50; Bethesda 8 50; Milton 18; Chapel Hill 33; Gum Grove 2 50; Pittsboro' 20; Spring Grove 10 50; Lexington 21; A friend in Hawfield's ch 5; Presbyterial coll at Yanceyville 50, 202, less deducted for exchange (1 per cent) 2	200 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Unity church	10 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Georgia.—St Mary's and Linton Grove ch	9 46
Pby of Hopewell.—Thro' J R Dow Esq Treasurer of Pres from the following churches: Woodstock 25; Thyatira 17; Concord 5 50	47 50
Pby of Cherokee.—Roswell church	20 00

SPECIAL COLLECTION.

M Newkirk Esq 100; F N Buck Esq 100	200 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Miss Mary Deare, Lawrenceville N J	100 00
"A Stranger" per Mr W H Mitchell	5 00
S S Myrick, Peekskill N Y 2; A Thank offering 5; A Friend to support a missionary in the South 5	12 00

LEGACIES.

Proceeds in part of sale of a lot of ground given by W Woods late of Stuartstown Pa	33 34
Legacy of Mr Blatchley, of Ohio	25 00
	$1214 53

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Receipts into the Treasury, during the months of June and July, 1851.

J Rutherford Esq, Kelso, Scotland, per Mr H Elliott	$10 00
First and Second Stillwater churches	1 00
Fairview church, Alabama, thro' G H Van Gelder Esq	17 00
Jas Leslie Esq 10th church Phila	10 00
A Friend, Mrs J S C church of Derry and Washingtonville Pa	50 00
Sixth ch Philada annual collection	60 00
Newtown ch L Island	70 00
		218 00
July.
Fort Wayne German Presb church	1 50
Dover ch Delaware	5 00
Smithfield church N York	5 00
A Lady Newburyport 2d Presb ch Mass	2 00
		13 50
		$231 50

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of July, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Erie.—Mill Creek ch	6 00
Pby of Blairsville.—Indiana ch	28 22

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Steubenville.—Two Ridges ch 10; Centre ch 2; Waynesburg ch 5	17 00
Pby of St Clairsville.—New Castle 1 25; Brownsville ch 3 60	4 85
Pby of New Lisbon.—New Salem ch	9 77
	$65 84

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Letters for the Board of Education to be addressed to Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 Remittances of money to be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

THE PLEDGE ABOLISHED, BUT NOT THE OBLIGATION.

Some persons, from merely reading the statement that the pledge was abolished, might infer that our Church had determined to educate all young men without reference to the ministry. This is not so. The Assembly did indeed pass a resolution, authorizing the Board to apply funds specifically given to the education of others than candidates. Such cases fall within the other department of the operations of the Board, viz., the general, and not the ministerial department. But the resolution, abolishing the pledge, had reference to young men studying for the ministry; and it simply leaves their case with the Presbytery, without requiring a written pledge. The examination of the young men before the Presbytery stands precisely where it did before. The rule is as follows:—"The examination shall be on his personal and experimental piety, on his motives for seeking the holy office of the ministry," &c. Of course, if a young man does not seek the office of the ministry, or if his motives are not proper ones in the judgment of the Presbytery, he will not receive the Presbyterial recommendation. The Board of Education will certainly educate no one on the ministerial funds who is not looking forward to the ministry. It was the full understanding of the Assembly, that the abolition of the pledge did not release the student from declaring to the Presbytery his present intention before God to enter upon the office of the ministry. The whole case is left with his Presbytery on just the same ground as before, with the exception that the extra judicial and unpresbyterian pledge, so generally regarded as a snare to the conscience, is not demanded.

In further explanation of the abolition of the pledge, it may be stated, that the rule of the Board is unaltered which requires the candidate to refund, in case he does not enter the ministry, all the moneys he may have received.

Both of these points were clearly stated in the Assembly by the Corresponding Secretary of the Board, by Dr. Plumer, and by others who engaged in the debate. That is to say, the abolition of the pledge does not, in the first place, at all dispense with the declaration, on the part of the student examined by his Presbytery, of a present purpose to enter upon the work of the ministry; nor does it, in the second place, release the student from the obligation to refund whatever he may have received, in case he abandons studying for the ministry.

One effect of abolishing the pledge will, it is hoped, be an increase of care and fidelity on the part of the Presbyteries in receiving and recommending young men to the Board. Let no one be recommended unless he has earnest piety and good talents, and unless his examination evinces a purity and steadiness of purpose in reference to the ministry.

THE EXAMINATION AT THE BEGINNING OF THE THEOLOGICAL COURSE.

The General Assembly, among other improvements whose wisdom will be seen, it is hoped, in the experience of our Church, adopted a recommendation in favour of officially recognizing young men as candidates for the ministry only at the beginning of the Theological course. The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That this Assembly prefer that young men within their bounds who are looking forward to the work of the ministry, should be officially recognized as candidates under the care of Presbyteries, only when they are prepared to enter upon their Theological studies, and until that time they be regarded simply as students on probation, under the general watch and patronage of the Presbyteries.

The practical operation of this resolution is the Presbyterial re-examination of all students, who have received aid from the funds of the church, when they are prepared to commence their theological studies.

This examination ought to be thorough and satisfactory, and at least free from doubt. The doubtful cases are the ones which usually disturb the healthful operations of the cause of Education.

It is not expected that this rule requiring a re-examination, will have a retrospective operation; or that it will go into effect until next year, unless convenient to the Presbyteries. But after this year, young men, on leaving college, must present new testimonials from their Presbyteries, before receiving aid from the funds of the Church as officially recognized candidates of the ministry.

NEW CANDIDATES.

The following table shows the number of new candidates received under the care of the Board of Education for the three months ending August 1st, together with the names of their Presbyteries:

Albany,	2
Ohio,	1
Chilicothe,	2
Oxford,	1
Cincinnati,	2
New Albany,	1
West Hanover,	1
Memphis,	1
Mississippi,	2
	13

This number is two less than the nmber received in the corresponding quarter of last year.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Manner.—The celebrated Garrick, having been requested by Dr. Stonehouse to favour him with his opinion as to how a sermon ought to be delivered, the English Roscius sent him the following judicious answer:

My Dear Pupil,—You know how you would feel and speak in a parlour concerning a friend who is in imminent danger of his life, and with what energetic pathos of diction and countenance you would enforce the observance of that which you really thought would be for his preservation. You could not think of playing the orator, of studying your emphasis, cadences, and gestures; you would be yourself; and the interesting nature of the subject impressing your heart, would furnish you with the most natural tone of voice, the most proper language, the most engaging features, and the most suitable and graceful gestures. What you would thus be in the parlour, be in the pulpit; and you will not fail to please, to affect, and to profit.

A Settled Ministry.—Richard Baxter cites, amongst the causes of the success of his ministry at Kidderminster, the fact that he was settled amongst the same people 16 years. "For," said he, "he that removeth oft from place to place may sow good seed in many places, but is not likely to see much fruit in any, unless some other skilful hand shall follow him to water it. It was a great advantage to me to have almost all the religious people of the place of my own instructing and informing; and that they were not formed into erroneous and fallacious principles before, and that I stood to see them grow up to some conformedness and maturity."

Hint to Ministers.—The Rev. J. Brown, of Haddington, tutor in divinity to the Associate Synod, in a letter of paternal counsels and cautions to one of his pupils newly settled in a small congregation, wrote thus:—"I know the vanity of your heart, and that you will feel mortified that your congregation is very small in comparison with those of your brethren around you; but assure yourself, on the word of an old man, that when you come to give an account of them to the Lord Christ, at his judgment-seat, you will think you have had enough."—Life of Dr. Waugh.

Clergyman's Life.—To a person who regretted to the celebrated Dr. Johnson that he had not been a clergyman, because he considered the life of a clergyman an easy and comfortable one, the doctor made this memorable reply:

"The life of a conscientious clergyman is not easy. I have always considered a clergyman as the father of a larger family than he is able to maintain. No, sir, I do not envy a clergyman's life as an easy life; nor do I envy the clergyman who makes it an easy life!"

The following additional thoughts for candidates have been sent by a minister who takes a deep interest in the candidates of the Church.

Ordination will have no tendency to make up the sad deficiencies of an untrained mind and of unsanctified affections.

He who pays broken vows by a new issue of the same heartless promises, may deceive himself, but will hardly deceive men, and cannot possibly deceive God.

Diamonds need no painting. "Beauty when least adorned, is adorned the most." Unvarnished truth is better than the most high-wrought fancy sketches. Simplicity and godly sincerity are worth more than all the shows in the world. One pang of godly sorrow is better than all the mere pretences ever made by sanctimonious hypocrites.

"To have prayed well is to have studied well."

Young students in danger of eating too much, should carefully study Proverbs xxiii. 1, 2.

"Before honour is humility," but "pride goeth before a fall."

Never forget that under God you must make your own life useful, happy, and honourable. No patronage of others is any substitute for industry, energy, and zeal.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

GERMAN VALLEY SCHOOL, N. J.

The following interesting report of one of the best parochial schools of the Church has been inadvertently delayed to the present time.

Rev. and Dear Sir,

It is my duty to inform you that the fourth quarter of the parochial school attached to the Presbyterian church of German Valley was closed on the 17th April. During the third quarter, thirty-three scholars were in attendance, and during the fourth quarter thirty-six; the whole number enrolled in either quarter was forty-six; some of these entered the school after the quarter commenced, and some discontinued before the close of the last quarter. Respecting the character of our school, we have to say, that it is in all respects such as is recommended by the General Assembly. The exercises of each day are opened and closed with the reading of the Scriptures and with prayer. Brown's and the Westminster Catechism are constantly taught, and since our last report the "Child's Scripture Catechism," published by the American Tract Society has been learned by all the scholars who are able to read, and a class has been formed from those somewhat advanced, in "Emerson's Lessons on the Old Testament," published by Crocker and Brewster, in Boston. This latter book has very greatly interested our pupils, and has been the means of imparting to them a minute and accurate acquaintance with the historical portions of the Old Testament, which perhaps we would have failed in communicating without its assistance. It has been gratifying indeed to see the eagerness with which even young children would search every book within their reach which was at all likely to give them information on matters of chronology or history suggested by the queries of their question book, and the result has been as stated above, an accuracy of knowledge beyond reasonable expectation. The pastor has made it his duty to visit the school when practicable at least one afternoon in each week, and to review the religious studies, and this duty has been very infrequently omitted. Upon these occasions all the religious studies from the commencement are expected to be prepared for recitation; of course all cannot be in any one afternoon reviewed, yet the children are always in ignorance till the time of examination, as to the part upon which they will be questioned. The walls of our school house are adorned with a complete set of Bidwell's Missionary Maps, which lend valuable assistance in all the geographical studies, but especially in Scripture geography. They also exert no small influence in enlisting the sympathies of the scholars in the missionary enterprise. We have commenced on a small scale the formation of a library; our present collection comprises fifty volumes, some of them quite small, of no great pecuniary value, but adapted to those scholars who are yet very young, and fitted to form and encourage in them a taste for reading; and other historical, biographical, &c., for the older pupils; this library we are desirous of enlarging as fast as our funds will admit. The books are sought for with avidity, and we believe are doing good. We are happy in being able to inform the Board that our building, which has cost in its erection between five and six hundred dollars, is entirely free from incumbrance. The appropriation from the Board for the six months now past, we need, and shall be glad to receive it at as early a day as it will be practicable to remit it. Our application for the year upon which we have just entered is for fifty dollars.

The above are the statistics required by the rules of the Board. From them it is made manifest that thus far God has favoured our enterprise. He has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Ours is a religious school, but while we have taken pains to have much of divine knowledge communicated, and while much time both in and out of school has been expended in its acquisition, we feel perfectly confident that we are exaggerating not at all, in saying that the children have made unusual attainments in secular learning; that they have advanced farther and better than ever they did, under circumstances different from those in which they are now placed.

We hear, too, that our school is exerting a beneficial influence on the community at large, in elevating the standard of education, and awakening in the minds of those too far removed from the school to allow their children to enjoy its advantages, a desire for like advantages, a feeling, we fondly trust, which will ere long result in an extension of the parochial system within the bounds of our congregation.

The hitherto success of our school bids us to indulge in confident hope for the future, and proves, too, that many such schools might be established and maintained in sections of our Church where, through fear of difficulty, the enterprise has been thought impracticable. A school conducted on religious principles by an efficient teacher, (and such it is our happiness to have) and where the rudimental branches of education are thoroughly taught, will almost any where in our country recommend itself to patronage and command it.

By order of session,

James H. Mason Knox, Moderator.

PRESBYTERIAL ACADEMIES.

The present academies of the Presbyterian Church are the lineal successors of the institutions of the Tennents, Blairs, Smiths, Grahams, McMillans and Doaks of ancient days. God will perpetuate the glory of a church that retains an interest in the religious instruction of its youth. The blessing of the fathers shall descend to the children.

Fewer obstacles exist in the way of Presbyterial Academies than of sessional schools. In this department, great success has followed the operations of our church. Never have we, at any period in our history, presented such an imposing array of institutions. These institutions are generally conducted on a high standard of literary and scientific attainment; are under the management of competent and able teachers; and are pervaded with strong religious influences by means of Christian text-books and Christian discipline and example.

The following is a list of our Presbyterial Academies.

Presbyteries.	Name and location.
Steuben,	Geneseo, New York.
Wyoming,
Buffalo City,	Bethany, New York.
Newton,	Blairstown, New Jersey.
Luzerne,	Wyoming Institute, Wyoming, Pa.
Susquehanna,	Wyalusing, Pa.
Philadelphia,	Philadelphia, Pa.
Blairsville,	Elder's Ridge, Pa.
Redstone,	Dunlap's Creek, Pa.
Alleghany,	Butler, Pa., Witherspoon Institute.
Washington,	West Alexander, Pa.
Steubenville,	Richmond, Ohio.
Beaver and New Lisbon,	Poland, Ohio.
Columbus,	Kingston, Ohio.
Coshocton, Richland, Wooster,	Vermillion Institute, Haysville, Ohio.
Zanesville,	Miller Academy, Washington, Ohio.
Miami,	Male Academy, Monroe, Ohio.
	Female do. Springfield, Ohio.
Maumee,	Montpelier, Ohio.
New Albany,	Female Academy, Charlestown, Ind.
Madison,	Female Academy, S. Hanover, Ind.
Crawfordsville,	Waveland, Indiana.
Palestine,	Edgar Academy, Paris, Illinois.
Potosi,	Near Hannibal, Mo.
Wisconsin,	Waukesha, Wis.
Lexington,	Brownsburg, Va.
West Hanover,	Halifax C. H., Va.
Montgomery,	Christiansburg, Va.
Fayetteville,	Donaldson Acad. Fayetteville, N. C.
South Carolina,	Greenwood, S. C., male and female.
South Alabama,	Female Academy, Mobile, Alabama.
East Alabama,	Lafayette, Alabama.
Mississippi,	Zion Seminary, Tipton Co., Miss.
Knoxville,	Knoxville, Tennessee.
West'n District,	Mount Carmel, Tennessee.
Do.	Shiloh, Gibson county, Tennessee.

During the year one sad adversity has interrupted the general success of operations in this department. The Board allude to the winding up of the affairs of the Caldwell Institute, an academy bearing an honoured name, established by a zealous Presbytery, and favoured with high reputation, and for a time with success. The causes which led to this failure are not understood by the Board to involve the wisdom of Church action. The chief lesson to be learned from this disastrous incident in the history of the year, is the necessity of avoiding debt. No institution can prosper under the pressure of accumulating financial embarrassments. It ought to be a settled principle that our institutions shall be self-sustaining, and if not self-sustaining, that a contingent fund shall be raised in the Presbytery sufficient to meet the temporary trials, as they occur, to which all such enterprises are from time to time subject. The Caldwell Institute has done a noble work in its day. Its general history is in favour of the ecclesiastical management of academies; and if it could have survived the interval of depression which suddenly came over it, there can scarcely be a doubt that measures might have been adopted to secure its re-established prosperity. In the opinion of some members of the Presbytery, the Caldwell Institute will be revived at no distant day,* but if the star of its glory had set, its light, like that of an extinct orb in the firmament, will shine upon the Church for years after its actual disappearance from its luminous pathway.

Several of the Presbyterial academies have enjoyed the influences of God's Spirit in the conversion of the youth under their instructions. The highest end of true Christian education, be it ever remembered, is the salvation of the soul. Let our youth enjoy the advantages of a course of training which enforces the obligations of religion, and which gives instruction in the means of attaining it, and there is every reason to believe that He, who is more willing to give his Spirit than earthly parents are to give gifts to their children, will sanctify such instruction with immortal rewards. As year after year passes away, the visitations of God, according to the ordinary workings of his providence, will be felt in our literary institutions, as well as in our churches. A single soul saved through an immense outlay of pecuniary resources, would be a reward of Christian exertion inconceivably great in view of the fact that a whole world is as nothing to one immortal soul. But God signalizes his love by employing these institutions, which cost but a trifle in worldly outlay, in delivering many, very many, precious youths from destruction to life eternal.

A church that thus aims at training its youth for a better world, is engaged in no subordinate part of a great evangelical work. In order to confirm the friends of Christian education in our own denomination in the wisdom of our present measures, it may be well to remember what is doing by sister denominations in the same department. The Methodist, the Protestant Episcopal, the Baptist, and other churches have flourishing literary institutions under their care.

There are several aspects in which our Academies rise to very great importance.

1. In the first place, they are the dividing line between the school and the college, and help to diminish the inaccessibility of collegiate education, and thus to remove popular prejudices. Education encounters strong opposition, especially from those who have never fully enjoyed its advantages. The common school is regarded with favour as belonging pre-eminently to the people, whilst colleges often excite jealousy and suspicion as tending to aristocratic and odious demarcations between the learned and illiterate. Well-conducted academies, occupying a middle ground, and offering advantages on an inviting scale, assist in popularizing the whole work of education.

2. Such institutions manifestly exert an elevating influence on our church. Ignorant godliness will secure heaven, and is never to be despised; but enlightened religion is an instrument of power in converting the world to God, and is the direct and lawful means of the greatest good. Whatever draws out the mind improves the piety, if in subordination to its guidance. The greatness of a Church, other things being equal, will be in proportion to its intellectual cultivation. God himself is both infinitely great in intellect and infinitely holy in nature. And just in proportion as the Church approaches the standard set forth in the Bible, does it acquire ability to discharge its highest ends. How then, can we sufficiently appreciate the importance of the academies of our church, as the instruments of its elevation?

3. Academies have a direct bearing upon the increase of the ministry. The great truth, to be learned by faith and to be confirmed by sight, is that the use of means is necessary in the perpetuation of the ministry. God does not often call the ignorant to the service of the sanctuary; and if intellectual acquisitions are a common condition of a call, then to multiply facilities for a course of liberal education is to follow the directions of a trust in Providence. Who can doubt that, with ten times the number of our present institutions, a larger company of precious and educated youth might be selected to the ministry of reconciliation? Every new Academy is a school for future ministers. It offers opportunities of higher training to some, who would otherwise never have possessed any opportunities at all, and places them in a position which Providence shows to be commonly an antecedent to a call to the ministry.

* We are happy to learn that the Presbytery have already taken measures to place the Institute upon a permanent foundation.

4. Our academies assist in training many of our youth to be teachers, or to occupy influential positions in life, as legislators, jurists, statesmen, &c.

In short, there can be no doubt that our Presbyterian Academies are destined to accomplish a most useful work. It is our obvious policy to foster existing ones and to establish others, until the blessings of learning and religion shall be multiplied more and more extensively throughout our bounds to the praise and glory of God.

THE CALDWELL INSTITUTE.

Since the notice of the Caldwell Institute, contained in the preceding article, was written, the gratifying intelligence has been received that the Presbytery of Orange have resolved to revive the institution at Greensboro, where it was originally established, and to attempt its endowment on a liberal scale. The following exhibits the action and the plans of the Presbytery.

RESOLUTIONS OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY IN RELATION TO THE CALDWELL INSTITUTE, PASSED AT ITS LATE SESSIONS HELD IN YANCEYVILLE, JUNE, 1851.

WHEREAS, It is highly important to the interest of education and religion in the bounds of the Presbytery of Orange, that the Caldwell Institute be endowed with a permanent fund, affording an income sufficient to secure the services of an able faculty: and that this be so raised and secured, that the persons contributing thereto, may receive an equivalent return in instruction: therefore

Resolved, That not less than five hundred, nor more than six hundred scholarships, of one hundred dollars each, be created in said Presbytery, for the endowment of the said Institute.

2. Any person who shall pay to the Trustees of the Caldwell Institute, or their agent, the sum of one hundred dollars, on or before the first day of June, A. D. 1852, (or on or before any subsequent day which may hereafter be appointed by the Presbytery of Orange,) shall be entitled to all the benefits of a scholarship, subject to the restrictions hereinafter contained, without any charge for tuition from the time the said Institute shall go into operation upon the scholarship plan.

3. Any person taking a scholarship, shall have the privilege of educating any or all of his or her sons in said Institute, free of tuition fees: Provided, he or she shall not have more than one son in school at the same time upon the same scholarship. And in case of his or her death before the education of all his or her sons shall be completed, his or her executor, administrator, or family, shall have the privilege of having a scholar in said Institute, until all the sons of the first purchaser of said scholarship shall be educated.

4. That after the education of all the sons of the first purchaser of a scholarship is completed, the said scholarship shall become dormant and remain so during the life of the first taker, but he shall have the power of bequeathing the same by a last will and testament, executed with the formality required by law to pass other property; and in case of his dying intestate, said scholarship shall be subject to sale by his personal representatives in the same manner as his other effects, and the legatee or purchaser of said scholarship shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges of said scholarship, and subject to the same restrictions as the original purchaser.

5. In case any person shall purchase a scholarship having no son or sons to educate, said person may enjoy the benefits of said scholarship himself, or shall have the right of transferring the privileges and benefits arising from the same, to any nominee he or she shall designate in writing, for the space of twelve years only, after which time said scholarship shall become dormant, during the life of the first purchaser, unless he shall have a son or sons after the transfer aforesaid, in which case he shall be entitled to all the privileges of that class of persons named in the third resolution, and at his death the said scholarship may be transferred by will, or sold in the course of administration, with the same rights and privileges to the purchaser, and subject to the same restrictions as are contained in the immediately preceding resolution.

6. No person shall have the right or power of transferring a scholarship during his life, or in any other mode than that pointed out in the two preceding resolutions.

7. That no person subscribing for a scholarship as aforesaid, shall be bound to pay for the same until the smaller number provided for in these resolutions shall be sold.

8. The money raised by the sale of said rights of scholarship shall be invested in State or United States Government stocks, or in any other sound stocks paying not less than six per cent. annual interest, in which said investment can be made. The interest therefrom only shall be faithfully applied to the payment of the faculty in said Institute, and no part of the principal shall ever be touched in defraying the expenses of the same. And in case the Presbytery of Orange shall suffer said Institute entirely to go down and cease its operations by reason of the expiration of its charter or otherwise—the stocks in which investments shall have been made as aforesaid, shall be returned to the purchasers of said scholarships or their legal representatives.

9. That whenever five hundred scholarships shall be subscribed as above, the Caldwell Institute shall be removed from Hillsboro to Greensboro.

10. That a Committee of not less than three nor more than five persons shall be appointed by Presbytery, whose duty it shall be to procure a suitable charter from the next Legislature, incorporating the Caldwell Institute in the town of Greensboro, and transferring the corporate effects of said Institute from Hillsboro to that place.

11. That the Rev. John A. Gretter be appointed the agent of this Presbytery, whose duty it shall be to visit the churches in the bounds of Presbytery, and any other promising field of operations, for the purpose of selling the aforesaid scholarships.

MOTHERS.—"O, ye mothers, sanctify your tenderness, and your influence! How much depends upon your gentle and early endeavours! How often you may sow the seed, which, after a lapse of time, shall revive and flourish, thirty, sixty, and a hundred fold! How often has a disobedient son been reclaimed by the remembrance of the eloquent tears of her who bore him, or the pressure of her trembling hand, when delivering her dying charge! What did Mr. Cecil and Mr. Newton owe to the lessons their mothers had taught them? What did Timothy owe to his grandmother, Lois, and his mother Eunice? What did Samuel owe to Hannah? We know little of Jesse, but how often and tenderly does David, in his devotions, refer to his mother, and plead the relation in which he had the honour and happiness of standing to her—'Save the son of thine handmaid.' 'Truly I am thy servant and son of thine handmaid.'

"'I think" said a deceased mother, about a fortnight before her death, 'I think in looking back on all these seasons, my sweetest exercises were with my dear boy on the Sabbath evenings. The house was still; my babes in bed; my husband was labouring for God in the sanctuary; every thing aided and inspired devotion. I think my dear boy will never forget some of these seasons any more than myself. O, my happy seasons with my infant son!"

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

All that the Board deem it important to furnish is their CORPORATE NAME, viz. "The Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." Any person, disposed to leave a legacy to the Board of Education, is requested to insert the right CORPORATE NAME. The State laws differ so much that no one Form will answer in all the States.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, JULY 1851.

Presbytery of Londonderry.
2d ch Newburyport, a Lady	2 00
Presbytery of Troy.
Troy 2d church	16 61
Presbytery of Albany.
Galway ch 4, Education Fund of Presbytery 6 25	10 25
Presbytery of Buffalo City.
East Aurora church	8 00
Presbytery of North River.
Smithfield church	12 00
Presbytery of Long Island.
Southampton ch Fem Ed Society	36 00
Presbytery of Elizabethtown.
Westfield church	27 00
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
Trenton 3d church	16 62
Presbytery of Burlington.
Medford church	8 59
Presbytery of Newton.
Hackettstown church	33 39
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
10th ch Jno McArthur 10, Jno W Tilford 5, addl 15; Central ch F N Buck 100; 7th ch Wm S Martien 75; 1st African ch for a candidate 5; Ridley ch 5	200 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Madison st ch Baltimore	2 00
Presbytery of Carlisle.
Carlisle ch addl 5; Dillsburg ch 8 50; Big Spring ch 40	53 50
Presbytery of Northumberland.
Williamsport church	7 25
Presbytery of Fort Wayne.
German ch Fort Wayne	1 50
Presbytery of East Hanover.
Petersburg ch A G McIlwaine to const himself an hon mem 50, D Dunlop 35, J Pritchard 2, R F Lester 4, J W Bradbury 5, D Donnan 5, J T Robertson 1, Mrs Bott 1, Collection 83 20	186 20
Presbytery of Montgomery.
Fincastle ch Miss Harriet N Bascom for special donation fund	100 00
LEGACIES.
Proceeds of sale of property given by the late William Woods of Tinker Run, Pa in part	66 66
MISCELLANEOUS.
A Friend, quarterly instalment on three scholarships 150; Rev T A Ogden, Natchez, Mi 10; Check returned 28 12	188 12
Total	$975 60

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH, JULY 1851.

Presbytery of Blairsville.
Ligonier ch 40; Beulah ch 50	90 00
Presbytery of Redstone.
Brownsville ch 13 25; Tyrone ch 11 35	24 60
Presbytery of Allegheny.
Plain Grove church	37 25
Presbytery of Washington.
Cross Roads church	50 00
Presbytery of Steubenville.
Steubenville 2d church	35 00
Total,	$187 35

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & Co., Treasurers.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

DEATH OF MR. OLYPHANT.

Since our last publication, we have received intelligence of the death of Mr. David W. C. Olyphant, a merchant of this city. He died at Cairo, in Egypt, on his return from China. His death is a severe loss to the cause of missions, of which for many years he had been a liberal and influential friend; and particularly to the missions of our Church, with which he has been connected since 1844 as a member of the Executive Committee. His residence for some years in China, his enlarged views, his excellent judgment, his deep and unaffected piety, combined to make his counsels invaluable as a member of this body.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Mission House, August 13, 1851.

India Missions.—Letters have come to hand from Lodiana, May 7; Futtehgurh, to June 14; Agra, May 8; Allahabad, to May 31. The mission families were in the enjoyment of usual health, and their labours were steadily carried on. Of the inquirers formerly reported at Futtehgurh, two had gone away; one of them, however, under the entreaties and threats of his relations, but giving evidence of real concern for his salvation. Two others professed to be sincerely inquiring as to the way of life. The brethren look on all these cases with mingled fear and hope, and they ask for such persons the earnest prayers of the churches. At Allahabad an aged woman, a member of the church, had departed this life. She was enabled to meet the last enemy without fear, and gave pleasing evidence of being one of God's chosen people, for whom it is gain to die. One of the missionaries at this station is engaged on a translation of some of the sermons of the Rev. Dr. Alexander into Hindustani.

China Missions.—Letters have been received from Ningpo, to April 4; Shanghai, to May 7: and Canton, May 21. Dr. McCartee sends an interesting account of an aged man, who was a regular attendant on their services, and of whose sincerity they had no reason to doubt. The occupation of the boys of the mission school after finishing their term of study, is a subject of some difficulty at Ningpo. An arrangement had been completed for one, which it was hoped might be practicable for others—that of having them connected with respectable native mechanics, but allowed to refrain from work on the Sabbath day. Something would thus be gained, in showing the Chinese the duty of keeping that day holy. What the missionaries most desire is, that the boys in their schools may become qualified by the work of grace in their hearts, to aid them in spreading the knowledge of the gospel. Some of the members of the Ningpo Mission, with the missionaries of another Society, were preparing and printing a primary book of the colloquial language in Roman letters, for the use of schools. It was looked upon by them as an experiment, though they were sanguine of its success. Others, however, entertained doubts as to the result.

Creek Mission.—From Kowetah one of the female teachers writes, on the 16th of July, as follows: "It is pleasant and gratifying to witness a gradual improvement in order, neatness, punctuality and industry among the girls, but above all the increasing attention to the things which belong to their peace. Much seriousness has been manifested among them the past winter and spring, and seven have become hopefully pious, and are now members of the church and consistent Christians. These being the oldest of the girls, their influence is most happy upon the others." How gladly would all the missionaries send such accounts as these. How thankful should the churches feel for such evidence of the blessing of God on this work. We learn the arrival of Miss C. M. Workman at Kowetah, as a teacher, in connexion with this mission.

Choctaw Mission.—The Rev. John Edwards and his wife have been appointed to this mission, in connection with Spencer Academy. We are glad to report their having reached their station. Mr. Edwards was ordained by the Presbytery of Steuben.

Arrival of Missionaries.—The Rev. James Wilson and his wife, with their two youngest children, and the youngest child of the Rev. J. L. Scott, arrived at New York on the 31st of July. Mr. Wilson has returned partly for health, which has become affected by living nearly seventeen years in India, and partly to make arrangements for his children. We need not ask for him a cordial reception by the churches which he may be able to visit.

MISSIONS AMONG ROMANISTS.

A Statement by the Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee have given their careful consideration to the resolutions of the General Assembly, on the subject of missions in Papal countries; and in endeavouring to comply with the spirit and letter of these resolutions, they wish to lay the subject more particularly before the churches. All efforts to promote the spread of pure religion among Romanists, as well as among Pagans or Jews, must be so conducted as to enlist the cordial co-operation of our ministers and members, or they will fail of success.

It is manifest from the two series of resolutions of the General Assembly concerning the missions entrusted to the Board, that no intention was shown to withdraw from any of the existing fields of labour, nor to make any material change in the method of conducting the Foreign Missions of the Church.

The duty of the Board, under these resolutions, is to carry on with energy the work of foreign missions as heretofore conducted, and at the same time to employ suitable means for enlarging the missionary force in Papal lands. This enlargement ought to be made, but not at the expense of missions in other countries. There must be no conflict between the interests of different missions, and there can be none, while their direction is entrusted to the same Committee. These are obvious views of the action of the Assembly. In reference to them, a brief survey of the missions of the Board may be given, before the Committee proceed to the subject of enlarging the missions to Romanists.

According to the last Report of the Board, the Missions, and expenditure for their support, were as follows:

Indian Tribes—Seven Missions,	$33,857
Africa—Three Missions,	4935
India—Three Missions,	59,306
Siam—One Mission,	2918
China—Three Missions,	20,157
The Jews,	2508
Papal Europe,	2050

These missions should be cherished by the churches. Some of the fields in which they are planted are of the greatest importance; others have peculiar claims on the Christians of this land. The blessing of God has rested on our missionary brethren and their labours. The growth and prosperity of their work calls for enlarged support. The General Assembly has commended these missions to the confidence, liberality, and prayers of the churches. The Committee cannot appropriate this year a smaller sum than was expended last year for their support, but would gladly increase the amount. Indeed, in some cases, an increased support is urgently required. Under these circumstances, they could not but seriously deprecate any diversion of Christian interest from their claims. And if the whole missionary field can be placed under the clear and fixed view of the Church, no apprehension need be felt that the enlargement of one mission will prove injurious to the welfare of the rest.

In turning now to missions among the Romanists, the Committee are anxious that the ministers and members of our body should consider the importance of this department of the missionary field. The Romanist system extends over a large part of the human family. The inhabitants of no small part of Europe, of nearly all South America, Mexico, and other regions, are subject to the Roman See; besides tens of thousands in our own land. Some of the nations subject to Rome exert a powerful influence on other nations, an influence alike hostile to civil and religious freedom, an influence in some cases officially employed to uphold and extend the power of "the man of sin," thereby injuring deeply all the interests of the souls of men. The Romanist nations of Europe, moreover, are sending thousands of their people to this country, here to become intelligent and true Christians, or else to endanger our cherished institutions. These things should awaken a deep interest for the more than one hundred millions of our race, who are in bondage to the Roman yoke. But it is to these millions as sinners, lost and perishing, yet who may be saved, and to every one of whom the gospel is to be preached, that the Christian sympathies, labours and prayers of the churches should be directed in the work of missions. Viewed in this light their claims must be regarded as great and urgent.

What can be done for the spread of the gospel among these deluded multitudes? This practical question has received the earnest consideration of the Committee. Missions to Romanists may be divided into two fields,—embracing the adherents of the Papal system in this country, and those in foreign lands. For the former, no other organized agency is needed than that of our own Boards. Their missionaries, colporteurs, and schools, constitute an admirable system of means for the spiritual benefit of errorists of every name. The Romanists here are surrounded by a thousand influences, tending to their deliverance from spiritual bondage. In foreign lands they live in circumstances differing widely in different countries; in some they are more accessible, in others less, and in some hardly at all. France, Belgium and Italy are countries which have large claims on our missionary zeal. In these, the same line of policy, in the main, should be followed, which has thus far been adopted,—that of strengthening the hands of evangelical brethren on the ground, fellow-countrymen of the Romanists, but heirs with us of the grace of Jesus Christ, and our kindred in their views of truth and the order of the church. The amount remitted to these European missions last year was smaller than usual. Over $30,000 have been thus expended since the Board entered on this field, greatly cheering the hearts of many faithful servants of Christ. And the Board could well employ greatly increased pecuniary means in aid of these missions. Amongst those to whom we are related by geographical position, the inhabitants of Mexico and other Spanish American States, there are as yet but few openings for direct missionary labour. Changes are in progress, however, in these countries, which should be carefully watched. Some places are specified in one of the resolutions of the General Assembly, to which the Committee would gladly send missionaries at once, if the way is open, and men of suitable qualifications can be obtained. And for all Romanist countries, the all-important agency of prayer to the God of providence and of grace should be earnestly and constantly offered by the people of God. The Church must look unto God, to open the door where it is shut, to raise up the labourers, to furnish means for their support, and to crown their labours with success.

The Committee would ask the attention of the churches to the methods which have been recommended by the General Assembly, for obtaining funds to enlarge these missions. It is recommended to the Board "to take measures to have a separate collection made in the churches, for the diffusion of the light of evangelical truth in Papal countries, unless the same object can be as well reached in some other way." The Board will faithfully employ for this object whatever funds may be supplied by a separate collection. It is not considered expedient to employ a separate agency system for this purpose; but the Committee would, under this direction of the Assembly, request the churches, unless they can promote this object in some better way, to make a separate collection at whatever time may be deemed most convenient, and least likely to interfere with their general collection for the cause of foreign missions.

The recommendation of the General Assembly implies, however, that this separate collection may not be found to be the best method. In some churches it may be practicable, but in others it will be found difficult to make such a collection without interfering with other important arrangements. In these, and indeed in all cases, the Committee would urge the importance of having the foreign missionary work in its real character brought before the churches. Let its magnitude and importance be truly considered. Let the attention of Christians be fully directed to the extent of the fields assigned to the Board of Foreign Missions, the vast multitudes of immortal souls to be influenced by these missions, their deep and crying spiritual necessities, the loud calls of Providence upon the churches for greater zeal in their benevolent labours, the tender motives drawn from the love and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ; so that in view of these weighty and sacred considerations, their liberality at the Monthly Concert offerings, and the Annual Contribution, may bear a due proportion to the great object of the Board, or rather of the Church itself—the conversion of all nations to Jesus Christ. If this is done, the happy result will be that the free-will offerings of the people of God will be sufficient for the support of all these Missions, and for the enlargement of missions among Romanists or others, as the leadings of divine providence may direct.

The attention of the Agents of the Board is requested to the resolutions of the Assembly, which call for "special pains" "in every proper way" to set before the churches the nature and extent of the missionary work. But as it is impossible to reach a large part of the churches by Agents, the main reliance must still and ever be on the ministers, elders, and other persons of influence in the congregations; and especially, judging from all past experience, does the promotion of this cause depend on our brethren in the ministry, the chosen leaders of the Israel of God.

The conclusion of the whole matter is, that the Church is called to go forward, and that in a plain and well-known path of duty,—not adopting new machinery, nor turning aside from long-tried plans of doing good,—but addressing herself to all the work before her with new faith, zeal, and hope. The Lord has been with her in her foreign missionary labours, giving to them many and marked proofs of his blessing. Let her draw encouragement from his favour in time past; and in view of the open and opening doors now before her, let her go forward with greater hope than ever in her appointed and sacred work.

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. JOHN NEWTON.

Missionary Notices at Lahor.

1850. Dec. 23, Monday.—A young Bengáli called to ask for a Bible—said he had been educated in Dr. Duff's school—knew enough of Christianity to believe it was a good religion, but wanted to understand it more perfectly; was determined to follow the true faith when he found it. He also wanted to be instructed an hour daily in the Bible and other useful books. A short time ago, when going towards Amritsar, I overtook a man who saluted me in English with a "Good morning." This led to inquiries, and I found he was a Bengáli, about seventeen years of age, who had been in one of the missionary schools in Calcutta. He said he believed in Christianity, and that he prayed daily in the name of Christ. He expressed his hope of salvation through "Our Saviour," meaning Jesus. He had not been baptized, he said, because he was afraid of his heathen friends. These doubtless have their parallel in a multitude of cases.

1851. Jan. 20, Monday.—Some days ago, when I went, according to custom, into the bazár, to preach, I was encountered by a Hindú, who undertook to defend idolatry, on the ground that God was everywhere present, and therefore in every thing. Several Mohammedans in the crowd, having their zeal excited, began to take part in the debate, siding of course with me. Seeing that the debate was managed with some skill, and carried on with great energy by my coadjutors, I was content to be a listener. One invidual, in the garb of a Musalmán, was particularly eloquent in his way, and for a while was allowed to be the chief speaker; but he presently spoke of Christ as the Son of God. This called forth a torrent of opposition from an old Kashmírí Musalmán, who affirmed that God had neither son nor daughter, father nor mother, &c. The Hindú dropped his argument, and smiled at the mess his opponents were getting into. The man re-affirmed the truth, that Christ was the Son of God, and said it was so written in the gospel. He was immediately asked what he was, to be talking thus. "I am a Musalmán," said he; and proceeded to speak of Mohammed as "our prophet," at the same time exalting Christ above him. The others exclaimed that Mohammed was the last and the greatest of the prophets. "Which of the prophets," demanded my new friend, "besides Jesus, was born of a virgin?" That was a hard question, and for a moment his opponents were all staggered. But it was easy to reiterate, that God had no companion or fellow, son or daughter, &c., and one of them added that all the books of revelation must be examined, if we would know the truth; meaning that we must observe what the Qurán said on this subject. At this point I interposed, and as I spoke approvingly of the proposition that all the books professing to be a revelation should be examined and compared, the whole company gave me their ear. I then admitted that there was only one God, as the Qurán declared; at the same time I reminded them that in the Qurán itself Christ was called "The Spirit of God;" which properly interpreted, implied that he was not a mere man, but had a divine Spirit. Then I said, "You have heard of the prophet Zechariah."—"O yes, yes!" "Well, in the book he wrote, is this verse, 'Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd and against the man that is my fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts.' So you see, that though there is only one God, yet there is some sense in which God must be said to have a fellow; there is more than one Divine person; the fellow of God was a man—against the man that is my fellow—it was in fact Jesus; the same that was in the Qurán called the Spirit of God; and the smiting of him with a sword had reference to his death, by which he was made a sacrifice for the sins of men." I dwelt on the subject, vindicating the divinity of the Saviour, and insisting on the necessity of an atoning sacrifice. There was not another syllable of opposition, and no one seemed to feel more interest in what I said than the Kashmírí above mentioned. Having afterwards an opportunity of speaking more privately to the man who had so strangely distinguished himself by pleading for Christ, I asked him who and what he was. He looked around to see if any one was listening, and then said in English, as if afraid to say it in Hindustáni, "Sweeper!" I expressed no surprise, and did not think it necessary then to reprove him for palming himself upon the company for a Mohammedan, but simply asked him where he had learned so much of Christianity. He said that his home was in Meerut, that he had learned the gospel from the missionary there, and that several of his relations had become Christians. I urged the necessity, in order to be saved, of his becoming a Christian himself; and left him with an invitation to come and see me at my house, which, however, he has not yet done.

Lord's Day, Jan. 26.—Preached this afternoon to a native Christian congregation, consisting chiefly of drummers, from Luke iv. 18, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor," &c., showing that it was only to the poor in spirit, to men who were sensible of their guilt and ruin, that the preaching of Christ was truly good news; that such only were capable of being Christians; that without this they were substantially in the same condition as the heathen around them, &c. This service, held in the soldiers' chapel, has been recently commenced. It takes the place of the Hindustáni service I held last year in my own house. The drummers, though ordered to attend by their commanding officer, according to military usage, listen to the word preached with a good degree of interest.

Tuesday, Jan. 28.—Had an opportunity to-day of pressing the claims of the Christian's God on an old Sikh, who was sent to me for this purpose by our friend Dr. Madden. The Doctor had just laid the man under a heavy obligation, and at the same time exhibited the excellence of Christian principle, by operating gratuitously and successfully, with the help of chloroform, upon a son of his, a lad of about twelve, who had for five years been afflicted with stone. A similar case occurred a short time before. So long as we missionaries are not able to perform such operations ourselves, and thus win the hearts of the people, it is a great matter to have the co-operation of pious physicians. I have often regretted that the purpose I had cherished of studying medicine and surgery, before leaving America, was not fulfilled.

INDIA: FURRUKHABAD MISSION.

COMMUNICATION OF THE REV. A. H. SEELEY.

On the Hindu Doctrine of Transmigration.

In forwarding this paper, Mr. Seeley says he has availed himself of the Institutes of Menu in its preparation. Menu, among the Hindus, was in some respects like Moses among the children of Israel.

The doctrine of transmigration holds an important place in the religious belief of every Hindu. It being a subject of frequent conversation, its influence is seen and felt in every grade of society.

They hold to threefold transmigration. 1st. Souls endued with goodness always attain the state of deities. The quality of goodness belongs to every act by which a man hopes to acquire divine knowledge, which he is never ashamed of doing, and which brings joy to his conscience.

2d. Those men who are filled with ambitious passions appear again in human form. Every act springs from passion by which a man seeks exaltation and celebrity in this world.

3d. Persons immersed in darkness are born again in the nature of beasts, worms, insects, and plants. That man is sunk in darkness who does acts which he is ashamed to have others know.

Each one of these three transmigrations, caused by the several qualities, is also considered threefold, the highest, the mean, and the lowest, according to acts and their circumstances.

1st. Quality of darkness.

The man possessing the quality of darkness in the first degree of death, passes into vegetables, worms, insects, reptiles, fish and cattle. The 2d degree sinks a man to the birth of elephants, horses, men of the servile class, contemptible barbarians, tigers and boars.

Dancers and singers, deceitful men, giants and blood-thirsty savages, are the highest conditions to which the soul immersed in darkness can attain, when it leaves its present state.

2d. Quality of passion.

Boxers, wrestlers, those who teach the use of weapons, and those addicted to gaming and drinking, are the lowest forms occasioned by the passionate quality.

Kings, men of the fighting class, and men skilled in the war of controversy, are the middle states caused by the quality of passion.

Aerial musicians, genii attending superior gods, and companions of nymphs, are the highest of those forms which the quality of passion attains.

3d. Quality of goodness.

The lowest states awarded to the quality of goodness are hermits, religious mendicants, demi-gods and genii of the lunar mansions.

Holy sages, deities of the lower heaven, genii of the Vedas, are the states to which the quality of goodness entitles those who are moderately endued with it.

Brahmá with four faces, creators of worlds, the genius of virtue, divinities presiding over the mighty and unperceived, or (the mahat avyacta) are the highest conditions, to which, by the good quality souls are exalted.

A sinner is not only punished by transmigration, but for almost every sin there is an appointed period for him to suffer in one of the many hells before he is allowed to enter that form of existence to which he is adjudged, and thus pass through the different stages of transmigration. Thus it is written, "He who eats excellent food without giving any to others will be punished in hell 30,000 years, and then be born a musk-rat, then a deer, then a man, who prefers bad to good food." The man who refuses to his father and mother the food they desire, will be punished in hell and afterwards be born a crow, then a man diseased. He who has lived with a woman of a superior cast, will endure torments in hell during 71 yugs of the gods; after this he will suffer in another hell, burning like a blade of grass for 100,000 years, then he will be born a worm, and finally ascend to human birth. A man who kills an animal not designing it for sacrifice will be punished in hell, then be born a bull, and then a man afflicted with an incurable distemper. He who laughs at a Puran at the time of its recital will endure infernal torments, be born a snake, a tiger, a crow, and then a man having asthma. A woman who despises her husband will suffer in hell a variety of torments, she will then be born a female, and losing her husband very soon after marriage, will long suffer the miseries of widowhood.

The priest who has drunk spirituous liquors, shall be born in the form of a worm. He who steals the gold of a priest shall pass a thousand times into the bodies of spiders, snakes, crocodiles, and other aquatic monsters. They who hurt any living thing shall be born a cat, or other eaters of raw flesh.

The great indifference manifested in this country to human suffering, is owing in a great degree to the influence of this doctrine; the poor wretch who is starving, the blind, the leper, are regarded as malefactors suffering the just judgment of God for the sins of another birth. A person who is blind is supposed to have destroyed the eyes of some one when he was on earth before. If a Hindu see a leper, he says, no doubt he was guilty in a former birth of some horrible sin, and this is the fruit of it. I was one day talking to a respectable Hindu about the present state of his religion and country; and he said that the sins of the Hindus have been so great in former births, that God is now subjecting them to the influence and rule of foreigners; and it is doubtless owing, he said, to the many good deeds of the English in other births, that God is now blessing them so much, and giving into their hands the whole of Hindustan.

INDIA: ALLAHABAD MISSION.

LETTERS ON MOHAMMEDANISM.—NO. VI.

The influence of the Mohammedan Religion on the political welfare of its votaries.

The truth has one witness in the world, towards which the minds of all men may be directed, and of which not half the proper use is made; that is, its influence upon Government. The worst of all governments are now, and always have been found amongst idolaters. The doctrine of the unity of God, and the truths connected with it, which have been borrowed from the Scriptures, have raised Mohammedan governments one degree higher. Roman Catholic countries, being more imbued with the maxims of Christianity, are governed by despotisms one degree less dismal still. Countries of mixed religions are governed yet one degree better. Protestant countries have attained the highest degree of civil liberty and security that the world has ever seen. A Roman Catholic gentleman of my acquaintance recently said that this was the fact; and that, believing his own religion to be true, of course he did not know how to explain it.

The nations of Asia seem never to have sunk to the lowest possible degree of degradation, as to the forms of society; but have always possessed a rude kind of civilization. Government amongst them has always been maintained to a certain degree. Mohammedanism found monarchical institutions, and certain modes of government, of collecting revenue, &c., on which it laid hold, and brought them into use. It adapted them to its own purpose, and made them some little better than they were in the days of heathenism. But this process of improvement soon reached its limit. The institutions became stereotyped. There has been no improvement for a thousand years. Amidst the endless varieties of the personal characters of the princes, the system has been mainly the same. Those who have possessed military talent and ambition, have aggrandized themselves by adding kingdom to kingdom; those who have had talent for civil government, have kept their subject nobles better in hand than others, and have screwed out of their people more revenue. But still, in the main, the governments have been the same, the condition of the people unaltered, and the degree of civilization unaffected.

In no Mohammedan government have the people ever been considered as having any rights. Common wisdom teaches the rulers not to depress their subjects below the point at which they may continue useful as payers of taxes; and to keep up such a police as to save the country from absolute anarchy. But to admit the people to any share in deciding how they would be taxed, or what police they would have, or what should be the forms of procedure in courts of law, has never been dreamed of as possible. To interpose between the king and the people a responsible ministry has never been attempted. The uniform theory of government has been absolute despotism—autocracy, in which no one has rights but the sovereign. It has usually been administered by a wazír [vizier], in no sense responsible to the people, but always in danger of losing his head by offending the sovereign. The two great maxims of government have always been, (1) The king, and governors of provinces, and the police, are to take all the produce of the country except what is necessary for the bare subsistence of the people; (2) Every thing of a public nature is to be done by government. The exceptions to this first rule are few: families, who have made fortunes in government employment, may retain them for a while; merchants may grow rich, and retain their property till they afford the great men some pretext for stripping them; and religious foundations are respected.

The effect of the second maxim on the people is most deplorable. They are reduced by a grinding revenue system, to general poverty; and are treated as such absolute cyphers, or rather mere tools, in all public matters, that no such thing as patriotism, or public spirit, is ever heard of. A Mohammedan may be attached to his native place; but it is merely the influence of habit and association. His bigotry may be excited to fight against rulers of another religion; but he cares not what Mohammedan princes rise or fall. If roads are wanted, if cities need water or lights, if robbers are to be put down, the people never think of uniting to accomplish what is desirable, but plod on, till the government takes the thing in hand; which it never does till it sees how the revenue may be increased by it.

A further consequence of this depression and apathy is, that enlightened enterprise is impossible. If canals are dug, they are not for commercial purposes, but to water some royal domain. And there is almost a total want of all other public works. No machines except the very rudest have ever been invented, or ever applied, by Mohammedans, to increase or cheapen the conveniences of life. Not one invention of any note is attributed to them; and they have even lost the learning which contact with the Greeks first gave them. Even the Arabic numerals, which all Europe uses, have been replaced in accounts, by an innumerable host of arbitrary signs, representing numbers and fractions.

With all this, is most provokingly mixed the greatest amount of cool conceit that ever served to keep a race of people in contented mediocrity. The universal opinion seems to be, that there can be no better government or state of things. Ravaging ferocity and lust of dominion constitute a great prince; universal plunder and massacre are a glorious campaign; the subjugation of unoffending neighbours, because they are weak, and living in great personal splendour, make up a glorious reign. The prevailing opinion of what a ruler should do, was once well expressed to me by a Mohammedan gentleman, when speaking of the attitude of mere watchfulness assumed by the British Government in this country, just before the irruption of Sikhs, which caused the campaign of the Sutledge:—"Why do the English affect to desire peace? Why do they not attack the Sikhs? It must be that they are afraid of the soldiers of Runjeet." "No," said I, "they do not desire the Panjab; but would prefer that the Sikhs should mind their own business, and keep their own country." He answered, "That cannot be true! It is the proper business of rulers to attack all they can subdue, and get as wide a dominion and as great glory as they can, for what else had God made them kings?" Feeling that this is what makes nations great and happy, and having the traditions of the Musalmán conquest of Asia, they still dream that they are superior to all the rest of the world. Show them the inventions of Europe, and they will tell you that this is mere animal skill—that a bird can build a nest better than any of us—theirs is the glory of theology and philosophy.

If I can understand the reason that lies at the root of all this, it is,—Their religion is unfavourable to improvement beyond a certain point. It would be tedious to go into an examination of the particular points of this religion, which exercise this influence; and it is not necessary for my present purpose. My end, in writing this letter, is gained, if I can excite any of my own countrymen to exert themselves to preserve our own free institutions, and to admire more that religion which alone could make them so free. But one subject related to this remains untouched, which will throw some light on the fixity of Mohammedan governments, that is, the influence of the religion of the Qurán on the social relations. This I propose to mention in my next letter.

J. W.

Allahabad, January 15, 1851.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. JOSEPH OWEN.

A Missionary Tour in the District of Allahabad.

Sirsá, December 10, 1850.—This place is twenty miles southeast of Allahabad. We left that city on Saturday, the 7th inst. to spend our vacation travelling in the district. Our tents had been previously sent on to Mongárí, ten miles distant, and when we arrived we found all comfortably prepared in a pleasant grove. Our first march was over somewhat desolate ground, much cut up by ravine, near the bank of the Ganges. Our party consists of my family, and Mr. Munnis, and Yonas Sinde, and George Douglas, two of our College teachers, who go to assist us in talking to the people. We went into Mongárí in the evening of our arrival, and talked to a few people. Two or three were disposed to be noisy. The next morning we went to Karchanna, about a mile distant, but were prevented from doing any thing directly at preaching by the excessive civilities of the head revenue and police officers, who invited us in and had a long talk with us, much of it on religious matters. At the tent during the day, we had English services; Mr. Munnis read to the servants, and Yonas and George talked a long time with some people who came from the village. A Sabbath of real rest in the quietude of the camp was to me very delightful after the toil and anxieties of the past week. In the evening I went again to Karchanna with George, where we preached to a large crowd in the Bázár. The same gentlemen who were so civil in the morning, repeated their attentions in the evening, but did not succeed this time in interrupting the preaching. Yesterday morning we came about six miles to Panása, a village of perhaps four or five thousand people, on the river Tons, which empties into the Ganges just below. During the day I was at my studies in the grove, and about four in the afternoon we started for this place. Crossing the Tons with our tents and various appendages, was very troublesome, and we did not reach this place till late in the evening. While the boats were crossing and re-crossing with the tents &c. I had time to preach at two different places in Panása. This evening we all went to Rámnagar, a village about two miles from this, where we talked a long time. During the day I corrected a proof sheet and prepared some copy for the Hindí Bible. These quiet groves are delightful places for study.

Saidábád, Dec. 12th.—This place we reached this evening, about seven miles from Sirsá, where I wrote the above, and eighteen miles nearly east of Allahabad, on the great trunk road. Yesterday morning, while at Sirsá, we went on board of the steamer Ghazepore lying there, and, on account of the shallowness of the water at this season, unable to reach Allahabad. She is a large vessel, as all are belonging to the Ganges Company. There are now three companies sailing steamers on the Ganges, the Government, the General Island Steam Navigation Company, and the Ganges Company. The first generally name their vessels after the rivers of India, as the Indus, Sutlege, etc.; the second after distinguished individuals, as the Sir Frederick Cuvier, Sir Herbert Maddock, etc.; and the third after cities, as the Benàres, Mirzapore, Ghazepore, etc. We were acquainted with the officers of the Ghazepore, and they for some time had our little locomotive steam engine on board, kindly repairing the crank of the driving wheel, which had been broken, and endeavouring to make it run. I had never succeeded in making it run by steam, and the engineer, after trying a long time with all the means at his command, was no more successful. So I suppose it was sent out rather as a model to be looked at than to be used. I wanted very much to show it to the natives and European friends in actual motion by steam, and am not a little disappointed.

Itinerant Preaching not in vain even as to present fruits.

In the evening I preached near one of the large temples, of which there are three in Sirsá, on the bank of the river. One of the principal Bráhmans connected with the temple engaged in a long disputation, which was not a satisfactory one, Near this place I inquired for an old man, Brig Lál, whom I saw here seven years ago. Last year when I was here I could hear nothing of him. I now heard from a man who recollected seeing me here seven years ago, that old Brig Lál had been dead five years. His son soon made his appearance and told me about his father. I felt very much interested in the old man when I saw him here at that time, and have often wished to hear from him. I then heard from him and from others, that he had long since given up the worship of idols, and was a believer in Christ. He showed me quite a collection of Christian books and portions of the Scriptures that had been given to him, from time to time, by Missionaries, which evidently, both from their appearance and from his familiarity with them, he had read a great deal. The old man, both in what he said and his manner of saying it, talked like a child of God, and I hope he is in heaven. His light, of course, was not very great, but he knew that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, and with much apparent fervour he declared his firm belief in Jesus, and I could hear of nothing in his conduct to contradict this declaration. His son brought me some of the father's Christian books, which he appeared to be keeping with great care, and to my surprise he showed me a friendly note, dated December 15th, 1843, which I wrote with a pencil and gave to the old man, and which had been preserved with the utmost care. Cases similar to this now and then come to the knowledge of missionaries, showing that itinerant preaching is not in vain even as to present fruits. If it could be multiplied a hundred fold, the fruits would no doubt be in the same, or a far greater proportion.

In the evening we crossed the Ganges, and after a very fatiguing journey over the sandy bed of the river, encamped near a small village called Panditpúra. This afternoon, having finished the studies of the day, I preached to the people of the village, and then we started for this place. On the way I talked to some people in Dhanípúra and Khaptíliá. The people at the latter place remembered my visit to them last year. To my question, whether they recollected me, one of the principal men replied, "Oh yes! you are the gentleman that talked with us under the neem tree about a year ago."

Miscellaneous Notices.

Dec. 14*th*, Jumnípúr, ten miles southeast from Allahabad. Here we came yesterday from Saidábád. On my way I talked a while to a few people under a neem tree, in a small village called Bindá. We left the trunk road and came into a part of the country not often visited by Europeans. I walked, as usual, most of the way, and my family came in a buggy. The road not being travelled much was not in good repair, and for some distance I was obliged to have the mare taken from the buggy, and the buggy lifted on by coolies. As we passed through a large village near this, the zamindar, or land-holder, taking us probably for some political officer, came out, with nearly all the people of his village, to inquire what bandabast, settlement or arrangement, I was making. I replied, "An excellent settlement." Pretty soon he discovered somehow that I was a Pádrí, and then wished to know what settlement Pádrís made. I told him a most excellent one for the whole country, and that I hoped to have an opportunity of explaining it to him.

We meet with various little incidents on the way and in camp. From morning till night we live in the open air, which is most delightful at this season, and spend very little time under canvas, except when we sleep. The quiet and repose of a camp are very pleasant after a year's fatiguing confinement in the college. We are encamped here in one of the most extensive mango groves I have ever seen, having much of the appearance of a forest. At first we had difficulty in getting the necessary supplies of wood, water, &c. The "water and air" of a place the natives always inquire about first. The latter we find good here, the former not quite so pleasant. Various little incidents tend to divert one, such as coming into camp and finding the tent pitched in a bad place, or not pitched at all, and, if one marched in the evening, being obliged to wait till ten or eleven o'clock at night before the cart brings the tent on the ground, or coming and finding that the cart has had an upset and broken a few dishes, and the like amusing occurrences. Near one encamping ground we found some low caste or no caste people had collected a heap of rats for their breakfast, and as it was merely a matter of taste, about which there was no disputing, we passed on. At Saidábád last year we saw some of the same kind of people making a similar disposition of a wolf that had been killed.

This morning, until near one o'clock, I was busy in correcting proof sheets, and then prepared some copy. Towards evening a large number of natives came about the tent, to whom Mr. Munnis read and talked a long time, and then Yonas and George had discussions with them. After dinner I read and talked with them till dark, and then requested them to come with all their friends to-morrow. A mad dog came about the tents this evening, which Mr. Munnis shot dead, to the comfort of us all. A wild cat from the jungles had just been driven away by the servants.

The Duties of a Sabbath.

Dec. 15*th*, Sabbath.—We spent about an hour and a half in Jumnípúr this morning, reading and preaching. A few people attempted to get up a laugh and drive us away, but although a part of our first audience left, others came, and we stayed as long as we wished. After prayers and breakfast, Mr. Munnis and I read to our servants. During the day we had religious service in English, and read and talked to the people who came from the villages to see us. Mr. Munnis went again into Jumnípúr, and was much gratified with his opportunity for giving instruction. I went with George in the afternoon into Katawá, another village near us, where I had a large and quiet audience more than an hour. The zamindar was very civil in collecting the people of his village and keeping them still, and a word of commendation now and then of his good management seemed to increase his efforts to keep them in good order. After I had done speaking, their village pundit was pointed out to me, to whom I repeated a shloka [verse] or two, and requested him to give the meaning, which he was unable to do. He tried to excuse himself by saying that he could not understand my pronunciation, and I replied that I had got it from a Bráhman or pundit of Káshí, or Banáras, (the Athens of India). I then handed him a book with some Sanscrit, which he was unable to read. He seemed mortified and they laughed at him; but I took his part by saying th t a man could not be expected to know every thing. They looked upon me as a learned man in Sanscrit, which was about as much as to pronounce him ignorant, for beyond the Institutes of Menu and a few Shlokas that I have by memory, together with Sanscrit grammar, my knowledge is very scanty. When coming away, the old zamindár not only gave me a native salám, but seized my hand and gave me a regular English shake. This would be a capital grove for a religious meeting. It would indeed be delightful to see the people of all the villages around collected here, and hear them all join in singing a Christian hymn. . . . The people of this place are numerous, and in complete heathenism. There are several villages in the neighbourhood, some of which I have visited on former occasions. For all these villages, schools and Christian teachers are needed.

Dec. 16*th*, Mongarsan.—We marched about seven miles this morning, north of east, on our way to Phulpúr, a large town nort-heast of Allahabad about eighteen miles. I preached in Hammiangunge this morning half an hour to about a dozen people. After leaving that village we found the country rather desolate. We met several droves of oxen laden with bags of sugar coming from Phulpúr. This village, Mongarsan, is very small. Mr. Munnis read and talked a long time to a few people under the trees during the day, and Yonas and George went into the village in the evening, and gave some account of the gospel to several people. I was busy at writing and translating till late.

An Important Place for a Missionary Sub-station.

Dec. 17*th*, Phulpúr.—This large town was reached this morning between nine and ten o'clock. We passed no villages on the way, though I heard of some a short distance off. We passed three or four small lakes, one about two miles long, resembling large mill ponds in some parts of America, and giving variety to the otherwise monotonous scenery. The population of this town is nearly ten thousand. From the revenue office here I have thus obtained it: Brick houses 19; mud do. 2694; total houses 2713. Men, women and children, 9908. The whole distance from this to Allahabad is a good macadamized road. The distance to the Ganges at Jhoosy is fourteen miles, and to our mission premises on the Jumna eighteen miles. The inland traffic of this place is very considerable. A great deal of sugar is produced near this place, which is sent on to the west. The bázár is large, and thronged with people engaged in business. I have long had this place in view as one of the first stations to be occupied by a native agency. As the place is so accessible, the mission could easily be superintended from Allahabad. Mr. Munnis and I went into the bázár this evening and had large crowds to hear us at two different places, most of them very quiet and attentive. This is my fourth visit here. Seven years ago, when I first came, after preaching successively for three or four days in the town, I was obliged to leave one night by the general shout of Rám! Ram! Mahadev! resembling "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Last year when passing through the town, one day a man threw cow dung on me, but he was immediately caught by the police and punished till I begged them to let the poor fellow go, and one evening when coming out of the bázár I had a shower of stones and brickbats after me. Mr. B. who lives here, and has always been kind to us during our visits here, sent two men with us to-day who prevented any such occurrence. One respectable man recognised me at once, and invited us to take up our preaching stand at his shop, which we did.

Dec. 18*th*. Went this morning through Old Phulpúr, now mostly in ruins, and then through the modern town. Visited the munsif's, or native judge's court; the wakil's, or native lawyer's office, the police office, and the revenue collector's office. Both of the latter offices have much work; crime is very abundant, and the revenue of this district large. An Allahabad Bráhman recognised me at once, and reminded me of the time when I gave him a terrifying galvanic shock. I saw a thoroughly primitive school, no books, slates, nor paper. The ground was the substitute for all these, and kowries or small shells answered for pencils. The master, with a bamboo stick, stood dictating the copies and sums. This evening I went into the bázár and preached to a large crowd under a spreading neem tree. During the day I had an interesting interview of about two hours with a native gentleman of much intelligence, who seemed to be seriously inquiring for the right way.

Dec. 19*th*. The tahsildár or revenue officer called to see me this morning, with whom I had a pleasant interview. During nearly the whole day I was occupied in work connected with the press. This evening I went to the same place occupied last night, and had a large, attentive audience. I am more and more confirmed in the belief that we ought to have a school and a branch mission here. Several, during yesterday and to-day, have expressed to me a wish that we would establish a school in this city. The number of readers in proportion to the inhabitants is not great, still the demand for books has been very considerable, and we have given only to those who could read.

Appearance of the Country—Numerous Villages—Missionary Incidents.

Dec. 20*th*, Scandra.—Our march this morning was six or seven miles nearly west from Phulpúr. The road being through a part of the country that during the rains is nearly all under water, and covered with paddy or rice fields, is very uninteresting at this season. We passed no village on the way, and very few trees. In the neighbourhood of this village the country assumed its usual garden-like appearance. Around our tents are some beautiful tamarind trees, which, like the mango, are ever green. This village has, so far as I can judge, from what I have seen and been able to learn, about two thousand inhabitants. The people must be very quiet, for the head police officer told me he had only two men to help him to govern this village and the country around within about three miles in each direction, containing numerous villages. Many of these are very small. The natives always live in villages or towns for mutual protection, and hence we see no farm-houses scattered through the country. This morning we saw not a human dwelling for several miles, although the country through which we passed is nearly all under cultivation. We have found several readers here to-day, and have supplied them with Christian books. Companies of people have collected at different times under the trees near the tents, to whom we have read and talked. I had a particularly interesting audience towards evening, to whom I gave a particular account of the birth, life, death, resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ, some account of the doctrines he taught, his coming to judgment, and the future state of the righteous and wicked. All were very attentive. Afterwards I went with Yonas into the village, but did not meet with many people, and those were not of a satisfactory kind. The zamindár asked us into his house, where we met one of the most wicked pundits I ever saw. He utterly denied all distinction between right and wrong, sin and holiness, condemnation and approval. "What is sin?" said he, "hold it up and let me see its shape." "Sin," I replied, "is a transgression of law." "What is law? there is no such thing." Of course it was useless to argue with such a man, and we took our leave. I had intended to leave him a copy of the New Testament, but found it would be leaving a pearl with a swine.

Cultivation of the Soil and its Productions—A common defect in Native Converts.

Dec. 21*st, Suram.*—This place we reached after seven or eight miles' march still westward. We are now north of Allahabad, and distant from the city about twelve miles. We started south on our journey, went around to the east, and are now at the north. The part of the country through which we travelled this morning is nicely cultivated, with the exception of a small portion of sandy ground, extending on the road nearly a mile, covered with bushes and stunted trees. The people here, as in most other places, irrigate from wells. In the low land about Phulpúr, where a great deal of water settles in large hollow places and remains for months, they scoop it up from the ponds and send it in channels, sometimes more than half a mile, to the fields where it is required. This is a laborious and disagreeable process. Here, as usual, the cultivated field has one, two, or three wells, according to its size, from which the water is drawn by oxen, and distributed around in small channels. Wheat, barley, grain, sugar-cane, peas, mustard, etc., are now growing. The latter is cultivated for the oil it affords, which, with castor oil, is much used in lamps. Now and then we see a field of cotton, which however seldom thrives well in this part of the country. Occasionally we meet with a plot of tobacco, or tamáhú, as the natives call it. We passed no large villages directly on the way, but there must have been plenty not far off, for the air was vocal in every direction with the sounds of human beings. I wish we had a preaching agency to go completely through all this district several times every year.

This evening I went with Yonas and George into the village of Suram, where I preached to some quiet people. I wish I could see these young men more zealous in their Master's work. One would naturally think that the good news of salvation must so affect and fill their souls that they would speak out of the abundance of the heart. I grieve to write that this is not the case, not only with them but most of their countrymen who have been turned to Christianity. I have never seen in any of them that earnest zeal for God and love to souls so often and so beautifully exhibited in Christians at home. These native Christians ought to be prayed for very much, and they deserve our earnest sympathy, for they are exposed to many and great temptations. The dreadful heathenism which they inherited from their fathers is still exercising a debasing influence on their minds.

(To be concluded.)

CHINA: SHANGHAI MISSION.

COMMUNICATION OF THE REV. J. K. WIGHT.

A Procession in honour of all the gods.

A little to the west of my house is a small red temple. For the most of the year it is occupied by a family. There is no god or image residing there, and in case of public executions criminals are beheaded there, though of late this has not taken place. Once every year the five gods of the elements are brought to this place. The gods are first carried through the city, and then brought here about night, when they receive the offerings that are to be presented to them. About sundown the spectators began to collect, the more devout bringing paper money, which was put together in a pile. Soon after the gongs commenced beating to announce the approach of the gods; a way was cleared through the crowd of spectators, and priests with their long black garments and shaved heads stood on either side. After waiting a few minutes, some attendants, each with a bunch of peacock feathers, came running ahead; then some men fantastically dressed with faces painted, and false hideous beards, and shaking over their heads rude spears with a rattle on the handle. They at first appeared frightful in the dim candle light, and then ridiculous. The gongs beat louder, and the signal passed from one to another as the first god approached, and all fell on their knees. He was borne by eight bearers in a large sedan chair. The chair was immediately taken apart, and as the covering was taken off, a red canopy was held over the idol's head, and he was carried to his place behind one of the five incense tables. The same thing was repeated to each one of the five chairs as they came up in succession. After each chair usually followed persons bringing offerings. Some of them were dressed in coarse red clothes, with a chain about the neck, and carrying small wooden stocks. The spectators differed in their explanation of this. Some said it was in fulfilment of a vow made when sick or oppressed with some calamity, that if delivered they would appear in this way as penitents. Others that it represented criminals. Many of them were boys apparently hired for the occasion. The offerings brought were candles, incense sticks, and paper money. Some brought a few cash, which was received in a bamboo tube by the side of the altar. This was to pay for the expense of the procession. Among those that brought offerings were many women, sometimes bringing their children and teaching them to fold their hands and bow down to an idol. On the table before each god were arranged plates of eatables, all cooked and ready, as the spectators said, for his honour to eat.

The last idol was received with more state than any of the rest. A salute of three guns was fired as he approached, and what was intended for a band of music preceded his approach. As soon as he was fairly housed, the pile of paper money was set on fire. This money is supposed on being burnt to go into the world of spirits, and is for the special benefit of those that have no resting-place.

The whole scene was in some respects calculated to make a strong impression on the minds of an ignorant and superstitious people, and yet as you went along among them and would say, This wooden god can't eat rice, they would laugh and confess it was true.

EUROPE.

PROGRESS OF PROTESTANTISM IN FRANCE.

The following statements on this subject, made at the recent annual meeting of the Foreign Aid Society, by two distinguished men, are full of interest to all who love the truth, and long for its triumph on the continent of Europe.

Dr. MERLE D'AUBIGNE said—Called upon to address you in the name of the Evangelical Society of Geneva, my first duty is to remind you that this Society exists, and has claims on the brotherly interest of the Christians of England, and to thank you for your aid. I have thought that it will be encouraging to you to learn some instances of the conversions which have been effected by the instrumentality of our Society, and that I should show the bright side of the picture to you, who are so often called upon to contemplate the darker one. First, with regard to the number of the souls who are passing from Popery to Protestantism, and even to a living one; on the other side of the channel it is far more considerable than that of those who have gone over to Popery on this side. A letter, written on the 2d of this month of May, informs us, that as soon as an evangelical minister had begun to preach in a place in the west of France, twenty-five Roman Catholics, several of whom were married, set down their names as being desirous of following regular religious instruction. "The Lord has breathed on this country," writes an evangelist in the east of France, "the way is open everywhere, and I do not know which way to turn." "It is impossible not to have meetings," says another, "for no sooner does one enter a house than all the neighbours come in also." You know that we have churches in Burgundy, full of spiritual life, who missionize, and are composed entirely of converted Romanists. Has Dr. Wiseman any churches in England entirely made up of converted Protestants? It has happened that entire parishes, almost, have declared that they would leave the Pope, and have invited a minister of Christ to come and dwell among them, and the municipalities have offered to defray all the expenses of the service. In these general conversions there are some, it is true, which are not very sure, but have you in England whole parishes which go over to Popery?

I now come to a second contrast. There are men of high consideration on the continent, who go over to evangelical Protestantism, learned, noble, and rich, (such as the imprisoned Guicciardini, for instance,) but in general our continental converts belong less to this class than the perverts of England. Ours are amongst the lowly, sometimes so poor that they with difficulty gain their living; and often, not only the evangelized are poor, but also the evangelists themselves. It is, indeed, wonderful, the intelligence that the Holy Spirit bestows on these lowly ones. One of them was once discussing the subject of transubstantiation with a Romanist, who kept on repeating, "This is my body." Our humble friend pulled out his snuff-box, on which was a painting. "What is that?" said he. "It is a church." "Well, then, I will fetch you on Sunday morning at ten o'clock, that we may go there together, and hear the word of God." "You are laughing at me," said the Romanist, "go to the painting of your snuff-box!" "Did you not say it was a church?" "But did you not comprehend that I meant that it represented a church?" "And you," replied our friend, "do you not comprehend that Christ meant 'this represents my body.'" Yes, my lord, our converts are in general amongst the lowly. What is the conclusion? "Not many wise after the flesh," said Paul, "not many mighty, not many noble are called." (1 Cor. i. 26.) The converts of our stations, like the Irish ones of Mr. Dallas—resemble, then, more the converts of St. Paul, than those of Dr. Wiseman. The contrast is in the nature of the conversions. Those to Popery are brought about more often by exterior means—the architecture of the middle ages, the pomp of Roman Catholic ceremonies, painting, music, incense, bishops, the Pope and his hierarchy; and when a Protestant passes to Romanism, it is essentially to join himself to a visible church, to the bishops, the Pope, and his cardinals. It is not so with us—the word of God and his Spirit are the powerful means that operate them. Generally these conversions are slow, you may say laborious; they proceed little by little, after a time of biblical instruction. They are not superficial, like those of Rome, but operated in the depths of the soul; and when they are completed, it is to Jesus himself that the people are converted. We have conversions like those of Saul or Paul.

A woman who had received a tolerably good education, and who considered the priests as the representatives of God on earth, was, however, shaken in this belief by the bad conduct of a priest, her relation. Later, some severe trials made her reflect. She reproached herself for having lived so long without serving God, and above all the holy Virgin, whom she looked upon as her mother. She began to be alarmed for her soul, and wished to confess herself. "I saw her just then," says one of our friends, "and spoke to her. She began to read her Bible, but found no salt in it. One day, as I visited her, she, finding nothing in the Bible, was just going out to confess, and I requested a few minutes conversation. We read some chapters of the Scripture together, just those which she had read without any profit, and I ended with prayer. The next day I returned, and found that she had put off confessing, on purpose to read the gospel attentively, and with prayer, which she had not hitherto done. She immediately found the good effect of it; the Scripture possessed a charm before unknown; God was working in her in answer to prayer. The Bible became the book of books to her, and it has shown her ever since, little by little, the power of the Holy Spirit, the grace of Jesus, the errors of her Church, and for many years she has continued in that peace, which faith in the Saviour gives." Such are our conversions, not by traditions, by intrigues, but by the Bible, by the Spirit; not to the Pope, but to Christ.

Dr. GRANDPIERRE (Secretary of the Société Centrale Protestante of France) addressed the meeting in the French language, and said:—Mr. President, ladies, and gentlemen, we can assure you that on the continent the Roman Catholic faith is on the decrease, and is losing more and more its power among the population,—and in many departments there are entire populations who demand to be introduced into the evangelical faith. My friends have given many proofs of this in their departments, and I can also bear the same testimony. In La Charente, between Augoulème and Jarnac, 250 persons signed a petition last week to the Consistory of Jarnac, that they would send a minister to instruct them in the religion of the gospel. This case is not a solitary one—there are many such cases—the Consistory told me I must prepare myself for many such demands. In the department of Aisne, near St. Quentin, in four localities, there was not a single Protestant two years ago, yet there are now four congregations. The origin of this change was through the means of a poor weaver, who was brought up in the Hospital for Enfans Trouvès. He had once possessed a Bible, and he wrote to a Protestant clergyman in Paris, and asked for a Bible. A copy of the Bible was sent to him, and he was awakened; he made known the contents amongst his fellow-weavers, and afterwards through his means the Bible was extended throughout four large villages, where now there are four great congregations.

At St. Oportune, near Elbeuf (department of Eure), during the space of two years they were without worship, without a minister, no marriages, no baptisms, no prayers, and they were come to that want of religion, that they agitated the question among themselves whether they should not worship the sun. The Bishop of Evreux had devastated their altars. One of the inhabitants was by chance going to Elbeuf; he heard of this pure worship and came back to St. Oportune, and said "I have found a very good religion;" they then asked for a pastor to come and teach them—no less than sixty-five families having signed a letter in order to have a church established at St. Oportune. A minister has arrived there, but when that minister first arrived, on leaving the cabriolet he was searched by two gensd'armes, who were going about from house to house to take away all the Bibles they could find. However, ultimately, the pastor has conquered: the gensd'armes who had orders to attend his preaching to ascertain if he really was a Socialist, went up to him after hearing his discourse, and taking him by the hand said—"There must be some misunderstanding; we do not know why we have been sent here, but we are glad there has been this misunderstanding, for, without it, we should not have had the happiness of hearing you preach." More than that—the gensd'armes have had orders to restore all the Bibles they had taken—and the Conseil Municipal have decided that the church which was devastated shall be given up to the Protestants. We have sent a minister to take care of that flock—a pious, zealous, young man.

In the department of the Seine et Loire there are five evangelical congregations, whilst, three years ago, there was not one Protestant. I have preached there many times, particularly in Mézières and Gomecourt. In Mézières the Conseil Municipal and the Mayor have all embraced Protestantism. The Prefect accused them of being Socialists, but some weeks afterwards they were re-elected by the commune. The Mayor of Mézières takes a great interest in our schools; he examines the scholars, and instructs them himself in the art of composition. I must tell you one fact, which occurred in the department of La Manche, to show how a simple mind may often receive the truth of the gospel. A poor woman was on her dying bed; her friends sent for a priest; the priest came, and, during a temporary insensibility, he gave her the extreme unction; when she awoke, she said—"What do you do? I am sealed for the eternal life—I do not need your oil. You cannot pardon my sins; God alone can pardon them." Your agent there is a converted priest—it was he who had given a copy of the New Testament to this poor woman. I could add many other details to show the favourable results of your labours; but in towns the work is more difficult than in smaller places, because in the former there exists a strong prejudice against the changing of their religion. In villages it is not so; they find their own religion has not done good to their souls; they therefore set it aside, and take another for themselves and their children, and the first thing they ask for is a Christian teacher for their children; they say, "We will have no more priests for us or for our children, they have left us in ignorance."

We pray you to aid us in this good work. You have already done much; we ask of you to do more, for we purpose to make war unto the death with superstition; and, with the blessing of God, we will kill Roman Catholicism on the Continent, so that it may not cross the Channel. Protestants—you must hold fast the Bible; it is not only the foundation of your faith, but the bulwark of your national prosperity, your national liberty, and the standard of your freedom.—Irish Missionary Herald, July, 1851.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN JULY, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Ballston ch	$24 00
Pby of Columbia.—Windham 2d ch	18 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Ogdensburgh.—Le Ray ch 5; Wilna ch 1	6 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Buffalo Central ch	22 00
Pby of Michigan.—Plymouth 1st ch	13 25

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of North River.—Wappenger's Creek ch 20; Smithfield ch 9; Matteawan ch mo con 14; Dew Drop soc 9	52 00
Pby of Bedford.—Bedford ch New Castle miss soc	8 25
Pby of New York.—New York 1st ch mo con 82 09; young ladies to ed Mary K. Lowrie and Julia Whittesley 12 50; sab sch to ed James Donaldson and Sarah C. Dow 12 50; to ed W. W. Phillips 6 25; Infant sab sch to ed Aaron B. Belknap 6 25; Chelsea ch mo con 20 65; University Place ch mo con 19 42; Yorkville ch mo con 5 75; Forty-second st ch mo con 15; Wallabout ch mo con 3 86; Williamsburgh ch mo con 15 54; Madison Avenue ch sab sch to ed John D. Wells in China 10; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 26	235 81
Pby of New York 2d.—Scotch ch 3 mos con colls	250 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Newark 3d ch mo con	13 00
Pby of New Brunswick.—Shrewsbury ch 10; Trenton 3d ch 52 01	62 01
Pby of West Jersey.—Camden ch sab sch to ed R. P. Dunn 25; Prof. R. P. Dunn 5; Blackwoodtown ch 10 56.	40 56

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Phila 10th ch mo con colls 94 50; "a friend" 50; Phila 2d ch "G" 10; Ridley ch 5	159 50
Pby of New Castle.—New London ch benevolent fund of which 10 for Papal Europe 60; Upper Octorara ch Susan K. Russell 5	65 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Baltimore 4th ch sewing soc to ed Abby Purviance and George D. Purviance 50; Madison st colored ch 3 01	53 01
Pby of Carlisle.—Shippensburgh ch sab sch 12; Buffalo ch 97 75; Landisburgh ch 94; Bloomfield ch 18 25; Toms Creek and Piney chs 40; Chambersburg ch of which 58 20 from sab sch juv miss soc to con Rev. J. F. KENNEDY, HOLMES C. CRAWFORD, S. KENNEDY, M. D., and SAML. COOPER 1 ms 200; Carlisle ch children of ANDREW BLAIR to con him 1 m 30	492 00
Pby of Northumberland.—Williamsport ch 5 05; Danville ch 50	55 05

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Congruity ch mo con	10 00
Pby of Redstone.—Rehoboth ch	19 50
Pby of Ohio.—Hopewell ch	15 00
Pby of Allegheny.—Tarentum ch	17 10
Pby of Beaver.—Pleasant Valley ch young female miss soc	10 00
Pby of Erie.—Mercer ch 23 51; Mill Creek ch N. D. Cooper and lady 1 50	25 01

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 2d ch sab sch to ed Delia M. Dickson, Cyrus Dickson, Edgar Woods, James M. McKelly and Robert Crangle 31 25; West Alexandria ch 63	94 25
Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 2d ch juv assoc for scholarship at Allahabad 12; East Springfield, O., Rev. John Knox in part to ed Joseph Knox 11	23 00
Pby of New Lisbon.—Deerfield ch fem miss soc to ed Anna Maria Stratton and John Hartzell 50; for mission at Corisco 17 50; Niles ch 10	77 50

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Columbus.—Columbus 1st ch sab sch to ed James Hoge and Josiah D. Smith at Canton	50 00
Pby of Richland.—Ashland ch sab sch to ed John Robinson at Allahabad 12; Sharon ch 3	15 00
Pby of Coshocton.—Apple Creek ch 17; Hopewell ch 4	21 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Miami.—Springfield 2d ch	20 50
Pby of Sidney.—Bellefontaine ch Rev. Jos. Stevenson addl to con THOMAS MARQUIS STEVENSON, JAMES EDGAR STEVENSON, and JOSEPH STEVENSON, jr., 1 ms	50 00

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—New Philadelphia ch 6 10; Orleans ch 8 10	14 20
Pby of Indianapolis.—Bloomington ch 40 80; Bedford ch 8 95	49 75
Pby of White Water.—Greensburg ch in part 24 07; sab sch 3 65; Sand Creek ch 2 75	30 47

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Lake.—La Porte ch in part to con Mrs. ANNA PIPER 1 m	19 00
Pby of Fort Wayne.—Fort Wayne German ch	4 00
Pby of Crawfordsville.—Bethel ch	5 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Peoria.—Osceola ch	5 00
Pby of Rock River.—Galena South ch juv miss soc to ed George W. Fuller in China 20; Lower Rock Island ch 10; Rock Island City ch 10	40 00
Pby of Wisconsin.—Dane ch	5 00

SYNOD OF MISSOURI.

Pby of St. Louis.—St. Louis 2d ch sab sch for sup of Rev. Henry V. Rankin in China	150 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Louisville.—Louisville 1st ch mo con colls 28 45; Louisville 2d ch mo con 20; Cloverport ch 10; Owensboro' ch 9; Jefferson co., Ky., Miss Margaret Guthrie 5	72 45
Pby of Muhlenberg.—Greenville ch mo con	5 00
Pby of Transylvania.—Richmond ch 76 40; Paint Lick, Ky. Rev C A Wiley 4 15	80 55
Pby of West Lexington.—Versailles ch in part 22; Nicholasville ch 80; Clear Creek ch 11 50; Pisgah ch 44 50, less 12 90 for Foreign Missionary; Hopewell ch 34 75; Frankfort ch mo con 6; Cherry Spring ch 26; Georgetown ch Dr Wm Sutton 10	221 85

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Winchester.—Gerardstown ch mo con colls 22 78, Rev J R Graham 2 22	25 00
Pby of West Hanover.—Roanoke ch 26; Cumberland ch 27; Farmville ch 39; Finneywood ch 15; Lynchburg 1st ch 36 25; Buffalo ch 39 87; Hampden Sidney College 37 55	220 67
Pby of East Hanover.—Richmond 1st ch mo con colls 45 87; Richmond 2d ch mo con colls 22 08, Sab sch for colportage in France 7 66	75 61
Pby of Montgomery.—Mountain Union ch 8 50; Beaver Creek ch 4; Fincastle ch 5; Covington ch 2 50	20 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Orange.—Harmony ch 1; Greensboro' ch 58; Danville ch 20 10; Hawfields ch 12 50; Bethlehem ch 27 50; Yanceyville ch 21; Newburn ch 15; Milton ch 18; Bethel ch 5 50; Spring Garden ch 24 15; Madison ch 10; Bethesda ch 6 02; Pittsboro' ch 20; Shiloh ch 7; Penuil ch 6; Oxford ch 5; Louisburg ch 4 75; Gum Grove ch 2 50; Hillsboro' ch 25; Spring Grove ch 10 50; Griers ch 12; Lexington ch 10; "———" Rev B F Watkins 5	326 52
Pby of Fayetteville.—Sharon ch fem benev soc for Spencer Academy	15 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Holston.—Mt Bethel ch Mrs Sarah Doak	5 00

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of South Carolina.—Willington ch mo con	20 00
Pby of Bethel.—Unity ch 10; Fishing Creek ch 47 25; Cedar Shoals ch 7 50; Purity ch 51; Cane Creek ch 3	118 75
Pby of Charleston.—Charleston 2d ch mo con colls 58 12; Columbus ch mo con colls 108 43	166 55

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Georgia.—St Mary's and Linton Grove ch 6 54, Mrs Nichol 1	7 54

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of East Alabama.—Montgomery ch Sab sch for scholarship at Allahabad	12 50

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Louisiana.—New Orleans 3d ch mo con 15, Pritanea st ch mo con 7, Juv miss soc to ed Hannah J and Elias R Beadle at Ningpo 31 05	53 05
Total from churches	$3785 76

LEGACIES.

Stuartstown Pa estate of W Woods dec in part	33 34

MISCELLANEOUS.

——— A friend	1000 00
——— A Stranger	5 00
Philadelphia Pa Miss L	5 00
		1010 00
Total receipts in July		$4829 10

WM. RANKIN, Jr. Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Ladies of Greensburg ch Pby of White Water one Box clothing	25 10
Dew Drop Soc of Matteawan ch N Y one Box for Otoe and Omaha Mission	— —
New York, Two Ladies, 32 garments and 21 pair shoes	30 00
New York, Jane Femster two quilts	— —

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,
No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. John Leyburn, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. Joseph P. Engles, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. Engles, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. Mitchell, M. D. Treasurer.

THE PAST AND THE PRESENT AS TO THE PRESS.

Who would have thought, A. D. 887, when, as an improvement on the cumbrous scrolls, books were invented by Attalus, king of Pergamus, what books were destined to accomplish! Who ever thought when John Guttemberg first revealed his discovery of the art of printing in the city of Mentz, A. D. 1440, what a sway that art of printing was to wield over unnumbered millions of mankind, determining their welfare or their woe, temporal and eternal! Who would have thought in the darkness of the tenth century, when a bishop's library contained but "parts of seventeen books;" when on the loan of a Bible from a cathedral convent, a bond drawn up with great solemnity was required to be given for its return; when the donation of a book was regarded of so much consequence that the monks founded a daily mass for the donor's soul; or when the purchase of a book was considered of such importance, that persons of consequence and character were assembled to make a formal record that they were present—in those dark days of scarceness of books, who would have thought that the day was coming, when books would be scattered like the rain; when in the house of the tradesman, the farmer, the peasant, by the way-side and in the mountain valleys, as well as on the shelves of ecclesiastics and professional men, every where would be scattered abroad these wonderful, silent, but powerful teachers! What would the men of those days have thought, had some gifted seer predicted that in after ages a machine should be invented by which the work could be done in one hour, which, according to the ancient manuscript method of book-making, it would have required 192,000 men to do in the same time; that a single manufacturing house, supplied with such presses, would be sending out 2,000,000 of books a year; and that these books would be sold so cheap that the poorest could buy them, or if they would not buy, there would be societies formed for giving them to all who were in need!

What the men of other ages would have thought, could they but have foreseen the wonderful workings of the press, is not after all so much the question, as what we, into whose hands that enormous enginery is placed, are doing to use it; what we are doing as Christians, as a Church, to keep up with the amazing progress of this country, and the onward march of the times. Let us see to it, that in this day of God's wonders, we are not satisfying ourselves with the meagre measure of duty, which might have sufficed for times and fields less favoured, but which falls illimitably short of the demands of this day of driving enterprise, of wide-spread knowledge. Let the Church awake to the moral power of the press!

A COLPORTEUR'S COMFORTS.

Few but those who have been engaged in such labours can appreciate the toil and self-denial to which colporteurs are exposed, from the repulses, cold looks, occasional unkind words, want of co-operation on the part of those from whom it might have been expected, in addition to the weariness and exhaustion of the hard physical labour oftentimes required. A colporteur who had encountered perhaps an unusual share of such discouragement, thus also speaks of his comforts.

"The many precious seasons of conversation, communion and prayer in S——— and N——— C——— would certainly repay me for a year's discouragement. I bless God for sending me out. I bless him for every hand he has permitted me to press, my heart beating too warm, to give utterance to the language of my soul. I bless him for every entreating word he has permitted me to utter while persuading lost souls to be reconciled to God. The many tears which have flowed from eyes almost incapable of shedding a tear, and these from the very worst of characters would repay me for a lifetime of labour. The heartfelt entreaty, "come and see me again," still rings in my ears. All I can do, is leave all such with God, praying earnestly that he may visit them by his Spirit, and cause his own word to abound and bring forth fruit unto everlasting life. Many will, no doubt, remember the "praying pedlar," as I was called by a man once a sceptic, whose views are now changed, but who is still a profane wretch. My effort, by the way, in the field, in the cottage of the poor, and the stately dwelling of the rich, has been to persuade all, every one, to flee from the wrath to come. All this encourages me to work, the greatness of the cause urges me to work—the shortness of my feeble efforts demands me to work—O for the spirit of McCheyne!"

VARIETY OF GOOD RESULTS FROM A COLPORTEUR'S LABOURS.

A very successful colporteur in the South-West has given an interesting and encouraging report of his last quarter's labours, from which we make the following extract. It will be seen that the good he is accomplishing is not confined to the sale of books, although in that respect he does much.

"The field is a very important one, there are several churches that are destitute of the preached gospel, and need to be strengthened and encouraged to do more to help themselves. I have hopes the books will do this, if they will read them. I found in M——— Presbytery one half of the churches without a minister, and they are now all supplied. I have only spent one week in F——— church, and I sold and distributed about $100 worth. I found some who were anxious to learn the way of eternal life. I spent one month in a destitute region, what is called the barrens, a very poor part of the country. I got up a Sabbath-school of thirty children, and visited from house to house, distributing tracts and cheap publications. There were very few who were not anxious to hear the truth, and who did not receive a tract thankfully. This is a large missionary field. Since I have been in this State I have organized some eight or ten Sabbath-schools, and some have done great good, but in this particular region of my field I cannot sell books, for the most of the inhabitants are poor, and they are very sparse. The books are very readily received by almost all denominations. Several Baptist brethren have told me, after reading the books, they were worth twice the amount they paid for them."

CONFLICT BETWEEN TRUTH AND ERROR.

A colporteur in Michigan writes:—"I rejoice that I can report more favourably at this time, and hope that you may be induced to continue your labour of mercy and love in our much needy State. One reason why my sales have not been more extensive is, that a great portion of my labours have been in the most sparsely settled portions of the State, as many of our churches are literally planted in the wilderness, while the members (numbering from thirty to fifty) are scattered over four townships six miles square. They are surrounded by all manner of isms, which all unite in misrepresenting the doctrines of the Bible as held by Presbyterians, and they are especially diligent in presenting the venerable Calvin as a "Hydra-headed monster, having erected on his head the iron horn of fatality, with which he pushes a favoured few to heaven, do what they will, while he hurls by far the greater number down to irremediable woe." I need not add that many of the Board's Publications are well adapted to attract the attention and enlighten the understanding, by presenting the doctrines of our Church in the truth of them. The Great Supper, and Divine Purpose, especially, are doing an effectual work, and are often called for. Can it be that the work must cease in Michigan? Many are the petitions offered to the Great Head of the Church that this may not be so. Your colporteur might add his testimony to that of many others who have spoken of the blessing they have received by the perusal of your books, by making more plain the truth, and enabling him to receive it, in the simplicity of it, which to him is more precious than the gold of California. Often does my heart burn within me while reflecting on some of the many interesting interviews which I have had with the obscure but humble followers of Christ. I have visited all the churches in our Presbytery (one excepted). Those churches are scattered over seven counties, consequently I have been able to visit but one of these the second time. They were more willing and better prepared than at my first call, and seem willing to do all in their power to sustain the Board."

A DEVOTED YOUNG MAN.

A colporteur in Ohio gives the following interesting account of the zeal and devotedness of a young farmer.

"I met with a young man in ——— of rather remarkable character and disposition. His heart seemed to yearn after the conversion and salvation of his fellow mortals. He seemed disposed to exert every influence within his power to accomplish this great work. This young man is very poor, so far at least as the riches of this world are concerned. Yet I do think that he is in the possession of riches which this world can neither give nor take away—I mean the grace of God—which is able to make him wise unto salvation. I found him labouring in the harvest-field of one of the elders of the Presbyterian Church. He told me he was about fifty miles from home. When I went into the harvest-field and began to exhibit some books which I had with me in my basket, he came up and commenced looking over the books, and seemed to regret that his means were so limited, for he would like to get a lot of these books to take home with him to circulate among the hard-hearted and unchristianized people among whom his lot had been cast. He inquired if I had any tracts. I told him I had not, except such as Baxter's Call, Alleine's Alarm, and Salvation, in paper binding. O, said he, these are the very things I want. I had thought he alluded to the loose tracts. He inquired how many of these I could furnish him with. I then went out to my wagon, and found that I had just half a dozen of each kind. I took them into the field where he was at work, and as soon as he saw them he said he would take them all, which he did, and some other small books with them. He actually drew the money that was due him for the work he had done, and two days' pay in advance, and laid it out for books; which, as he said, he intended to give to such as had not means to buy, and perhaps would not buy if they had. Now, the object of this is, first, to show the amount of good that may be done even by the way-side, or in the harvest-field, with the hands that are there employed. We never know what we can do till we try, and if we should even fail, we should try again and again. And in the second place, it shows that if this same spirit of Christian benevolence and charity was a little more felt and practised by the ministers, elders, and members of the Presbyterian Church, things would go on much more profitably than they do. There is too much indifference on the subject with a great portion of the Church. Whilst a very few are doing all they can to promote the interest of the Board in the circulation of their books, very many stand entirely aloof; they neither touch, taste, nor handle."

THE BOARDS HELPING EACH OTHER.

We are favoured with the following extract of a letter received at the office of the Board of Missions, from one of their missionaries. Our readers will see how the colporteur work is appreciated by those who labour in destitute fields, and how the colporteurs of the Board of Publication help the missionaries and feeble churches, and how a feeble church may help a colporteur.

"Our colporteur, Mr. J. B. White, for the Board of Publication, has done us much good. His commission expired the 1st inst. He did not seem inclined to renew it, but we persuaded him to continue in his noble work, and I think he has about consented to do so. He has a large family to maintain, and his compensation from the Board is entirely inadequate, yet it is as much as the Board is able to give; hence in order that he may continue, our little church intends to come up to the help of the Board, and will supply Mr. S——'s family with flour, meat, wood, &c., during the next year, rather than he should cease his agency. So you see your Board helps us, and we help to maintain the agents of the Board of Publication. These two Boards are doing a great work in the West. May God continue his blessing upon them."

ENCOURAGING FROM VIRGINIA.

The Rev. Mr. Hogshead, the excellent agent of the Colportage Committee of the Virginia Synod, in a letter relating to other business, thus incidentally speaks of the encouragement he finds in prosecuting his work.

"Our work is steadily progressing, and with gratifying success. Our churches are generally becoming more interested in the work, and more liberal in its support. But the demand for our books seems to increase in a greater ratio than the men and the means to supply it. You are no doubt informed, through brother Smith, of the enlargement of our orders, and sales of books the present year."

NEW BOOKS AND TRACTS OF THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PICTORIAL FIRST BOOK for little Boys and Girls. 16mo. Square, 64 pages. Price 15, 25 and 30 cents.

If our juvenile friends have not a treat in store in this "First Book," then have we greatly misjudged the stuff that "little boys and girls" are made of. Whoever first introduces this beautiful book to any one of the numerous class designated on its title page, may look out for a pair of bright eyes and a smiling face—our word for it. Already have we seen several of the "old people" wondering at and admiring the elegant pictures; and running over the alphabet rhymes, which adorn its bright and tasteful pages; but what will not the young ones do when they see them? Many, many thousands of this "First Book" will find their way through the land until it shall have become a household companion for the little folks. Through the munificence of one or two Christian ladies, it has been electrotyped, i. e., the pages have been moulded in copper, instead of being stereotyped with common type metal, thus not only rendering the work much finer and more durable, but enabling the Board to sell it at a less price than it could possibly have been afforded under other circumstances. Our colporteurs will be liberally supplied with it, so that our young friends in all parts of the country may have an opportunity to see and learn the many beautiful and good things which the Board of Publication have prepared especially for them.

Since writing the above, we have received the following notices, which show that judicious men not connected with our Board, have formed an equally high estimate of it.

"Little boys and girls are the hope of the Church, and must be looked after with assiduous and pious care. Unless the young idea shoots right, it will be very apt to bear evil and bitter fruit. The Board of Publication know how to condescend to the estate of childhood. Through the patronage of "some kind ladies who love little children," they have prepared this elegant and seasonable work. May God bless those kind, loving ladies, the hard-working Board of Publication, and every boy and girl who reads the Pictorial First Book. The boys and girls who belong to our Church ought to read it; and many others too will get it. Rejoice, oh ye anti-sectarians; there is no sectarianism in this Presbyterian publication. It might even go into a "common school," unless some republican atheist or universalist should happen to glance at some "hard sayings." The illustrations, which will make many a young eye glow with delight, are of the highest quality of art. Mr. Vollum, who attends to this department, has as much "cunning skill" as any artist in the land. The contents of the work are very good. We are glad to see that sweet old hymn, which one of the best of men used to hear us recite every Sabbath evening—

"Whene'er I take my walks abroad,
How many poor I see," &c.

This being the Pictorial First Book, the boys and girls will be soon looking for the Second. We wish that this was the commencement of a series of elementary text-books for the nursery, school, academy, and college, which our good Board were about publishing, in a long succession. But if they do nothing more, what has been done has been done well."—Presb. Mag.

"This is a book that will make many a little eye dance with delight. It is indeed a beautiful thing. The cuts are admirably designed and executed in the finest style of modern art, whilst the matter is just what it should be to put into the hands of our children. It contains first a large illustrated alphabet, progressive lessons in spelling and reading, and a number of beautiful hymns and prayers, adapted to the tastes and wants of childhood. We can cordially recommend it to parents and children."—Watchman and Observer.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR DAYS OF ADVERSITY. 32mo. 64 pages. Price 14 cents.

"Days of Adversity!" Alas! who has not seen them? Who has not to see still more of them, if God should prolong the number of his days on earth? Not always is it sunshine and joy for any of us here. Trials we must have of some sort—they are our allotment; adversity in some shape we must know; who would not wish for a solace in the inevitable hours of darkness and sorrow. The "Considerations" contained in this little volume are drawn from the exhaustless fountains opened up by inspiration, and will doubtless prove an important aid in suppressing the murmurings and rebellious suggestions, to which we are all too prone when God lays his hand upon our earthly joys.

PRESBYTERIAN TRACTS, Vol. VI. Price 50 cents.

We have long regarded this series of Tracts as containing an amount of valuable matter, doctrinal and practical, which could not be surpassed in the same compass in our language. They are quivers of polished shafts, which are feathered for every case of necessity. The present volume will take its rank fitly by the side of its predecessors. It contains twenty-one Tracts of different lengths, doctrinal and practical, a guarantee for the value of which will be given when we say that among the writers of them are such men as Drs. Alexander, Plumer, Ashbel Green, Fairchild, and others who wield pens that have both polish and vigour. We heartily wish that this series of Tracts could be in every Presbyterian family. It would be at once an armory and a treasury, to which they would rarely apply in vain.

The Bible Dictionary has met with such favour that a second edition is already called for. As a specimen of the opinions expressed in relation to it, we present the following from another branch of the Presbyterian Church.

BIBLE DICTIONARY, for the Use of Bible Classes, Schools, and Families. 18mo, pp. 476. Prepared for the Presbyterian Board of Publication, 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Price 50 cents.

A book of this kind was needed. The best Bible Dictionaries are too voluminous. Some are almost text books in theology; others are largely made up of treatises on geography, &c. The volume before us keeps very close to the idea of a Bible Dictionary—a work intended to explain the leading terms and difficult expressions used in the sacred writings, and to furnish such definitions, geographical and historical, as the ordinary reader requires for an intelligent perusal of the word of God. In regard to the geography of Palestine, particularly, this publication has the great advantage of being up to the times. All the late discoveries, and they have not been few, are embodied in it. There are maps bound up with the volume, illustrating the times of the Patriarchs—of the twelve tribes—and of the New Testament. Appended is a table of the principal words found in the Dictionary, with their pronunciation, and a list of the kings of Israel and Judah, with the dates of their respective reigns.

So far as we have examined, the expositions are sound. The only exception we have noticed is one expression in reference to the "Gospel" that it will "ultimately be universally received." The meaning of the writer is that it will some day spread over the whole earth, superseding all false religions. The phraseology, however, is inaccurate, and might suggest the idea that ultimately all mankind will receive the gospel and enjoy its benefits. But, perhaps, we are hypercritical. This Dictionary will be found an excellent help in reading and studying the Bible.—The Covenanter.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF JULY.

Presbytery of Columbia.
2d ch per Rev A Gardner	8 00
Presbytery of North River.
Smithfield church per Rev G P Todd	5 00
Presbytery of Bedford.
Bedford ch per Rev D Inglis	11 00
Presbytery of New York.
1st ch New York ann coll 1346 13; Chelsea ch 50; Madison Avenue ch 75 50; University Place ch (in part) 154 61	1626 24
Presbytery of New Brunswick.
1st ch Princeton in part 27 30; Pennington ch per Rev Geo Hale 32 78	60 08
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
Frankford ch ann coll to constitute their pastor Rev Thos Murphy hon mem 30; Ridley church Sam'l M Leiper 5	35 00
Presbytery of New Castle.
New London congregation from the Benevolent Fund per Thos Gillespie, Treasurer	10 00
Presbytery of Donegal.
Columbia ch thro' Rev Wm H Green	10 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Madison ch per Rev R C Galbraith	2 00
Presbytery of Huntingdon.
Churches under the care of Rev J J Hamilton	50 00
Presbytery of Eastern Shore, Md.
Church Hill ch from "G C C"	40
Presbytery of Washington.
West Union ch per Jas Fleming	8 40
Presbytery of Zanesville.
Thro' Rev S Brown colporteur 22, less sub to Home and Foreign Record 4	18 00
Presbytery of Richland.
Ashland ch 5; Harmony ch per J D Thorpe 12	17 00
Presbytery of Fort Wayne.
German ch per Rev James Bossard	1 50
Presbytery of Schuyler.
Knoxville ch per Rev T S Vaill	5 00
Presbytery of Louisville.
Shelby ch from Mrs Eliz M Morton hon mem	30 00
Presbytery of Montgomery.
From Jacob Campbell, Washington county, Va. per Rev John H Wallace	2 00
Presbytery of Orange.
Harmony ch per Rev J A Gretter 1; Alamance ch to const Rev Eli W Caruthers hon mem 30; Hawfield ch 12 50; Fairfield ch 8; Bethel ch 14; New Hope ch 5 50; Spring Grove ch 2; Mrs Jiggetts and Mrs Baskerville to make Dr W L Stamps and Col W Baskerville Jr hon mem's 60, all per Rev J A Gretter	133 00
Presbytery of Concord.
Hopewell ch per Rev H B Cunningham	5 00
Presbytery of Flint River.
Muscogee ch per Rev R T Marks to const Dr A D Bruce hon mem 30; Mr C T Bruce 3; Mrs Jane Lawson 2; Samuel Baldwin 5	40 00
MISCELLANEOUS.
Bridgeport, Connecticut, from Rev Dr Hewit to const his grandson Nathaniel Hewit hon mem	30 00
Received July 15	40
Total	$2106 02

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 13th of July, by the second Presbytery of Philadelphia the Rev. Septimus Tustin was installed pastor of the Presbyterian church at Germantown, Pennsylvania.

On the 6th of May, by the Presbytery of Newton, the Rev. Charles Wood was installed pastor of the church of Foxhill, New Jersey.

On the 26th of July, by the Presbytery of Muncie, the Rev. Robert Irwin was installed pastor of the Union church.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

The Presbytery of Marion have dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. B. Wall and the church of Marion.

CALLS.

Mr. James Rogers, licentiate, has accepted a call from the church of Donegal, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. His address is Mount Joy, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

Mr. William A. Rankin has received a call from the Presbyterian church of Marietta, Pennsylvania.

The Rev. John McNair of Lancaster has received a call from the church at Clinton, New Jersey.

The church of Locust Bottom, Virginia, has given a unanimous call to the Rev. John M. Cochran to become the pastor of that church.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Presbyterian church edifice at San Francisco, California, was totally destroyed by fire on the 22d of June. It had only been dedicated about five months.

The Rev. William Love of Richmond, Virginia, having left that city to reside in the midst of his congregation, his post-office address is now Old Church, Hanover county, Virginia.

The Rev. A. T. Graves has been compelled, on account of continued ill health, to resign the charge of the churches of Zion and Trenton, Tennessee.

The Rev. J. T. Paxton has removed from Columbia to Louisiana, Missouri, with a view of organizing a church in that place.

The church in Keokuk, Iowa, which suffered so severely from the defection of the Rev. Mr. Hummer, has been reorganized under very favourable auspices, and has secured the services of the Rev. Mr. Cummins.

The Rev. Isaac L. Lyons has resigned the charge of the church of Dubuque, Iowa. This is a large and growing town, and should soon be supplied with a strong and efficient man.

NEW CHURCHES.

The Second Presbyterian church of New Brunswick, New Jersey, was dedicated on the 3d of August.

The new Presbyterian church edifice at Quincy, Florida, was dedicated on the 13th of July.

The corner-stone of a new Presbyterian church edifice was laid at Foxhill, New Jersey, on the 3d of July.

A Presbyterian church was organized in March last, in Pluckamin, New Jersey, and the corner-stone of their new edifice was laid on the 8th of July.

The Presbyterian church in Bloomington, Illinois, was dedicated on Sabbath, 13th ult. by a sermon from the stated minister.

DEATHS.

Died at Weston, Missouri, of congestion of the heart, on the 6th of June, the Rev. Dr. John Mark Fulton, in the 56th year of his age. He was a member of the Presbytery of Upper Missouri, and stated supply of the church at Weston.

The Rev. James Hopkins departed this life on the 29th of June at Red Oak, Brown county, Ohio, in the 31st year of his age.

At Carlisle, Indiana, on the 9th of June, the Rev. John Barr departed this life, aged 28 years.

Varieties.

"So all Israel shall be saved."—Three hundred converted Jews are now engaged in various parts of the world, in preaching that Jesus Christ is "he that was to come."

Dr. Achilli's Lectures.—Dr. Achilli has commenced a course of lectures in London. His first was—"The Church of Rome and the Primitive Church contrasted."

A Professorship in Demand.—Seventeen candidates for the Professorship of Church History, made vacant by the death of Dr. Ogilby, in the Episcopal Theological Seminary, New York, were nominated at the recent annual meeting of the trustees. The election will take place this month.

Transient Newspapers.—Almost all newspapers weigh more than one ounce each, and transient papers are therefore, under the new law, chargeable with two cents postage. All newspapers not mailed from the office of publication are called transient.

Street Preaching.—Three clergymen of Glasgow have begun to preach in the open air on Sundays, and are said to have had numerous and attentive audiences.

Anglo-Italian Missions.—The Pope proposes "building a spacious church in the centre of London, in a fine position, in one of the most majestic streets in the city, principally for the use of Italians, and thence of other foreigners, as well as of the natives." A writer in the Christian Times suggests the project of "building a spacious church in the centre of Rome, in a fine position, in one of the most majestic streets in the city, principally for the use of the English and thence of other foreigners, as well as of the natives."

Ailanthus Trees.—The Secretary of the Interior will not allow the further propagation of the Ailanthus tree, in the public grounds of Washington City, on account of the injurious effects of its odour, when in blossom, upon the public health.

Good Taste and Good Health.—Dr. Goodall of Columbus, Ohio, has given a tract of forty acres of land to that city for a public park—a praiseworthy act of munificence.

The Synod of the Waldenses met in the valley of St. Martin in May last. All the ministers of the church, twenty-two in number, were present—sixteen of whom are pastors, and six professors in the college and school, together with two lay delegates from each parish, making thirty-two in all.

Uniform Day of Thanksgiving.—Governor Wood, of Ohio, is endeavouring to effect the adoption by all the States of a uniform Thanksgiving Day. The day recommended is the last Thursday in November.

Climate of California.—A writer in the Sacramento Union, who says that he has passed through eight seasons in California, states that of late years the climate has been greatly modified, and is now far pleasanter and more agreeable than formerly.

The Boston Seamen's Friend Society, according to the Twenty-third Annual Report, received last year at the Sailor's Home in that city, 1756 boarders, 83 of whom were destitute. To these latter named men 690 days' board was furnished, costing $345, besides 156 articles of clothing.

Plants.—Plants perspire more abundantly than animals. Thus a sun-flower will perspire in a warm day, thirty ounces, or, as it is said, as much as seventeen men. The stem of a vine cut off near the head, with a bladder fastened tightly around it, will, in the sun, soon send off in the form of perspiration, sap enough to swell and burst the bladder.

Lead Mineral.—A letter in the Potosi Republican states that fifteen miles from Union Prairie in Alamakee county, Iowa, may be seen a bluff of mineral, or an immense parcel of mineral sticking out of a bluff. Ten thousand pounds can be seen at one sight. The country is said to have the general appearance of that west of Dubuque.

California Grain.—The Editor of the Sacramento Union says he has been presented with a bunch of barley of two hundred and twenty stalks, produced from one grain of seed. The bunch is dry and weighs seven and a half pounds. It is a perfect sheaf from one grain.

Military Asylum.—The citizens of New Orleans are preparing a memorial to the Secretary of War, asking for the permanent establishment at that place of a military Asylum. The spot proposed as a site for the Institution is a part of the old battle ground, including a long and airy building which was occupied by General Jackson as his head-quarters in the memorable campaign of 1815.

Exploration of Palestine.—The Rev. Dr. Robinson has gone to Germany to make preparations for a second exploration of Palestine, with a view to bring out a new edition of his Biblical Researches.

Moravian Missions.—The United Brethren received and expended, last year, $55,000 for foreign missions, one-half of which was contributed by other denominations on the continent of Europe and in Great Britain. Their missions are established in the Danish West Indies, Jamaica, Antigua, St. Kitts, Barbadoes, Tobago, Central America, Surinam, North America, Labrador, Greenland, South Africa, and Australia, numbering sixty-nine stations, 290 missionaries (male and female,) with about 70,000 souls under their care.

The best of Reasons.—The Rev. William Jay, in a sermon before a missionary society in London, stated that when young, having doubts whether the time had come for the evangelization of the world, he called to converse on the subject with John Newton, and mentioned to him the obstacles to the extension of the gospel which oppressed his mind. When he had ceased, the venerable clergyman, looking at him, said, "My brother, I have never doubted the power of God to convert the heathen world since he converted me."

Quaker Missionaries to Africa.—There was, a day or two ago, a large assemblage of persons at New Bedford, on the occasion of the departure of Eli and Lybel Jones, Quakers, who were destined to Liberia, where they purpose to spend some time as elders or preachers. They are sent out by the Society of "Friends," and bear with them letters of introduction to President Roberts, from the Hon. Henry Clay, Bishop Waugh, and a number of other distinguished advocates of the African colonization cause.

Conversions to Protestantism in Hungary.—The Austrian Government, obedient to the beck of the priest party, hinders as much as possible the going over of Romanists to Protestantism. Papists by birth, who desire to embrace the reformed faith, must go through some mortifying forms. They are obliged to have conferences with their priests; they must postpone for a given time the execution of their design, and endure disagreeable examinations from the civil authority. Besides, the new converts become suspected by the government, and are watched by the public officers; for it seems that a Roman Catholic cannot become a Protestant without showing, by this single fact, that he has more liberal principles than those of the temporal government.

In the course of last year, more than a hundred respectable Hungarian families entered the Reformed communion. Now, new conversions are announced by the Gazette of Vienna and Gazette of Augsburg.

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

Board of Domestic Missions.—Necessities of the Board, Appeal to the Churches, p. 130. The Sunshine and the Shade, p. 130. Pastoral Visiting, p. 131. A Missionary taking leave of the Board, p. 131. Church Extension, an easy Presbyterial Plan, p. 131. Orange Presbytery, N. C., p. 131. Revivals, p. 132. Receipts, p. 132.

Board of Education.—I. Ministerial Education: The Pledge Abolished, but not the Obligation, p. 133. New Candidates, p. 133. Pastoral Hints to Candidates, p. 133. II. Christian Education in Schools, Academies, and Colleges: German Valley School, N. J., p. 133. Presbyterial Academies, p. 134. The Caldwell Institute, p. 135. Mothers, p. 135. Receipts, p. 135.

Board of Foreign Missions.—Death of Mr. Olyphant, p. 136. Recent Intelligence, p. 136. Missions among Romanists, p. 136. India: Lodiana Mission; Journal of the Rev. John Newton, p. 137. Furrukhabad Mission; Hindu Doctrine of Transmigration, by Rev. A. H. Seeley, p. 137. Allahabad Mission; Letters on Mohammedanism, p. 138. Journal of Rev. Joseph Owen, p. 138. China: Shanghai Mission; Communication of Rev. J. K. Wight, p. 140. Europe: Progress of Protestantism in France, p. 140. Receipts, p. 141.

Board of Publication.—The Past and the Present as to the Press, p. 142. A Colporteur's Comforts, p. 142. Variety of good Results from a Colporteur's Labours, p. 142. Conflict between Truth and Error, p. 142. A Devoted Young Man, p. 142. Encouraging from Virginia, p. 143. New Books and Tracts of the Board of Publication, p. 143. Receipts, p. 143.

Miscellaneous.—Tell them to preach Christ, p. 129. A Warning, p. 129. How to make Life useful, p. 129. Repentance the longer delayed the more difficult, p. 129. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 144. Varieties, p. 144.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 10. | PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

THE SPIRITUAL MIRROR.

We all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.—2 Cor. iii. 18.

The unveiled face of Apostles radiant with the glory of the Lord, as it shone upon them from the face of Jesus Christ, is contrasted with the veil which Moses put upon his face, emblematic of the darkness of that dispensation of which he was the mediator. The idea of Macknight is, that this Divine glory is reflected in the revelation that God has given of his Son, and that we in turn reflect it on the world. It would rather seem that Christians are represented as contemplating the Divine glory, and are themselves changed into the same image,—giving back, by a gradual process of transformation, the image on which they look. Thus, (1 John iii. 1) "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." In the meantime, we, described as looking into the glass, are the subject of a reverse process, so that, by a sort of metonomy, it is not the image in the glass that is our image, but we become the image of the object which is beheld in the glass, reflecting, instead of being reflected. Or, otherwise, we are the reflecting mirrors, instead of looking into a mirror. If this be a correct interpretation, it gives us a beautiful illustration of this process of change. The Christian is the image of God in knowledge, righteousness, and true holiness. As an infant, he is a complete living being, but gradually attains the stature, the wisdom, and the vigour of a full-grown man; or, as the Apostle expresses it, attains the stature of a perfect man in Christ Jesus. So, in the figure before us, as the image that we reflect by the power of the Divine glory shining upon us,—the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ,—is one that is more and more developed, gradually attaining to greater clearness, perfection and beauty: it is at first indeed complete, but is nevertheless dimly seen, and needs to be brought out more distinctly; is in miniature, and needs to be enlarged. We may get an idea of this process—supposing ourselves to be the mirrors—by imagining such a change in the surface of one of those concave mirrors which reflect a miniature of the object, as that the mirror should gradually become a plane surface: the result would be the gradual enlargement of the image until its size corresponded exactly with the full size of the object. And the reality would be, in the result—only gradually produced—analogous to that of first reflecting the object in miniature, and then—which is all that is possible for us—by a change of mirrors, presenting it in its natural size. And this illustration of what actually takes place, in the process of sanctification, would be the more complete, if, at the same time, we imagine that the surface of the reflecting substance is at first dim, obscure, as when it is covered with vapour, so that, the image, even though it were that of the sun, is but faint and indistinct: but gradually the light and heat of the sun dry up this moisture, remove the veil and cloud that lie upon the surface, and thus, polished and brightened, it gives back an image which every moment appears more distinctly—clear in outline, every lineament apparent, and the whole countenance beaming out in brightness and beauty. So it is with the renewed soul: the image of God impressed upon it in its regeneration, appears upon it at first faintly; but there is an advance in grace; the lineaments of holiness, under the transforming influence of the word and spirit of Christ, one after another are brought out; they are brighter, clearer, purer, more distinctly marked, and are universally recognized, in their likeness to Christ, who is set before us as an example. When the lineaments of the new creature shall all appear, even those that are now obscure, every line of glory shall shine conspicuous. The whole of the portrait, bearing Jehovah's image, shall be symmetrical and exact, and all its perfection be visible at once. There will remain no blindness of mind, no error of judgment, no perverseness of will, no irregularity of affection. All shall be holiness and happiness. God shall put his last hand to this image of himself. Thus changed from glory to glory,—at last made like Christ, because we shall see him as he is, the body sleeping in death, only to wake in the likeness of Christ's glorified body,—the whole redeemed and renewed man wakes to behold his face in righteousness, and be eternally satisfied in its own perfect likeness to God. J. M. K.

Furnished for the Home and Foreign Record.

SCRAPS FROM AN UNPUBLISHED COMMENTARY.

Eccl. ix. 13–17.—This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me: there was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it: now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man. Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. The words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

In the pressure of difficulty and danger the wise man is always found out, how low and obscure soever his station. He is then put forward, with the consent of all, to maintain the breach. But no sooner is the victory gained, than the bustling politicians, and purse-proud strutters, and titled ciphers rush forward. Every one has his tale to tell, his achievement to boast, his pretension to advance, his honours to claim. And now, no body has seen, or heard, or knows anything of the poor wise man. It would be perfect impudence in him to utter a word in such company. Let him go back to his obscurity. Such is the way of the world.—Dr. Gray, on Ecclesiastes; unpublished.

Eccl. xii. 1, 2.—Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them; while the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain.

Youth is the season most propitious to piety and virtue. The acuteness of the understanding, the sprightliness of the fancy, the quick susceptibility of the feelings, the promptitude and decision of volition, and the ardent thirst for happiness, fit youth eminently for the sublime enjoyments of religion. Some say the impetuosity of youth is dangerous to the soul.

> Agreed; but would you slay or sell your horse,
> For bounding and curvetting in his course?
> Or, if when ridden with a careless rein,
> He breaks away and seeks the distant plain?
> No! This high mettle, under good control,
> Gives him Olympic speed and shoots him to the goal.

The more brilliant and vigorous the habits, the more exquisite the taste for pleasure, so much the better, when by the grace of God youth devotes itself to piety.—Ibid.

A ROLL OF CALVINISTS.

Who, for ages, suffered the confiscation of property, exile, imprisonment, and death, rather than renounce the truth as it is in Jesus? The Waldenses and Huguenots—those noble Calvinists of France. Who were the great leaders of the Reformation of the sixteenth century? Luther and Melancthon, Zuingle, Calvin, Farel and Viret, Knox, Cranmer, and Ridley—all Calvinists. Who "alone kindled the precious spark of liberty in England," and gave "the English the whole freedom of their Constitution?" According to Hume, they were the Puritans, those reviled Calvinists. Who elevated Scotland to her high eminence among the nations? Her sturdy Calvinists. Who bore the most important part in our Revolutionary struggle? Calvinists, according to our distinguished historian Bancroft, himself a Unitarian. He says: "We are proud of the free States that fringe the Atlantic. The Pilgrims of Plymouth were Calvinists; the best settlers of South Carolina came from the Calvinists of France; William Penn was the disciple of the Huguenots; the ships from Holland, that first brought colonies to Manhattan, were filled with Calvinists. He that will not honour the memory, and respect the influence of Calvin, knows but little of the origin of American liberty." "By their fruits ye shall know them."

MEEKNESS.

How difficult it is to be of a meek and forgiving spirit, when despitefully used. To love an enemy and forgive an evil speaker, is a higher attainment than is commonly believed. It is easy to talk of Christian forbearance among neighbours, but to practice it ourselves, proves us to be Christians indeed. The surmises of a few credulous persons need not trouble that man, who knows his cause is soon to be tried in court, and he openly acquitted. So the evil language of the times need not disturb me, since, in the day of judgment, "my judgment shall be brought forth as the noonday."

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

Clothing.—Boxes of Clothing, intended for Domestic Missionary Families, should be directed to Samuel D. Powel, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with the name of the church or individual donor upon it.

AGENT FOR CHURCH EXTENSION.

The Rev. B. T. Lacy, of the Presbytery of Winchester, has been appointed by the Board of Missions an Agent for Church Extension, and will commence his labours within the bounds of the Synod of Virginia immediately. He is commended to the confidence and affection of the churches.

Note.—The length of the two articles published in this Number, has excluded our usual missionary intelligence.

AN IMPORTANT TABLE FOR SYNODS AND PRESBYTERIES.

Mission Rooms, 265 Chestnut Street,
Philadelphia, September, 1851.

The season of the year is at hand when the meetings of Synods and Presbyteries are to be held, and contributions taken up in churches for the Board of Missions. We have thought it a matter of some consequence that Pastors, Missionaries, and Churches, should have laid before them, the actual amount contributed during the last ecclesiastical year—from May 1, 1850, to May 1, 1851—to the Board of Missions, by the particular Synods and Presbyteries in connection with the Office in Philadelphia: and also the actual amount expended by the Board for the same Synods and Presbyteries. The Synods and Presbyteries in connection with the office in Philadelphia, are those inserted in the document now presented; all other Synods and Presbyteries are in connection with the Office in Louisville. This division of the field between the two Committees, made by the Board, is of some years standing.

Mr. Powel has devoted considerable time to the preparation of this table; it has been completed with his accustomed care and accuracy, and we are satisfied of its substantial correctness. To prevent misapprehension, it may be proper to remark, that in the Minutes of the Assembly for the past year, sums are reported from churches in connection with the Office in Philadelphia, as contributed "for Domestic Missions," which have never come into the Treasury of the Board, and of which we know nothing at all. We have, therefore, in our table, given credit to Synods and Presbyteries, in connection with this Office, for that money only which they have paid into the Treasury of Philadelphia. And very properly, for the Board accounts to the Assembly for those funds only which are paid into its Treasury, and by which the missionary work of the Church is sustained.

We present the Table, and shall then subjoin a few remarks based upon it.

TABLE

Showing the amount of money contributed to the Board of Missions from May 1st, 1850, to May 1st, 1851, by various Presbyteries and Synods in connection with the office in Philadelphia: and the amount paid in return to them for the same time by the Board, for the support of their Ministers and Missionaries.

Synods.	Presbyteries.	Number of Ministers.	Number of Churches.	Number of Members.	Contributions to the Board of Missions.	Average per Member.	Amount received from B. of Missions.	Balance in favour of Presbytery.	Balance in favour of B. of Missions.
Albany,	Londonderry,	29	11	1,864	$195	Cts. 10.461		$195
	Troy,	18	11	2,012	940	46.719	$350	590
	Albany,	38	26	4,169	615	14.752	550	65
	Columbia,	5	3	221	17	7.692	225		$208
	Mohawk,	7	5	418	95	22.730	150		55
		97	56	8,684	1,862		1,275	850	263
Buffalo,	Ogdensburg,	5	7	791	8	1.011		8
	Steuben,	11	11	835	124	14.850	335		211
	Wyoming,	12	9	679	126	18.557	310		184
	Buffalo City,	16	12	1,533	321	20.939	1,000		679
	Michigan,	5	14	488	17	3.484	1,090		1,073
		49	53	4,326	596		2,735	8	2,147
New York,	Hudson,	21	18	1,955	325	16.623	375		50
	North River,	16	12	1,248	470	37.660	80	390
	Bedford,	13	14	1,283	548	42.712	290	258
	Long Island,	20	18	2,502	160	6.395	462		302
	New York,	35	24	5,098	6,363	124.814	1,925	4,438
	New York 2d,	15	8	1,362	700	51.395	200	500
	California,	3	3	84			400		400
	Connecticut,	7	2	238	40	16.807	150		110
		130	99	13,770	8,606		3,882	5,586	862
New Jersey,	Elizabethtown,	37	27	5,570	1,104	19.820	400	704
	New Brunswick,	46	29	4,823	681	14.120	919		238
	Burlington,	5	8	199	132	66.332	296		164
	West Jersey,	15	15	1,658	787	47.467	785	2
	Newton,	27	27	3,641	628	17.248	493	135
	Raritan,	9	16	1,903	139	7.304	180		41
	Susquehanna,	18	18	739	182	24.628	740		558
	Luzerne,	15	20	1,308	297	22.706	1,584		1,287
		172	160	19,841	3,950		5,397	841	2,288
Philadelphia,	Philadelphia,	34	23	5,213	2,872	55.093	783	2,089
	Philadelphia 2d,	15	16	1,445	175	12.111	555		380
	New Castle,	19	23	2,883	339	11.758	192	147
	Donegal,	19	24	2,641	293	11.094	123	170
	Baltimore,	29	25	2,286	1,903	83.246	1,590	313
	Eastern Shore,	5	8	322	53	16.460	237		184
	Carlisle,	30	43	4,601	1,381	30.015	283	1,098
	Huntingdon,	35	38	5,500	1,437	26.127	384	1,053
	Northumberland	17	34	2,968	625	21.058	225	400
		203	234	27,859	9,078		4,372	5,270	564
Pittsburg,	Blairsville,	29	46	5,578	893	16.009	216	677
	Redstone,	21	32	3,074	928	30.189	571	357
	Ohio,	47	36	5,088	1,730	34.002	218	1,512
	Allegheny,	15	28	2,237	268	11.980	50	218
	Beaver,	16	22	2,501	344	13.754	100	244
	Erie,	11	26	1,721	143	8.309	163		20
	Clarion,	9	19	1,693	174	10.277	361		187
		148	209	21,892	4,480		1,679	3,008	207
Wheeling,	Washington,	29	36	4,448	1,221	27.450	625	596
	St. Clairsville,	15	27	1,882	325	17.269	554		229
	Steubenville,	15	30	2,722	605	22.226	57	548
	New Lisbon,	14	26	1,974	235	11.905	92	143
		73	119	11,026	2,386		1,328	1,287	229
Ohio,	Columbus,	13	21	1,378	313	22.714	195	118
	Marion,	17	31	1,616	62	3.837	1,042		980
	Zanesville,	17	27	2,379	92	3.867	524		432
	Richland,	13	27	2,287	132	5.772	295		163
	Wooster,	9	15	1,175	124	10.553	179		55
	Coshocton,	8	20	1,529	107	6.998	192		85
	Hocking,	9	11	568	76	13.380	610		534
		86	152	10,932	906		3,037	118	2,249
Illinois,	Wisconsin,	26	26	691	50	7.236	4,625		4,575
Virginia,	Greenbrier,	10	21	1,632			296		296
	Lexington,	26	29	2,914	373	12.800	400		27
	Winchester,	17	29	1,621	265	16.348	1,027		762
	West Hanover,	39	45	2,338	965	41.275	254	711
	East Hanover,	15	14	1,491	897	60.161	525	372
	Montgomery,	12	19	1,304	108	8.282	550		442
		119	157	11,300	2,608		3,052	1,083	1,527
N. Carolina,	Orange,	35	45	2,134	646	30.272	1,083		437
	Fayetteville,	27	51	2,290	471	20.568	294	177
	Concord,	31	57	5,420	882	16.273	304	578
		93	153	9,844	1,999		1,681	755	437
S. Carolina,	South Carolina.	22	43	2,449	35	1.429		35
	Bethel,	15	23	2,185	160	7.323	200		40
	Harmony,	23	27	3,440	116	3.372		116
	Charleston,	15	13	1,037
		75	106	9,111	311		200	151	40
Georgia,	Georgia,	13	9	198	72	36.364	137		65
	Hopewell,	23	27	1,570	371	2.363	600		229
	Flint River,	18	41	1,980	595	30.050	522	73
	Florida,	8	10	408	33	8.089	125		92
	Cherokee,	12	27	1,065	157	14.742	217		60
		74	114	5,221	1,228		1,601	73	446
				154,497	$38,060		$34,864	$19,030	$15,834

REMARKS.

I. The Summary.

(1) The number of Church Members in the twelve Synods.—1. The Synod of Philadelphia takes the lead with an army of 27,859. 2. Next comes Pittsburgh, 21,892; then, 3. New Jersey, 19,841. 4. New York, 13,770. 5. Virginia, 11,300. 6. Wheeling, 11,026. 7. Ohio, 10,932. 8. North Carolina, 9,844. 9. South Carolina, 9,111. 10. Albany, 8,684. 11. Georgia, 5,221; and 12. Buffalo, 4,326.—Total, 153,806. Add the Presbytery of Wisconsin, Synod of Illinois, 691, and we have 154,497 church members.

(2) The amount paid into the Treasury by these

Synods.—1. The Synod of Philadelphia, $9,078. 2. New York, $8,606. 3. Pittsburgh, $4,480. 4. New Jersey, $3,950. 5. Virginia, $2,608. 6. Wheeling, $2,386. 7. North Carolina, $1,999. 8. Albany, $1,862. 9. Georgia, $1,228. 10. Ohio, $906. 11. Buffalo, $596. 12. South Carolina, $311.—TOTAL, $38,010. Add Presbytery of Wisconsin, $50, and we have $38,060.

(3) The amount drawn out of the Treasury by these Synods.—1. New Jersey takes the lead, $5,397. 2. Philadelphia, $4,372. 3. New York, $3,882. 4. Virginia, $3,052. 5. Ohio, $3,037. 6. Buffalo, $2,735. 7. North Carolina, $1,681. 8. Pittsburgh, $1,679. 9. Georgia, $1,601. 10. Wheeling, $1,328. 11. Albany, $1,275. 12. South Carolina, $200.—TOTAL, $30,239. Add Presbytery of Wisconsin, $4,625, and we have $34,864.

(4) The average of contribution per church member.—1. New York takes the lead, giving us 62 4-10 cents. 2. Next follows Philadelphia, 32 5-10. 3. Georgia, 23 5-10. 4. Virginia, 23. 5. Wheeling, 21 6-10. 6. Albany, 21 4-10. 7. Pittsburg, 20 4-10. 8. North Carolina, 20 3-10. 9. New Jersey, 19 9-10. 10. Buffalo, 13 7-10. 11. Ohio, 8 2-10. 12. South Carolina, 3 4-10. The Synod of South Carolina conducts it domestic missionary work mainly within itself, and therefore may not properly be reckoned in with the rest. In the aggregate of the Synods, the Table shows that 154,497 church members have contributed $38,060, making an average of about 24 cents and 6-10 each!

II. The relative value of the Synods in the Missionary work of the Church.—The Synod of Philadelphia, the first in number of church members, and second in average per member in contributions, pays in the largest sum, draws out (next to the highest sum drawn out) $4,372, and leaves to its credit in the Treasury, $4,706. The Synod of Pittsburg, second in membership, and seventh in average, with about one-third members less than Philadelphia, does not give half as much money, and barely half as much as New York, although it has 8,000 more members; yet it draws out $1,679, and leaves a balance to its credit of $3,801. The Synod of New Jersey, the third in membership, and ninth in average, draws out every dollar it pays in, and runs in debt to the Treasury, $1,447. And although it has 6,000 more members than New York, it does not contribute half as much by $353. The Synod of New York, the fourth in membership, and first in average, draws out $3,882, and leaves a balance to its credit in the Treasury of $4,724. With just half as many church members as Philadelphia, it gives within $472 as much money; in other words, in proportion to its membership, the Synod of New York gives very nearly twice as much as the Synod of Philadelphia. The Synod of Virginia, the fifth in membership, and fourth in average, draws out all it pays in, and runs in debt to the Treasury, $444. The Synod of Wheeling, the sixth in membership, and fifth in average, draws out $1,328, and leaves a balance to its credit in the Treasury of $1,058. The Synod of Ohio, the seventh in membership, and eleventh in average, pays in $906, draws out $3,037, and runs in debt to the Treasury, $2,131. Although Ohio has 2,000 more members than Albany, and 1,000 more than North Carolina, it does not contribute half as much money as either of them; and with more than double the members of the Synod of Georgia, contributes one-third less. The Synod of North Carolina, the eighth in membership, and eighth in average, draws out $1,681, and leaves a balance to its credit of $318. The Synod of Albany, the tenth in membership, and sixth in average, draws out $1,275, and leaves a balance to its credit of $587. The Synod of Georgia, the eleventh in membership, and third in average, draws out all it pays in, and runs in debt to the Treasury, $373. The Synod of Buffalo, the twelfth in membership, and tenth in average, pays in $596, draws out $2,735, and runs in debt to the Treasury, $2,139.

The paying Synods are Philadelphia, New York, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, North Carolina, Albany, and South Carolina. And the consuming Synods are Buffalo, Ohio, New Jersey, Virginia, and Georgia. Buffalo draws out near 5 times more than it contributes to the Board; Ohio near 3½ more; New Jersey near ⅓ more; Georgia above ¼ more, and Virginia over ⅐ more. Whether these Synods of right ought to be consuming Synods, we leave it to themselves to decide; but if we are not much mistaken in our knowledge of them, with the exception of one —if indeed that one ought to be excepted—all the others should have the balance in the Treasury of the Board in their favour. We hope they will make it so the present year.

The Synod of Illinois appears in the Table; but one Presbytery of that Synod is in connection with the office in Philadelphia, that of Wisconsin. It occupies missionary ground; the sum paid out for it the last year, was $4,625.

III. The Presbyteries can see at a glance from the Table, what they have contributed to the Board of Missions the past year. They may compare themselves with themselves, if they please, and so be provoked to love and to good works. The information here communicated, may be of value to them in making their collections the present year. The order of average per member in their contributions, is as follows: Presbytery of New York, $1,24; Baltimore, 83 cents; Burlington, 66; East Hanover, 60; Philadelphia, 55; New York, 2d, 51; West Jersey, 47; Troy, 46; Bedford, 42; West Hanover, 41; North River, 37, Georgia, 36, and so on, down to 2 cents and 1 cent, and lastly, from one Presbytery nothing at all.

IV. Besides meeting its appropriations from the Treasury in Philadelphia, to the field in connection with that Office, the Board have paid out of the Treasury in Philadelphia, a considerable sum in aid of the Synods and Presbyteries in connection with the Western Executive Committee in Louisville.

V. We beg special attention to the conclusion of this matter. While the Synods have been applying to the Board for the supply of their own destitutions; of their entire contributions, ONLY $3,196 ARE LEFT BY THEM IN THE TREASURY FOR CURRENT EXPENSES AND FOR THE VAST FIELD FOR MISSIONS IN OUR COUNTRY LYING WITHOUT THEIR BOUNDS! At this rate how can the work GO FORWARD? It has gone forward. Yea, truly. But how? Would you have the truth? Know then, that were it not for the miscellaneous sums contributed by individuals, and obtained by legacies, our missionary work, so far as it is sustained by these Synods as such, would remain stationary within our present limits! Brethren, in the Ministry, in the Eldership, and in the Churches, will you give this astounding fact, your serious consideration? "Begin at Jerusalem," say you? Be it so, since our LORD has commanded it. But He has also commanded us, "Go ye into all the world." We must therefore go beyond ourselves if we would obey this command. Can these Synods do no more for the spread of the gospel in our country? Will they continue during the present year to absorb all their contributions, as they did the last? We shall pray and hope, and, as the Lord shall enable us, labour for better things.

From a careful view of the past, and of the present condition of our Domestic Missionary operations, we believe the time has fully come for Presbyteries to scrutinize more closely the applications which they forward to the Board for aid; and for the Board also, through its Executive Committees, to inquire more searchingly into the applications, and see to it that the funds contributed by the churches for missionary purposes are not converted into a general sustentation fund—a fund for the supplementing of ministers' salaries, and the support of injudicious and abortive efforts, and of churches actually able to support the gospel for themselves, and which in justice can lay no claim to the use of the missionary funds of the Church. Undue absorption within our present limits prevents the expansion of our Church. We see it, we feel it: and our purely missionary fields are parched and withered thereby; and call upon us for aid, and call upon us in vain! Brethren, let us arise and build.

PRESENT STATE OF RELIGION IN THE MISSIONARY FIELD.

MISSION ROOMS, 265 Chestnut Street,
Philadelphia, September, 1851.

Some two hundred reports, from all parts of our country, have been received within the past three months in the OFFICE, and while Ministers and Missionaries appear to be employed in their stated work with a good degree of fidelity, and are encouraged with ordinary attendance upon and attention to the means of grace on the part of the people whom they serve; and here and there are souls converted and added to the churches; yet we are constrained to believe that the general state of religion is far below what it ought to be, and should fill us with heart-searchings, and fears, and unfeigned sorrow, and penitence before God! Our churches throughout our wide bounds are not enjoying seasons of refreshing from the Lord? Alas! what shall we do when God withdraweth the light of His countenance from us! We ask for the reason of this. Every man who knows anything of his own heart and life can speedily give that reason for himself. Nor, Christian brother, whoever thou art, who readest these lines, must you, and I, who writeth them, suppose that we are exempt from this condemnation, and it lieth upon others around us. No indeed. We have reason to repent of our backslidings and sins, and to return unto the Lord and seek afresh a union with our Saviour and ever blessed Redeemer. We cannot bear fruit except we abide in the vine; for without Him we can do nothing.

But is there not a cause? We may, as ministers, go through with the stated and public duties of our office, and have peace of conscience, and perhaps much approbation of the Church and the world. But there may be sad and ruinous defects and sins both in the spirit and matter of our ministrations. Does the all-powerful, and refreshing love of Christ constrain us? Have we such a sense of the value of the immortal souls committed to our care, and of their imminent danger of damnation, that "of them we travail in birth again, until Christ be formed in them?" Where are the days of private fasting and prayer, the strong crying and tears, the self-sacrifice, that they may be saved, and the church edified, and the Redeemer glorified? Is this spirit of the Minister of Christ there? Is it in exercise? And what of the matter of our ministrations? Are our discourses crude, hasty, undigested, oft repeated? Have we been "spoiled," as many ministers in these days are, by the conversation, and example, and books of men, "through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ?" and so feeding our people upon polished fancies, and theories, and wisdom of words; but not with the bread of life. Where is the Redeemer of men? Is He the end and substance of our preaching? Do we seek "to be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that we might be filled with all the fulness of God?" Do we bring forth His supreme Divinity—wonderful, predicted, necessary incarnation—the origin and end of His mission to earth;—His offices of Prophet, Priest, and King;—His life from the manger to the cross;—and then THAT CROSS! The death He died for lost men! The atonement He made for his people! The glories of His eternal redemption;—sin, death, and hell, all vanquished by His power! God, our Father, Heaven our home. The covenant sure! The mission of the Spirit;—His work in applying Christ;—Christ our sun, our shield;—the life we live by faith in Him: He our hope, our joy, our peace, our everlasting reward! This is the true matter of preaching. "It is as high as heaven, what canst thou do? deeper than hell, what canst thou know? The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea." Inexhaustible, infinite. The Spirit applieth Christ, and Christ alone to men for salvation. Hence, if this matter be wanting, religion declines, and dies in the hearts of ministers and people, and immortal souls perish: Zion lieth waste, and is trodden down.

Furthermore; do we follow our preaching with a due watch and care over our flocks, in visitings, in conversations, in exhortations and admonitions; for the young and the old; for saint and sinner; and so in every way do we endeavour to keep God and eternity, Christ and his blessings, near?

If we look beyond the churches and stations connected with the Board of Missions, the same dearth of divine influence meets our eye. Are the churches in our large cities in a state of revival? No. Are the churches in our towns and villages in a state of revival? No. Are our country churches better than they? No. And the Lord is solemnly warning us to be about our Father's business, and to finish the work he has given us to do, and stand in readiness for the coming of the Son of man. A minister in connection with the Board, has recently been called to his final account, after a severe illness of but three or four days! The Lord is at hand. It is high time to awake out of sleep. It is high time for ministers and churches who have had no revivings in their hearts for long tedious months, and some, alas! for many, many years; and no joyful sounds of souls praising God in conversion—it is high time for them to fear, and tremble, and return to God. As a branch of the visible Church of Christ, let us not glory, as we are inclined to do, in our doctrines, our discipline, our union, our judgment, our influence, our past growth in numbers, resources and power. If we have not the love of God in us, he will esteem these things as vanity. He is "able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." As he delighted when, in his mercy, we were willing and obedient, to lift us up; so when that mercy is despised, and we depart from him, he will delight to pluck us down! God, even our God and Redeemer, must be enthroned in our Zion, and bear rule over all hearts, and then shall we live and prosper, and be glorious upon the earth. Come, thou ever blessed God—come, and in thy mercy revive us. Come, thou Redeemer of thy people, and reign over us, and show us thy salvation!

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of August, 1851.

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—First ch Vienna, of which 6 from the Ladies Sewing Society	$21 14
Pby of Wyoming.—Moscow ch from Elijah Scott Esq	20 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Bethany Centre ch 4 50; Central ch Buffalo city 64, and additional 53 50, less exchange 19, making in all from Central ch 117 31	121 81

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Coshocton church	6 00
Pby of North River.—Smithfield ch 3; Fishkill 1st ch 5	8 00
Pby of Bedford.—Croton Falls ch 18 23; South Salem ch "Two Friends" 4; Jos Banks Dobb's Ferry N Y 2	24 23
Pby of Long Island.—Huntingdon ch from Mrs Elizabeth Wood to const Dr CHAS STURGERS an hon mem	50 00
Pby of New York.—Rutger's st ch N Y from J Levridge Esq 25; Nayack ch 11 62; Wallabout ch 4	40 62
Pby of New York 2d.—Peekskill church	45 00
Pby of Connecticut.—Thompsonville church	46 15

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of New Brunswick.—Squan Village ch	2 50
Pby of West Jersey.—Camden 1st ch 13 67; Bridgeton 2d church 60	73 67
Pby of Luzerne.—Wyoming ch 30; Wilkesbarre church 30	60 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Donegal.—Churchville church	25 00
Pby of Baltimore.—F street ch Washington D C	50 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Dickinson ch 38; Cumberland ch 63; Great Conewago ch to const Mr JOHN DICKSON Sen an hon mem 50	151 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Shaver's Creek ch	29 28
Pby of Northumberland.—Orangeville ch 1 55; Brier Creek ch 4	5 55

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Erie.—Irvine church	17 00

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Richland.—Perryville church	4 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Schuyler.—Henderson church	1 50

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Greenbrier.—Oak Grove church	2 65

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Knoxville.—Knoxville 1st church	20 50

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Bethel.—Ebenezer church from Miss Mary Hutchinson	10 00
	$782 29

MISCELLANEOUS.

Rev J J Janeway D D 100; "A Friend of the Board" Phila 50; Mrs Sarah Ray, Rochester, N Y 10; Rev E Scudder High 40 cts; Mr Chas Whitehead, Bath, Ga 5; Wm Nassau, Sen. Esq Philada 5; Sab school, Mineral Point, Wis 93 cts; Rev J S Heacock, Kingsboro' N Y 5; "One tenth," Mobile, Ala 5; Mrs Lance Clinton 2; Frederick Whitehead 50 cts; A Friend 1 50; Miss McNary, Brooklyn, N Y 2	187 33

LEGACY.

Legacy, in part, of the late Dr Richard Gegan of Louisiana, per Rev J B Stratton of Natchez, Mississippi	99 25
Total	$1122 18

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

* Note.—The $50 acknowledged in last Record as from "churches under care of Rev. J. J. Hamilton," should have been from the Curwinsville church, Huntingdon Presbytery.

CLOTHING

Received since last acknowledgment.

One Box from the Ladies' Sewing Society of the Presbyterian church of Carlisle, valued at	86 48

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of August, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.—Pittsburg 1st ch of which 40 from Juvenile Miss Soc	335 72
Pby of Blairsville.—Elder's Ridge ch 11 97; Currie's Run ch 10 98; Rural Valley ch 19 13	42 08
Pby of Clarion.—Leather Wood church	10 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St Clairsville.—Beach Spring ch in part to const Rev WM S DOOL an hon mem 28; Crab Apple ch 30	58 00
Pby of New Lisbon.—Middle Sandy ch for the benefit of coloured people	22 50

MISCELLANEOUS.

A few friends of Missions at Fayette Springs per Rev J Stoneroad 5; Jonas Amspoker 3; Mrs M A Cakeheart 5	13 00
Total	$481 30

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the months of July and August, 1851.

JULY.

Donation of Dr Wm Sutton Georgetown Ky	$10 00
Wm Stewart Clarksville Tenn Hon Mem per Rev Chas Sturdevant	50 00
Vincenes ch coll	13 00
Greenup Union co Ky	4 00
Knoxville Ill	36 00
Poplar Springs Crawf Pby	3 60
Sugar Creek ch Ill	8 00
Jacksonville Ill Sangamon Pby	30 00
Clearion Mullen	7 30
Albany Ill	10 00
Madison Ind (in part)	44 35
Hanover " "	59 55
Xenia "	10 35
Rev S C McCune, Fairfield Iowa	5 00
Owensboro' add per S M Wing Esq	5 00
Lavonia ch Ind	28 95
Orleans	20 00
Bloomington ch Ind	60 60
Bedford ch Ind	70 00
Corydon Ind	11 75
Hanover addl	17 00
Geo Benson	100 00
Paint Lick Ky per Robt A Johnson	20 00
Check returned by Rev W P Harrison per Rev W W Hill	25 00
Pisgah ch Ky per Rev R Valentine	10 00
Total,	$659 45

AUGUST.

Petersburgh ch Ill per Rev Geo McKinley	32 50
Itona ch Ohio per Rev W K Brice	2 75
Killida " " " "	75
Deer Creek ch Ill per Rev C D Martin	20 00
Bethsada ch Mo per Rev J F Fenton	3 40
Andrech ch Iowa per Rev J D Mason	2 00
Davenport " " "	14 00
L Carrey " " J Pillsbury	8 00
Princeton ch Ill (mon con) per Rev J Pillsbury	10 00
Mrs Parmelia Harris " "	3 00
Princeton ch " "	11 65
Germans in Iowa per Rev J Heider	2 00
Bethel ch Inda per Rev D V Smock	5 00
Coal Creek " " "	7 00
Indian Creek ch Inda per Rev S B Geith	50
Nashville ch Ill " W Gardner	10 85
White co " " "	4 75
Pine Ridge ch Ill per Rev H McDonald	35 00
Red Lick ch Miss " "	18 10
A Friend La " "	3 00
Muscatine ch Iowa per Rev J T Umsted	2 00
Muley ch Ky per Rev J D Paxton	5 00
Miss Harriet Greenup Ky per J B Hadden	2 00
Flemingburg ch Ky per Jas T Lapsley	25 00
Hebron ch Ill per Rev W W Hill	7 00
Salem ch Ohio per Rev Ben C Swan	15 00
Logansport Ohio per Rev M Galbreath	10 00
Hanover ch Ind per Rev David Walker	20 00
Amt returned by Rev Isaac Bard over paid	23 30
Louisville 1st ch Ky per S F Gamble	10 00
Rushville ch Ind per Rev Chas Sturdevant	51 30
Indianapolis " " "	166 25
Appropriated and paid by 1st Pby ch Sab school Indianapolis which is designed for sup of Dom Missions, but to encourage the special attention to the formation of Sab schools in destitute places	15 14
Evansville ch Ind per Rev Chas Sturdevant	8 00
Charleston ch Ind (in part) per Rev Chas Sturdevant	15 00
Owen Creek " " " "	10 05
Big Spring ch Ky " " "	22 20
Pleasant Grove " " " "	11 50
Lebanon " " " "	49 75
Springfield " " " "	49 25
Bardstown " " " "	65 00
Mulberry " " " J D Paxton	21 00
Donation of Miss M J Wallace of Walnut Hill ch Ky per Rev J W Wallace	30 00
Versailes ch bal Ind per Rev J W Wallace	1 00
Glasgow ch Ky per Rev H C Read	2 00
Shiloh " " C F Williams	7 10
Donation of Rev C F Williams per Rev C F Williams	5 00
Greenville ch Ky per Rev A S Housley	5 85
Donation of Rev A S Housley per Rev A S Housley	5 00
Union Ind per Rev H L McGuire	2 60
Donation of Rev H L McGuire per Rev H L McGuire	5 00
Donation of Rev Geo Van Eman to const himself hon mem Ba	50 00
Donation Little Rock Ark per Rev Joshua Green	5 95
Total	$917 49

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

PRESBYTERIAN EDUCATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Business Officers of the Board.

C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary.
Wm. Chester, D. D., Asso. Sec'y. and General Agent.
J. B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer.

Letters and Communications for the BOARD OF EDUCATION on the subject of Ministerial Education, or of Schools, Academies and Colleges, may be addressed to the Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Remittances of money may be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

All that the Board deem it important to furnish is their corporate name, viz. "The Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." Any person, disposed to leave a legacy to the Board of Education, is requested to insert the right corporate name. The State laws differ so much that no one Form will answer in all the States.

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

We publish in this number of the Record the Rules and Regulations of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the management of the work entrusted to their care. These rules have never before been brought so extensively to the view of the Church. Our purpose in publishing them in this form is two-fold; 1st, to enable the Church thoroughly to understand the principles of all the operations of the Board; and 2d, to make the rules easily and always accessible to Presbyteries, candidates, teachers, and others who may wish from time to time to consult them.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

The special attention of Presbyteries, Teachers, and Candidates, is called to these rules, which refer to the department of ministerial education, inasmuch as difficulties and delays, both in the reception and quarterly payments of students, as well as other inconveniences, sometimes occur through inattention to them.

I. ON THE RECEPTION OF CANDIDATES.

Art. 1. Every person looking forward to the ministry is required to present the testimonials of a Presbytery before he can be assisted by the Board.

Art. 2. If any young man wishes to avail himself of the aid of the Board, he should make known his desire to his pastor, or some member of the Presbytery to which he would naturally belong, who, if he approves of it, shall make application to the Presbytery for his examination.

Art. 3. The examination shall be on his personal and experimental piety, on his motives for seeking the holy office of the ministry, on his attachment to the standards of the Presbyterian Church, in relation to his general habits, his prudence, his studies, his talents, his gifts for public speaking, his disposition to do all in his power to maintain himself, and his willingness to observe the rules of the Board.

Art. 4. An Education Committee, appointed by the Presbytery, may examine and recommend applicants during the interval of the meetings of the Presbytery; and the appointment of such a Committee has been found by many Presbyteries highly expedient, not only to meet exigencies that may arise, but especially for the purpose of corresponding with, and watching over the education of students.

Art. 5. If the examination be sustained, a detailed report shall be made to the Board by the Stated Clerk, or the Chairman of the Education Committee of the Presbytery, of the name of the applicant, his age, residence, church membership, place of education, progress in his studies, need of aid, piety, promise, and whatever else may seem proper.

FORM OF THE REPORT OF A PRESBYTERY.

At a meeting of the Presbytery of held at on the day of 18 , the person whose name is given in the following report, having been examined in conformity with the plan submitted by the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church, is hereby recommended to the Board of Education.

———— ————, Stated Clerk.

Name.	Age.	Residence.	With what church connected.	Stage of education.	Place of study.	Lowest amount required.	To whom appropriations to be sent, and to what place.

[When the Report is made by the Education Committee, the above form may be altered to correspond.]

Art. 6. No person shall be received by the Board unless he has been a member in regular and good standing in some Presbyterian Church at least twelve months; and in addition to giving good evidence of his capacity for the acquisition of knowledge, he must have spent at least three months in the study of the Latin language.

Art. 7. Applicants will be received under the care of the Board at any of its regular monthly meetings; and, as a universal principle, the Board will refuse to receive no one who has been regularly recommended by a Presbytery, in conformity to these rules.

Art. 8. When a student, who has been pursuing, under the care of the Board, his studies preparatory to the ministry, shall be ready to enter the theological seminary, he must submit to an examination by his Presbytery on all the points required by the Form of Government. And if such examination be sustained, he shall thenceforth, and not till then, be considered officially a candidate for the ministry.

Previously to entering upon theological studies, all young men who have the ministry in view shall be regarded simply as students on probation, under the general watch and patronage of the Presbyteries.

[The Board would respectfully say, that the recommendation of a young man is so solemn an event to himself, and involves so deeply the character of the Church and the success of the cause of Education, that it demands the most serious and deliberate consideration; and if the application be of doubtful expediency, it should be postponed till a full and satisfactory trial can be made.]

II. ON SCHOLARSHIPS AND APPROPRIATIONS.

The Board act upon the principle, that the Church is bound to make provision for the education of such of her sons as are called of God to the work of the ministry, and are in circumstances to require her aid; and also, that those who receive her aid shall, at stated intervals, prove themselves entitled to it. The Board desire to rest this relation between the Church and her sons on the ground of mutual obligation and responsibility.

Art. 1. The appropriations of the Board are made under the form of scholarships, with the purpose of bearing witness, on behalf of the Church, to the importance of high literary attainments in all who have the ministry in view, and to the necessity of possessing these attainments as a condition of securing and retaining the scholarships.

The scholarships are also intended to express, on behalf of the candidates, the equivalent returned to the Church in the form of adequate literary and theological preparation for the sacred office.

Art. 2. No student shall receive the avails of a scholarship, until the testimonials of his Presbytery are received by the Board; and new testimonials will always be required at the commencement of the theological course.

Art. 3. Every person on a scholarship, shall forward, or cause to be forwarded, quarterly, a report from his teacher, showing his standing for piety, talents, diligence, scholarship, prudence, economy, health, and general influence, and no remittance shall be made to any until such report is received.

Art. 4. Appropriations shall be made quarterly, on the first Thursday of February, May, August, and November. When any one is recommended by a Presbytery at a period intervening between the quarter days, his first appropriation shall be a proportional part of the quarterly allowance.

Art. 5. The maximum of scholarships shall not exceed one hundred dollars to theological students and seventy-five dollars to all others.

Art. 6. No payment shall be made in advance.

Art. 7. Tuition and boarding shall always be first paid out of the appropriations, and the Board will, in no case, be responsible for debts of students.

Art. 8. As the scholarships of the Board necessarily fall short of the entire wants of the students, so the friends of each, and the student himself, will be expected to make all proper exertions in assisting to defray the expenses of his education.

III. GENERAL RULES AND DIRECTIONS.

Art. 1. Every student shall be considered as under the pastoral care of the Corresponding Secretary of the Board, and of the Associate Secretary and General Agent.

Art. 2. Every student is required to pursue a thorough course of study, preparatory to the study of theology; and when prepared, to pursue a three years' course of theological studies.

Art. 3. If at any time, there be discovered in any student, such defect in capacity, diligence, prudence, and especially in piety, as would render his introduction into the ministry a doubtful measure, it shall be considered the sacred duty of the Board to withdraw their appropriations. Students shall also cease to receive the assistance of the Board, when their health shall become so bad as to unfit them for study and for the work of the ministry; when they are manifestly improvident, and contract debts without reasonable prospects of payment; when they marry; when they receive the assistance of any other Education Board or Society; when they fail to make regular returns, or cease by a change of circumstances to need aid.

Art. 4. If any student fail to enter on, or to continue in the work of the ministry, unless he can make it appear that he is providentially prevented, or cease to adhere to the standards of the Presbyterian Church, or change his place of study, contrary to the directions of the Executive Committee, or continue to prosecute his studies at an institution not approved by them, or withdraw his connexion from the Church of which this Board is the organ, without furnishing a reason which shall be satisfactory to the Executive Committee, he shall refund with interest, all the money he may have received of this Board.

Art. 5. When any student shall find it necessary to relinquish study for a time, to teach or otherwise increase the means of support, he shall first obtain the consent of the Executive Committee; and if he shall not be absent from study more than three months, his appropriations will be continued; but if longer, they will be discontinued, or continued in part, according to circumstances.

Art. 6. The periodicals of the Board shall be sent, gratis, to all students who desire to receive them.

Art. 7. When the official relation between the student and the Board ceases, or is about to cease, he is expected to notify the Board in due time, stating the reason.

Art. 8. When a student has ceased, for a period longer than a year, to receive aid from the Board, he shall be required to present new testimonials from his Presbytery, or its Education Committee, before his name can be restored to the roll.

Art. 9. The reception of an appropriation by a student shall be considered as expressing a promise to comply with all the rules and requisitions of the Board.

Art. 10. As all intellectual acquisitions are of comparatively little value without the cultivation of piety, it is affectionately recommended to every candidate to pay special attention to the practical duties of religion; such as reading the Scriptures; secret prayer and meditation; attendance on religious meetings on the Sabbath and during the week; endeavours to promote the salvation of others; and the exhibition, at all times, of a pious and consistent example.

IV. ON AUXILIARIES.

Art. 1. Every Presbytery is considered an auxiliary to the Board, so far as that relation is implied by the transmission of an annual report of their Education operations to the Board, as the organ of the General Assembly. [This is according to a standing order of the Assembly, of long continuance, and is made with the view of embodying in the annual report to the Assembly, all that is done by the Church on the subject of Education.]

ART. 2. Those Presbyteries which co-operate directly with the Board by the adoption of these regulations and in the collection of funds for the general treasury, shall be entitled to claim aid for all the candidates regularly received under their care, however much the appropriations necessary may exceed the contributions of said Presbyteries.

ART. 3. If any Presbyteries or Synods allow their candidates a larger amount of aid than the maximum fixed by these by-laws, the Board will, if desired, co-operate cordially and to the utmost, in endeavouring to raise the sum needed within their bounds; but it shall not be lawful to appropriate funds for this purpose from the general treasury of the Board.

II. GENERAL CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. Under the following rules and regulations, the aid extended by the Board, shall, in all ordinary cases, be applied to assist in making up the deficiency in the salary of the teacher.

2. When the aid of the Board is desired for students in schools, academies, or colleges, not having the ministry definitely in view, it shall only be granted on HIGH testimonials. 1st, of previous religious training; 2d, of moral character; 3d, of intellectual capacity; 4th, of diligence and desire of knowledge. The rules of the Board relating to persons who have the ministry in view, shall apply to these cases, so far as the difference of circumstances will admit.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

I. ON THE ORGANIZATION OF THE SCHOOL.

1. Every school applying for aid to the Board of Education, must be under the care of the Session of a Presbyterian Church; and be subject to the general supervision of the Presbytery.

2. In addition to the usual branches of elementary education, the Bible must be used as a text-book for daily instruction in religion, and the Shorter Catechism must be taught at least twice a week.

3. The teacher must be a member in good and regular standing of the Presbyterian Church.

4. The school must be opened with prayer and reading of the Bible; and singing, as far as practicable, must be taught in the school, and united with the other devotional exercises.

II. ON APPLICATIONS FOR AID.

1. All applications must be approved by the Presbytery, or its Education Committee.

2. Such applications must state to the Board of Education what amount has been raised, or is expected to be raised for the purposes of the school; and what amount is needed from the Board. Also the probable number of scholars in the school.

3. The application must be renewed through the Presbytery annually, if aid is needed.

III. APPROPRIATIONS.

1. The maximum of appropriations from the Board, shall not, in ordinary cases, exceed $75 per annum, and it is expected that in many cases a less amount will be sufficient.

2. An annual deduction will be made on the amount of the appropriation according to the prosperity of the school.

3. Appropriations shall be paid semi-annually on the reception of a report from the session of the church, giving the statistics and stating the financial and general condition of the school.

ACADEMIES.

The above rules shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to academies under the care of Presbyteries. The amount of appropriations to academies shall be determined by the Executive Committee, according to the circumstances of each case.

COLLEGES.

1. Every college, applying for aid to the Board of Education, must have an ecclesiastical connexion with the Presbyterian Church; and the Bible and the standards of the Presbyterian Church must be used as books for instruction in the truths and duties of religion.

2. Appropriations shall be paid semi-annually on the reception of a report from the Trustees, giving the statistics and stating the financial and general condition of the college. The amount of appropriations shall be determined by the Executive Committee, according to the circumstances of each case.

3. The appropriations of the Board shall be applied to the payment of the salaries of Professors, or to the enlargement of the library or apparatus, as may be determined by the Executive Committee.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION AT ST. LOUIS.

The anniversary-meeting of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church was held during the session of the General Assembly at St. Louis, on the evening of May 20th. STACY G. POTTS, Esq., of Trenton, N. J., was called to the chair, and the Rev. Dr. MAGIE, of Elizabethtown, opened the meeting with prayer.

Some explanatory statements of the operations of the Board were made by the Corresponding Secretary.

The Rev. GEORGE HALE, of Pennington, N. J., then addressed the meeting, substantially as follows:

The idea which many have of education is radically wrong. The only safe course is to have a correct theory, and it is in consequence of a failure here that so many defective practices prevail. That kind of education is alone the true kind, which trains the whole man; which educates him for the whole period of his being. The physical, the intellectual, and the moral powers all need culture. From the first buddings of intelligence, these constituent parts of education should be considered. Man does not simply sustain a relation to this earth, but a higher relation to spirits invisible, and above all to the Spirit of God. This is not the only life. How brief an interval is the present life, when compared to eternity! Any scheme which leaves out of view man's moral nature, is defective in the most important point. The teacher who begins with the most important, will pay the best attention to the other two.

The Church must keep in view, and maintain, the religious aims of education. In the State a majority govern; and what are the opinions of legislators, or of their constituents, about the immortal part of our nature? Not only are a majority destitute of piety, but they are of every shade of denominational and speculative opinion. They cannot regulate the State schools so as to secure the highest objects of education. They could not if they would, and they would not if they could.

Shall education then be left to itself? To the random efforts of individual enterprise? It is true that schools can be found here and there, bearing an excellent character. But the very fact that private teachers act separately and apart, each having individual interests to promote, hinders their influence. We know the importance of organization. We need organized, systematized action, and vigour in execution. And what organization is better adapted to carry on the great purposes of education than the Church, established by the infinite and eternal mind, and bound together by the strongest bonds that can unite rational creatures? We are too apt to consult philosophers and statesmen. Christ said to his own commissioned servant, "Feed my lambs;" and education is involved in the last command, "Go, teach all nations." The Church is certainly responsible for the training of her children, and should endeavour to secure for all an education of the true kind.

The Board of Education begins with primary schools, goes on to academies, and then colleges and theological seminaries. Whilst its main operations are with candidates for the ministry, it also assists literary institutions. It trains our pious and qualified youth to preach the gospel in our own land and among the heathen, and also helps incidentally to educate for all departments of life.

There are difficulties. But what great enterprise has them not? When our aim is right, no matter what difficulties are in the way. Our schools and academies have far surpassed the most sanguine expectations. Difficulties we have had; and difficulties we shall have. The advancement of Christ's cause, has always been a difficult work. But the Lord gives strength to his people, and crowns their faithful labours with his blessing. If the Assembly's scheme of education shall prove comparatively a failure for years, what is that to us, if we are following Christ? If God calls us to duty, let us do it; and we may be sure that our labour shall not be in vain.

The Rev. Dr. PLUMER of Baltimore, then addressed the meeting, in a speech, which, as nearly as the Reporter could write down, was as follows:

Dr. PLUMER said that his first remark was this: If you strike out from the history of civilization the roll of people who have risen from honest poverty, you leave the world with a history not worth reading. Peter the Great, was first Peter an humble labourer in a ship yard, and to this day may be seen the boat built by Peter the Great. Vanderkemp came to Europe and learned to make bricks with his own hand. If we turn to the Church, either in ancient or modern times, we find that her most distinguished and useful servants have arisen from comparative obscurity. Samuel, the prophet and judge of Israel, was the offspring of humble parents. Samuel Davies, the author of the best popular sermons for practical purposes, was a poor boy. What could we do without John Bunyan, the tinker? His works will last to the end of the world. I say, so it has been in all ages and countries. This is God's plan now. Not many noble, not many wise are called, although a few are. Christ selected Matthew, one rich disciple, but eleven poor ones, to preach salvation throughout the earth.

Let me say that none are likely to have so great an influence as pious mothers. Hannah obtained her blessing by prayer. So did the mother of Davies, whose son was a communicant at the age of thirteen years. What a chasm would occur in the ranks of Zion, if we were to lose all the ministers in our Church who are there through the influence of pious mothers! As we were coming to the Assembly in a steamboat, having eighty or one hundred ministers on board, it was a topic of conversation what a public calamity it would be, if all these were lost. But the Church might spare seven vessel loads of such men rather than those who have been brought into the Church by pious mothers. To pious mothers I say, Give your sons. Dedicate them to God, and then train them for his glory. This is no idle resolution. Monica, the mother of Augustine, said that her spiritual anguish for her son exceeded all the anguish she ever had for him. God expects us to be in earnest.

Some say there are failures. This is true. Some candidates die. Such are mysterious failures. When a young minister lately died, his father said, "If God had taken me, it would have been according to my wishes." I have no explanation, said Dr. Plumer, of such providences. "What thou knowest not now, thou shalt know hereafter." There are spheres of usefulness in the temple above far exceeding anything here. God has use of choice spirits in heaven. And if we can train up men, whose course is cut short to graduate in glory, let us rejoice.

But there is another class of failures. "You get only five eminent men out of fifty." This complaint is a quarrel with Providence. Is it not so everywhere else as well as in the Church? There has been one Jackson, one Scott, one Taylor, and but one. Shall we give up our Military Academy, because all the graduates are not eminent in military service? God has designed the great mass of men to be mediocre common men. The same thing is true also in animals. There are only a few superior race-horses, &c. But the work of raising men is as much above that of raising brutes as the work of angels is above that of scavengers in a city.

Then we must remember that men, not eminent, have often so much good sense and patience that the great mass of hard work is done by them. General Taylor said that the glory of his last great battle was due to every man that was there; for every man did something, and every man did his best.

Let us not be disturbed by occasional failures, even though they are real ones, when we have so much to do. I have ascertained that if our Church had in six months an addition of seven hundred ministers, we could locate them in situations averaging in importance any other seven hundred. And if we had still seven hundred more, we could locate them in situations scarcely less important. We need more zeal, more of the Spirit of Christ. If we fail in matters relating to this Board of Education, the glory will have departed from our Church, and ignominy will be our portion in time to come. No error is more fatal than to diminish the amount of preparation necessary for the ministry. It is our dispensation to raise up a race of pious, zealous, humble, hard-working men, who are not afraid to swim a river to preach the gospel to the dying.

The Chairman of the meeting, STACY G. POTTS, Esq., made some remarks in vindication of the objects of the Board of Education, to the following effect:

Mr. POTTS said that the main object of the Board of Education was the education of poor and pious young men for the gospel ministry. Many of us have come from the East. We have found at every step, new impressions of the importance of preaching the gospel of Christ, throughout the length and breadth of the land. There needs to be diffused among the people the spirit of intelligent piety. In a civil and political point of view, how important! But we are apt to forget the influences beyond the lifetime of the individual. If important here in this world, how transcendently important, in view of the everlasting spiritual destiny which awaits all! Amid the wreck of our moral nature, God has preserved the seeds of warm affection. We struggle and toil from year to year, rather for our children than for ourselves; and yet how often do we fail in keeping in view their eternal interests!

The Board of Education aims at increasing the number of gospel ministers. The preaching of the word of God is the most efficient means of enlightening and awaking the community. Trace the efforts of a single minister. If a man of talents, he attracts hundreds and thousands during his lifetime, and exerts great influence in society. If inferior in talents, his usefulness may be really as great; he may labour in some obscure portion of the vineyard and bring many souls to Christ. No one can count the influence of a godly, zealous minister. Persons are converted under his ministry, who otherwise might never have entered heaven. And then others are brought in through their influence, which is thus perpetuated in increasing power from age to age. Just as a seed of grain produces thousands of other seeds, and thus a mighty harvest. In this way the greatest results are gathered up by means apparently the most simple.

The wants of our Church cannot be met, except by great efforts in training up a well-qualified ministry. We must aid the indigent, who may be called by God's Spirit to this work. The ministry is not a vocation which has many motives to bring men into it. We must help those who seek an education to qualify themselves for its duties.

When we consider the immense increase of our country, and its population, we fear that the Church is not advancing as rapidly as the world. We should all awake to the greatness of the work to be done. The time is coming, when this whole western world shall become vocal with the praises of God. And as a preparation for the reign of Christ, we must seek to multiply the number of intelligent and devoted ministers.

OUT AND OUT.

In Dr. J. W. Alexander's Report on Parochial Schools to the Assembly of 1846, he alludes to the importance of having schools of our own, "thorough-paced and above board." The following is such a school.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL FOR BOYS,

Under the care of the Session of the 1st Presbyterian Church, Princeton, N. J.

The next Session of this School will be commenced on Monday the 22d of September, in the Academy in Washington Street.

TERMS will be as follows:

For those in the 1st or Reading Department, $1.50 per quarter of 11 weeks.
In the 2d Department, including Writing, Arithmetic and Geography, $2.50 for do.
In the 3d Department, including the branches of English study beyond those already specified, $3.50.
In the 4th Department, including Classical Studies, $6.00.

Scholars entering the school will be considered as entering for the quarter, and be charged accordingly; and no deduction will be made for absence, unless by a special resolution of the Session. Tuition payable at the middle of each quarter.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE, EAST TENNESSEE.

The Annual Commencement of this venerable College, which in past time has done so much for the advancement of sound Christian education, was celebrated on the 17th ult. The exercises were held in Salem Church, which was densely crowded with an intelligent audience, while a very large number of persons were unable to gain admittance.

After solemn invocation by the Rev. William D. Jones, original orations were delivered by five students, previously appointed to that duty, which were listened to with great attention. The universal judgment was, that the young gentlemen had acquitted themselves well.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts was then conferred on Andrew H. Barkley and Windell D. Snapp, the only members of the Senior Class. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred in course on thirteen alumni of suitable literary standing. The honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred on Charles S. Carter, Esq. of Baltimore, Maryland; the Rev. James B. McBride of Tennessee, a regular A. M. of Jefferson College was honorarily admitted ad eundem; and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on the Rev. William D. Jones, A. M., President of the Rogersville Female College, Tennessee.

After the conferring of the degrees, the annual address before the Literary Societies was delivered by William Logan Baird, Esq., of Baltimore, Md., upon the "Position and Destiny of the Anglo-Saxon Race;" when the services of the day were closed with the benediction by the President.

The Baccalaureate Sermon was preached on the Sabbath previous to the commencement, upon the "Perpetuity of Religious Influence," from Romans xiv. 7, "None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."

The first year of the existence of the College, under the Faculty as at present organized, has thus ended; and we feel safe in saying its success has been equal to the highest expectations of every judicious friend. The prospects of the College for the future are encouraging. The next collegiate year will open on the 1st day of October, when a continued increase of students is expected. B.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST 1851.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Hudson.
Hopewell church	11 72
Presbytery of Long Island.
Hempstead church	17 00
Presbytery of New York.
Brooklyn 2d church	134 00
Presbytery of Raritan.
Solebury church	8 00
Presbytery of Susquehanna.
Wyalusing church	20 00
Presbytery of Philadelphia.
10th church, Mrs. M. L. Jones	10 00
Presbytery of Baltimore.
Monokin church	18 00
Presbytery of Northumberland.
Lewisburg church	26 50
Presbytery of New Lisbon.
Salem church, Jas. McCombs, (on a scholarship)	12 50
Presbytery of Columbus.
Congo church	22 75
Presbytery of Richland.
Perrysville church	4 00
Presbytery of Marion.
Miscellaneous	5 00
Presbytery of Miami.
Dick's Creek church	2 40
Presbytery of Cincinnati.
7th ch, Cincinnati, $80; a member of 1st ch, do. $10; 5th ch do. $24; 1st ch Walnut Hills, $18 48, less $1 13 exchange	131 35
Presbytery of Oxford.
Oxford ch, $31 50; Venice ch, $14 45; Somerville ch, $7 60	53 55
Presbytery of Chilicothe.
East Union ch, $4 35; Hillsborough ch, $3 15	7 50
Presbytery of West Hanover.
Sundries, through Farmers Bank, Farmville	91 60
LEGACIES.
Legacy of A McLanahan, White Deer Township, Pa., (additional)	37 56
MISCELLANEOUS.
Refunded by B. N. S., 18 75; W. H. M., 18 75, in all $37 50; J. Banks, Dobb's Ferry, New York, $1	38 50
Total	$651 93

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &C.

German Valley ch, N. J.,	21 00
A Friend,	18 75
Total	$39 75

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH.

Presbytery of Blairsville.
Poke Run ch 20; Blairsville ch Ladies Ed Soc 61 66	$81 66
Presbytery of Ohio.
Lebanon church	11 00
Presbytery of Allegheny.
Tarentum ch 15 37; Glade Run ch young people 2	17 37
Presbytery of Washington.
Mt Prospect church	14 85
	$124 88

LEECH, McALPINE & CO., Treasurers.

Total Receipts for August $816 56

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,
No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

DEATH OF THE REV. G. W. SIMPSON AND HIS WIFE.

A few days after our notice of the intelligence of last month was prepared, we received the painful news of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, of the Corisco Mission, Africa. As the particulars of this afflicting providence have been generally published, we need only state here, that the vessel in which they were making a short voyage for health and missionary labour at the neighbouring places, was suddenly struck by a tornado near the island of Fernando Po, and all on board perished except a Krooman, who was afterwards picked up at sea. We are not likely to receive any further accounts of this sad event. It is one which the churches should deeply consider. We would direct the attention of our readers to an obituary notice of Mr. Simpson in another column. A similar notice of Mrs. Simpson, from the pen of her former pastor, has not yet reached us.

The mission with which our departed friends were connected, is one of great promise. The Rev. J. L. Mackey is now left alone. Who will go forth to join him in the Lord's work? Writing of this sad dispensation, and of the mission thus bereaved, the Rev. J. Leighton Wilson says: "I have recently, with him [Mr. Mackey,] gone over the field of present labours, and I can truly say, that I know no field of missionary labour that seems to promise better results than that occupied by this dear brother. It is evident that the asperity of heathen character is already softened down; preaching is well attended, wherever he preaches; the people generally give unequivocal evidence of sincere attachment to their missionary, and at least one young man of promise seems to be inquiring what he must do to be saved. I hope, therefore, that your Committee will think of nothing else than sustaining this mission, and of reenforcing it as speedily as possible.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Mission House, September 13, 1851.

Africa: Corisco Mission.—The letters of the Rev. J. L. Mackey are dated to the 18th of June. They relate chiefly to the sad event of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson's death, noticed above. The prospects of the mission, in other respects, continued to be full of encouragement.

Siam Mission.—Letters have been received of dates to the 19th of May. The old king of Siam is dead. His removal may be an answer to the prayers of the churches, for he was a great hinderance to their efforts for the conversion of the Siamese. The new king is a man of more liberal views, inclined to modify but not to give up Buddhism. His accession leads our brethren to hope for a favourable change in their circumstances. This, however, is not known with any certainty. As soon as the ceremonies connected with his coronation were over, the missionaries intended to petition for leave to purchase suitable premises for their use. We trust this mission will continue to be the subject of special prayer.

China Missions.—Our last letters are dated at Ningpo, May 31; Shanghai, June 6; and Canton, June 21. Mr. W. Martin says: "Yesterday I spent an hour or two in conversation with three persons from the country, one of whom professes to be a believer, and the others through his persuasion are inquirers. The first is an eccentric man. His mind seems a little disordered, but is very vigorous, and even brilliant. He is also a sincere lover of the truth. Of this I am satisfied, as he has often visited me." The new church at Ningpo was opened for Divine worship on the 4th of May. It is a building of marked character and prominence in the city, and its appearance reflects much credit on its architect and builder. It is an object of great attention among strangers visiting the city. The audiences at first were rather noisy, but at the latest dates were becoming more orderly. A room had been secured for an hospital on a limited scale at Chinhai, a small city on the coast, a few miles from Ningpo. It was proposed to connect a school with this, and to make it a place for preaching. This movement, which was under Dr. McCartee's direction, was regarded with much interest. The health of the missionaries in the different missions was generally good.

India Missions.—We have received letters from Allahabad to June 26; Agra, July 16; Amballa, to June 20; Lodiana, July 12; Lahor, to June 23. We regret to learn that there has been this year again a good deal of sickness in the families of the upper mission. Mr. Woodside and Mrs. Janvier were dangerously ill, but at the latest dates were recovering. The missionary work at all the stations of the different missions was steadily carried on; but we note only, as of special interest, the restoration to the church of Simeon, the former catechist, whose fall was mentioned in the last report. His penitence and humility seemed to be very sincere.

Omaha and Otoe Mission.—A letter of the Rev. E. McKinney, of July 29, mentions that the smallpox had appeared in the mission family as well as among the Indians. On the mission premises there were sixteen cases in all, eight of them quite severe; but they were all nearly well. Much fatigue and anxiety had been endured, but the missionaries were grateful to God for all his kindness to them in their trying circumstances.

IOWA AND SAC MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. WILLIAM HAMILTON.

[Continued from page 105.]

Facts and Conversations.

Jan. 20, 1851.—At Whitecloud's, I found a number of Indians eating in one room; the chief himself was in the other. He said to me, "There were many here, but they have all gone away." Knowing what he meant, I replied, "If you are not willing to hear, I will go home;" and making a few remarks to those who were there, I started, but had not gone far before one called to me, saying, "We are going over yonder to a feast, then we will go to meeting at the mission this evening;" but they did not come.

Friday 21.—At the lodge I first visited to-day, there were but two persons. The man said, when I spoke to him, "I like well enough to worship God, but there is no one here but myself." I replied to his remark, and went in. "Do you know anything about God?" I said to him. "I know that there is a God, but I do not know how to worship him." After some further conversation I asked him of his father. "He died," said he, "when we lived on the other side of the Missouri river. I bear his name." "How did you get it?" "I got it when I was on a war-party against the Pawnees." "Is it right to kill?" "Yes, it is just like play." "What if you had been killed, would it have been like play?" "Had they killed me I would have gone to heaven; if I had killed one before I was killed, it would all have been well enough." "I come in and sit down in your lodge, would it be right to shoot me, would my children think it play?" "No, you are peaceable, but should you fight me and I then kill you, it would be right." "The Pawnees were not fighting, they were after provisions." "Yes, but they steal our horses." "Those were not the ones that stole horses, they were women and children that were killed." "Still they were Pawnees." "Should some Ioways come at night, as they often do, and steal some of our stock, and I see you the next morning and scold or kill you for it, would that be right?" "No, I never steal." "But I would say the Ioways did it, and you are an Ioway." "You ought to punish the one who did the wrong." "Just so with those Pawnees, they did you no wrong, and God commands you not to kill." "But if I had killed one, I would have been looked upon as a man, now they call me a woman." "Did you not kill any?" "No, there were some with a bundle of arrows, trying to shoot me; but I was on a horse, and rode off, and tried to shoot them, but my gun flashed; the powder was wet." "God was merciful to you and prevented you from killing any." "No, he was not. Had God pitied me, he would have let me kill one, and then I would have been looked upon as a man; but he was not kind to me. They now call me a woman." "Should God make you holy and take you to heaven, and send those murderers to hell, would they, while tormented, and suffering, call you a woman if they saw you happy?" "I suppose not." "Would it be right for you to break my watch to pieces, after I had spent time in fixing it, when you could not repair it again?" "No." "Then as you cannot make people alive again, you ought not to kill them. God has made them, and commands you not to kill. It is not like play." "When they jump about and shoot at each other, it is like play. Sometimes they get wounded." "Do you think when they kill each other they go to heaven?" "Yes." "Should you kill some Pawnees, and others kill you, would you both go to the same heaven?" "Yes, I suppose so." "And would you fight there, or live in peace?" "I think they would live in peace there." "Then would it not be better to live in peace here?" "It is not so on earth." "But it ought to be so. Will you go to war again?" "No one is now going to war. They may fight some tribes when they go on the hunt next summer, as they did last. The chief says they are going to the Pawnees on a friendly visit to get horses."

After the above conversation, I endeavoured to point out to him the way of salvation, and after praying with them, I went to another tent, where I found some whom I had visited before, though in a different place. "Have you thought about what I told you?" I said to one of them. "No, I cannot do it right, therefore I do not think about it." "Have you?" I asked another. "Yes, I think about it all the time. I hear what you say, and pray to God." "What do you pray for?" "What you teach me." Their prayers are doubtless often a simple wish for what they want for the body, yet they were attentive while I spoke to them.

At the next tent I found quite a number, and among them a sick man. I said to them, "Would you like to worship God?" "We like it, but they drove us away when we were at the mission a while ago." "I have come to teach you here." "It is very hard to get into the [mission] house [to beg."] "I got in [this] quite easy. Would you like to hear?" addressing the sick man. "Yes." Some were attentive, and some were not. The two girls were making moccasins. The old woman was cooking some wild beans or peas that they dug out of the ground, or from old logs, where they are often deposited in considerable quantities by the mice. These peas seem to grow under ground, and are collected by the mice first, in smaller parcels, after which the Indians come and gather them for their own use. Wild potatoes and artichokes are also quite plenty, and are dug for food. A rude drum was in one part of the tent, used, doubtless in doctoring the sick man. Two old men came in while I was talking.

After I left, I met Horsehoof, the principal doctor. This man returned with me for some medicine. On our way together, I asked him why he did not forsake his ways and serve God. "Why," he replied. "I listen to you, I get your medicine, I doctor a great many persons, and they live. I am not a prophet or holy man. It is the medicine you give me that saves them. How is it that I do not worship God, when I hear you." "I was speaking about the soul, not the medicine; that is good for the body, but you must be cleansed from your sins, or you can never get to heaven." Thus I talked to him until we reached home, but he seemed to feel little, though he gave his assent to the truths.

Tuesday 28.—To-day I visited No-heart's. He looked stupid. I asked the privilege of inviting some from another house near at hand. His wife said, "Do so." "It is another house," he added, meaning he did not wish it. I then said, that as they were eating, I would go to the other house first, and call again. "Do so," they said. Those within listened with attention. After the exercises were over, I said: "Do you know who Jesus is?" "Yes," said one, "He is God." "Is there any other Saviour?" "No." "Why then do you not love him?" "We do love Him." "If you loved him, you would obey him, you would be Christians. Remember what I have said, nor let the evil spirit steal it from your hearts."

Returning to No-heart's, I spoke to a few persons, and went thence to White Crane's, the blind man. When I went in he said, "I have not seen you for a good while, I am sorry. (He sometimes seems to forget that he is blind, and talks about seeing.) I said, "I have been teaching at other places." "I am warm, but very hungry, I will starve to death." "Do you wish to die?" "Yes, because I am hungry." "Should you die, where would you go?" "To the Spirit village." "And would you never hunger there?" "They would perhaps feed me." "Who would feed you?" "My grandfather, or my relations." "Can spirits eat?" "I suppose not." "Spirits do not eat. I fear you do not love God; you do not seem to understand or remember what I tell you." "Yes, I think of your words all the time, I ponder them in my heart." "Pray to the Holy Spirit to help you to understand."

Friday 31*st*.—To-day as I went in to White Crane's lodge, he said, "Is that you?" "Yes." And he held out his hands saying, "I am glad to touch you, but I cannot see you." He spoke of his situation, said he had eaten up what had been sent him, adding, "I like to listen to God's words when I am full." "I fear you love your victuals more than you love God, you talk about them more than you do about God." "It is good to eat, but I think of what you say all the time." "Do you not like to hear me when you are hungry?" "Yes, I like to hear God's words when I am hungry too." I handed him some victuals that I had brought with me, for which he thanked me over and over again, then added, "Lately you have not talked to me as long as you used to do. You go away quick." "Most of the Ioways tell me to 'speak short.' They do not like me to talk too long." "I like to hear a great deal. I cannot recollect all." "Did you hear that Hoé-po-ha-ing-a died last night?" "No, I did not hear—is he dead? He is my relation." "Yes, he is dead, I met his son as I came here. What do you think of him? where do you suppose he is gone?" "I think he is gone to heaven, he was a great man." "He was a great drunkard; he did not like to hear me talk about God. Before he went on the hunt, I wanted to talk to them in his tent, but he would not let me. I think he told me he hated God. I have not seen him since his return. [I was at his tent but he was absent.] Unless God changed his heart, he could not be taken to heaven. Do you know that we are not taken to heaven for our good works." "Yes, I know it." God will do as he pleases." After singing and prayer I talked to him, yet a good while. He said, "I understand it all."

I went thence to another tent. Here were three women who listened, but not with very close attention. One old woman who thinks herself remarkably good, says she prays; but I have my doubts. I went then to another. The man within not long since committed murder, and had his face still black.*

The man he killed, had before killed his own brother. Thinking he did not wish to be disturbed, as he did not look up, I went into one near it. Most were gone to a feast. One man was in. He was tying up his arm. He had pierced it on account of the death of Hoé-po-ha-ing-a. I said to him "Why did you pierce yourself?" "Because I was sorry, I cried." "Did that make you glad?" "Yes, I am glad now because I cried—it is our custom." "I know it, but God tells his people not to cut themselves for the dead like the heathen."

A woman had also pierced herself in both arms. The way they do it, is to take hold of the loose skin, and raising it up, thrust a knife or an arrow through it. The man went to a feast, but I spoke to the woman. They had lately returned from the buffalo hunt. One woman said there were many Kickapoos and others going to the buffaloes; that their corn was out, and their children starving to death. She showed me some wampum that they had given her for provision. She said many had died. I next visited Tapanupa's, whose tent was close to the one where they were feasting. Here were a good many collected. One of them was impudent, saying, "When I go to your house you turn me out, and shut the door." I said, "Why do you tell a falsehood? Who is it gives you medicine when sick? You come very humbly and ask me for medicine. I give it to you, and as soon as I come in here, you talk very largely and say that I shut the door on you. How badly you behave!" The others laughed at him, when he said, "I told you to sit down." "No, it was not you, but Tapanupa that told me to sit down." "I was drunk last night, and they stabbed me, do you see?" showing his arm. "You are talking like you did just now, you pierced yourself for the dead. Is it not so?" He said it was, and finding he could not gain much by his jokes, he ceased, and became pleasant as the rest. Tapanupa said, "I am glad to see you; I am glad to have you come." As the feast was not ready they were willing to listen to me, and were orderly, and more than usually attentive, especially the men. Just as I finished, one came to invite them to the feast. A number of those in this tent had pierced themselves, so honourable does it seem to be among them.

* Since the above was written, he has killed another man, in a drunken spree, and was himself wounded, with both a knife and a bullet: his wife also was shot in the knee, but both yet survive.

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. C. W. FORMAN.

Missionary work at Lahor.

The journals of our missionary friends in the different fields of labour show how much they need the sympathies and prayers of the churches. Their daily work is often without present encouragement, yet it is not labour in vain.

March 4th, 1851.—Coming through the city to-day I met a crowd of men and boys preceded by a number of naked faqirs and an old Hindu, dressed in English costume, having on an old coat, worn out and torn, and an old faded hat, and carrying a huge club upon his shoulder. In their midst was borne a kind of banner, covered with gold-leaf and tinsel. They were evidently in a great glee. I asked them what it meant; they laughed and said, "the Holí is coming." This is religion. I went on a little farther and saw a singular-looking idol sitting in the door of a shop. It was the image of a man with a long tail, supporting a man on each arm, and standing on the body of a vanquished enemy. The shop keeper refused to sell it, on the ground that he kept it for himself, but at last parted with it for eight pice (five cents.)

Preached at the Dihlí Gate to a large crowd of bitter Musulmáns. I began by asking a man the first questions in a little catechism. When I asked him what God made him for, he said "for Mohammed." One of the chief subjects of discussion was, Did God make all things in earth and heaven for the glory of Mohammed, or for his own glory?

16*th*.—In conversation with a Musulmán this afternoon, I said, "In the Koran it is written that Mohammed wrought no miracles; but in the Traditions (which the Musalmáns regard as of equal authority with the Koran,) it is said he wrought a great many. Now if you say Mohammed did not work miracles, you are an infidel, for you contradict the Traditions; and if you say he did, you are still an infidel, for you contradict the Koran. Now tell me, did he work miracles or did he not? Take care what you say." He did not answer. I asked him why he did not speak. He then said, "Go and ask our Moulwies." I told him we wished for nothing more than opportunities of conversing with their Moulwies, but now I wished to talk with him. Again I demanded an answer. "I wont answer you," he said; "if I say Mohammed did work miracles, I run into infidelity, and if I say he did not, I still run into infidelity." A crowd had collected around. The Musulmáns were silent, the Hindús greatly delighted.

17*th*.—Stopped to-day under the shade of a Pepal tree, near one of the city gates, where several "hillmen" were sitting with a flock of goats, which they had brought in from the mountains. I commenced speaking of our miserable state as sinners, and asked them how we could be delivered from it. They soon admitted that they had no remedy to offer, which was worth accepting. I then set forth Christ crucified before them. Some seemed pleased, others indifferent. One Musulmán, who had been very troublesome on a former occasion, looked as though he wanted to oppose, but did not know what he could well attack; or what he had to offer instead of what I was proposing.

18*th*.—Some Musulmans insisted that repeating the Kalamá ("there is no God but Allá and Mohammed was his prophet,") would cleanse their hearts. I attempted to show to them that there must always be an adaptation of means to the end to be accomplished, but did not succeed in convincing them.

19*th*.—Again a number of Musulmáns contended that external rites would remove sin. I answered them by showing that sin pertained to the soul and not to the body, and that where there was no rational soul there could be no sin. Now said I, if I should kill you with a sword, the sin would be mine, and not the sword's. "Yes," one of them replied, "but we say our hands sin, don't we?" "But," said I, "if I should cut your hand off and strike another with it, your hand would not sin." He assented. "Then," I said, "you still see that sin does not belong to the body, but to the soul. And consequently external rites can avail nothing, and that what we stand in need of, is a thorough renovation of soul, which God only can perform."

Sunday 21*st*.—To-day a Kází (Musulmán judge) called to see me on business. I told him we did not like to attend to business on Sunday, and explained to him the nature of the Christian Sabbath. This led to a conversation with reference to the claims of the Koran and Gospel, in which I remarked "If the Government at Lahor should send you to Peshawer to fill any office there, they would give you certain credentials, and if they should send another to supercede you, similar credentials would be given him. Now, Mohammed came to overturn the religion of the Bible, confirmed by miracles and prophecies, and to set up another religion in its place. I want to know where are his credentials from God. "O!" said he, "he wrought thousands of miracles." "Where are they recorded?" I asked. "In the Traditions." "Yes," but he himself expressly and repeatedly disclaimed all power of working miracles." He asked for the chapter and verse. I read the passages to him out of the Koran and gave him references to them, that he might examine them at home. I have several times suggested this same difficulty to another young man. But he could give me no answer. At last he asked me to tell him where the passages were to be found, that he might get an answer from a Moulwie. I referred him to five or six passages. Again and again I asked him what answer the Moulwie had given. But he always replied, "None yet." At last I said, "Why don't you bring me an answer? tell the Moulwie I am beginning to believe he has none to give." He said, "I have asked him often what I must tell you, but he just says, 'I am thinking about it.'" Of course I could not object to his thinking as much as he pleased.

April 3*d*.—A very large crowd collected around me this afternoon, while I was reading and explaining what Christ said (Matt. 3d chap.) about the abrogation of the Law. A respectable-looking man said, "O! that is abrogated." I said, "A law can be abrogated, but not a truth. Now when Christ said not one jot or one tittle of the Law should ever pass away, he said what was true, or false." He replied, "He said what was true for you, but not for us." "How can that be," I said, "whatever is true is true for all;" and pointing to a lad sitting upon a wall, I said, "Now if I say that boy is sitting there, and you reply, that is true for you and not for me, you utter the greatest nonsense. And so if what Christ said was true, it is true for all, and never can become false." This evening the people were unusually polite. At one time a noisy man disturbed me very much, and I appealed to the crowd to decide whether he was acting properly or not. They expressed their opinion so strongly and unanimously against him that he was compelled to be silent. At another time when there was some noise, one man called out to the people to be silent, for every word the sáhib (gentleman) was saying was worth a lack of rupees ($50,000)—a fair specimen of eastern hyperbole.

7*th*.—Attempted to prove to a crowd of Musulmáns that the Koran could not be the word of God, for while it acknowledged the gospel to be the word of God, it denied many of its statements. One said, "We will let go the Gospel and cling to the Koran." "But," I said, "you cannot. In the Koran you are commanded to believe the Gospel; if you disbelieve the Gospel, you must disbelieve the Koran also. Now if the Gospel be true, the Koran is false, and if the Gospel be false, the Koran is also false." He attempted no reply, but contented himself with shouting, "We will give up the Gospel, we will give up the Gospel," reminding one of the cry "Crucify him, crucify him." Yes, any thing rather than yield to the power of the truth. Few of them seem to know that Mohammed pretended that the Bible had been corrupted, and those who do seem to appreciate the argument drawn from the fact that all the great doctrines about which we differ, are found in the Old Testament also, which is the religious book of the enemies of the Christian [Jews and Mohammedans].

8th.—While at school this morning a soldier came to ask me to visit a comrade who was sick in the hospital. When I entered the hospital I had forgotten the name of the sick man, so I walked about speaking to one here and another there. At length I went up to a young Irishman. His heart seemed very soft, but his greatest distress seemed to be that he had no prayer-book. "No matter about that," I said, "pray from your heart; the thief who was crucified with Christ had no prayer-book either. He simply begged Christ to remember him. So do you throw yourself on Christ, lay hold on Him and never let him go. This is your only hope. Christ died for sinners, and all they have to do is to accept of his sacrifice in their stead. Now just pray thus, "O God! have mercy upon me a sinner for Jesus Christ's sake." He was much affected, his eyes filled with tears, when he said, "I am a great sinner, I often cry when I think how great a sinner I am." I pointed him again to the Lamb of God, and went on in search of the man I came to see.

In the evening as I went to the bazár to preach, I fell in with a Musulmán, who had some small blue stones, which he said had talismanic virtue, and if any one kept one of them he would never want food or raiment. I remarked, "I suppose you want to sell them," he said he did. I told him I did not want either food or raiment, I had as much as I wanted of earthly blessings, but that I did want salvation, "Can you tell me how to get that?" "O!" said he, "repeat the Kulamá, fast, say your prayers five times a day." While I was attempting to point out the insufficiency of all these things, we came into the city. Stopping in the street we were soon in the midst of a large crowd, but many of the people were so noisy and insolent that I could do nothing, although I stood there more than an hour. The exciting subjects were, "Why do you eat pork and drink wine," referring to the customs of Europeans. For about an hour I tried in vain to answer. At last I succeeded in telling them what Solomon, Paul, and Christ taught upon these subjects. One replied by saying, "If you should order your servant to do anything and then give him a contrary order, which must he obey?" I said "The last order." "So," said he, "we obey Mohammed rather than those who came before," and then cried, "Away, all good Musulmáns, away." When order was restored, I asked those who remained what they thought of such conduct. If it was right for a man to present an argument, and then run without waiting for an answer. Some seemed heartily ashamed of their champion. But as only a few remained, it was late, and I was worn out and sick at heart. I thought it not expedient to enter upon the discussion of the claims of the Koran.

CHINA: NINGPO MISSION.

LETTERS OF THE REV. A. W. LOOMIS.—NO. II.

The Religions of China: Confucianism.

In this letter, it is proposed to speak of Confucius, his doctrines, and the worship now rendered to him.

Confucius was born 549 B. C., in what is now the province of Shan-tung, which is nearly in the north-east corner of China proper, and bordering on the Yellow Sea. It is related that his mother had prayed to the hill Ne for a son, and fable says that when this son was born two dragons encircled the house, while sweet music was heard in the air. The Chinese can believe such stories, and they have an exhaustless fund of their reputed miracles to off-set against those which we relate to them out of the Bible, to prove the divinity of Christ and the authenticity of the Scriptures. We find that they cannot be convinced but by the Holy Spirit when He shall open their hearts to receive the truth. We tell them of the miraculous conception of the man Christ Jesus; they refer us to the intervention of the gods in the birth of Confucius.

Confucius did not set himself up as a religious teacher. During most of his life he was engaged in political affairs, and only in his declining years devoted himself to the establishment of a school of philosophy. His writings contain many things that are unexceptionable, and his teachings have done more to render the Chinese nation what it is in eminence and stability, than any, or all their other writings. He admonished and instructed kings, and all in authority, by the histories he gave, (whether real or fictitious,) of the wise reigns of their ancient kings; and he taught the people to regard their sovereign as ruling by divine appointment—as commissioned to assist heaven in the government of the world. He instructed parents and teachers in the training of the young, and enjoined upon all the duties of the several relations, that children should reverence their parents, the younger be respectful to the older, and that all must yield due honour to their rulers. He encouraged industry and economy. The honour in which this teacher has ever been held, has had, no one can doubt, a great influence in elevating the nation, and preserving it, while all other nations have changed, or quite passed away. Yet, in some respects it might have been better for the Chinese had they never had a Confucius. . . . .

Though only the literati can be classed among those commonly termed Confucianists, still every Chinaman knows about Confucius, and all regard him, while he was on earth, as something more exalted than a man, and now as enjoying a place among the gods; and all he said and wrote is regarded with superstitious reverence as the words of a god. Therefore it is that they so carefully gather up all scraps of written paper, lest any of these sacred words should be defiled. This reverence for their holy books is like that of the Mohammedan for his Koran, and greater than that of most people in Christian lands for their Bible. But the teachings of Confucius contain many things which are contrary to the truth. His disciples quote him as having taught, that man by nature is good, and becomes bad only by bad example and imperfect instruction. He also taught his followers to reverence the spirits and the gods, but to keep them at a distance; but he taught nothing about the true God or a future state; and the influence of his doctrines and example are now seen in China, in inducing so great indifference on these subjects. In his works are some allusions to heaven as the presiding power of nature, and to fate as the determiner of all things. He enjoined the appropriate sacrifices to heaven, earth, the gods of the land and grain, and to ancestors.

All Chinese, who study at all, use the books in which such things are taught; they commit them to memory. The sayings of Confucius and other sages, are familiar to all, for such as cannot read learn them from others. Nobody, not even the priests of Taou or Buddha, dare speak a word against any of the doctrines of this philosopher. It will be seen, therefore, that before they can receive the doctrines taught in the Scriptures, they must unlearn, or learn to regard in their true light, the doctrines which now have such a controlling influence over them. With many it would be sufficient reason why they should give no attention to what we teach, that their sacred books say nothing on such subjects. People sometimes say to us, "How can you expect that we will renounce a religion and customs which have been handed down to us from high antiquity, for doctrines and strange gods which you foreigners wish to introduce amongst our people? You tell us that the doctrines you teach are true, and the God you worship the only true God; but we have for this only your assertions; and why should we believe you, a few strangers, against the instructions of our wise men, and against the practice of our whole nation? You tell us that what you teach you know to be the truth, because it is contained in your sacred book; but we also have books, which we consider as important and as worthy of belief as you do yours." Some there are who take occasion to speak contemptuously of Christian books, and translations of the Scriptures, because they lack the elegance of style in which their own books are written. Some again, whose politeness restrains them from speaking against our doctrines in our presence, will acknowledge that they are very good, but that their books contain that which is equally good, and therefore we may infer their opinion, that they have no need to put away the old, which is good, for something that is new, and, so far as they can judge, no better.

Often when we are talking to them about Jesus Christ the Saviour, they compare him to their Confucius, and suppose that Jesus must be to the Western nations what Confucius is to the Chinese, and they say, "Yay-zoo (Jesus) may be better for you, but Confucius is better for us." Again, they have doctrines with which to oppose those which we teach. We speak of the self-existent and eternal God, who created all things, and who is distinguished from every other object that may be worshipped in this, that "the gods of the heathen are idols, but the Lord made the heavens," and they refer us to their system of cosmogony, viz. that all things were produced by what they term the dual powers, yin and yong, the male and female principles, which pervade everything, and cause all the changes which are seen in matter; while matter itself they suppose to be eternal. Of the origin of the world, their books teach thus: "Before heaven and earth were divided, there existed one universal chaos, when the two energies of nature were gradually distinguished, and the yin and yong, male and female, principles established. Then the purer influences ascended, and became the expanse of heaven, while the grosser particles descended, and constituted the subjacent earth. From the combinations of these two, all things were produced; and thus heaven is the father, and earth the mother of nature." They say further, heaven and earth produced all things, but as they could not speak, the sages came to settle the form of governments, and teach the principles of right conduct; therefore, the sages are considered equal to heaven; hence also the saying, "Heaven, earth, and man;" man meaning the sages.

Every department and every district has its own Confucian temple, so that in the city of Ningpo we have two, one for the Heen, or district, and a much larger and more splendid one for the Foo, or department, an account of which may be found in the "Letters to Sabbath Schools," by the late Rev. W. M. Lowrie. In these temples images are not employed, but their absence is supplied by tablets; one tablet on which is inscribed the names of Confucius, and others for his principal disciples. The worshippers present their offerings before these, and here they perform their kneelings and bowings. In the district temple at Ningpo, we find an exception to what is required in these places; it is an image, to represent, as we were told, the sage himself. It is the figure of a portly and venerable old man, with a long white beard depending low upon the breast, and seated in a large arm-chair. "There are," it is said, "in China upwards of 1560 temples dedicated to Confucius; and at the spring and autumnal sacrifices, there are offered to him, 6 bullocks, 27,000 pigs, 5,000 sheep, 2,000 deer, 27,000 rabbits, making a total of 62,606 animals annually immolated to the manes of Confucius, besides offerings of 27,600 pieces of silk." These are provided by the emperor. We have no means of calculating the amount of the offerings of private individuals. How should we pity the people who thus erect temples, make sacrifices, and offer prayers to a man, who, were he living, could not bestow the benefits they seek from him. But the honours designed for him will do him no good. Poor man! he died as other heathen die. While in the world, he was "without God, without Christ, and without hope;" where then is he now?

Boys, whom their parents design for literary pursuits, when about commencing their studies, are conducted to the temple of Confucius, where they present offerings, and implore the aid of their patron in the prosecution of their undertaking. Alas! that they know no better way; nor can they know until the Church discharges her duty towards them.

The literati of China are commonly ranked as Confucianists, and they very frequently speak in terms of contempt of the sects of Taou and Buddha; but, as was remarked in another place, they are often like others of their countrymen, so under the influence of superstitious fears, that they have recourse to the priests, and to the rites of these religions. Generally, however, they are like atheists, living only for this world, without care or thought about a future existence.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. HENRY V. RANKIN AT NINGPO.

[Continued from page 124.]

Missionary Incidents and Reflections.

Tuesday, February 18.—To-day the bell was placed in its frame in the tower of the city church, and soon attracted an immense throng of the people. Some of them inquired whether the large iron bell, which once hung in one of the chief temples, and which was carried off by the English during the war, had been returned. The few peals that were rung showed that its tones are very clear and melodious. The maker, Mr. Meneeley, deserves all praise not only for its construction but for the admirable packing of everything connected with it. Everything came in the best order, and no difficulty has arisen in raising the entire weight of 1400 lbs. to the tower prepared for it. With the exception of one in Canton, I believe it is the only large bell in China. We cannot but hope that it will be made the instrument of calling many to hear the gospel to their salvation.

A number of the girls in our school have lately suffered from the measles, though in the kind providence of God their sickness has been slight, and nearly all are recovering. A few new applicants have recently been received, some of whom after a three months trial are found to be quite promising. Two of them are sisters who had never as yet received any names from their father—their mother having long since died. Upon referring their case to their schoolmates it was decided that one of them should bear the Chinese name of the Superintendant's wife, Ah-Lan, and the other to be called Ah-Foh, (happiness,) from that blessing which they all testified they were receiving in their present situation.

Sabbath, Feb. 23.—To-day Rev. R. Q. Way was solemnly installed pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Ningpo, according to the order prescribed by the Presbytery. The Moderator of the Presbytery (Rev. Mr. Quarterman) preached the sermon upon the occasion, employing as his subject the "Ministry set as a defence of the Gospel;" after which he proposed the constitutional questions. The Rev. H. V. Rankin delivered the charge to the pastor, and his predecessor, the Rev. M. S. Culbertson, that to the people. The Moderator conducted the devotional exercises. The occasion was one of much solemnity, for the office now devolved upon the pastor, we all felt, is one whose duties are of the most serious nature—especially as respects those who are or may become the native members of the church.

The Sabbath evening services, which for some few weeks past Dr. McCartee has conducted in our house, for the benefit of the school and our servants, and a few neighbours, we find very interesting and I hope profitable, as they are specially adapted to a certain class.

Feb. 24.—Walking through the parade ground I saw a man practising in military performances, which certainly consist of the most fanciful antics that we could well imagine from a man in that stern profession. He tossed himself about on the right hand and left, turned summersault, made all kinds of hideous noises, threw up his light basket shield, and brandished an old rusty knife in a most ridiculous manner. Such tactics as these pursued through a whole regiment caused much merriment to the English soldiery during the war, who are represented as singling and taking off their foes while thus upon the wing. Now, during the season of examinations, the shops are very gaily dressed out, and we meet in all the thoroughfares, public theatres, jugglers and fanciful pictures, besides that noisy thing which at home we call a hurdy-gurdy.

Feb. 27.—Our friends, the Culbertson's, left us to-night for Shanghai. They had engaged passage in a lorcha, but the captain just before sailing refused to take them at the stipulated price. Providentially an American brig from Shanghai, bringing as passenger our worthy consul at that port, came in, and the goods were transferred to her. Mr. Culbertson and his family went themselves in a Chinese boat by the way of Chapoo.

March 4.—One of the little girls in the school, aged nine years, died last night from the combined effects of measles and dysentery. She had only been under our care about three months, but showed signs of much promise. Her father came from the country and was in constant attendance upon her last sickness and death, at which he showed manifest concern. The children in the different schools collected in the chapel this afternoon at the funeral exercises, and it is to be hoped that the instruction there and elsewhere given in connection with this afflictive event may not be lost upon their minds. This is the first death that has happened since the first year of the school's existence, and with the exception of the measles, which have been recently quite prevalent, excellent health has been generally enjoyed. The father of the little girl seemed interested as well as astonished at the doctrines of Jesus—especially of the resurrection of the body—and instead of being dissatisfied at his affliction, promised to bring another child, and also to tell his neighbours of what he had seen and heard. Like them, he says, that before he came he had a prejudice against the foreign school—but his prejudice and fears are now wholly dissipated. We laid the little girl near the grave of our own infant, burying her according to her father's wish in a Christian manner.

(To be continued.)

SIAM MISSION.

EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER OF THE REV. S. BUSH.

Death of the King of Siam—Choice of his successor.

Mr. Bush, writing at Bangkok on the 19th of April, thus reports the death of the late king of Siam, and the measures adopted by the officers of the government.

The late King died at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 3d inst. He was, according to report, sometimes better and sometimes worse, but still evidently aware that his end was near, and seemed to be as anxious to increase his amount of merit as before. To this end, not long before his death he contributed to each priest of all the royal wats in the city, the sum of 20 ticals, equal to $12, and the number of priests was 7800 and over, making the whole sum given somewhat more than ninety-three thousand six hundred dollars. Besides all this he made large appropriations for unfinished wats, and gave largely to his own sons.

His desire was to have placed one of his own sons on the throne as his successor, and made a second one vice-king, according to the custom of the country. But this the Praklang and other high officers would not permit, they selecting his two half-brothers, Chaw Fa Mongkut, the priest, and Chaw Fa-Noi, or Momfanoi—both of whom are so well known to you all, on account of their friendship to the missionaries and attention to the arts and sciences, as well as to the English language, which they speak. The ground of this selection was, that these two brothers were in the direct royal line, being sons of the Queen, while the late King, although much older than they, was the son of an inferior wife, and at the death of their father, (which was sudden,) the throne was given to him for the time being, as they were thought too young to reign. He, however, when firmly established, never saw fit to resign it to them. Another aspirant to the throne was a half brother of the Chaw Fa's, who has attained to considerable power and influence.

On account of this number of competitors, many of the Siamese expected that civil commotion and bloodshed would succeed the King's death, and therefore buried their treasures and fortified their dwellings. And had this occurred suddenly, we have great reason to fear such would have been the result. But as he lingered, the Praklang took the opportunity to complete all his arrangements for preserving the peace and preventing any other than the Chaw Fa's attempting to obtain the throne by force. He called in some thousands of people from the country, as soldiers to keep the peace. He also armed and manned three vessels of war and had them ready in the river to use if necessary, and a reserve force at Paknam. Such were the preparations. Popular opinion also seemed to be in favour of Chaw Fa, the priest, for all the Siamese consider him a wise and learned man. The day arrived. The King expired, and at 9 A. M. the Prince was carried in state from his wat in the city to the wat within the palace walls.

General mourning, a singular custom—The new King enters on his office.

No opposition was made, and a quietness reigned over the city, even greater than usual, so that it would have been hard to believe that so great an event had happened, were it not for the appearance of the shaved heads of the nobles, as they passed by in their boats. This is the usual badge of mourning; they often, however, dress in white also. In the evening the order was heralded for every Siamese to manifest his grief, by the usual sign, and the next day Bangkok became one gigantic barber-shop. The process of shaving was going on in every direction, and when completed, the appearance of a whole people with shorn craniums, you can better imagine than I describe. This practice is to be continued for a year to come, until the King, who is now laid out in state, shall be burned.

In a few days after the prince entered the wat, within the palace-grounds, he went through the ceremony of throwing off his robes, and leaving the priesthood in order to attend to public business. The 15th of May is appointed for the coronation, and the 20th for a state or ceremonial procession on the land, and the 22d for a similar procession on the river. To the two last the missionaries are all invited, and places are to be prepared for them.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE LONDON EPISCOPAL JEWS' SOCIETY FOR 1850—51.

The Annual Report, presented at the meeting of the Society in London, on Friday, May 9th, presents varied features of interest, and sets before us the difficulties opposed by the remarkable state of the Jews to the labours of the missionary, as well as the success which, under the divine blessing, has attended the preaching of the Gospel of Christ; and we hope that a few extracts from its pages will be acceptable to our readers. In reviewing the history of the past year, the Committee gratefully acknowledge the goodness and faithfulness of God towards the scattered sons of Judah; and then proceed to say:—

"Our missionaries find that a great and effectual door is opened to them. We have been permitted during the past year to occupy four new stations (in Oran, Jassy, Adrianople, and Hungary), and to engage twelve fresh labourers in the missionary field. Eighty-four agents are at present employed by the Society, of whom forty-seven are believing Israelites: and Missions are maintained in the following places; —At home—in London, Manchester, and Bristol; abroad—in Jerusalem, Safet, Cairo, Oran, Bagdad, Salonica, Bucharest, Jassy, Adrianople, Trieste, Cracow, Hungary, Warsaw, Lublin, Suwalki, Petrikau, Posen, Lissa, Danzig, Konigsberg, Berlin, Breslau, Gothenburg, Frankfurt-on-the Maine, StrasburgCreuznach, and Amsterdam.

"At no period of the Society's existence have its funds been in so prosperous a condition. The total receipts are £32,234 16s. 11d., presenting an increase of nearly £4000 over the preceding year; the expenditure for the year was £29,378. In the receipts above mentioned are included £1550 given by the late Miss Cook for the printing of entire editions of 6000 each of the New Testament and the Book of Common Prayer in Hebrew, and for the purchase of premises and land necessary for the establishment of an Industrial Institution for Inquirers and Converts at Cracow. Miss Cook's bequest of about £25,000 Stock, was given on the understanding that it be applied solely for the purposes of a Reserve Fund, the interest alone being applicable to the general objects of the Society. In consequence thereof, the Committee have been enabled to place the 'Widows' and Disabled Missionaries' Fund' on an efficient and satisfactory footing, by completing it to £15,000 Stock. The receipts for the (Special) 'Temporal Relief Fund,' amounting to £498 6s. 6d., fall far short of the calls constantly made upon it, and the Committee were compelled during the past year reluctantly to refuse relief to many urgent cases.

"The Scriptures issued from the Society's Depository, in whole or in part, amount to 14,537 copies, and other publications and tracts to 23,922. The Society has printed during the year, 5000 copies of the Hebrew Bible, 12mo, 15,000 of various editions of the Hebrew Pentateuch, 2000 of the Judeo-Polish Pentateuch, besides 34,000 copies of other publications and tracts."

The Report announces the realization of the plan mentioned at the former anniversary, for seeking out the remnant of Israel in the Chinese empire. Under the direction of the Bishop of Victoria, two converted Chinese were sent on a mission of inquiry to Kae-fung-foo, and have brought back some interesting information respecting the 200 Jewish individuals still left in that place, though in very reduced circumstances.

The Report gives an encouraging account of the increased demand for the HEBREW NEW TESTAMENT, and states that the demand for the Holy Scriptures by the Jews is GREATER THAN IT EVER WAS BEFORE. We can only find space for the following summary:

"While from Jerusalem we receive information through the Bishop, about 'an extensive secret reading of the New Testament,' the reports from Salonica state that the New Testament is gladly received by most who can read. On the occasion of the last journey, by the brethren at the latter station, a Jewish Rabbi happened to arrive at some places soon after their departure, and he afterwards related to other Jews, that he found both the New Testament and tracts in the hands of the people. What particularly struck him was, that they liked the books and were unwilling to part with them.—At Oran, 'New Testaments and tracts are freely circulated.'—The 'Old Paths' are read by the Jews in Holland with great avidity; the translation of that work into the Dutch language has proved very useful. The Rabbies endeavour to prevent its circulation, but without effect, as the people are desirous of reading and judging for themselves. At Amsterdam more New Testaments were circulated last year than in any preceding year.—Mr. Stockfeld relates that in Bavaria a Colporteur met in an assembly of Jews, a Jewish schoolmaster, who mentioned that he had once possessed a book, in which there was a most beautiful and incomparable prayer; and that he would readily pay a large sum to obtain possession of that book, which somebody must have taken from him. On hearing this, the colporteur opened the New Testament, and showed him the sixth chapter of St. Matthew, asking if that were the book and prayer he referred to. The schoolmaster at once joyfully exclaimed, that it was. And this incident produced an evident impression on the Jews present.—Mr. Hartmann, at Breslau, refers pointedly to the great change produced in the Jewish mind by the reading of the New Testament, and is also anxious for an increased circulation of the Hebrew translation of the Scriptural Liturgy of the Church of England, which, with the 'Old Paths,' he has found most useful in his labours.—From Danzig, we learn that the New Testament has during the past year been more in request than formerly, and can now be received in the presence of others and taken away without concealment. At some places, hundreds of tracts were distributed at the urgent request of Jews and Jewesses of all ages; they commonly asked for tracts in the German language, because they in general do not understand Hebrew.—The missionary at Konigsberg has made special mention of the acceptation which the New Testament, the 'Old Paths,' and the 'Pilgrim's Progress,' meet with from the Polish and Russian Jews. He has often found them quoting passages from memory.—The Jews who called on the missionaries at Warsaw and Suwalki, to purchase Hebrew Bibles, used on these occasions also to beg for Hebrew New Testaments, for their friends at home. Interesting information has reached the Committee from other sources, which shows that a work is silently going on among the Jews of the great Russian empire, of the extent of which we can form no idea, but have the satisfaction of knowing that the publications of this Society have been the blessed means, though its missionaries have not been permitted to be the visible instruments. Jews themselves have reported, 'that in the heart of Russia many written copies of the 'Old Paths' are in existence, and are read in secret by the Jews, and that such a Hebrew MS. of that work was known to have sold for about £2; and that there are also such written copies of the Hebrew New Testament in circulation.' These are remarkable facts, as indicating the signs of the times.

Change in the tone and feeling of the Jews towards Christianity.

The Report abounds in proofs of the effect already produced on the great mass of the Jews, by the operations of this Society.

From Cracow we learn, "that the Jews have been led to entertain more correct views of Christianity, and are less vehement in their hostility against it than formerly, while they in general evince a kind feeling towards our missionary." The missionary at Posen reports, that while it cannot be said that there is an actual desire on the part of the Jews in his district for reading the New Testament, there is this difference, that they do not now feel such a horror as formerly, when spoken to respecting its saving doctrines, and are more readily induced to accept it, and it is read much more than in former years. They read with pleasure publications respecting the spread of the Gospel, whether among Jews or Heathen, and like especially to hear of what is going on in Jerusalem and Palestine; and this is a token that they have not yet lost all interest in the land of their inheritance, and that at the appointed time this feeling will be quickened within them for the Lord's own purposes. And respecting the work, silently but extensively going on in Jerusalem itself, the Bishop writes:—"What, in the midst of many disappointments, gives me the best hope for the future, perhaps not very far distant, is the fact that the prejudices of the Jews against the Gospel are weakening very fast, and the knowledge of the contents of the New Testament is spreading rapidly and widely among them, so that it needs only the breathing of the Spirit of God to restore them unto life; the means, the Gospel, waiting as it were, within their minds, to be breathed upon, in order to become life and power for their restoration."—The missionaries at Suwalki report that it has been encouraging to them to notice, on their journeys in Poland, an increasing study of the Bible, and a growing friendly feeling towards Christianity, in proportion as a more correct knowledge of its tenets takes the place of their former prejudices.—The Rabbi at Creuznach died last summer; and our missionary who had shortly before visited him, and preached to him Jesus of Nazareth as the only Saviour, was invited to the funeral, on which occasion he met with a cordial reception from those present, among whom were rabbies from neighbouring districts.—On more than one occasion, when the colporteur attached to the Berlin Mission (himself a proselyte), has been surrounded by large numbers of Jews, who replied to his scriptural arguments with scorn and sneers directed against himself, the mission, and proselytes generally—some Jew present has lifted his voice in defence of the Gospel against the attacks of his brethren, exhorting them to search the Scriptures and read the New Testament for themselves.—At the Episcopal Jews' Chapel, in London, no occasion of public worship passes which is not marked by the attendance of unbaptized Jews, in various stages of inquiry. The place itself is an object of interest, which induces many, both English and foreign Jews, to visit it, and this more especially during the celebration of their own great festivals. These are doubtless indications of a state of mind which calls for increasing prayer and faithfulness in ministering the word of life unto the house of Israel, and which also contain an earnest of the fulfilment of that blessed promise, that the word of the Lord shall not return unto Him void.

The schools for Hebrew children at home, and in our various stations, have continued their useful course. Twelve additional labourers have been sent forth, and several new stations occupied during the past year. The varied particulars respecting these labours of the Society will appear from time to time; we can only now call upon our readers for renewed exertions and prayers, together with a grateful acknowledgement of all God's mercy and faithfulness. —Jewish Advocate.

THE CAUSES OF THE KAFFIR WAR, SOUTH AFRICA.

The causes of the war are, to a large extent, beyond the province of a Missionary Report; and they are too diversified to be easily got at. The aggressions made by the colony on the native territory are, however, doubtless among the chief, and within the reach of all. The Kaffirs are, as a people, proud, daring, and yet remarkably shrewd and cool. They are jealous of every encroachment, particularly on their territorial independence; and yet, instead of getting into a blaze when wronged, as they suppose, they will bide their time, and never forget the wrong till opportunity serves their turn. Judge, then, of their feelings, when, from time to time, the frontier line has been advanced from river to river, till they are now threatened with being driven nearly out of the country which they once called their own.

And yet, without going into any statement concerning the colonial policy, every candid observer will see in the circumstances enough to account for the course pursued. On the colonial side of the line are usually herds of cattle feeding on rich pastures, while the Kaffir herds, not being cared for in the same way, are, it may be, on sun-burnt plains. The temptation is strong to make a raid across the borders, particularly as they reckon the lands which are now colonial to form part of their own patrimonial inheritance. The name of every hill and winding stream being in their own Kaffir language, is to them as the reading of a charter. But these forays are followed by reprisals, which at last issue in war; and as victory is always in the end, on the side of the colony, the frontier line is as often moved eastward. In 1812, 1823, 1834, 1846, and now again, wars, more or less, of this kind, have occurred; and in all the past instances the colony has gained on the native territory. And the settlement which took place after the war of 1846 was more crushing than any of its predecessors. The chiefs were reduced to tenants under the British Crown, and large districts of their wonted domain were parcelled out among other settlers—some coloured, and some European. This undermined the authority of the chief, as well as deprived them of territory and other resources.

The object was to reduce the race to the condition of colonial settlers. And if the Kaffirs had gone frankly into the scheme, it would have proved a benefit. By depriving the chiefs of their feudal claims, these people would have been free to act according to their conscience, instead of being compelled to sin, or forced to seek shelter at some missionary station; they would have availed themselves more largely of the education furnished by the missionaries and the Government, which their chiefs discouraged all they could; and they would have cultivated their own lands as they saw others do. These were, no doubt, the ends contemplated by Government. And it is due to add, that all the missionaries speak of the Governor, and those acting under his authority, as kind and encouraging.

Some of the brethren have communicated their views of the future. They have no doubt that the Kaffirs will ere long be overpowered, and think it likely that large bodies of Fingoes, and perhaps Zoolas, both of whom speak substantially the same language, will be settled in another portion of the Kaffir territory. These tribes have shown a much greater willingness to be instructed than the Kaffirs; and though inferior in personal appearance, they are also less proud, and may, in the providence of God, be admitted to privileges which the others have to a large extent despised.—Scotch Free Church Record, June, 1850.

OBITUARY.

REV. GEORGE W. SIMPSON.

There are few chapters in the book of Divine Providence in which mystery is not somewhere written. "God's ways are in the seas, and his paths in the great waters, and his footsteps are not known." These truths are brought forcibly to our minds, by the startling intelligence which has lately reached us of the sudden and tragic death of two of our beloved missionaries to the western coast of Africa, the Rev. George W. Simpson and his youthful wife. Whilst making a short sail for the benefit of their health in a British brig, the vessel was suddenly overturned by one of those violent tornadoes which so fearfully prevail in southern latitudes. Our beloved friends, together with all others on board the ill-fated vessel, one only excepted, found a winding-sheet in the waves, and sunk to rise no more till the sea shall give up its dead.

A brief outline of the life of one of these true servants of Jesus Christ, from an intimate acquaintance, who knew him in the days of his boyhood, may not be unacceptable to some of your readers.

Mr. Simpson was the son of pious parents, who consecrated him in his infancy to the service of his Saviour. His mother was truly an "Israelite indeed," a woman whose praises dwelt on the lips of many of God's children, and who, though moving in an humble sphere in life, yet "did what she could" for the glory of God. The mantle of the parents fell upon the child. In early life he learned to cherish the deepest reverence for our holy religion, and ere youth had given place to manhood, he was found among the ranks of the open and active followers of the Lamb. It was the highest ambition of his devoted mother to have a son who should minister publicly at the altar of his Saviour, and the desire of her heart was granted her of God. The teachings of the Divine Spirit unfolded to the mind of our sainted brother that he was called to preach the everlasting gospel, and he hearkened and obeyed. And though difficulties lay in his way, he grappled with them all, that he might be fully qualified for the work that was given him to do. He engaged for a season in teaching, that he might thereby acquire the means of prosecuting his studies preparatory to entering on the work of the ministry. He passed through his collegiate course in Easton College, and shortly after its completion he entered the Seminary at Princeton. There it was that his mind became deeply imbued with the spirit of missions. It was under the training of those venerated men who have so long taught in that school of the prophets, that the claims of the heathen came up vividly before his mind. He felt indeed that "the field was the world," and the question pressed itself on his heart whether it might not be his duty to labour in some of its far off moral wastes. And the more he pondered on the subject, the more fully did the conviction fasten itself upon him that he was called of God to tell the untaught heathen the way of life. It is a sacrifice which none can fully understand but those who have made it, to break away from kindred, friends, and native land, and live and die among a people who, as a mass, are strangers to God, and whose every taste and sympathy is foreign to your own. But our brother resolved to make it, for the glory of God and the good of souls. He might have laboured in God's vineyard at home with great acceptance, and have filled one of our best pulpits, but "he consulted not with flesh and blood." He sought not "the praise of men, but of God." He wished to do his duty, whatever of ease and worldly comfort the performance might cost him. The task which lay heaviest upon him preparatory to his great undertaking, was to communicate his views to his mother, and gain her free consent to a final separation. He was the Benjamin of his family, and his parents' idol so far as they had an idol upon earth. He feared therefore to unfold to them the workings of his mind. He did it first by letter, and afterwards unbosomed his every thought and feeling on the subject. With tears in his eyes he told his mother that without her consent he could not enter on his work. She gave it—gave it, though it cost her sleepless nights and bitter tears. Who was she, she felt, that she should lift up her voice or hand against the bidding of the Lord.

When all matters were arranged for his final departure, and he only awaited the sailing of the vessel to carry him off to his heathen home, Mr. Simpson spent the season that was left him in his native land in visiting the churches and kindling up in the hearts of the people a deeper interest in the cause of missions. It was surprising to all who heard him, to observe the amount of knowledge he had acquired respecting the religion, and customs, and peculiarities of the African people, among whom he was destined to labour. He spake like a missionary who had been long in the field, rather than as one who was just entering on his work.

The writer of this notice can never forget a Sabbath spent with this dear brother shortly before he left our shores. He had filled his pulpit in the morning, and enchained the audience with the most interesting details of Africa and African missions. In the afternoon he felt unfitted from ill health to perform the usual service, and accordingly lay down an hour or two to rest. But in the evening he was himself again. He was roused up to a most interesting conversation. His wife was with him. "She was a woman of whom less should not be said, and more perhaps could not, than that she was worthy of him." The evening was spent in singing, prayer, and conversation on the subject of missions. It was a season long to be remembered; one of the green spots in the barren pathway of life. Both of the young missionaries talked almost romantically of their distant home, their plans and hopes, and trust in God. They seemed almost to smile at difficulties, so deeply were their hearts imbued with the spirit of their great undertaking. The writer scarcely saw them afterwards. It was shortly after this that they set sail. They left us bearing with them our prayers and ardent wishes for their welfare and success in their work of love—carrying also little tokens of remembrance from many friends. I need not speak of their labours in Africa. They are before the Church, spread out on the pages of the Record. Their work is done, and they "are not, for God took them." They have performed the duty assigned them in the King's service, and have been called away seemingly before their time, "to be crowned in the King's presence."

A heavy stroke has fallen upon the Church; especially has it fallen on two bereaved and stricken mothers, both of whom have been widowed since their children left our shores. May the everlasting arms of Jehovah Jesus support them in their heavy trial! And may the rich measures of sustaining grace be imparted to that dear brother who is left alone to labour, and it may be to die upon the friendless coasts of Africa. He needs our prayers and sympathy, it may be, more even than the widowed parents of our ocean-buried friends. Let none despond. Our hope is in the God of Jacob—in Him who can give beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. In him whose word is truth, and who has promised that "Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands unto God." W. W. L.

DONATIONS

TO THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

IN AUGUST, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Troy.—Cambridge United 1st ch of which 30 to con Mrs AMELIA RICHARDSON l m	$100 00
Pby of Albany.—Ballston Spa ch 35; Kingsboro' N Y Rev J S Heacock 5	40 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Bath ch Rev G D Stewart	5 00
Pby of Wyoming.—Warsaw church	10 00
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 3d ch mo con coll's 47, Mrs Sarah Ray 15; Buffalo Central church 53 50	115 50

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Coshecton ch	6 00
Pby of North River.—Fishkill 1st ch 3; Newburg ch Mrs Wm K Mailler for Papal Europe 3	6 00
Pby of Bedford.—Dobb's Ferry N Y Jos Banks	2 00
Pby of Long Island.—Hempstead ch 22; Huntington ch ann coll 22 66, mo con coll's 25 59	70 25
Pby of New York.—Forty-second st ch mo con 15 75, sab sch Mrs Hepburn's class to ed as before 11 87; Madison Avenue ch mo con 14 72; Yorkville ch mo con 4; Wallabout ch mo con 4; Brooklyn 1st ch mo con 20 12; New York 1st ch mo con 41 25; Duane st ch Thomas H Faile 100	211 71
2d Pby of New York.—Canal st ch mo con 9 06, contents of a missionary box 14 50	23 56

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of Elizabethtown.—Woodbridge 2d ch mo con coll's 47 65, farewell offering of Mrs A Barnett and Miss Rebecca Rogers 1	48 65
Pby of New Brunswick.—Squan Village ch	2 50
Pby of West Jersey.—Bridgeton 1st ch mo con coll's	125 00
Pby of Newton.—Belvidere ch sab sch	5 00
Pby of Susquehanna.—Burlington Pa	50
Pby of Luzerne.—Tunkhannock ch	7 50

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—Phila Central ch Stephen Caldwell 50, James Wray 10, G C Napheys 5, Lewis Brown 5, Mrs S C Hayes 2	72 00
Pby of Donegal.—Churchville ch	25 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Balt 2d ch mo con coll's 50; Ellicott's Mills ch 21 66, Sab sch 12	83 66
Pby of Carlisle.—Middletown ch	2 15
Pby of Huntingdon.—Lower Tuscarora ch 113; Sinking Creek ch 70 75; Spring Creek ch 34 12, Potters Mills sab sch 2 19	220 06
Pby of Northumberland.—Orangeville ch 1 41; Rohrsburg ch fem miss soc 12 35; Lycoming Centre ch 10	23 76

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Redstone.—Greensburg ch	50
Pby of Beaver.—Bridgewater ch	90 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Washington.—Washington ch to const ROBERT COLMARY, Hon JOHN GRAYSON, ISAAC HEWITT, JOHN WILSON, and JOHN R WILSON l m's 150; Mill Creek ch Hookstown sab sch 6 60; Cross Roads ch 15 43, Jonas Amspoker 2	174 03
Pby of Steubenville.—Centre Unity ch 5 25; Feed Spring ch 20; Island Creek ch 26 50	51 75

SYNOD OF OHIO.

Pby of Coshocton.—Keene ch additional	10 00

SYNOD OF CINCINNATI.

Pby of Miami.—Xenia ch to const Rev JOHN HUDSON of Muscatine Iowa l m	50 00
Pby of Cincinnati.—Cincinnati 7th ch mo con coll's 40 31, sab sch 21 75; Williamsburg ch 10 65; Pleasant Ridge ch mo con 11 45	84 16
Pby of Oxford.—Hamilton and Rossville ch bal	12 00
Pby of Sidney.—Piqua ch David McKee 5, others 1	6 00
Pby of Findlay.—Lima ch ann coll 15, Mrs Mary Cunningham 10, mo con colls 13; Little Grove church 4	42 00

SYNOD OF INDIANA.

Pby of New Albany.—Paoli ch 20 50; Livonia ch 10 cents	20 60
Pby of Vincennes.—Upper and Lower Indiana ch in part 8 20; Vincennes ch 26 27; Bruceville ch 8 55; Carlisle ch for sup of Rev S N Martin at Ningpo 10 50; Hopewell ch in part 1 35	54 87
Pby of Palestine.—Paris ch in part 5 37, Rev E W Thayer 10; Grandview ch 12, Parochial sch miss soc 7	34 37

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Lafayette ch in part 17 50, James Wallace 6, Rev I N Candee and family to ed Elizabeth Candee 25; Delphi ch in part 15 80, Sab sch 6 50, less 2 for Foreign Missionary; Rossville ch in part 7 05, Mrs Elizabeth C Platt for Jewish Mission 5, and Rev Joseph Platt for Papal Europe 10 and in part to const SAML DAVIES PLATT l m	90 85
Pby of Fort Wayne.—La Grange, Fawn River and Ontario ch's	15 00
Pby of Crawfordsville.—Terre Haute 1st ch Rev M G Wallace 4; Bethel ch 14 45; Rockville ch 10; Waveland ch in part 27 54, Mrs REBECCA S MCINTYRE bal to const herself l m 5, Children of Rev D McIntyre 70 cts, John Demaree to const Mrs HULDAH DEMAREE l m 50, John Milligan in part to const Mrs LUCINDA MILLIGAN l m 5; Crawfordsville ch in part 5 60, Rev C K Thompson 5, Sab sch 10, in all 20 60 for sup of Mr and Mrs Coulter at Ningpo, less 5 for Foreign Missionary; Jefferson ch 9 45, Mrs Venable 1; Frankfort ch 12 87	155 61

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Sangamon.—Hillsboro ch 5; Waveland ch 5 35	10 35
Pby of Cedar.—Davenport ch 7 75, Sab sch for China mission 1 25	9 00
Pby of Wisconsin.—Fulton ch	2 00

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY.

Pby of Transylvania.—Harrodsburg ch ann coll in part 40, Sab sch to ed John Montgomery 25, Mrs Mary Rose in part to ed Mary and Charles Rose at Tallahassee 30; Harmony ch Rev C A Wylie 5, Mary E Wylie 50 cts, John S Wylie 15 cts, Sarah M Wylie 10 cts, Wm A Wylie 10 cts; Paint Lick ch in part 22; Hanging Fork ch 25 55	148 40
Pby of West Lexington.—Walnut Hill ch in part 30 50; Frankfort ch mo con 3 25	33 75

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Greenbrier.—Oak Grove ch	2 65
Pby of West Hanover.—Little Concord ch 11; Bethlehem ch 8; Walkers ch 8, Maysville ch 17 60; New Store ch 6 25; Charlotteville ch 42; Lebanon ch 20; Trinity ch 20; Lunenburg co Va Mrs A Patterson 5	137 85
Pby of East Hanover.—Richmond 1st ch mo con	23 00

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

Pby of Knoxville.—Knoxville 1st ch mo con	19 60

SYNOD OF MEMPHIS.

Pby of Chickasaw.—Holly Springs ch sab sch to ed Sarah B Thompson	15 00

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Bath, Geo., Charles Whitehead	5 00
Pby of Hopewell.—Milledgeville Ga Otis Childs	5 74

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of South Alabama.—Blacks Bend ch	10 00
Pby of Tuscaloosa.—Greensburgh ch 14, sab sch to ed William Stedman Peck 16 56	30 56
Pby of East Alabama.—Carmel ch	10 65

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Louisiana.—New Orleans African Missionary Soc for sup of Rev Harrison W Ellis, Monrovia, and of which 30 to const WILLIAM WHITE l m	50 00
Pby of Brazos.—Houston ch miss soc	35 00
Total from churches	$2646 09

LEGACIES.

"——" La Legacy of Dr R Gegan in part 100, less exchange	99 25
Lewisburg Pa Estate of A McLenaghan	204 22
Pittsburg Pa Estate of Dr Gladden	100 00
		403 47

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Friend	1000 00
A Friend to the poor but dear heathen	5 00
Philadelphian Society Nassau Hall N J	5 00
A Friend for the Jewish Mission	236 01
A little Jewish boy	1 00
Point Pleasant ch Pa	5 00
		1252 01
Total receipts in August		$4301 57

WM. RANKIN, Jr. Treasurer.

DONATIONS IN CLOTHING, ETC.

Ladies of Vincennes ch Ind One box clothing	32 00
Ladies of Peoria 1st ch Ill do do	96 33
Hopewell sew soc Oxford Pa do do for J K Whiteside Chippewa Mission	— —

NOTICES.

LETTERS relating to the Missions or other operations of the Board, may be addressed to WALTER LOWRIE, Esq., or the Rev. JOHN C. LOWRIE, Secretaries, Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

LETTERS relating to the pecuniary affairs of the Board, or containing remittances of money, may be sent to WILLIAM RANKIN, Jr., Esq., Treasurer—same address.

PAYMENTS OF MONEYS for the Board may also be made at

Albany, New York, to the Rev. J. N. Campbell, D. D.;
Philadelphia, Pa., Samuel D. Powel, 265 Chestnut st.;
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Harvey Childs;
Columbus, Ohio, Thomas Moodie;
Cincinnati, Ohio, John D. Thorpe;
St. Louis, Missouri, David Keith;
Louisville, Kentucky, J. M. Rutherford;
Natchez, Mississippi, Thomas Henderson;
Richmond, Virginia, Samuel Winfree;
Charleston, South Carolina, James Adger;
Augusta, Georgia, William H. Crane.

BOXES OF CLOTHING, intended for the Missions of the Board, may be sent to the Mission House, or to any of the Agents of the Board; and should be preceded, or accompanied, by a written statement of the source whence they came, and of the value of their contents in detail.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY.—Newspaper edition.—Ten Copies for One Dollar, or Five Copies for Fifty Cents; Postage paid by the Publishers. Each number will contain an attractive engraving.

Pamphlet edition.—Twenty-five Cents a year. Copies of the Pamphlet edition, when desired, are sent free of charge to Donors of Five Dollars and upwards, and to Ministers whose churches contribute to the funds of the Board.

Letters relating to this newspaper, should be addressed to "The Foreign Missionary," Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

OVERLAND LETTERS.—Letters for the Overland Mail, to India, Siam, and China, should reach the Mission House in time for the steamer which sails nearest the first of each month. Postage: assessed according to weight, at the rate from New York of forty-five cents for half an ounce. This may be paid, by sending post-office stamps to the Mission House, or in other ways.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY is published monthly by the Board of Foreign Missions, at the following prices per year, payable always in advance:

For a single copy, pamphlet edition,	25 cts.
" 8 copies, newspaper edition, in a package to one address,	$1.00
" 20 " " "	2.00
" 35 " " "	3.00
" 60 " " "	5.00

Each number will contain an attractive Engraving.

When copies of the newspaper edition are ordered, they will all be sent to one person in one package. If separately addressed they will be charged at twenty-five cents.

 Letters relating to this paper should be addressed, "FOREIGN MISSIONARY, Mission House, 23 Centre Street, New York."

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

PUBLICATION ROOMS,

No. 265 Chestnut st., Philadelphia.

Letters relating to agencies, colportage, and the general interests of the Board, to be addressed to Rev. JOHN LEYBURN, D.D., Corresponding Secretary and General Agent.

Orders for books, and letters relating to the business of the Depository, to be addressed to Mr. JOSEPH P. ENGLES, Publishing Agent.

Letters relating to manuscripts and books offered for publication, to be addressed to the Rev. W. M. ENGLES, D.D., Editor of the Board.

Donations to be remitted to A. W. MITCHELL, M. D. Treasurer.

"NOT A READING PEOPLE."

We have occasionally known pastors to assign as a reason why more good books were not circulated in their congregations, that their people were "not a reading people." In most cases where such a statement is made, it is undoubtedly no more than the truth. There are some communities where reading is by no means a popular mode of employing time; and there are not a few good, pious people who would fall asleep before finishing ten pages of the most popular work you could put into their hands. Even the "delicious" fictions which so bewilder and madden fashionable readers would be "High Dutch" to them.

But admitting that many pastors labour amongst those who are "not a reading people," the question arises as to what is their duty to such a congregation. Is no effort to be made to impart the important appetite which seems wanting? Must generation after generation pass with the same distaste for books? or cannot the pastor, by judicious and persevering efforts, so change the character even of such a congregation as that they shall become "a reading people"?

For ourselves, we have great confidence in the almost unlimited power of a discreet and industrious pastor, in moulding the tastes and forming the moral habits of the people committed to his charge. Under such labours we have seen congregations which had been the most inefficient and penurious, become among the most active and liberal; we have seen such wonders wrought indeed as astonished the very people by whom they were accomplished. Not a few congregations are there in various parts of the Presbyterian Church, which have undergone a very great and favourable change in reference to this matter of religious reading. Where, throughout their households but few books were ever found, there are now well-filled shelves of volumes whose thumbed and worn pages bear witness that they have not lacked for want of use. Does any pastor doubt that he can effect a similar change in the tastes and habits of his people? Let him try the experiment, and see what can or cannot be done. Let him on the next Sabbath after this falls under his eye, state from the pulpit his conviction of the importance of religious reading in forming an intelligent and efficient piety;—let him express his earnest desire that his own people should enjoy the luxury and reap the benefits of "a reading people," and then let him, having furnished himself with a supply of McCheyne's Memoirs for instance, recommend to each family to purchase a copy, and have it read aloud to the household in the afternoon or evening of every Sabbath until it is finished. When this has been accomplished, let him repeat the process with some other book, and then with another. We should be glad to hear the result of such an experiment after a twelve-month's trial. We have very serious doubts whether by that time such a pastor would longer be able to say that his were "not a reading people."

OUR BOOKS IN MADEIRA.

The painful circumstances which led a few years since to the departure of Dr. Kalley from Madeira, and the cruel dispersion of the Portuguese converts, are familiar to most of our readers. Not a few of them have seen a portion of the latter, who have chosen our country as the place of their exile. Since that persecution, Popery has had very much its own way in that beautiful island.

Still by a treaty with Great Britain the subjects of the British Government being allowed the free exercise of their religion throughout the Portuguese dominions, the Free Church of Scotland have taken advantage of this provision, to raise their standard there. Some months since a few members of Dr. Hall's church in Trenton, sent a donation of books made up to a considerable extent of the publications of this Board, to the Free Church in Madeira, of which the Rev. J. D. Burns is pastor. That these books are properly appreciated, and are doing their work, will appear from the following extracts from letters received by the donors from the excellent pastor at Madeira.

"It is indeed a valuable donation, for which I hardly know how to thank you. The works are just such as we required for our little library; they have been admirably selected, and I know they will be prized as they deserve to be. All who have seen them have been alike surprised and delighted both at the amount and value of the donation. * * I look upon him (referring to Dr. Hall) quite as an old friend, and Trenton as the first city in importance to me in your wide Union."

After the books had been some time in use he wrote, "No volumes in the library have been so much read this winter, and several persons who have heard of the donation, have become subscribers in consequence. We could not have wished them more judiciously selected; and I am happy to see parents particularly, availing themselves of them for the sake of their children. In a letter I wrote some time since to our Home and Foreign Missionary Record in Scotland, I had great pleasure in making known to the church at large our obligations to you and our American friends in general."

COLPORTAGE IN THE SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

We find in a late number of the Watchman and Observer, a report of the Rev. A. L. Hogshead, agent for Colportage in the Synod of Virginia. The Synod carry on their own operations, and the agent is employed by and responsible to them. We are happy to find that the cause under their management is in a condition of growing prosperity, as may be seen by the following extracts from Mr. Hogshead's report:—

Since the first of June I have been in my second year as the agent of Synod in this cause; and consequently since that time I have been paying my second visits to the churches. I spent the months of June and July in Montgomery Presbytery, and began in West Hanover Presbytery the first of August.

I have been gratified to find an advance in everything of an outward nature that tends to the progress of the work—a better understanding, on the part of the people, of its nature and importance, a more lively interest in it, and an enlarged liberality in its support.

I have found fewer than formerly disposed to plead as an apology for doing but little, that they had given liberally last year, or had given liberally to some other object. And this was the more encouraging, as many could have offered this apology with some show of propriety, having lately contributed largely to the building of churches and other purposes. I observed with no small gratification that in every case where the congregation was engaged in building a church, and in their own language "were uncommonly hard pressed," they contributed more than they did last year; proving that "the grace of giving" grows by exercise, and showing that Christians are learning that "God is able to make all grace abound toward them; that they always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

On account of the difficulty in securing suitable labourers, not as much colporteur work has been done in certain localities as was desired; yet on the whole we have been able to obtain as many colporteurs as we have had the means to furnish with books and to pay their salary.

We have at present twelve colporteurs in this field, distributed as follows; five in West Hanover Presbytery, three in Greenbrier Presbytery, two in Winchester, one in East Hanover and one in Montgomery.

We will give the aggregate of labour performed by five of these who have been longest engaged, and from whom reports have been received up to the first of July. The other seven commenced their work since the first of June, and had not reported at the above date.

These five, since the last Synod, and up to the first of July, had performed (giving the round numbers without fractions) twenty-seven months' labour, visited two thousand one hundred families, conversed and prayed with seven hundred, found destitute of the Bible one hundred and forty-five, and destitute of all other religious books, three hundred. They had circulated by sale and gift four thousand volumes and eighty thousand pages of tracts. There had been ordered from Philadelphia and put into the hands of colporteurs up to the last of July $3600 worth of books and tracts at catalogue prices, amounting to about ten thousand volumes and one hundred and fifty thousand pages of tracts; which amount we expect to be circulated by the next meeting of Synod. This will be more than double the work that has been accomplished in any former year of our enterprise; which must be gratifying and encouraging to those who feel an interest in this important work. An estimate of the whole expenses of conducting the work gives a cost of fifteen cents per volume for circulation, leaving the tracts and personal efforts of the colporteurs by conversation and prayer to cost nothing. In a letter of the Rev. B. M. Smith, Secretary of the Book Committee, from which most of these facts are taken, he says "I think it will appear that no concern is conducted more economically. Fifteen cents a volume is as low as the American Tract Society, or our Board can do this business, and we shall be under it this year when the whole year's operations are taken. * * *

"Our colporteurs all still report a kind and cordial reception, not only from our own people, but from all denominations and from the world at large. The bulk of our books are sold to others than Presbyterians, and gladly received. Not a case of disagreeable encounter has yet come to my knowledge."

I can add the testimony of my own observation to the above statements. The better our books are known the more highly they are valued, and the more demand there is for them. Our doctrinal books, wherever they are read, and that is pretty extensively, are exerting a silent but most efficient influence for the cause of truth. Many have never seen a clear and fair exhibition of these doctrines before. Our practical books (which compose much the larger part of our extensive collection) are highly prized by Christians of all denominations, and even by men of the world.

There is perhaps no portion of our State where there has existed a stronger prejudice and a more open opposition to Presbyterian doctrines than in some parts of Montgomery Presbytery, in which I have lately laboured. Yet the cause of Presbyterianism is probably making more steady and rapid progress in that interesting and comparatively new field than in any other portion of our Synod. We would of course ascribe the chief instrumentality to a faithful and efficient ministry; yet we believe no one acquainted with the facts will deny that the books of our Board have no inconsiderable share in the work. * * *

I heartily concur with Brother S. when he says, in this letter from which we have already quoted; "I have a painful impression that there is too great a tendency now-a-days to reliance on the mere agency employed. Beseech the brethren everywhere to pray for the divine blessing; that God's Spirit may attend each colporteur, and make every book and tract the herald of his salvation; and though a silent, yet a powerful and efficient preacher of the Gospel." While we indeed need more men and more means to meet the urgent calls for colporteur work that are pressed upon us from various quarters, yet we need far more the outpouring of God's Spirit to cause the truth that has been cast as seed into the ground, to bring forth fruit unto righteousness. If Christians would look and long as earnestly for the reviving showers of Heavenly grace to descend upon the thirsty hills of Zion, as they lately looked and longed for the clouds to pour out their refreshing showers upon the parched earth, they might soon realize their wishes in the former as they have lately done in the latter. "I will therefore, that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting." "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified."

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS AND TRACTS.

Universalism False and Unscriptural. An Essay on the Duration and Intensity of Future Punishment. 18mo, 104 pages. Price 19 and 25 cents.

We have here an admirable treatise from a well known, able, and popular pen. The name does not appear on the title-page, but the clear, simple, evangelical and apposite style, will be very apt to tell the tale of its authorship. No matter who wrote it, it is just the thing to remove difficulties from the minds of those who doubt as to the nature and duration of future punishment; and is also adapted to do good execution in the minds of such as have already been engulphed in the dreadful vortex of Universalism. The little work is divided into seven sections, lucidly arranged, and is beautifully printed.

My Father's God. A Testimony for Religion, addressed especially to the Children of Pious Parents. 18mo, 96 pages. Price 16 and 22 cents.

We have here a very interesting narrative, written in a serious, earnest spirit, and adapted to do good. The anonymous author pourtrays his own experience as an alien from God; his early religious privileges, the piety of his parents, and their anxiety on his behalf; their trials and the happy death of one of them, and the contrast between their condition and his whilst in his sins. The whole is concluded with an affectionate appeal to the unconverted children of godly parents. The easy style of the narrative is suited to win the attention of the young, and we should not be surprised if this should prove a most useful book.

The Labourer's Daughter, or Religious Training in Humble Life. An Autobiographical Sketch. 18mo, 41 pages. Price 12 cents.

Those who have read the Sabbath Prize Essays will remember that amongst the more than nine hundred and fifty competitors for those prizes, was one whose essay could not be accepted from the fact that she was a female, and that she was not a "labourer," that class alone being allowed to enter the lists. Her essay was entitled the "Pearl of Days," and was so highly approved, that the committee of adjudication recommended that it should be published, and also requested her to write her autobiography. The Board of Publication were so much pleased with the "Pearl of Days" that they included it in their volume of the Prize Essays, and now also republish the autobiography of "The Labourer's Daughter." The sketch is remarkably well written. None can read it but with amazement that such a production as either this or the essay on the Sabbath could have been written by one, who says "I am one of those who never enjoyed the advantage of attending school in early days, except for two years, or rather for one; for it was but for two years one of my sisters and myself attended a sewing-school alternately; one of us remaining at home one week to assist mother with household labour, or in attending to the younger children, and going to school next week while the other remained at home. Since that time I have been constantly occupied in household duties, either in my father's house or as a servant in other families."

Still Happy in Jesus, or the Dying Hours of Emily F——, a Kelso Sabbath Scholar, aged 14. By Jane Catharine ——. 18mo, 32 pages. Price 12 cents.

A sweet memorial of youthful piety on a dying bed. Emily F. was under the pastoral instruction of the Rev. Horatio Bonar, with whose evangelical and practical writings our readers are familiar. This little narrative shows that his parochial instructions are not in vain even to the lambs of his flock.

The Brazen Serpent, or Faith in Christ Illustrated. By Joseph H. Jones, D.D. 32mo, 64 pages. Price 7, 10, and 14 cents.

This little volume is designed specially for youthful readers. Its plain and simple style will adapt it to the comprehension of that class, whilst its interesting matter and evangelical spirit fit it for usefulness amongst all classes. We have seen nothing from Dr. Jones's pen which pleased us better.

NEW TRACTS.

A Plea for Sabbath Afternoon. 24 pages.

A very glowing and earnest remonstrance with once-a-day church-goers. We venture to say that not a few pastors in every part of the Church would say "Amen" to the sentiments here expressed.

A Dream of the Dying. 20 pages.

We are generally no great believer in dreams, but this is a very striking one, and is used merely as an illustration, and with great solemnity and impressiveness.

Noah's Carpenters. 4 pages.

Under this quaint title the writer has drawn a comparison between those who lend a helping hand in religious matters and yet remain unconverted, and the carpenters who were employed by Noah. They helped to build the ark by which others were saved, but never got into it themselves.

Time Lost! 16 pages.
A Question for All, or "Lord, Is it I?" 16 pages.
Are You Holy? 28 pages.
What Shall I Do? 12 pages.
Who Shall Dwell in Heaven? 8 pages.

These are all excellent practical tracts; the character of which is sufficiently explained by their titles.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION DURING THE MONTH OF AUGUST.

Presbytery of New York.

Chelsea ch N Y Geo Clark $50 00

Presbytery of Londonderry.

Newburyport "a Lady" 2 00

Presbytery of New Brunswick.

2d ch Cranberry Rev Jos W Blythe per Mr Clark 25 00

Presbytery of West Jersey.

Pittsgrove ch per Rev G W Janvier 10 00

Presbytery of Miami.

Greenville Ohio per J M Rutherford & Co 6 00

Presbytery of White Water.

Brookville Indiana per J M Rutherford & Co 2 00
Richmond ch per Rev Simeon Brown 11 50

Presbytery of Muhlenburg, Ky.

Henderson Ky per J M Rutherford 6 50

Presbytery of Louisville Ky.

First ch Louisville in part 102 55

Presbytery of Findlay.

Lima ch per Rev R M Badeau 7 00

Presbytery of Montgomery.

Jacob Campbell per Rev J H Wallace 2 00

Presbytery of Muncie.

Indianapolis ch per Rev Simeon Brown 26 50

Presbytery of Sidney.

Bellefontaine ch per Rev S Brown 8 00

Presbytery of Indianapolis

Knightstown ch per Rev S Brown 10 00

Presbytery of Fayetteville.

St Pauls ch Jno McKinnon to const himself hon mem 30; Duncan Campbell to const himself hon mem 30; Collection 29 72; Lumberbridge ch Collection 4 65; Jno McEachren in part for hon mem 10; James Conley 2; Wm McNeill 5; Abraham Brown 50; Smyrna ch 3 25; Ashpole ch 9; Bethel ch 7 40; Phillip McRae to const his son Murdock McRae hon mem 30; Miss Ann McRae to const her nephew Christopher McLauchlin hon mem 30; Mrs Mary McLauchlin to const her son Jno N McLauchlin hon mem 30; Rev Hector McNeill to const himself hon mem 30; Archibald Purcell to const himself hon mem 30; Alexander Purcell 5; Centre ch collection 51 60; Archibald Smith to const his daughter Miss Flora Jane Smith hon mem 30; Miss Barbara Murphy in part to const Miss Effie Downing McNeill hon mem 10; Malcom Purcell in part to const Miss Mary Eliza Purcell hon mem 15; Mrs Elizabeth M McNair 1; Hector Currie in part to const his son Donald M Currie hon mem 15; Ladies Sewing Soc to complete hon mem of the Rev F K Nash 9; Daniel M McLean 4; Laurel Hill ch Jno Fairley to const Miss Flora McNeill Gilchrist hon mem 30; Jno C Baker to const his son Thomas C Baker (in part) hon mem 15; Hugh McArn to const Miss Henrietta Buchanan hon mem 30; Whitefield McIntosh to const himself hon mem 30; Collection 11 62½; Antioch ch collection 5; Dr David McBryde to const Miss Christian McLean McBryde hon mem (in part) 7; Geo B Brown to const himself hon mem (in part) 10; Dr Angus Bethune to const Mrs Margaret C Bethune hon mem 30; Allen McCormick to const Mrs Mary McCormick hon mem (in part) 15; Jno Gilchrist to const Miss Mary Gilchrist hon mem (in part) 5; Cash from Antioch by James Martine 2 50; Mrs Sarah Jane Smith to const hon mem (in part) 5; Philadelphus ch 6 30; James McCallum to const Daniel S McCallum hon mem (in part) 10; Miss Mary Brown to const Miss Mary J Buie hon mem 30; Daniel McNeill to const Angus A McNeill hon mem (in part) 15; Wm H Brown to const himself hon mem 30; Additional through Jas Martine 2 25; Wm McMillan 50; Union ch Archibald McKeethan 5; Patrick Murphy Esq to const Robert Thomas Murphy hon mem (in part) 15; Bethesda ch coll 7 25; Malcom McNeill to const himself hon mem (in part) 10; Archibald Blue 5; Robert Graham 5; Miss Mary McKinnon 1; Misses McNeill 50; Elizabethtown ch coll 1 35; Jno C Wooten to const Richard W Wooten hon mem 30; W S Rinaldi 2; James M White 1; Brown ch Archibald Shaw to const himself hon mem 30; Daniel Shaw to const Albert Shaw hon mem 30; Jno McColl to const Mrs Harriet McColl hon mem (in part) 10; Cash 50; Black River Chapel Wm C Henry to const Miss Mary E Henry hon mem 30; Neill H Murphy to const Miss Ellen J Murphy hon mem 30; James Murphy to const Wm B Murphy hon mem 30; Patrick McDuffie to const himself hon mem (in part) 10; Corneline Murphy to const Miss Elizabeth Jane Murphy hon mem 30; Miss Mary Henry 5, Edmund A Hawes 5, William Robinson 5, Daniel McAllister 3, Charles Bannerman 5, Alexander Henry 2, to const the Rev Mr Gibbs hon mem (in part) 25; South River ch Peter Cromartie to const himself hon mem (in part) 2; J A Parker 1; James A Lamb 4; Mrs Eliza Andres 2; Mount Horeb ch James Cromartie 5, all per Rev Jos Mahon 951 29

Presbytery of Orange.

Hillsboro ch Benjamin Huske 1; John H Webb 5; Thomas Webb 1; John B Wilson 1; Miss Sarah Nash 2; Miss Maria Nash 2; Dr. E Strudwick 3; James C Turrentine 1; Dr James Webb 2; Dr O F Long 2; Ladies Sewing Soc 10; Dr S Schoolfield 5; Rev Robert Burwell's family 4; Young Ladies of Mr Burwell's School 5 10; Sundries 2 20, all per Rev J Mahon 36 30

MISCELLANEOUS.

Jonesboro' ch Tenn (New School) 31; Mrs A D Cunningham to const her daughter Miss Sarah J Foster hon mem 30; "A friend to the cause" Robeson co N C 90 151 00

$1385 64

Also books of the Board from Wm J Bingham, Bethlehem ch, and Jno W Norwood, Hillsboro N C valued at 80 00

Total $1465 64

A. W. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

The acknowledgment from Huntingdon Presbytery in last month's Record should have been from Curwinsville church $50

FORM OF BEQUESTS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

To the Trustees of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ——, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Publication, according to the provisions of their charter.

A donation of Thirty Dollars at any one time constitutes the donor, or any person whom he may designate, an Honorary Member of the Board of Publication. Honorary Members receive an elegantly engraved certificate of membership, and are entitled to draw one dollar's worth of children's books or tracts annually, provided they are called for during the year they become due.

Ecclesiastical Record.

ORDINATIONS AND INSTALLATIONS.

On the 1st of August, the Rev. George W. Burroughs was installed by the 2d Presbytery of Philadelphia, pastor of the church of Bensalem, Pennsylvania.

On the 21st of August, by the Presbytery of Donegal, Mr. James L. Rogers was ordained and installed pastor of the church of Donegal.

On the 2d of September, by the Presbytery of Newton, the Rev. A. H. Hand was installed pastor of the church of Greenwich, New Jersey.

The Rev. William V. Frierson has been installed by the Presbytery of Chickasaw, pastor of Zion church.

On the 4th of September, by the Presbytery of Elizabethtown, the Rev. John C. Rankin was installed pastor of the church at Baskenridge, New Jersey.

On the 25th of June, Mr. Richard Merrill was ordained an evangelist by the Presbytery of Steubenville.

DISSOLUTION OF THE PASTORAL RELATION.

On the 25th of June, the pastoral relation between the Rev. F. McMurray and the church of Greenville, and that between the Rev. J. Y. Alexander and the church of White Oak, were dissolved by the Presbytery of Flint River.

RESIGNATION.

The Rev. Dr. Brinsmade has resigned the pastoral charge of the Third Presbyterian church Newark, New Jersey.

CALLS.

The Rev. William C. Scheetz has accepted a call to the church of Morgantown, North Carolina.

The Rev. John C. Turbitt has received a call to the church of Mansfield, New Jersey.

The Rev. William J. McCord has received a call from the First Presbyterian church of Jefferson, Schoharie county, New York.

The Rev. Charles Loudor has received a call from the Fifteenth Presbyterian church, Philadelphia.

The Rev. Josiah Milligan has received a unanimous call to become the pastor of the church of Rush Creek. His post-office address is West Rushville, Fairfield county, Ohio.

The Rev. Henry W. Taylor has received a unanimous call from the Presbyterian church of Xenia, at which place correspondents and others will please address him.

The Rev. John M. Dinsmore has received a call from the church in Utica, Ohio.

LICENSURES.

On the 14th ult., Mr. Martyn Lowrey Hofford was licensed to preach the gospel by the Second Presbytery of Philadelphia. Mr. Hofford has received a call to become the stated supply of the Presbyterian church of Tamaqua, Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania.

POST-OFFICE ADDRESSES CHANGED.

The post office address of the Rev. George D. Stewart is Bath, New York.

That of the Rev. J. P. Finley is Hanson, Marion county, Missouri.

That of the Rev. H. I. Venable is Newport, Indiana.

That of the Rev. Alexander Brown is Jones' Creek, Illinois.

DEATHS.

On the 31st of August, the Rev. James Y. McGinnis departed this life, in the 35th year of his age. He was pastor of the Presbyterian church of Little Aughwick, in the Presbytery of Huntingdon.

On the 2d of September, died at Rahway, New Jersey, the Rev Jonathan T. Ely, in the 49th year of his age. He was without charge at the time of his death, having long been in feeble health.

Died, on the 22d of August, the Rev. John Cross, pastor of the church at Middletown, Pennsylvania. He had only been installed two months.

Died, at Bedford, Pennsylvania, on the 28th of August, the Rev. William M. Hall. Mr. Hall was without charge at the time of his death.

Varieties.

Geographical Centre of the United States.—The geographical centre of the United States, at the present time, is in the Indian territory, 120 miles west of the Missouri. The present centre of our representative population, which is constantly moving westward, is ascertained, by actual calculation, to be just about at the city of Columbus, Ohio.

A Scene of Desolation.—The California Times and Transcript says that the emigrant road over the desert, beyond Humboldt river, is literally strewed with dead carcasses. A friend who has just come in, counted twenty head of cattle, in as many feet square; for 40 miles they average one to every ten feet; making a total of 20,000. The wagons are one to every rod. Of 11,000 that started for California last year, not one half reached their destination.

Jonathan Edwards's Ministry.—This celebrated divine was settled over the first church, in Northampton, Massachusetts, from 1727 to 1750. During 17 years of this time, 495 members were added to the church, being an average of nearly 30 each year.

Cost of the Bible in China.—Owing to the extremely low cost of materials and labour in China, a Bible in the Chinese language, it is said, can be sold for about six cents.

College in California.—The Supreme Court of California have granted an act of incorporation to "the President and Board of the Trustees of the California Wesleyan College." For its endowment, $27,000 had been subscribed. It is to be located at Santa Clara, under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church. A board of twenty-four Trustees has been appointed.

For Liberia.—The Hartford Courant says that sixteen coloured persons, comprising four families of respectability, were expected to leave that city for Liberia.

Boston Travel.—On a late Saturday, from 6½ to 7½, P. M., according to official count by the police, 6626 vehicles entered the city, with 14,942 persons; departed, 7063 vehicles, with 15,964 persons. Entered on foot, 14,310 persons; went out, 12,887. Came in railcars, 12,271; departed do., 13,259. Whole number entering, 41,729 persons; departing 42,313. This count does not include those coming from and going to East and South Boston. Saturday is the busiest day of the week, of course. Fifty-five officers were employed in the count.

Avalanche from the Skies.—The Boston Times say, it learns from a reliable source that a lump of hail, weighing two hundred and seventeen pounds, fell near Dover, N. H., on the 20th ult. It was seen at a considerable elevation before it descended.

Church Building in Cincinnati.—Two new houses of worship are nearly completed by the Old-School Presbyterians, the First church, rebuilt in magnificent style on the old site; and the Seventh church, on Broadway, between Fourth and Fifth streets, built by a colony from the First. The Second church, New-School, are refitting and improving, on an extensive scale, at a cost of seven to ten thousand dollars.

German Churches.—There are now five Protestant German churches in Newark, New Jersey, a fact of much importance viewed in connection with this interesting class of our population.

Synodical Action on Dancing.—The New-School Presbyterian Synod of the Western Reserve, at its late meeting, passed a minute condemning the practice of dancing, and enjoining on church sessions to institute discipline whenever it occurs among their members.

Lead Mining.—The amount of lead produced by the mines of Lafayette county, Wisconsin, last year, was 7,855,000 pounds, valued at $306,000.

Scotch Settlers.—A number of the most industrious and enterprising agriculturists in Scotland are preparing to emigrate to Ireland, and agents are now engaged in examining the farming capabilities of the country, and negotiating for the purchase of lands.

Theological School in Switzerland.—The Cantons of Vaud and Geneva are the only two in Switzerland where evangelical churches independent of the State have been gathered. The Theological Seminary at Lausanne has sixteen students, and is in a hopeful condition. More than twenty-five of its graduates are now labouring in the ministry in France.

Railroad Investments.—It is a well established fac that at the present time, upwards of $300,000,000 are invested in the various railways of the United States.

Steamers on the Nile.—The Egyptian government has determined upon running steamers regularly every fortnight from Cairo up the Nile as far as the cataracts, making stoppages at all places of interest on the way. This will be a great accommodation to travellers visiting Egypt, and a great saving of time and expense.

Fruits of Missions.—At the last anniversary of the London Missionary Society, it was stated that one-fifth of the Society's income for the past year had been contributed by converts from heathenism; and upwards of $2500 have already been received by the British and Foreign Bible Society for Bibles sent to Tahiti, by the John Williams on her last voyage. What a contrast does this present to the conduct of many in our own country!

Dr. Humphrey's Family.—Within a few weeks, Rev. Dr. Humphrey, senr., three sons, and two sons-in-law, have supplied the pulpit of the South street church in Pittsfield, Massachusetts. Such occurrences are rare.

An Appropriate Sign.—A man who had established a tippling-house, being about to erect his sign, requested his neighbour's advice in regard to an inscription for it. His friend replied, "I advise you to write on it—'Drunkards and Beggars made here.'"

Largest Flower in the World.—There is a plant in the island of Sumatra, the circumference of whose fully expanded flower is nine feet; its nectarium is calculated to hold nine pints; the pistils are as large as a cow's horn, and the whole weight of the blossom is computed to be fifteen pounds!

FUND FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS AND THEIR FAMILIES.

The following sums have been received:

From First Church Baltimore per Rev Dr Backus	10 00
" Rev T A Ogden, Natchez, Mi	10 00
" A Friend, through Dr Boardman	30 00
" Church at Hollidaysburg, Pa	20 00
" Second church Spruce Creek, Pa	10 00
" Church at Shavers Creek, Pa	13 62
" Church at Bellefonte, Pa	5 00
" Church at Roswell, Ga. Presb'y of Cherokee	15 00
	$113 62

Geo. H. Van Gelder,
Treas. Trustees of Gen. Assembly P. C., &c.
September 13th, 1851.

A WORD TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Subscribers to the Record will please remember that our terms require payment in advance. It is exceedingly desirable that the paper should pay its own way, and not become an expense to the Boards. Its resources will be sufficient, if the amount due from subscribers were paid.

Bills for the amount due will be found in the October number.

Subscribers for the current year can still be furnished with the numbers from the commencement of the volume; and when sending on their subscriptions, are respectfully requested to mention with what number they wish to begin.

We would also remind them of the necessity, in giving notice of discontinuance, or in making payment, of sending their post-office address.

THE HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Is the organ of the Boards of Missions, Education, Foreign Missions, and Publication, and is issued monthly in newspaper form at Fifty Cents a year, and in pamphlet form at One Dollar.

All moneys remitted at our risk. Notes of the denomination of five dollars and upwards can be used with less loss by us than smaller ones. Post-office stamps to any amount received as cash.

☞ Payment in all cases in advance.

Address, post paid, "Home and Foreign Record," 265 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONTENTS.

Board of Domestic Missions.—Agent for Church Extension, p. 146. An important Table for Synods and Presbyteries, p. 146. Present State of Religion in the Missionary Field, p. 147. Receipts, p. 148.

Board of Education.—Rules and Regulations of the Board, p. 149. Anniversary Meeting at St. Louis, p. 150. Out and out, p. 151. Washington College, East Tennessee, p. 151. Receipts, p. 151.

Board of Foreign Missions.—Death of the Rev. G. W. Simpson and his Wife, p. 152. Recent Intelligence, p. 152. Iowa and Sac Mission, Journal of the Rev. William Hamilton, p. 152. India; Lodiana Mission, p. 153. China; Ningpo Mission. Letter of Rev. A. W. Loomis—Confucianism, p. 154. Journal of the Rev. H. V. Rankin—Missionary Incidents and Reflections, p. 154. Siam Mission; Death of the King of Siam, p. 155. Annual Report of the London Episcopal Jews' Society for 1850–1, p. 155. The Causes of the Kaffir War, p. 156. Obituary of Rev. G. W. Simpson, p. 156. Receipts, p. 157.

Board of Publication.—"Not a Reading People," p. 158. Our Books in Madeira, p. 158. Colportage in the Synod of Virginia, p. 158. Notices of New Books and Tracts, p. 159. Receipts, p. 159.

Miscellaneous.—The Spiritual Mirror, p. 145. Scraps from an unpublished Commentary, p. 145. A roll of Calvinists, p. 145. Meekness, p. 145. Ecclesiastical Record, p. 160. Varieties, p. 160.

THE

HOME AND FOREIGN RECORD

OF THE

Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

VOLUME II. No. 11. | PHILADELPHIA, NOVEMBER, 1851. | PRICE PER YEAR, Fifty Cents.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

THE LAMB OF GOD, THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE.

JOHN i. 36:—Behold the Lamb of God!

His mediation is our only hope, for there is no other way of access to God. As mediator, he has by his obedience unto death made a perfect, full, and complete satisfaction for our sins—a satisfaction infinite in value and acceptable to God—so that we may hope for mercy from God through him, and we may say, "We are thy sin, be thou our righteousness." God can now be just, and yet justify.

Christian reader, do you say you have, as you hope, looked to the Lamb of God and received him as your Saviour, and yet you have not as clear and comforting views of him as you desire? And what, my brother, is the difficulty? Is he not clearly and fully placed before you in the Scriptures? Have you not felt your need of him, and put your trust in him? And yet are your views dark and obscure? Well, just look to him, and he will remove your darkness. Behold the Lamb of God!

But your sins distress you: and well they may. They crucified the Son of God, resisted and grieved the Spirit, and it may be have brought reproach upon the cause of your Master, and well may they distress you. But remember, Jesus Christ has satisfied for your sins; his ignominious death was sufficient to atone for them all. Just look to him, and he will wash them away. Behold the Lamb of God!

But you have been unfaithful: and this should indeed cause grief. You serve a faithful master, and how unkind in you to be unfaithful to him! This should fill you with humility. But he is compassionate, and will forgive your unfaithfulness; he will heal your backslidings; and if you look to him, he will give you grace to be more faithful hereafter. Behold the Lamb of God!

But you have denied him by your life, as did Peter, and almost betrayed him, as did Judas! And what will you do? Will you wander still farther away? Who has the words of eternal life but he? Who can forgive but he? To whom will you go if not to him? Just go to him now, weeping, as Peter did, and he will forgive; and then pledge yourself anew to him. Behold the Lamb of God!

But, you say, my hope is faint; and so it will be while you look at your sins, and not at the Saviour. This is a defect in the piety of many; not that their sense of unworthiness is too great, but their apprehensions of Christ are too weak; they look more at themselves and at their sins, than at the Saviour. Hence they are sad and sorrowful; their heads are bowed like a bulrush; their hope is so faint and feeble that it seems ready to expire; and their piety has more in it of fear than of hope and love. The remedy for all this, is just to look to Jesus Christ—the Christian's hope—and rely upon his finished work. Behold the Lamb of God!

But, you say, my faith is weak, I lay hold of the promise with a trembling hand, and I feel at times as if I could hardly be said to trust in the Saviour at all. Well, poor soul, and what will you do? You will not give up your profession, will you? You will not depart from the Lord altogether, and thus make shipwreck of your faith? Oh, no; you will cling the closer to the Saviour; you will endeavour to get clearer views of him; you will be anxious to have him ever in your eye; you will trust in him, and you will pray for the increase of your faith, and for grace to be faithful. There is need of prayer. Were there more prayer there would be more faith—brighter hopes—more cheering prospects. Ask, that you may receive. Behold the Lamb of God!

W. J. M.

For the Home and Foreign Record.

"The entrance of thy words giveth light."—Ps. cxix. 130.

In the dark hour of sin;
When, by the traitor-foes who lurk within,
Or by the world's false charm betrayed,
Or when, by will or force o'ercome
Of him who guilt and bitter doom,
And death and ev'ry woe brought in;
Then, in the hour of sin,
In darkness shrouded and by fears dismayed,
This is the word that speaketh
To him who rescue seeketh,
And soon the shadows of the night are gone:
Eastward behold the bright and joyful dawn!
'Let there be light,
On Calvary's height.
Lo! him on whom thy sins were laid,
Who for thy rescue hath the ransom paid,
And for thy guilt hath full atonement made.'
Thus, in the hour of sin,
Quickly the shades begin
To brighten, and the light pours in
Where all was dark before.
No more
Do fears affright and guilt appal;
This word is mighty to recall
To peace; and from the midnight thrall
The soul that mourns its hapless fall,
Release.

R. H. R.

PUT ON THE SHELF.

The following habit of the excellent Cecil deserves imitation.

"I have long adopted an expedient, which I have found of singular service. I have a shelf in my study for tried authors, and one in my mind for tried principles and characters. When an author has stood a thorough examination, and will bear to be taken as a guide, I put him on the shelf! When I have more fully made up my mind on a principle, I put it on the shelf! A hundred subtle objections may be brought against this principle; I may meet with some of them, perhaps; but my principle is on the shelf! Generally, I may be able to recall the reason which weighed with me to put it there; but if not, I am not to be sent out to sea again. Time was, when I saw through and detected all the subtleties that could be brought against it. I have past evidence of having been fully convinced; and there on the shelf it shall lie. When I have turned a character over and over on all sides, and seen it through and through in all situations, I put it on the shelf. There may be conduct in the person which may stumble others; there may be great inconsistencies; there may be strange and unaccountable turns; but I have put that character on the shelf; difficulties will all be cleared up: every thing will come round again. I should be much chagrined, indeed, to be obliged to take a character down which I had once put up; but that has never been the case with me yet; and the best guard against it is, not to be too hasty in putting them there."

"CLIMBETH UP SOME OTHER WAY."

The reasons are obvious why the sinner "climbeth up some other way."

He chooses to retain the pride of his heart. The way to heaven is an humble, self-abasing way. The heart is yielded up to God, and the individual sits at the Saviour's feet, and there learns lessons of heavenly wisdom. His mind is weak and docile; he receives the kingdom of God as a little child. In the way to heaven, the haughtiness of men is humbled, and the Lord alone is exalted. But he who "climbeth up some other way," retains the pride and rebellion of his heart.

He cherishes the spirit of unbelief. The way to heaven is one of faith—trust and confidence in Christ. The soul is united to Christ by faith, and by faith lives upon him and grows up into him who "filleth all in all." During the course of the Christian pilgrim on earth, he needs the constant exercise of faith in the Redeemer, to enable him to "overcome the world," and to "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." But he who "climbeth up some other way," cherishes the spirit of determined unbelief toward the gospel, and thus despises and rejects the Son of God.

He looks with complacency upon his own righteousness. He who is in the way to heaven renounces all personal merit. He has nothing which he can call his own, but his own sins, and those will ruin him for ever, unless "covered" by the righteousness of another. Not one of all the thousands and millions who are struggling up the narrow way to heaven, looks with approbation upon a solitary act by which he hopes to be acquitted in the sight of God. The language of the ransomed on earth and in heaven is, "The Lord our righteousness." But he who "climbeth up some other way," builds his hope of heaven upon some works of his own, which he deems meritorious, and fondly, though fallaciously, expects to purchase the forfeited favour of the Almighty. Fatal delusion. "By the deeds of the law no flesh shall be justified in his sight."

He loves sin. The way to heaven is against "the world, the flesh, and the devil." It is against all sin. It is called, by way of eminence, "the way of holiness, and the unclean shall not pass over it, but the redeemed shall walk there." He who loves sin habitually indulges in it, unwilling to renounce it and put it away for ever—"climbeth up some other way;" but instead of reaching heaven he will fall into hell.

Reader, are you climbing up to heaven some other way? Will you venture upon an impossibility? Shall you be charged with being a thief and a robber at the last day?—Watch. and Ref.

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Business Officers of the Board.

Corresponding Secretary—Rev. C. C. Jones.
Assistant Secretary—Rev. R. Happersett.
Treasurer—Mr. Samuel D. Powel.
Address, Mission Rooms, No. 265 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Letters relating to Missionary appointments, and other operations of the Board, including Church Extension, should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions should be sent to the Treasurer; or, if more convenient, to the following persons:

J. D. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.
J. M. Rutherford, Louisville, Ky.
Thomas Moodie, Columbus, Ohio.
William Rankin, Jr. Mission House, 23 Centre street, New York.

THE REV. WILLIAM A. McDOWELL, D. D.

Most of the readers of the Home and Foreign Record have been already apprised, through various public journals, of the death of the late Secretary of the Board of Missions, the Rev. William A. McDowell, D. D., nevertheless, a sense of duty and the impulse of friendship and affection, demand of us a notice of this afflictive event.

Dr. McDowell was born in Lamington, Somerset county, New Jersey, on the 15th of May, A. D. 1789: and graduated at Princeton College, A. D. 1809, at twenty years of age. He filled the office of Tutor in that college for two years, and commencing the study of divinity, he was licensed, and in 1813 was ordained and installed over the church of Boundbrook in New Jersey. The following year he accepted a call to the Presbyterian church in Morristown, New Jersey, and after sustaining the relation of pastor to that church for nine years, on account of his health he removed to Charleston, and became the pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in that city. Here he remained nine years. In 1833 he was elected Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Missions, which office he continued to fill with singular ability and zeal and fidelity, until his increasing infirmities and ill health compelled him to relinquish his post in the summer of 1850. He passed the winter of 1850 and 1851 in South Carolina, and after experiencing considerable benefit, on the eve of his return home in the spring, he suffered from a severe attack, which prostrated him very considerably, and from which perhaps he never fully recovered. The summer he spent at his residence in Lamington, the place of his nativity, still engaged in his Master's work, preaching from time to time as his health would permit; and when he went to Morristown to consult a physician, for many years his friend and medical adviser, he put a few sermons in his trunk, saying to Mrs. McDowell, "I may be enabled to preach while in Morristown." But his system, long a prey to disease, gave way, and there he died on the 17th day of September, in his sixty-third year.

He has ever been held in grateful remembrance as a man, a Christian, and pastor in the two churches where he laboured longest, and in both of which his labours were specially owned and blessed of God. His name stands in connection with every cause of benevolence in South Carolina, where he lived nine years; for his piety was always active and peculiarly expansive, and with his cheerful spirit and untiring industry, and his habits of labour, his influence was always efficient. He worked for his Master, because he loved him. This was manifest and felt; and that love increased with his years. The writer first formed his special acquaintance in 1832–3, being associated with him in the then Synod of South Carolina and Georgia, and in the Board of Directors of the Theological Seminary of that Synod at Columbia. His efforts in connection with his brethren to found and to foster this Seminary, now of so much importance to our Church, were constant and valuable.

But the crowning work of his life was that of Corresponding Secretary to the Assembly's Board of Domestic Missions. For seventeen years he held this responsible and laborious office. The condition of the Board of Missions upon his accession to the office was most depressed. He lifted it from its depression, and advanced it year by year, with a steady progress in the confidence and affections of our entire Church: and he had the satisfaction of seeing its receipts increased from $25,000 to near $80,000; and its number of ministers and missionaries from 269 to 570, and the Church extended widely over our country, and some 30,000 or 40,000 souls converted through the instrumentality of the Board! The Church owes a great debt of gratitude to this eminent servant of God. Under his direction, and in conjunction with the able Executive Committee of the Board, and the Board itself, the great work of Domestic Missions has been built up; and he may truly share with others the title of Father to it. He was, as far as our knowledge extends, universally confided in for his piety, good judgment, fidelity, and application, by the whole Church, and was specially endeared by his urbanity, and affection, and kindness, to all the agents and missionaries of the Board. To them his death will be peculiarly affecting.

His last act in the office was, on his return from Charleston in April, to read over the Report for the Assembly of this year in manuscript, and to give it his cordial approval. He returned the manuscript into our hands, and bidding us an affectionate farewell, he left the office so long his home, never more to enter it. In his final moments, he said with respect to himself, "all is peace." He was much in prayer for the Church, and particularly for the missionary cause, which for seventeen years had filled his heart and his hands. His character as a man, and a Christian, and a minister, and as a Secretary, has been sketched by other and better hands, and we forbear. He is no more with us. Dr. Neill, in announcing his death to his brother, Dr. John McDowell, said, "Your dear brother has gone to heaven. You know he was a man of labour, and he has entered into his rest!" "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord: yea, saith the Spirit, for they do rest from their labours, and their works do follow them." Dr. McDowell's funeral sermon was preached from 2 Tim. i. 12, by Rev. Mr. Blauvelt, pastor of Lamington church, and his remains were interred in the family burying-ground at Lamington. The Lord is speaking in his afflictions to us, "The Fathers—where are they?" They are fast leaving us! Upon whom will their mantles fall? O that He would revive his work in the hearts of his ministers, and give us a double portion of the spirit of those who have finished their work and gone before, and enable us to live and labour with death, judgment, and eternity ever in our eye.

CALIFORNIA.

The following intelligent, Christian, and most interesting communication from California, has been very kindly put into our hands by the Rev. Dr. Boardman of Philadelphia, to whom it is addressed. It is written by a gentleman of high legal standing and attainments, and although designed especially for the eye of his friend, yet is of such intrinsic value, and presents so forcible an appeal to our church for an increase of labourers and of efforts to fill that destitute State with the knowledge of God and his gospel, that we present it entire. These are the fields we wish to enter and reclaim. Would that the absorption of our funds was less in the older States, that we might cultivate more extensively and more effectively the newer ones. Would that a more ardent zeal possessed our church to fill our great and growing country with the living teacher and the word of life. We trust the letter may be directed by the Lord to the hearts of some in the ministry or some to enter it, and prompt them to seek this field of labour on the shores of the Pacific, now so feelingly and fully set before them.

San Francisco, California, August 15, 1851.

Dear Sir—You hardly, I presume, anticipated receiving a letter from this far-off quarter of the world, but an impulse I cannot resist induces me to write to you at once.

I arrived here the 6th of July; as the great fires of May and June had laid the city in ruins, I have had the population exhibited to me at a great disadvantage. Incessant robberies and murders had so excited the public mind, that before my arrival a general organization of almost the whole of the better sort of citizens had been entered into as a Vigilant Committee, and in common with many others, I feared that this violent application of justice would assume its usual aspect of unmitigated tyranny and beget a terrible condition of things. To my great gratification, wonderful prudence has been exhibited. Two executions of well-known old offenders have taken place. A wholesome public opinion has been brought to bear upon their courts. The Judges were told in unmistakable terms, that if they dealt out justice unshrinkingly they should be protected, and if through corruption or fear they did otherwise, they should be exposed, and the ermine torn from their shoulders by an enraged people. The Vigilant Committee has formed a vigorous police, and has arrested a large number of villains, from Sydney chiefly, but some from New York, and has handed them over to the courts, saying, Do your duty, or we'll try them and you too; and they have since done their duty, and the Committee has resigned its functions, though still in a condition to be called into action at the tap of the bell on the Plaza. Peace is restored—our streets are quiet—robberies have ceased, and murders are very rare.

The town is being rebuilt, very rapidly, and much more substantially than before, and business is beginning to assume its wonted gait. I however intended to draw your attention more to the moral than to the physical, when I commenced to write. Probably 200,000 people have been, as if by a convulsion of nature, suddenly planted upon the shores of the Pacific; and amongst them, I find myself, accidentally, upon a voyage of discovery. Knowing what brought such a conglomerate of people, made up from the contributions of the whole world, to this point, that it was the thirst for gold, I was prepared to meet the broken merchant, the ruined spendthrift, the reckless gambler, the thief and the robber, with the dissolute and irreclaimable of both sexes and all nations—and I have not been disappointed. But I must also say that in the midst of so much refuse, I have also found, as I believe, much "pure gold." I have been thrown into the family of a clergyman as a boarder, and I am amazed to find in this, which we in the East suppose an almost lost population, a very considerable number of intelligent, active, praying men—men of Christian life and deportment—men who are no worse bitten by the thirst for accumulation than thousands left behind as pillars in the church—men who countenance the prayer-meeting as well as the church; who rejoice in every religious as well as philanthropic movement—men who will act, as well as believe. Nor is this town singular in this particular. I have it from the best sources that it is so in most of the towns, and also in the principal mining districts. True it is, and there is no wish to conceal it, that the openly and grossly wicked are very largely in the majority, and that very many who came here with unspotted characters, both moral and religious, have made sad shipwreck. True it is, that in the town, the circus and the French theatre are open every Sunday evening, and the gaming houses through the week; and that even for next Sunday evening public notice is given in the papers of a sparring match, by I believe a couple from New York, and that the race-course is thronged on every Sabbath. Yet, there are here several flourishing congregations of Christians of different denominations, where public services are maintained and well attended, but they need the paternal care and nursing hand of older associations in the Atlantic States.

Of our own denomination, there are but three clergymen in this immense State, to whom may be now added a fourth, just ordained. When, therefore, you reflect that a very considerable portion of the 200,000 here, are of Presbyterian extraction or tendencies, you will at once perceive what are the pressing wants of this population. Efforts have been made, as I believe, to discourage the immigration of clergymen to this region—a sort of imputation upon motives has been held over their heads to deter them, and not without effect; and yet from all I have seen, there is no region of country where ten or fifteen or more Presbyterian clergymen of sound and intelligent minds and catholic views could go to, with a fairer chance of doing good to others and benefiting themselves. To illustrate by an example: there is one single town here of 5000 inhabitants, where there is no preacher of any denomination, and yet the people there express an anxious desire for a clergyman; a Presbyterian, if they can get one, but any sort rather than none, and they are ready and willing to give him an ample and prompt support. And I am assured by men who are fully informed that there are twenty such places more or less inviting where our clergymen would be hailed with joy. And when you consider, as I can assure you, that a large portion of the miners come from sections where they have been used to Sabbath services, and now feel quite lost during the day for want of them, in their seclusions; and when I assure you I have myself conversed with many pious persons who have gone to the mines, and earnestly desired that their religious destitution should not be forgotten by a Christian world—you will say, as I do, that God never designed that these people should be thrown away and forgotten by his people; they are seeds scattered by the winds that will yet in due season produce his harvest, and must not be neglected. But you will demand—what it is I want? And I answer—Proclaim this state of facts! Encourage right-minded men of your profession to come and settle here. Here is the point from whence to Christianize China! Nowhere could a missionary capable of preaching in the Chinese tongue, do as much good as here. Droves of these people, civil, polite, patient, willing to listen, anxious to become acquainted with our laws, our form of government, our sciences and religious services; all perhaps able, and believed to be willing to read our tracts, are here, and more coming! As these become prosperous, they return home—why not then take them when absent from their own temples, relieved from the influence of prejudice and the power of their priests and stringent government, and teach them the pure truths of Christianity, and with the gold they dig, let them carry home the true riches that never perish. I do not, my dear sir, expect you to perform any miracles, but your position is one of influence, and you have the power to make it subservient to this great end, and I respectfully call your attention to it, leaving to your own better judgment what you should do. With my best wishes for your welfare I remain very truly your friend and servant,

——

FRUITS.

We continue our extract from reports received from the missionaries. A very general request is, that they may have an interest in the prayers of God's people—"Brethren, pray for us," is often the closing sentence of these reports.

From a Missionary in Iowa—Acknowledgment of Kindness, and Suffering still.

Had it not been for extraordinary circumstances, I should have sent you a line of grateful acknowledgment long before this, for the favours received.

The same week that I received the gift from "the unknown friend," myself and family but narrowly escaped with our lives from a falling house. The winds have been so high, and rain so constant, as to do incalculable damage both to houses and land. In our bottom lands, every thing has been swept away—fences, crops, houses, &c. presenting now one scene of desolation. On the upland, there will, in all probability, be much suffering this winter, from the fact of general failure in produce by constant storms. Myself and family have suffered much. Being driven out of house, we had for some time to put up with an old cabin, where we were much exposed, consequently we were all sick.

I have now no house at all adequate to protect us during the winter should our lives be spared—but I think the prospect is favourable. The Lord did deliver us, and we can trust him still.

I thank you, dear sir, for your suggestion to the ladies, at which they kindly supplied my need. By the rain and exposure our few articles were nearly spoiled: and my few books did not escape. But these are not worthy of consideration, compared with the mercy of Almighty God, who surely saved us.

That unknown friend, though not having seen yet I love—and I trust I shall be able to manifest it, the Lord granting us to meet in this world—for it not only relieved me in a temporal way, but did much encourage my heart and strengthen me for my work. I receive it as an evidence of the work of His blessed spirit, and that He is not unmindful of those who are in obscurity and difficulty. I have a very encouraging field of usefulness here; though a cloud may seem to hang over it for the present. I trust the Lord will have a people here who will be active in doing good to others.

Thirty-five have joined our little church in about a year, and there are those who are still inquiring the way of life.

J. R.

—

From a Missionary in Wisconsin—Schools needed, &c.

This place demands my whole time and strength. It is growing rapidly, and is a point of great importance. We now have 18 members, six having been added at our last communion, the first Sunday in May, and one since. Five out of the seven were received upon examination, though they had at one time been members of some church. We have a flourishing Sunday-school of about 75 scholars. Our weekly prayer meetings are pretty well attended, and there is a good state of feeling in the church, though there is no evidence of the special presence of the Holy Spirit. Our audiences are very good for such a population. There is as yet no other church organized here, if we except the Romish church. There will no doubt soon be a Methodist church, and an Episcopal. There is room for them to work. We have a very large Romish population. The priest lately returned from Europe, and has $5000 for building a church here, and from what I can learn, I have no doubt but that they will make this a strong-hold, and will soon have their nunneries, &c. &c. They are very strong in the State. We should have, by all means, a high school here for boys, and also a seminary for girls. The difficulty is to get the man and money to commence the work. Such an enterprise here, would succeed well, and would be of incalculable benefit to the cause of Christ. I mean, of course, schools under the best religious influences. Br. B. talked some of undertaking the work, but we did not know where to get money to build with. We would need about $1000 to buy a lot, and put up a good school-house, and furnish it with desks, &c. He is well fitted for the work, having had experience in teaching, and being fond of the work. There are no superior educational advantages nearer than forty miles in any direction. Such a school would be the means, I believe, of bringing many young men into the ministry, and of exerting a powerful influence upon the whole region. Had I the money, I would give it to the work, for I feel that money could not be better expended. The plan would be to commence at once a Presbyterial High School, or commence as a private enterprise, and after two years or so, have it taken under the care of the Presbytery. Now is the time to lay eternal foundations here. Two years hence, or even a year may be too late, or may seriously injure our prospects. I wish I could plead this cause with some of our rich Christians east.

W. W. McN.

—

From a Missionary in Indiana—Revival—Real Missionary Field.

But what rejoices us most is that God has blessed our labours in the conversion of sinners. At a communion meeting held on the 1st Sabbath of June, and the Saturday previous, in this place, 8 were added on examination, and 3 by certificate, and but one of them previously a Presbyterian. Nine parents were admitted to the privilege of the church. Four families and the wife of one of our members. In those four families there are more than thirty children. On yesterday I baptized thirteen in three of the families. There are others upon whose minds I hope the Spirit of God is operating. The Lord carry on the work he has begun to his own glory and the salvation of sinners.

Howard and Tipton are two of the best counties, so far as fertility of soil is concerned, in the State, and will undoubtedly at no very distant day be very popular and wealthy. Emigration to them is very rapid. The emigrants, poor though enterprising, are scarcely able for a few years after they come, to maintain their families comfortably. And yet during that time they have roads to open, school-houses to build, and churches to erect for the benefit of the more wealthy, who will follow after the burden of opening a new country is done.

From Kokomo to Tipton is sixteen miles, and there is no cut-out road, just a trace most of the way through the woods. Last summer I got lost nearly every time I passed from the one to the other. The last time I was in Tipton, I got lost in attempting to visit one of the members somewhat off my usual route, and wandered about in the woods until dark. This is missionary ground, emphatically so, and promising missionary ground too; and I do hope our church will continue to occupy it, though I do not know that I will consent to occupy both fields another year after the commission expires, which you sent me. God will provide for me, but do let us have your prayers and your Christian sympathies.

J. D.

—

Cheering Report from a Missionary in Georgia, written and received in September.

Owing to constant engagements from home, I have necessarily delayed my report for a few days. I have now been in commission of the Board of Missions for three months from the 1st of June. I have under my charge three churches, viz. Ephesus, Muscogee, and Mount Zion. Of the first, I am installed pastor—of the two others I am stated supply—for each one-fourth of my time. To only one of these churches, however, (Mt. Zion,) I am preaching as missionary. The other two sustain the ministry of the gospel without aid from the Board. The two first-named churches are in an unusually prosperous condition, in spiritual things. In the first, we have enjoyed, and still enjoy, the gracious outpouring of the Spirit of God. Fifteen have been recently added to the Church, and a number of others are hopefully converted; we expect to receive some four or five on next Sabbath, on profession of faith in Christ. At our last meeting in Muscogee Church, we received five members on profession of faith, and a number are anxiously seeking the way of life.

The Mt. Zion Church is a small and feeble band, and have, until this year, been destitute of the regular means of grace for a considerable time. The state of things in this church, however, is much more encouraging than formerly. The members, though few and poor in worldly things, have, I trust, the Spirit of Christ, and they are ardently praying, and longing, and looking for a revival of God's work in their church and community, and there are several in the congregation, of the unconverted, serious and thoughtful on the subject of religion, and some, I trust, truly awakened.

In my field, we have regular Bible class and catechetical instruction for the young. Regular prayer meetings also are kept up, and preaching exclusively for the colored people on every Sabbath afternoon; much good, I trust, is doing among this too much neglected class. The congregations in my field are usually very good, and on the increase. We take up regular quarterly collections for the different Boards of our Church; and I believe there is a growing spirit of liberality in our churches, though we fall far short yet of the full measure of duty in this means of usefulness.

So far as I know, the utmost harmony and brotherly kindness prevail among our people, and also between us and other denominations.

This section of our country has been specially favoured this year with the outpouring of the Spirit upon many of our churches, and upon many churches of other denominations; and many souls, I humbly hope, have been added to the Lord.

In exchange for the labours of other brethren, I have visited and laboured for several of the churches in the surrounding country, and I can truly say that I have not known, for years past, so prosperous a state of things in spiritual religion, in many of our churches, and so encouraging prospects for good.

F. McM.

—

From a Missionary in Iowa—Church Extension.

One word, in general, in behalf of Church Extension. Any one who is even partially acquainted with the condition of the churches in the West, must at once perceive the vast importance of this enterprise of our own beloved branch of Zion.

Next to the ministry of the gospel, houses of worship, even though they should be small, are essentially requisite to the proper advancement of the cause and kingdom of our Lord. Until these are secured, congregations and churches are wanting in external bonds of union, and are much more likely to be discouraged, or dispersed; but once comfortably situated in their own temples, there are common interests, and incentives to put themselves in possession of all the privileges of the sanctuary. Very few, however, in the Iowa churches, are yet in circumstances which will enable them to do much in the erection of church edifices. Nevertheless they are generally ready to work with their own hands, as also to contribute of the first fruits of their toil; and having done these, they very gratefully and humbly receive the smaller portion, according to our Saviour's declaration, (Acts xx. 35,) "It is more blessed to give than to receive." We often wonder that this part of Christian benevolence receives, as yet, so little support. Could pastors, and sessions, and churches, in the older States, where God has often poured out his Spirit, and intrusted freely of the bounty of his hand, once see the good that is done, the interest that is excited, and the encouragement afforded to our little bands, scattered over this vast and beautiful prairie land, by the contribution of but one or two hundred dollars, from the Church Extension Fund, we feel very confident that they would cheerfully contribute ten-fold to this now neglected cause.

We do not thus plead, to encourage supineness in the churches here: God forbid! On the contrary, we rejoice to be able to bear testimony, that our people here (with rare exceptions, as everywhere exist) act nobly, in endeavouring to put themselves in possession of all the privileges of the gospel.

J. D. M.

From another Missionary in Georgia—Religious instruction to the Coloured People.

I have preached regularly on Sabbath afternoon to the blacks, and feel a good deal encouraged in my labours among them. At Hebron and at Concord, they manifest a good deal of interest under the plain preaching of "Christ and him crucified." It is true they are ignorant, and very much the creatures of feeling and impulse, but really they are a very hopeful part of my charge. Christian masters are not yet awake, as they should be, to their duty in that relation. They will, they must see, and endeavour to discharge their obligations in this matter before long. Then shall the "church in the house" include not only the children, but the servants of believers, and the blessings of the covenant be extended to them also. The Lord hasten it in his own appointed time. H. N.

From a Missionary in Indiana—A Bible in the hands of a Catholic.

One person was received into the church on profession of faith in Christ. He is an Irishman. He was formerly a labourer on the public works, and, like most of that class of men, was a Roman Catholic. He saved enough of his earnings to purchase one hundred and sixty acres of land in this county, and he now has a comfortable farm. A Protestant Bible fell into his hands a few years ago, and by reading it, he was led to see that the Church of Rome and God's word are at variance on important points. The result has been, that he has renounced Popery, and embraced the Protestant faith as held by our Church. I trust he is one of God's elect, and that he will never return to the service of the man of sin. H. L. McG.

Acknowledgment of a Box of Clothing—from a Missionary in Indiana.

Your box arrived to-day. The articles were all valuable, and the very things we needed; and could not have been better adapted to our wants. In accordance with your request, I have written an acknowledgment to the donors. How many hearts are made to rejoice through the kindness of those who care for the poor missionary; and how many poor missionaries bless God that such an Institution as the Board of Missions exists, to bless the millions to whose wants it administers! I have thought that good might be done by noticing the acknowledgments of missionaries more publicly, that churches may see, and feel that their favours to them are not bestowed upon the ungrateful; but are remembered with gratitude by those who receive them. Yours, &c. W. M. S.

ANOTHER CHURCH GONE!

Short and good.—The blessing of the Lord go with Pastor and People!

I have nothing special to report since my last, except this, that it is the determination of the little church in this place to draw no more on the funds of the Board of Missions. My last quarter's allowance is now due, and when forwarded, will close the account of the Board with this church, except so far as our people may be able to contribute to re-place what has been given to aid them in their weakness. There is harmony among the flock, and a growing interest in attendance on the public ministrations of the sanctuary. In four years the membership is more than doubled, the salary increased in larger proportion, and a parsonage house erected at an expense of $1000. With many thanks for the aid of the Board. P.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Missions.

Honorary Members have a right to sit in the meetings of the Board, and engage in their deliberations, but have no right to vote. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to them every year.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

To the Trustees of the Board of Missions of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, and to their successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of ———, or I devise a certain messuage, and tract of land, &c., to be held by the said Trustees, and their successors for ever, to and for the uses, and under the direction of the said Board of Missions of the said General Assembly, according to the provisions of their charter.

☞ Persons making bequests to the Board of Missions are requested to be careful in adopting the above form.

TREASURY AT PHILADELPHIA.

Receipts into the Treasury of the Board of Missions, during the month of September, 1851.

SYNOD OF ALBANY.

Pby of Albany.—Northampton church	$10 00

SYNOD OF BUFFALO.

Pby of Steuben.—Portageville ch 9 64; Windsor ch 7 50	17 14
Pby of Wyoming.—Moscow ch 4 50; Caledonia ch 30	34 50
Pby of Buffalo City.—Rochester 2d ch	7 02

SYNOD OF NEW YORK.

Pby of Hudson.—Young People's Miss Society of Goshen church, balance to const Mrs MARY EVANS an hon mem	20 00
Pby of North River.—Rondout ch	180 00
Pby of New York.—Duane st ch N Y. from Thomas H Faile Esq. 100; Greenbush ch 5	105 00

SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY.

Pby of New Brunswick.—Squan Village ch	5 61
Pby of Raritan.—Solebury ch 10; Sab Sch Clinton ch 22 34	32 34
Pby of Susquehanna.—Wysox ch 5; Thro' Rev J Foster Treas of Presby from Troy ch 5; Friendsville ch 1; Warren ch 4 78; Burlington ch 50 cts; Towanda ch, Special col 22 92; Rome ch 25	64 20
Pby of Luzerne.—Port Carbon ch 26; Newton ch 6	32 00

SYNOD OF PHILADELPHIA.

Pby of Philadelphia.—A member of 10th ch Phila	1 00
Pby of Philadelphia 2d.—Conshohocken ch 14 49; Germantown ch from Mrs J S Henry 10, and from Miss T B 5	29 49
Pby of Donegal.—Wrightsville ch	18 00
Pby of Baltimore.—Franklin st ch Baltimore 100; Havre de Grace ch 20	120 00
Pby of Carlisle.—Cumberland ch additional	11 00
Pby of Huntingdon.—Lower Tuscarora ch	13 87
Pby of Northumberland.—Church of Derry and Washingtonville 47; Milton ch 20; Northumberland ch 21 55; Sunbury ch 22 45	111 00

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Blairsville.—Fairfield ch 10; Salem ch 25	35 00
Pby of Erie.—Sugar Grove ch	2 00

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of Steubenville.—New Hagerstown ch	21 82

SYNOD OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Pby of Logansport.—Logansport ch	11 00
Pby of Lake.—Salem ch	4 00
Pby of Fort Wayne.—Cedar Creek ch	1 00

SYNOD OF ILLINOIS.

Pby of Rock River.—"A Friend" to const Rev ITHAMAR PILLSBURY and THOS H BEBE, Esq. of Illinois, hon mems	100 00

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA.

Pby of Montgomery.—Christiansburg ch	14 00

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Pby of Fayetteville.—Thro' Jas Martine Esq. Treasurer of Presby from Sharon ch 4; Mineral Spring ch 1 05; Salem ch 1 65; Rock Fish Factory 9 25; China Grove ch 12 15; Collection at Presb'y in St Paul's ch 13 32, less exchange 21 cts—making	41 21

SYNOD OF GEORGIA.

Pby of Georgia.—Collection per Rev John Winn, Flemington, Ga	5 00
Pby of Cherokee.—Roswell ch	10 00

SYNOD OF ALABAMA.

Pby of East Alabama.—Jacksonville ch 11; Bethesda ch 3	14 00

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI.

Pby of Louisiana.—Palemquine ch	55 31
	$1126 51

MISCELLANEOUS.

"A B" for sustentation fund 1000; "A B" for general fund 1000; "A B" for California 500; John Stewart, Graceham Md 5; "A Young Friend" Norfolk Va 10; Mrs C. a widow's mite 5; "A Debtor to Grace" Savannah Ga 5, R F Lester, Petersburg Va 5; An unknown donor N Y 20; W P Martin, Columbia Tenn 10; A Friend of Missions 3; Miss Eliza Robbins, Petersburg Va 5; Misses Fannie and Cornelia Barbour, Liberty Mills Va 1; A Friend of the Board to const Rev M ALLEN WILLIAMS an hon mem 50; Rev W E Dixon, Esperance N Y 5; Rev J G Ralston, Norristown, Pa to const himself an hon mem 50; Rev Alfred Gardner, Big Hollow, N Y 2 50; John Parkhill, Belair, Florida 10; Mrs Thos L Crittenden 10; Left at Mission House N Y 5	2701 50
	$3828 01

LEGACIES.

Legacy of Miss Mary Adams, late a member of the church of Derry and Washingtonville, Pa	$50
Legacy of Mr Jas McCormick of Ohio, formerly a member of Springfield ch Presby of Wooster	40	90 00
Total		$3918 01

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

Receipts into the Treasury during the month of September, 1851.

"A B" 1000; Draft on Treas at Pittsburg for funds in his hands 25; Rev P E Bishop, Guthriesville, S C for Brownsville ch 10, and for ch in San Francisco 15	$1050 00

S. D. POWEL, Treasurer.

CLOTHING.

Received since the last acknowledgment.

One Box from the Female Benevolent Society of Stillwater ch, New Jersey, valued at	$45 13
One Box from the Ladies of Greenwich ch, N J. valued at	72 00
One Box from Sab Sch of Trenton 3d ch, valued at	100 00
Total	$217 13

TREASURY AT PITTSBURGH.

Receipts into the Treasury at Pittsburgh, Pa., during the month of September, 1851.

SYNOD OF PITTSBURGH.

Pby of Ohio.—Miller's Run ch	$15 16
Pby of Blairsville.—Saltsburg ch 37 30; New Alexandria ch 15 07; Congruity ch 28 20	80 57
Pby of Clarion.—Licking ch quarterly contribution 5 67; Concord ch 6 50; Callensburgh ch 1; Bethlehem ch 2	15 17
Pby of Redstone.—New Providence ch	4 50
Pby of Beaver.—Neshanock ch	27 37

SYNOD OF WHEELING.

Pby of St. Clairsville.—St. Clairsville ch	11 25
Pby of Steubenville.—Steubenville 1st ch Mr and Mrs Hans Wilson each 175	350 00
Pby of Washington.—Wheeling 1st ch (several individuals in answer to a recent call) 30; Fairview ch 51	81 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

E Clifford Esq. New Lisbon 5; John Anderson Esq. 3	8 00
Total	$593 02

J. D. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

CLOTHING.

A Box from Ladies of Unity ch Beaver Presb'y, valued at	35 20

TREASURY AT LOUISVILLE.

Receipts into the Treasury at Louisville, Ky., during the month of September, 1851.

Collection in congregation of Fairfield Ohio per Rev J G Reasor	35 00
John W Pratt Tuscaloosa Ala per Rev E P Humphrey	10 00
Springfield ch Ohio " J D Thorpe	14 61
Somerset ch " " "	11 62
Mrs McFarland Louisville Ky for support of Rev H L McGuire	20 00
Bayou Gross Tete ch La per Rev J E C Doremus	10 00
Union Grove ch Ill " J H Dickey	13 00
Monticello Ky " S Scott	5 00
Woodford & Harmony " W W Hill	32 00
Ladies Assoc. of Maysville ch Ky per Lewis Colling	50 00
Bloomington Ia (balance) per Rev W W Hill	5 50
Pleasant Grove ch Ky " C Sturdevant	5 80
Utica ch Ind " M Zinck	2 45
Geo Zinck	1 00
Covington ch Ky per Rev Chas Sturdevant	31 00
Rev Wm Orr in part of $50 for Hon Mem	5 00
Hon John M Preston Covington Ky	40 00
Newport ch Ky in part	3 00
Madison Ind addl	10 00
Lavonia " "	10 70
Louisville 3d ch Ky addl last year	18 00
Shiloh & Olivet chs Ky in part	52 50
J H Logan & Lady	3 00
Mulberry ch Ky in part	58 05
Rev J H Canfield	37 50
(Amount due J D Thorpe)	7 12
Smyrna Ind per Rev H L McGuire	7 00
Indianapolis " Dr Coe	40 00
John Safford " J M Ray	50 00
Putnamsville Ind per Rev Thos Whallon	8 00
Ohio ch " " " "	5 25
Vandalia ch " " " "	8 25
Sugar Creek ch Ind " Jas Safford	11 00
West Point ch Iowa per Rev J G Wilson	3 05
Mt Carmel ch Ill " P N Thompson	8 00
Maumee Presb'y " T P Emerson	30 00
Mt Blanchord Ohio " "	7 50
Davenport Iowa " J D Mason	10 00
Munice ch " " W M Stryker	20 17
Covington ch Ky (in part) per Rev G B Armstrong	6 50
Burlington ch Ky " " "	9 70
Paris ch Ky " H F Bowen	10 00
Fairfield ch Iowa " L G Bell	17 12
Total	$773 39

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

PRESBYTERIAN EDUCATION ROOMS,
No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Business Officers of the Board.

C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary.
Wm. Chester, D. D., Asso. Sec'y. and General Agent.
J. B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer.

Letters and Communications for the BOARD OF EDUCATION on the subject of Ministerial Education, or of Schools, Academies and Colleges, may be addressed to the Rev. C. Van Rensselaer, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, No. 265 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

Remittances of money may be made to Joseph B. Mitchell, Esq., Treasurer, Mechanics Bank, Philadelphia.

I. MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth labourers into His harvest."

NO INCREASE OF CANDIDATES.

We invite the attention of the Church to the fact that there is no increase of candidates for the first half of this ecclesiastical year; that there has been no increase for the last seven years; and that the responsibility of this state of things rests upon the Church, upon its ministers, elders, communicants.

It is true that our ministry is increasing from year to year; for the sources of supply are sufficiently great, as yet, to give an increase over and above the deaths and other causes of decline. But this increase is not sufficiently great to meet the enlarging operations of the Church and the calls and claims of a perishing world. Is prayer to the Lord of the harvest sufficiently attended to in the family and in the sanctuary?

EARLY ATTENTION TO THE WORK.

The most effectual way of attempting to secure an answer to the prayer for more labourers in the harvest, is for parents to begin early in dedicating their own sons to this work, and in training them up for it, with supplications, aims and efforts tending in this direction.

The following communication, taken from the "Southern Presbyterian," is worthy of a careful perusal by all who are interested in seeking a supply of faithful ministers in the Church.

DEDICATION OF INFANTS TO THE MINISTRY.

Mr. Editor:—I have been reading recently the biography of that remarkable preacher, John Summerfield. He was one of those who had been solemnly dedicated to God for the ministry at his birth! The early development of his talents at school, together with the extraordinary benevolence of his heart, greatly encouraged his father, that he would eventually become a preacher. When John, however, became a lad of sixteen years, he became dissipated, and fell into various irregularities of life. Even at this time, however, his father, clinging to the promise of God, did not despair. At nineteen, John was converted; and what a light in the church he became, is well known. It may not be amiss to narrate in connexion with this case, one existing among ourselves. D. F. was dedicated to the ministry by a dying father, when he was but an infant. To meet the wishes of the dying parent, he was put to books and sent to college. So far as I can now remember, precisely the conversation here narrated, took place between a brother of his and the writer in the fall of 1834. "How is it, brother J." said I, "that your father, having been an elder in the church, and leaving so many sons, did not raise at least one preacher?" "Oh," said he, "there is to be one." "Which?" said I. "D." he replied. "Where is he?" was my answer, for I had never heard of him before. "At A. in college, in the Senior Class." "Is he pious?" "No, but he will be." "How do you know that?" "Why, father when dying solemnly dedicated him to the ministry; and we have never doubted but that God in due time will call him to the work!" I was astonished above measure; and was ready to say, as Christ did to the Syrian mother, "O man, great is thy faith!" It pleased God, in the spring of 1835, to bring me into acquaintance with D. He was still a Senior, among the first in his class, and exceedingly ambitious. But during the protracted meeting held in A. at that time, he became converted; and although he resisted the call to the ministry for nearly two years, he was at last so "inwardly moved of the Holy Ghost" to preach the gospel, that, like Matthew, he literally left his business and followed Christ! For many years past has he been preaching with success the "unsearchable riches" of grace. Long may he continue so to preach, and thus to encourage other parents to imitate his sainted father! The Rev. Dr. Golding (of precious memory) told me, many a year ago, that when he informed his mother he had made up his mind to study theology, and hoped that she would not object—her reply was: "Why, my son, that is what I have been praying for, for many years!" If we needed scriptural examples on this head, Samuel is such; Jeremiah is such; John the Baptist is such.

Probably there are few pious parents who do not dedicate their children to God, even from their birth. But the point I am aiming at is higher. Are there many who consecrate their sons to the ministry from their birth? This is a higher dedication than the other, and requires possibly, if not a greater, at least a more specific faith? But, you are ready to say, "it looks too much like dictating to God what our sons shall be. The ministry is a holy calling, and for parents to thrust their children into it of themselves as it were, appears presumptuous and sinful." Now, while there is some truth, there is far more error in these objections. The ministry is indeed a holy vocation, and to fill it with unworthy men, would be the greatest affliction under which the church could suffer. Nor can any system of a mere man making ministry be tolerated for a moment. As every believer is called by grace into the kingdom of God, so every preacher, worthy of the name, must be inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to assume that office—God's call, however, is not the rule of our duty, in this case, and for the very good reason, that we do not know the Divine mind on the subject. He gives us a child, a son. What shall we do with it? Dedicate it to God in that sphere in which it can most glorify his name.

This, not always, but ordinarily is, the ministry. Why not ask then for one dear babe, not simply life, health, protection and grace—but ministerial qualification? If we give him to God in part, why not in total? If we desire for him some place in the kingdom; why not ask a specific place? Ah, it is not a fear of dictation on this subject that is in our way, but unbelief. We lack faith to make the offering. We are too selfish, too earthly, too carnal. Oh, if the sons that should be born in the church even for one year, were all solemnly dedicated to God for the ministry; and were suitable prayers and means to follow such dedication, what a host of heaven-inspired preachers would the next generation possess! Brethren, and sisters too, look at this matter. Mother, as the little one first opens his eyes upon you, as he begins to smile upon your countenance, what request have you to make to God for him? What do you desire him to be? A lawyer, a physician, a soldier, a statesman? Oh, spurn such low thoughts, and ask, that he may tread in the steps of Paul, and of Christ, in publishing salvation. Oh, could you have around your dying bed a son who is a minister of Christ, who had been dedicated to that office by yourself for many long years, and who had already turned many to righteousness—what joy would fill your bosom; and how would you be ready like Simeon to exclaim, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace."

One caution we deem it prudent here to give. Let the dedication of your son to God be private, or known to but few. Never mention it, unless under very peculiar circumstances, to the child himself. Don't speak of it to others in his presence. Such conduct as this vitiates, we fear, the dedication, or, if not, tends to counteract it. Let the matter be between you and God. Educate and control your son with this design; but keep it altogether hidden from his view. And even should your consecrated boy become wild and dissipated, don't give up. Pray the more earnestly—plead with the greater importunity. Remember John Summerfield, remember Augustin, remember Paul. God's promise is sure; and if your faith be genuine, it will and must succeed. God help you! and may you, O struggling father or mother, may you see your dedicated boy not only a preacher of the gospel, but a winner of souls to Christ.

A Parent.

PASTORAL HINTS TO CANDIDATES.

Example.—One watch set right will do to try many by; but, on the other hand, one that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighbourhood; and the same may be said of the example we individually set to those around us.

Holy Scripture.—The Scripture is written for the learned and unlearned alike; and yet is "wisdom in a mystery which the princes of this world understand not;" a sealed book which the greatest sophists may be most unacquainted with; it is like that pillar of fire and cloud that parted between the Israelites and the Egyptians, giving a clear and comfortable light to all those that are under the manuduction and guidance thereof, but being full of darkness and obscurity to those that rebel against it. Divine truth is not to be discerned so much in a man's brain as in his heart.

How to bear Afflictions.—The Rev. Jeremiah Whitaker was a very faithful preacher of the gospel, first in Rutlandshire, and afterwards in the vicinity of London. He was once invited to become the head of a college. His reply was, "My heart doth more desire to be a constant preacher, than to be master of any college in the world."

During the latter part of his life, he was subject to frequent attacks of a malady which gave him excruciating pain. He used to say, "Though my pains be above the strength of nature, they are not above the supports of grace."

When his fits of pain were coming on, he would say, "Now in the strength of the Lord God I will undergo these pains. O my God, put underneath me thine everlasting arms, and strengthen me."

Notwithstanding all his sufferings, he often told those around him that he would not, for a thousand worlds, exchange situations with any man on earth, who was living in a state of impenitence.

When he felt his pains coming on, he would request his friends to leave him, that they might not be grieved by hearing his groanings. As his death drew near, his fits were more severe; still, he could say "Through mercy, I have not one repining thought against God."

Reader, your afflictions have been very light compared with those of this man of God: can you say, I have not had one repining thought against God?

THINK.—Thought engenders thought. Place one idea upon paper, another will follow it, and still another, until you have written a page. You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom. The more you draw from it, the more clear and fruitful it will be. If you neglect to think yourself, and use other people's thoughts, giving them utterance only, you will never know what you are capable of. At first your ideas may come out in lumps, homely and shapeless; but no matter; time and perseverance will arrange and polish them. Learn to think, and you will learn to write; the more you think, the better you will express your ideas.

CRUCIFYING THE WORLD.—When one becomes noxious to society, an enemy to the commonwealth, and a rebel against just authority, then he merits such a death as crucifixion. Well, the world is an enemy to the life divine, noxious to the welfare of my soul, and a rebel against the authority of heaven. Therefore I should earnestly seek to have it crucified to my affections, and my affections to it. When a person is crucified, his friends need expect no favours from him, and his foes need fear no harm at his hands. So, if the world be crucified to me, I shall neither court its smiles nor fear its frowns. I shall expect nothing, and I shall never be disappointed. Therefore, if I would win heaven, I must crucify the world; for while the world lives in the affections, it will always be rolling itself between the soul and heaven.

DARK HOURS.—There are hours, dark hours, that mark the history of the brightest year. For not a whole month, in any of the millions of the past, perhaps, has the sun shone brilliantly all the time. And there have been cold and stormy days in every year. And yet the mists and shadows of the darkest hours were dissipated, and flitted heedlessly away. The cruelest of the ice fetters have been broken and dissolved, and the most furious storm loses its power to harm.

And what a parable is all this of human life—of our inside world, where the heart works at its destined labours. Here, too, we have the over-shadowings of dark hours, and many a cold blast chills the heart to its core. But what matters it? Man is born a hero, and it is only by darkness and storms that heroism gains its greatest and best development and illustration—then it kindles the black cloud into a blaze of glory, and the storm bears it more rapidly to its destiny. Despair not then. Never give up; while one good power is yours, use it. Disappointment will be realized. Mortifying failure may attend this effort and that one—but only be honest, and struggle on, and it will work well.

SOLITUDE.—He that is united to God loves solitude. But it is solitude in the relative rather than the absolute sense. True, he is secluded from men, but while he is shut out from the world he is shut up in God; and in the absence of human society, has the far better society of the Infinite Mind.

II. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF DR. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth; the faithful fail from among the children of men."

JEREMIAH CHAMBERLAIN, one of the standard-bearers of Zion, has been called to his rest. His loss is great and grievous; but all things are to the praise of God. The decrees of God are his eternal purpose according to the counsel of his will, whereby for his own glory, he hath foreordained whatsoever comes to pass." Dr. Chamberlain has done a useful work in his day, as one of the most indefatigable champions of the cause of education. It is due to his memory and to the cause of Christ, that some one of his brethren, well acquainted with his character and services, should give to the public an extended obituary notice. Dr. Chamberlain was among the earliest graduates at the Theological Seminary at Princeton. After preaching a few years, he was called to the Presidency of Centre College, in Kentucky, where he remained from 1824 to 1831. He was then called to Oakland College, under the care of the Synod of Mississippi, where he has served with unremitting zeal for about twenty-one years. The history of that institution is in a great measure the history of Dr. Chamberlain's labours.

His death was by the hand of violence; but it is sufficient for the servant that he should not be above his master. Dr. Chamberlain was remarkable for meekness, gentleness, and courtesy—the very opposite of those qualities which naturally invite to violence. He was among the most inoffensive of men and the most devoted of Christians.

The following account of his melancholy death is given in the Presbyterian.

The tragical death of the venerable President of Oakland College has awakened a painful interest in so many hearts, that it may be well to present, through your columns, a history of the affair as it has been communicated to me by a friend, who visited the family of the deceased soon after the occurrence.

Under the excitement connected with the late election for a State convention in Mississippi, a card was published in Port Gibson, asserting that a student had been expelled from Oakland College for expressing disunion sentiments in a speech. This charge was at once contradicted by Dr. Chamberlain and one of the trustees. Mr. George A. Briscoe was then mentioned by the author of the first card as his informant. In an excited state of mind, owing to his position in the affair, Briscoe, on the 5th of September, was in Rodney, and armed himself with a bowie-knife. After drinking freely through the day, he started home, driving up to Dr. Chamberlain's house as he passed. The Doctor met him without suspicion, and stood talking with him at the gate. His two daughters, from the house, observed what followed. They heard Briscoe call their father repeatedly a liar; to which the latter replied, "You must prove that,"—when Briscoe twice struck him to the ground with a loaded whip, and upon his rising the last time, stabbed him with his knife to the heart. A son-in-law of the Doctor had rushed to his relief, but reached him only to aid him in walking to the house, while the murderer stood wiping the blood from his knife. Upon being asked if he was hurt, Dr. Chamberlain replied, "I am killed." He entered the hall, where his daughters and wife met him, and to the exclamation from one of them, "Lord Jesus, receive his spirit," returned a smile full of the serenity and hope he could not utter with his lips, and fell and expired. On the Sabbath, 7th September, his remains, attended by a large concourse of people, were laid in the College burial ground. Little was said, for all hearts were pervaded with a sorrow that could not be expressed in words.

On the afternoon of the same Sabbath, Briscoe was found by a negro in a thicket, in a dying state, giving every indication of having poisoned himself. He lived a few hours after being found, and then passed to the bar of his Judge.

Dr. Chamberlain had done a work for the South-west, in the promotion of education and religion, which, perhaps, no other one man has ever equalled. His work was done, and his Master has called him to his rest in his own way. Oakland College has lost in him a father, as well as a presiding officer. His hand struck the first blow upon the first tree that was felled upon the College grounds, and from that day to the moment of his death, a period of twenty-one years, he had given to the Institution his thoughts, his toils, and his prayers. His martyr blood will now present a new plea to the thousands who loved and revered him, to exert themselves to sustain and cherish the College to which the resources of his life had been devoted, and in whose defence he died. J. B. S.

A SPEECH IN THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

We regret exceedingly that no report of the debate in the Assembly on the subject of Education was made for the papers. We were ourselves so much engaged in it, that it was out of the question to make a report. The following speech, delivered towards the conclusion of the debate, is the only one that has been rescued. It was delivered by the Rev. Richard Kay, of Western New York.

The subject of religious education is, doubtless, one of the most important which comes before us; and, in the circumstances, the most important perhaps of all the matters respecting which we are called upon to act. Within the last fifty years religious education has been strangely neglected by the Church. Its importance, though set forth in the Scriptures, and apparent in facts, we have failed to appreciate and neglected to act upon. The Church, in consequence, has suffered loss; and our own denomination in particular. Children of Presbyterian parents have gone out from the church of their fathers and scattered themselves among other denominations, and among the people of the world; and are lost to our Church and her beloved institutions, who might else be numbered among her members and increase her influence for good.

This matter may not any longer be neglected; the Church, as such, is loudly called upon to come up now to this work. God has called and is calling her. Religious education must begin in the family. Believing parents must look on their children as heirs apparent of "loving kindness and tender mercies," the visible heritors of the kingdom of God—notwithstanding they may forfeit the blessings they are heirs to, "as Esau, who for one morsel sold his birthright." Christian parents must understand these things better and be more affected by them, and more alive to them; and teach them to their children with diligence and tender solicitude; and bring them up for God and for his Church expressly, avowedly, and with all their heart.

When it becomes necessary to send them from the family to acquire higher degrees and other branches of knowledge than the privileges of home afford them, they must send them to Christian schools where the doctrines of our faith are taught, and "the obedience of faith is inculcated continually;" and this throughout the entire course of their educational training. To bring this about must be our own aim and endeavour; or we fail in our duty toward the children of the Church who are in covenant with God, and deprive them of the choicest privileges of their birthright.

It was while men slept that the enemy sowed tares. So in this case. For not only is the faith departed from and corrupted in popular systems of education; but science also is vitiated and debased. School books are put into the hands of our children which bear the marks of rationalistic or atheistic hands. Our youth, for example, are not taught in them to recognise a present Deity in his works. For the doctrine is, that nothing more is necessary to the continued existence of the universe, than for God to have made and balanced all things at first, and then set them a going; and that, from this starting point, they have continued to exist and to move on in their order and harmony until now; and shall so continue "until the final consummation of all things" by the sole virtue of inherent qualities of their own and some obvious laws of nature! What is this but to deny the ruling presence of Jehovah? and subvert the doctrine, That Christ upholds all things by the word of his power? God has no providence. He is set as far away from us as the days of creation, in point of time, and at the other side of all intervening transactions in point of distance—as if the intention were to make it certain, that if our children pursue the natural sciences, "God shall not be in all their thoughts."

I do not want to live in a world which has not God in it. Nor do I want my children, when learning about the planetary system and the stars, to forget that it is God who upholds them; and that he maintains them in their being, and order, and harmony, every moment. I have mentioned this particular, only as an example, to show that as a subtle enemy is in the field, the effort before us is one requiring unceasing vigilance; and as a further evidence, that education must proceed on Christian principle from the beginning; for the world will corrupt it unless it be managed and controlled by the church of Christ, unto whom it is solemnly committed; and whose duty it therefore is to purify the fountains of learning, to elevate the standard, and revive and carry forward the religious education of her children: an object worthy of untiring exertion and unceasing prayer, to accomplish which must be the great effort of the Presbyterian Church during the next fifty years.

I desire to feel the importance of this subject more deeply than I do; and that when we return, as we shall, to all parts of the country, we may remember that this very work is included in the terms of our commission, "Go and teach all nations, &c." Sure I am that the result will recompense our toil, as there is truth in the promise, "Lo, I am with you always." We shall not labour in vain in the Lord. Our children shall be all taught of God; their conversion shall be the general rule, they shall be brought in as living stones in the temple, and flourish in the garden of the Lord; and shall grow as among grass, and as willows by the water courses.

Nor shall the benefit be confined to the natural offspring of those who are the blessed of the Lord. Others, sharing with them in the outward privileges of a Christian education, shall partake the spiritual also, and become fellow citizens with the saints. How would this increase the benign influence of the Church upon our fallen world; and extend the knowledge of the glory of the Lord!

HEBREW IN COLLEGE.

It is proof of the enterprise and sagacity of our Western brethren that they are taking the lead in promoting theological education by affording facilities for the acquisition of the Hebrew language in the collegiate course. So far as our knowledge extends, HANOVER COLLEGE, Indiana, under the care of the Synod of Indiana, was the first of our institutions which encouraged the acquisition of Hebrew by undergraduates. The MIAMI UNIVERSITY has recently established a Professorship of the Hebrew language, and the following interesting notice appears in Dr. Rice's paper in reference to its prospects.

By a provision of the Trustees of Miami University, the members of the junior and senior classes, who have the ministry in view, are allowed to study Hebrew. Upwards of twenty from these two classes are now engaged in that study with that excellent scholar, Dr. Claybaugh; and in the whole College, there are more than fifty who are preparing to preach Christ.

The following communication appeared lately in the Presbyterian of the West, in reference to the study of Hebrew during the collegiate course. Our readers will remember that the Free Church of Scotland, by the almost unanimous vote of its Presbyteries, has resolved to require students to learn the rudiments of the Hebrew language before entering the Theological Department.

HEBREW IN COLLEGE.

The theological student, instead of sitting down in the seminary to study Hebrew language, ought to be able to use his Hebrew Bible as a text-book when he enters the seminary; he will find enough to employ his time in our theological seminaries, without drivelling over a Hebrew grammar, to study for the first time the principles of a language that will certainly cost him more effort than either Latin or Greek.

But let me ask, is the Hebrew to be embraced in the college course, or is it to be merely an optional study? I most earnestly hope that it will be made obligatory on all who have the holy ministry in view, to be able to read that language before they leave the University. The idle notion that students sometimes get into their heads with regard to that ancient language, that it is hard, dry, and uninteresting, certainly indicates no very ardent degree of piety. Shall Jehovah himself descend from heaven upon the summit of Sinai, and amid the thunderings and lightnings that attended him, speak to Moses, and will you stand by and hear, and not desire to know what he says? It is indeed true, that the Hebrew language is hard, but it is not true that it is dry and uninteresting. There is a richness, a fulness, and a beauty that no language can convey to the mind (of one who has not studied it) in the original Hebrew Scriptures. But the difficulties cannot be mastered at once: patient, persevering application on the part of the student, and that alone, can surmount them. And if perchance the eye of some Hebrew student, who is half discouraged, should rest upon this article, let me say to you, dear young friend, be not disheartened, but persevere. The light which will soon break in upon your mind, will be very sudden, very unexpected perhaps: and that vexed vowel system will all at once assume the appearance of great simplicity, harmony, and beauty; and as you advance, your course will be more agreeable daily, and that which once appeared so irksome, will soon become your chief source of pleasure and delight.

The Hebrew language is well calculated to employ the reasoning powers; the mathematics certainly cannot call for more mental exertion; nor can the result of a course of reasoning be more clearly verified in mathematics, than in an analysis of the Hebrew language. The two studies are similar in several respects—one especially. Every one who knows anything of mathematics, knows that the student must dive to the bottom, and comprehend the principles, if he would gain any permanent advantage by the study—so with the Hebrew. The great reason why we have so few Hebrew scholars, though so many study the language, is, that they commence too late in their course; study too superficially, as a consequence, and soon forget the poor, little, meager, and imperfect knowledge which they once possessed. But let young men begin the study early, and then they will have opportunity to lay a foundation broad and deep in the knowledge of that delightful language—a foundation that cannot be easily overturned; and the way to do this is, to introduce Moses and the prophets into college. W.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The sum of Fifty Dollars constitutes a person an Honorary Member of the Board of Education. A copy of the Annual Report is sent to all the Honorary members every year.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The sum of Seventy-five dollars forms a scholarship to assist a student in the collegiate course, and the sum of One Hundred dollars in the theological course.

FORM OF A DEVISE OR BEQUEST.

All that the Board deem it important to furnish is their CORPORATE NAME, viz. "The Trustees of the Board of Education of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America." Any person, disposed to leave a legacy to the Board of Education, is requested to insert the right CORPORATE NAME. The State laws differ so much that no one Form will answer in all the States.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

RECEIPTS AT PHILADELPHIA, SEPTEMBER, 1851.

I. FUND FOR CANDIDATES.

Presbytery of Troy.

Waterford ch, $27, less $2, broken bank note — 25 00

Presbytery of Wyoming.

Portageville ch — 3 17

Presbytery of Hudson.

Scotchtown ch — 16 00

Presbytery of Susquehanna.

Troy ch $5; Friendsville ch $1; Canton ch $2 82 — 8 82

Presbytery of Newton.

Interest on Education Fund, — 29 22

Presbytery of New Lisbon.

Deerfield ch — 23 00

Presbytery of Richland.

Ashland ch — 14 15

Presbytery of Lexington.

Presbyterial Collection, $18 37; Staunton ch $36; N. Providence ch 29; Bethel ch $27; Tinkling Spring ch $40 72; Rocky Spring ch $4 64; West Cove ch $7 25; Lebanon ch $4 50; Mill Creek ch $4 63; in all $172 11; less Presbyterial appropriation of $5 — 167 11

Presbytery of Montgomery.

Blacksburg ch — 20 00

Presbytery of Fayetteville.

Bethesda ch, A. Buchem, $1 85; Philadelphus ch, M. C. McNeill, $2 25; Antioch ch, Rev. H. McLean, $6; Tirza ch, Neill McLean, $5 30 — 15 40

Presbytery of Brazos.

Houston ch — 15 00

Presbytery of Western District.

Presbyterial collection at Concord ch — 16 00

REFUNDED.

By "E. T. W." — 100 00

LEGACIES.

Legacy of A. McLanahan, White Deer, Pa., add'l $166 66; Mrs. Sarah Place, late of the Rutger's Street ch New York, $500 — 666 66

MISCELLANEOUS.

"A. & B." New York, $500; Mrs. Thomas L. Crittenden, $10 — 510 00

$1629 53

II. FUND FOR SCHOOLS, &c.

"A. and B." New York, — 1000 00

Total, $2,629 53

J. B. MITCHELL, Treasurer.

RECEIPTS AT PITTSBURGH FOR SEPTEMBER.

Presbytery of Ohio.

Manchester ch — 29 00

Presbytery of Allegheny.

Scrub Grass ch — 2 75

Presbytery of Clarion.

Licking ch — 5 66

Presbytery of St. Clairsville.

Crab Apple ch $33; Fairview ch $2 50 — 35 50

Presbytery of Steubenville.

Island Creek ch $32 84; Two Ridges ch $16 16 — 49 00

Presbytery of New Lisbon.

New Salem ch — 20 00

Presbytery of Zanesville.

Buffalo ch Rev. M. M. Brown, to con himself an honorary member — 50 00

$191 91

J. S. LEECH, McALPINE & CO., Treasurers.

RECEIPTS AT LOUISVILLE FOR AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER.

Presbytery of Indianapolis.

Indianapolis ch — 39 00

Presbytery of Madison.

Madison ch — 6 00

Presbytery of Louisville.

Louisville 3d ch $13 55; Mulberry ch $24 30; Shelbyville ch $82 60 — 120 45

Presbytery of Transylvania.

Glasgow ch — 1 00

Presbytery of West Lexington.

Lexington 1st ch $64 75; McChord ch $61 — 125 75

Presbytery of Ebenezer.

Marysville ch $33; Washington ch $5 — 38 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

Miss H. Greenup, — 1 00

$331 20

J. M. RUTHERFORD, Treasurer.

Total receipts for September, — $3,152 64

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

MISSION HOUSE,

No. 23 Centre Street, New York.

RECENT INTELLIGENCE.

Mission House, October 13, 1851.

China.—We have received advices from Ningpo to the 9th of July, from Shanghai to the 16th, and from Canton to the 22d of the same month. The mission families were enjoying their usual health, but we regret to learn that Min-geen, the native assistant at Ningpo, was very ill, and not expected to recover. He had been pursuing studies with a view to the ministry of the gospel. "He expressed great resignation and trust in the Saviour, and we have rejoiced in the dying testimony which he has given to all who saw him of the worth of the gospel. We had indeed other hopes respecting him, that he would be a living witness of its truth, and declare unto his countrymen the word of life. But God's ways are not our ways, and his are infinitely the best." The congregations in the new church at Ningpo are quite large. The rebellion in the province of Kwang-si, adjoining that of Canton, was still extending, and it was considered somewhat doubtful whether the government would be able to quell it.

India: Allahabad Mission.—Letters have been received dated on the 2d of August. The Rev. J. Owen writes that "the affairs of the mission are in steady progress. Martha Holmes, one of the girls in the school, was at our last communion received into the full enjoyment of church privileges." This scholar received her Christian name and a year's support from a Sabbath school in New Jersey several years ago. She has since been supported out of the general funds of the Board. May she receive grace from on high to adorn her Christian profession by a holy life!

Mission to the Jews.—One of the missionaries has lately been permitted to baptize a young Jewish lady. It is not expedient to make particular statements, but circumstances of more than ordinary interest should secure for her a special remembrance in the prayers of the people of God.

Africa: Corisco Mission.—Miss Isabella Sweeney, a member of Union church, Newcastle Presbytery, embarked for this mission at New York, October 2, in the brig Lowder. She had been under appointment as a teacher for several months, but waited for an opportunity of going in the same vessel with the Rev. Messrs. Walker and Preston and their wives, of the mission of the American Board at the Gaboon. This missionary company are all commended to the prayers of the churches.

Choctaw Mission.—The Rev. John Edwards writes from Spencer Academy, September 13th, that the Rev. A. Reid had been seriously ill with a fever. We are glad to learn that he was much better when Mr. Edwards wrote.

France.—We have received a letter from a correspondent in Paris, dated September 29, forwarding the last bulletin of the Evangelical Society of France. This paper contains a number of encouraging facts, showing the progress of the Society's work. Several hopeful conversions are reported at different stations. At one place twelve persons were admitted to the church, but in the other places a less number. After stating these things, the Bulletin makes a fine remark, which we quote as equally applicable to most mission churches, allying them in this respect with many of the churches of the apostles: "It has not fallen to our lot to see a period like that in which three thousand or five thousand persons were converted by the solemn and powerful accents of the apostle. But, on the other side, we are far, very far from those days, when nations in arms, after gaining a victory, professed Christianity in imitation of their leaders—or when party politics created religious parties without the least appearance of faith. We are endeavouring to return back to what is simple and true, following the examples recorded in the early history of the Christian Church, which mentions the conversion of one Ethiopian grandee, of one centurion, of one seller of purple, of one gaoler, and which notices these three churches which were in the house of Priscilla and Aquila, at Rome, in that of Nymphas, at Colosse or Laodicea, and in that of Philemon."

INDIA: LODIANA MISSION.

Letter of the Rev. J. H. Morrison, June 20, 1851.

Melas visited—Tent pitched among 'low caste' people—the Missionary's work.

On his return to his station at Amballa, after spending a couple of months on a missionary journey, Mr. Morrison wrote some accounts of three melas or fairs which he had visited. Two of these are particularly noticed, one at Manamájara, at the base of the outer range of the Himalayas, and the other at Pinjaur, in the valley between the outer or first, and the second range of those mountains. The attendance at the latter fair this year was largely increased by the presence of the Rájá of Patiala and all his train. This Sikh chief is a great idolater, spending a considerable part of his revenue on temples, priests, and fakirs.

After speaking of these things, Mr. Morrison proceeds as follows:

This year I learned that custom had allotted various portions of the ground about the Manamájara temples to various castes for their annual encampment during the continuance of the mela, and that the place where my tent was pitched, was in the midst of the Chumárs, i. e. low caste or no caste people, and that in consequence very few respectable or educated people, especially Brahmans, would come to the tent to hear or get books. One day one of the catechists entered into conversation with some Brahmans out in the mela, and induced them to come to see me and get books; but as soon as they saw where I was encamped, they turned away, lest they should be polluted by going into the encampment of the Chumárs. Not being altogether satisfied with this place last year, I directed the people who went before me with the tents to pitch in another place; but the ground had been pre-occupied by the Rájá's people.

Morning and evening I usually went out about the temples with the catechists and books, and was occupied during the day at the tent, often until I became so hoarse, or my organs of speech became so fatigued, that I was obliged to desist. For days during all these melas, I have suffered so much from pure fatigue of the organs of speech, even when not hoarse, that I involuntarily shrunk back at the thought of opening my mouth. Yet had I been able to multiply myself a hundred fold, every one might have found full employ for all his powers in that immense moving mass of immortal beings.

When an explosion occurs on one of your steamers, and forty or fifty persons are plunged into the water, where their lives are in danger, immediately all is bustle, anxiety, effort; and before one is lost, perhaps double their number are engaged in the most vigorous efforts to rescue, if it be but one, from his perilous condition; and the soul that can look on that scene unmoved, or think any effort or expense too great for the occasion, is branded and published as a monster unworthy a name or place among his species. And who but applauds all this enthusiasm to save a life? Who but praises most loudly him who was most enthusiastic in his efforts to save human beings from a watery grave? But alas! here the waters of eternal death are strewed for miles around, with 100,000 immortal souls, all struggling for life and immortality. And for their rescue there is but one feeble, half-broken down pilot in the life-boat, manned by only two who have not yet learned to row or steer. These go forth daily to buffet the adverse waves, every surge of which seems to human view sufficient to overwhelm them. Indeed none but those who have learned to look up to Him who rides upon the whirlwind, and directs the storm, can imagine how we can save even ourselves from the raging elements around us. . . .

The Missionary's feelings in the midst of 100,000 heathens.

Would that I could describe the scene and portray the feelings that often occupied my mind while moving about in that immense throng, or stood preaching Christ on the steps of that temple, looking down upon 100,000 people, each one having an immortal spirit, of infinitely more value than so many worlds, and one and all mad upon their idols, moving about like waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame. For four years and more no missionary but myself has been able to attend this mela. For three out of these four years I have attended year after year, sending home the same report, endorsed by the lamentation of the evangelical prophet—"Lord, who hath believed our report?" Year after year the cry has gone over to the Church, "Come over and help us," and yet no response, until the soul sickens and the heart faints. O Lord, how long?. Should any one ask, Why do not other missionaries go and help at so important a mela? the answer is, we are but a feeble, scattered band; some must remain to carry on the work of the stations, while others have other and even more important melas in their vicinity to attend. Much more reasonable would be the inquiry, why some of the 2000 ministers, or of the 500 licentiates and candidates at home do not come over and help us. O that each one would solemnly ask his own conscience, in prospect of his final account, Is there any good reason why I should not fly to the rescue of these immortal souls? Would that one and all would, in the same manner, ask, Is there any good reason, one that will stand the test of the final audit, why I should not contribute more, and pray more and more earnestly for the outpouring of the Spirit upon these dry bones, that they may live?

"One out of many," it is probable.

. . . . A respectable looking young Musalmán came up and began a friendly conversation. He is tutor to the Ráná of Kutár near Subáthú, who is quite a small boy, and has been with the Ráná and his uncle attending the melas. At these he says he heard me preach, and several times wished to come and have some further conversation with me on the subject of religion, but his heart always failed him; and even now, had I not drawn him out, he says he should have gone away without making known his state of mind. Some years ago events occurred that directed his attention to some of the weak points of Islamism and unsettled his mind on the subject, and while thinking of these things he fell in with a copy of the Qurán with notes, published by our mission at Allahabad. This still further opened his eyes to the falsity of the Qurán and the abominations of his system. No explanations of his spiritual guides afforded him any satisfaction, but on the contrary, their utter inability to explain various passages in consistence with truth, and with each other, ripened his doubts into disbelief. Printed in Roman letter, he could read this book without fear; and other books led him to contemplate the cross of Christ, so that he now avows himself, to me, a Christian in heart, though on account of embarrassed worldly circumstances he does not see his way clear to make a public profession of his faith in Christ. In fact he says I am the only human being at all acquainted with his state of mind, and at present he fears to let it be known to any of his own people. I gave him such instruction and books as I thought suitable to his case, and while at Subáthú visited him for the purpose of further instructing him and giving him other books. He promised to write to me, but as yet I have not heard from him.

Such instances afford sweet encouragement here, where one and all seem like the heath in the desert, not to know when good cometh. They excite the reviving hope that God has many chosen ones here, though they may still be in darkness, or only opening their eyes on the rising light. It is indeed interesting to witness these early struggles between light and darkness. And O how unspeakably precious the privilege of being present, at such a time, with the lamp of divine truth to shed additional rays of light upon such a mind. . . .

Again, on returning to the work of the station after an itineration of near two months, in which I have attended three important melas, I am compelled with a heavy heart to say, "Lord who hath believed our report, and to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed?" Thousands have heard some portion of divine truth. Some have quarrelled and argued; some have listened with attention and apparent interest; and some few have even confessed themselves convinced of the excellence of the doctrines of the gospel, and promised to come and study the subject more thoroughly. But nearly two months have already elapsed, and not one has offered to fulfil those promises.

Mr. Morrison closes his narrative with an urgent request that "more spirituality, more prayer, and more effort on the part of all who name the name of Christ," may be brought to the support of this missionary work. These things are greatly needed. We trust there will be a great increase in these respects. At the same time, we should have faith to expect the blessing of God upon the proper use of scriptural means. The word of the Lord shall not return unto him void; it shall accomplish that which he pleases, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto he sends it. In the great day it may appear that many of the Lord's chosen people were led unto the Good Shepherd, by the missionary labours of this two months' journey. Yet still, there should be an increase of labourers in fields so white unto the harvest. Think of one minister of the gospel among one hundred thousand heathen souls, each one and all of whom may be reached by our prayers, our gifts, and the labours of brethren whom the Church might send forth!

A LETTER OF THE REV. JOHN S. WOODSIDE.

The aged Zemindar, Basáwan.

On page 21 of the last Annual Report, there is a notice of this man and his village. He has since died, but it will be seen from Mr. Woodside's letter that there was hope in his death, and that there is hope for his village. This letter, written at Saharanpur on the 5th of February, was intended for children, but will be found interesting also to adult readers.

My Dear Children—In the annual report of our mission, some notice is taken of a village in the neighbourhood of Saharanpur, the chief Zemindar (landlord) of which is represented as being favourable to Christianity. I shall devote part of this sheet to a more detailed account of that matter. More than ten years ago, a man, advanced in years, came to the house of the missionary at Saharanpur, and asked a copy of the New Testament. It was given, but little notice was taken of the matter at the time, for this is almost a daily occurrence with every missionary in this land. Years passed by, and the matter was forgotten by the missionary, but that Testament was not lost. The individual who received it read it, and after reading it, he visited the missionaries once more. They were pleased with his conversation, and gave him more books. He then began to come on Sabbath to hear the word of God preached. He listened attentively. He sat with his head uncovered, (a thing not usual here.) He knelt at prayer, with the congregation, and seemed to take much delight in the society of God's people. For several years this was continued, but at last his visits became less frequent, and his attendance at worship less regular. Visits were then paid to him, and it was found that he was sick, and had been so for a long time. His strength was declining, and he was not able to walk to church, as usual; but he said he still loved Christ, and his people, and desired to be with them, but did not like to "leave all" as yet, for the gospel's sake. This was the state of affairs, when I came to Saharanpur, in April, 1849. Subsequently to that period he was frequently visited, and as he afterwards improved in health, he came often to the mission, and he was to be seen devoutly joining in the exercises of the sanctuary, as in former years. The missionaries conversed seriously with him, on the state of his soul, his past professions, and his duty of making a public confession of Christ before his countrymen. He was fully convinced of the necessity of doing so, but deferred from time to time, owing to the immense sacrifice it would cost him.

My young friends: it is no easy thing in this country for a respectable Hindu to make a profession of Christianity. He must abandon all;—wife, children, friends—and until lately, house and home. It requires much faith. This Basáwan (for this is the name of the person I refer to) did not altogether lack, but he was not permitted to be baptized. He put off the subject till it was too late. He died about a month ago, unbaptized.

But I have not done with him. I must tell you something more about the period before his death. So far as we can learn from the people of that village, they have never been distinguished for their attachment to Hinduism, but since Basawan began to read the New Testament among them, Hindu rites have been almost entirely abandoned. He taught the youth of the village to read, during his leisure hours, so that now some twenty-five or thirty persons can read the Testament in their own language. During the summer of 1850 he visited the mission frequently, and not only came himself, but brought many others with him. He urged us to send a Christian Teacher to live at the village. He used to say, "Oh if you will send us a teacher, how happy we will be; and then we will have church on Sabbath." He frequently asked, "if a man could be saved without baptism." He was uniformly told that baptism was not necessary to salvation, but that no true Christian should or would live in disobedience of the commands of his heavenly Master. He paid us a visit in the month of August, after the severe epidemic, from which we have all suffered so seriously, had set in. He told us that he and two or three others were the only persons in his village, that remained healthy. He strongly pressed his demand for a Christian Teacher. We agreed to his request, and promised to send one as soon as possible. This was the last visit he paid us till he came to die. He was soon laid on a bed of sickness, from which he never arose. We visited him several times, and found that he was gradually becoming worse. We urged him to come and live with us for a change of air, and better medical attendance. We were anxious to save his life, as he had said that he would, if spared, present himself for baptism. At last he came; but it was only to die. His disease was beyond the reach of remedy, and on the second day after he came, he died; on the very spot where, in all probability, he was first brought to love the Saviour, and where he had often sat and listened to the news of salvation from the lips of Mr. Coleman, now also deceased.

Some one may be disposed to ask, why did you allow him to die unbaptized, since he was willing to have it done? Our reason was, that such a baptism would have done him no good, and it might have done our cause injury. People might have said, "Oh, they baptized a dying man who did not understand what was being done to him." We think, however, that he died in faith, and is now among the redeemed in heaven. I could fill several sheets about his sayings and doings, but I have already said enough. I will simply add, that though he is gone, his deeds live after him. After we agreed to send him a teacher, he erected a comfortable little school-house sufficient to hold some sixty or seventy scholars, entirely at his own expense. We have since visited the village, and the people received us very kindly. They appeared much affected by his death. We called together all the chief men of the village in the school-house, and endeavoured to persuade them to walk in his footsteps. We then asked them if they still wished a teacher among them. They cried out unanimously, "We do, we do." "And what will you do to get a teacher? Will you give us a place to build his house, and will you give this school-house for the school?" They replied, that the present owner of the house intended it for a general place of assemblage, when any important business should require them to meet; but he was willing to give it till another could be erected. They said they would assist in building a school-house. They allowed us to select the most suitable place around the village for the teacher's house and school-house, and agreed to give the land rent-free for ever.

We will endeavour to send them a teacher, and I trust that village contains many souls given to Christ. The grandson of Basáwan and the heir to all his property, is now a boy of five years of age; his name is "Isa Baksh," or the "Gift of Jesus." He is to be given over to us to receive a Christian education. Pray for him and for his village, and for us that we may be enabled to teach this people the way of life in sincerity and in truth.

INDIA: ALLAHABAD MISSION.

LETTERS ON MOHAMMEDANISM.—NO. VII.

The Influence of the Mohammedan religion on domestic and social life.

In my last letter I spoke of the Mohammedan religion being unfavourable to progress; and I instanced government, as showing this effect most distinctly. As might be expected, this effect extends to the family circle and all the social relations. I will now only mention some habits, which result from their religious dogmas, and produce great effects in their society.

1. Polygamy. This is generally destructive of domestic happiness. Though it is probable that in the great majority of families it has no existence, yet it influences all. The husband may always threaten it—the wife always fears it. And since a man may have legitimate children by several women at the same time, and even polygamy is legally supplemented by female slaves, all parties come to look on the marriage relation as something much less sacred than it is regarded as being amongst Christians. Unfaithfulness to his wives is counted as nothing by a Mohammedan man—indeed, it is considered a matter that does not at all concern them. In these circumstances, they can scarcely be expected to feel much regard to their husbands. The consequence is, that the husbands, finding them unworthy of confidence, shut them up in the house, or otherwise restrict them from seeing other men. This leads to intrigues. But even when all mischief of this sort is effectually guarded against, the consequences are most deplorable; the women become, or rather remain, grossly ignorant, and ill qualified for the duties of mothers; they can exercise no proper influence over their husbands and sons; and their daughters only become fit to be treated in the same manner as their mothers have been, in their turn.

2. As a consequence of this state of things, mixed companies of males and females are never seen. All the humanizing and softening influence of female society is unknown—so utterly so, that it is one of the most hopeless tasks in the world to make a Mohammedan gentleman understand the benefit we derive from such society. They even doubt the abstract propriety of our talking with each other's wives: the separation of the sexes beyond the immediate family circle, is so complete, that they have come to think our conduct most abominable in that thing which we all agree in thinking to constitute the chief charm of Christian society. It is difficult for Christian men or women to estimate the advantages they derive from conversation with each other. If we think over this subject, and try to imagine what would be our characters without the influence of the other sex, exerted upon us in general society, both men and women will soon perceive that it is a matter of the greatest importance, not easy to be understood.

A singular result of this state of things ought to be noticed; the best informed women—those who know something beyond the mere petty details of housekeeping, and can carry on an interesting conversation—are the bad women in the large towns. There is in all men the desire of conversation with intelligent women; and such women not being accessible amongst the virtuous and respectable part of the community, the men seek for those who are neither virtuous nor respectable. They are hired to entertain companies of men, in the evening, with songs, dancing, conversation, &c. Respectable, grave men, of full age and religious pretensions, go to these houses openly in the day time, and sit at their doors in conversation. I have seen a grey bearded Maulaví (religious teacher) so engaged; and he told me, as a reason for being so, that he enjoyed the woman's sparkling conversation. Such women are kept as hired servants, to enliven the master of the house and his friends. They acquire celebrity by their accomplishments. And yet no Mohammedan gentleman would think of giving one of these accomplishments to his daughter, that she might make his home pleasant, however innocent the accomplishment might be; nor would he on any account allow her to gain that knowledge of the world, without which a woman can be nothing but an insipid plaything or a drudge. When things are so, what wonder is it, if many women come to look on respectability as a bore, and vice as a very pleasant thing? Thus it becomes necessary to seclude them. Thus the men render the women untrustworthy, and then shut them up, and perpetuate the disability under which they labour.

3. The unbounded sensuality which is encouraged by their religion, unfits them for any dignified or intellectual pursuits. Some distinguish themselves, but their families are always ruined by debauchery or effeminacy. All the old families of Hindústán are dying out from these causes. A more worthless class of mischievous triflers does not exist. And, strange as it may seem, they grow ferocious and unprincipled in proportion to their effeminacy. There are no harder landlords than those who have neither the muscle nor the mind of men left. There is no class of men, among whom sharping and mean dependence are more in vogue—ashamed to work, but not ashamed to cheat or beg. I think I may safely say that at least half of the Mohammedans of this country, who lay claim to gentility, are living upon richer relations, or meanly follow some great man for a piece of bread. I have seen as many as twenty gentlemen in the train of a rich native, who lived near my house, all living upon him in shameful dependence, not at all objecting to be in this position as long as they could be allowed to strut, and pay for their dinner by fawning. Such men come to us sometimes, to ask whether we will support them in the state of gentility which they say is natural to them, if they will become Christians!

4. The literature that grows out of this state of things is natural to it, and perpetuates it: flimsy and pretty poetry, further enervating already emasculated minds; and stories of the worst kind, filling up to running over, the cup of abomination already nearly filled by their religion and poetry.

How fatally wrong perpetuates itself! The evils under which this people labours almost render the opposite good impossible. Their absurd social system has produced a prevailing character, which no other system would suit. Their personal habits render them in a great measure incapable of reformation.

May the Church throw in here abundantly "the salt of the earth." The gospel is as necessary to the temporal welfare of these people, as it is to their eternal salvation. Civilization without the gospel has been fully tried; and they are but half civilized. Learning has been tried, and it is dying out. The manly energy of their original races is become effete. The gospel only can save them, and even that will operate but slowly.

Here I close these letters, to which I have not had time to do justice. JAMES WARREN.

Allahabad, March 6, 1851.

JOURNAL OF THE REV. JOSEPH OWEN.

[Concluded from page 140.]

Awful bigotry of Mohammedans—Preaching to several quiet Hindus—An idiot worshipped.

Sabbath, Dec. 22*d.*—This morning we went to Sawait, a Mohammedan village about a mile in a straight direction from this. When here three years ago, I preached there twice without much opposition, and had a very pleasant interview about an hour one evening with a number of intelligent men on the steps of one of their masjids or mosques. I therefore hoped for a satisfactory visit this morning, but was grievously disappointed. As we entered the village, we were invited by a sayid, a man of distinction and claiming to be a descendant of Husain the grandson of Mohammed, to take a seat on the elevated place in front of his house. Several people soon collected, and after the usual forms of salutation, I introduced the subject of our errand. He at once said, "We want to hear nothing of your religion, God has put a seal upon your eyes and hearts, and you Nazarenes are all to be damned." I begged for an opportunity of calmly conversing with him on the subject, but he replied in the same strain as before, accusing us of blasphemy, in calling Jesus the Son of God. I begged for an opportunity of saying a word or two in explanation, but he utterly denied it, and put his hands up to his ears. I then said, "Since you do not wish to hear, let me speak a word to the people," and began, "I have come to say something to you about salvation." "We do not want your salvation," vociferated the sayid. "We don't want your salvation," they cried out after him. Then followed a volley of personal abuse, and blasphemy against the Saviour. The sayid became angry, and coming up to me said, "Speak no such nonsense here." I remained perfectly cool, and reminded him that he had become angry without the least cause, that I was a man of peace and had come with a peaceful message, on which occasion he had attempted to raise a tempest. He seemed two or three times ready to strike me in the face, and I remarked that he was not a complete Mohammedan, according to the Qurán, the standing command of which is to draw the sword on all who are not of its faith. He answered, "I have abundantly the will but not the power." When I again attempted to say something he went away a short distance and sat down, saying, "Your religion is a lie, and you are liars, God has sealed up your eyes, and in hell you will open them in utter dismay." I told him that his own eyes appeared entirely sealed, and that I feared he had uttered a prediction respecting himself. I said something more about Jesus, and salvation, but they set up a laugh, and spoke some horrid blasphemy. "Well," I said, "this Jesus whom you have now despised, is to be your judge. He shall come in the clouds of heaven, with his holy angels, and before Him, you and I must appear to answer for what has now been said and done; and Mohammed, too, must appear before his judgment-seat to answer for the dreadful delusion he has propagated," and concluded with "Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish!"

We had worship and gave instruction to the servants as usual during the day. In the evening Mr. Munnis and I went to Ismiálgunge, a large village chiefly Hindú, about three miles southeast from us in a straight line, but five or six around by the road. We preached to several quiet Hindús in the bazár, and returned home after dark. The buggy assisted us a part of the way, and as the road was rough, we drove on slowly, occupying the time very pleasantly in singing hymns, such as "Guide me, O thou great Jehovah," "O for a closer walk with God." The Sabbath has been a sweet one to me, notwithstanding the unsatisfactory attempt to preach this morning. The quiet of the grove has afforded an excellent opportunity for reading and meditation. We spent a week in this place three years ago, and it has been pleasant to recollect some of the portions of Scripture read, the meditations that occurred, and the prayers offered up at that time.

Dec. 23*d.*—Preached this morning in Hájígunge, and this evening in Dándupúr, both small Hindú villages, the former a mile south, and the latter half a mile east of the camp. The people made no opposition, and Yonas and George both talked very well. Busy at the Bible all day. A respectable Mohammedan occupied about an hour of my time in a visit, with whom I had some interesting conversation, chiefly religious. I inquired of the people in Dandupúr whom they worshipped, and they replied that they worshipped a bráhman, I requested them to bring him out, and they did so; when I found that he was almost an idiot. Although I exposed the poor creature's idiocy before them, I could not succeed in making them ashamed of what they were doing. He had performed several pilgrimages, and this made him holy in their sight. Perhaps also they mistook his madness for the divinity within him. They present their offerings and a certain kind of worship to him every day.

"Hypocrisy hauled in on the shoulders" of Christmas —A Fakír's false story—Selfishness illustrated.

Dec. 24*th.*—The "respectable Mohammedan" who came to see me yesterday, gave me another call today, bringing his Urdú copy of the Psalms, and requesting me to read to him the expositions of some of them that I am writing. After I had done this, he produced a Hindustaní poem of his own composition, just finished, and asked permission to read, which of course was granted. The theme was, "The greatness of Christmas." It was declared to be, though one of the shortest, the greatest day in the year, for reasons that an Oxonian could have appreciated. Having finished this first part or canto, he announced that he had another ready. This he called the religious; the one to come, the worldly part. It began with an eulogium of Wine (Owen) Sáhib: then came a statement of his own troubles, that he was formerly a collector of revenue at this place, but had lost his situation, in consequence of which he was in great distress; then a request that I would intercede to have him reinstated, in reward for which our religion should be his religion, the Lord Bishop should be his Pádrí, I his master, and the Mem Sáhib his lady. The wretch hauled in his hypocrisy, not on the shoulders of Melchizedec, as Dr. Chalmers said on a similar occasion, but on the shoulders of Christmas.

The other night at Phulpúr, a man followed me from the bazár, where I had been preaching, with something to say, that he said he could not tell me among the people in the city. That more than two years ago he went to the Mauritius, as a cooley, where, after two years' labour he had saved one hundred and twenty rupees with which he returned to India, came to Phulpúr with one hundred rupees, found that his mother and wife had died during his absence, was presently attacked and robbed of every thing, and had not a pice to help himself with, and implored my aid in a piteous manner. My heart was quite moved, and I offered to give him employment if he would come to Allahabad. He at once exclaimed, "I will never do your service." I then discovered that he was a beggar by profession, and though a faqír, and too holy to do my work, was not too holy to make up that monstrous lie. Such occurrences, by no means uncommon here, are bad for one's moral sensibilities. The artful selfishness of these people, high and low, is deplorable, and their meanness of spirit no less so. A missionary of my acquaintance told me he had a servant who became very ill, and he attended on him assiduously until his recovery, when the man instantly struck for higher wages, thinking he was particularly valuable to his master. Two other stories just now occur to me, illustrative of this trait of their character. A surgeon, having saved a poor man's life by the amputation of a leg, was coolly asked by his patient to support him permanently, because the prolongation of his life was owing solely to his interference. A gentleman having with great difficulty and danger to himself saved a native from drowning was asked for bakhishish—or a present, the moment the man was able to speak.

The only Remedy—The province of Missionary labour at present—Village Ignorance—Sugar Mills—Ten years past.

The only remedy for these people is the gospel. Mere secular education without religion will never do. Good government and civilization alone will not raise them. The thorough infusion of Christian principle will make them to "quit themselves like men and be strong." This must be a gradual work, and accomplished through the instrumentality of a Christian education. A few preachings, such as we are now giving through the country, are not to accomplish this result. We need a thorough organized agency to reach every village, and hamlet, and every soul throughout all this district, and that not once or twice a year, but every week. Such an agency must come from the natives themselves, through the instrumentality of superior institutions of education. These tours through the country are very important for becoming acquainted with the people, and seeing really what is to be done, and also making known the gospel to the extent of our ability. In this manner too we can become better qualified to mature plans for future operation among the people, when a native agency is ready. Much may be done by this means in preparing the way. The character and aims of the missionary become known, some truth is diffused, we may hope even to the salvation of souls, personal acquaintances in many places are formed, the habits, character, and wants of the people seen, their superstitions and prejudices observed, a more thorough acquaintance with the language and ideas of the common people obtained, and thus preparation is made for the permanent establishment of a native agency among them. This agency, however, is not yet ready, and our special vocation as missionaries is to prepare it. Hence the vast importance of the educational process, and of Christian education. To separate preaching from education in the missionary work, is to put asunder what God has joined together. The grand companion of these is the Press; without which, we can neither preach nor educate.

This morning we went into a few small collections of houses, scarcely to be called villages, extending from half a mile to a mile west of the camp. One of them consisted entirely of bráhmans, with whom we had some conversation. They were, however, very ignorant, probably had never seen a Shástr. But they, like all others of their caste, claimed to have come from the head of Bráhma. A gentleman, some days since, while examining a class of boys in our college on Hinduism, among many other questions, asked the origin of the bráhmans. After the answer was given, he asked whether such an origin was probable, to which a negative answer was given, on the ground that it was unnatural. The question then was, "Did anybody ever hear of another such birth?" One boy immediately answered, "Yes, yes, in the 2d book of Paradise Lost, we read that sin was born from the head of Satan." This applies to the bráhmans, simply by the substitution of equivalent terms. In some places we saw the rudest bits of stone, stained over with black and yellow colours, and set up as objects of worship, before which offerings of flowers had been presented.

In one place we found five sugar mills all at work. Their construction is very simple. A large stone is hollowed out with slanting sides, into which a heavy round beam is fastened, standing on one end obliquely,

